Dear George:

I am awfully glad to get yours of December 12th as a follow-up to our conversation over the telephone. We will keep very carefully in mind Mr. John Hope. As a matter of fact, yesterday I did talk to our people in Nashville about the preparations for our two proposed conferences in Atlanta next year, so that your word came in good time.

Mr. Philip Weidenhouse
American Missionary Association
287 Fourth Avenue
New York, New York

Dear Mr. Weidenhouse:

Could you spare John Hope for part-time work with us for the next few months? We would like to use the skills he has acquired generally and with your organization for furthering our job, which is also your job.

We have got hold of a good device. We want to bring to bear on the staff and board members of our twelve new state organizations, (mostly called councils on human relations), the ablest social science brains. Many of the best people at unraveling this matter of the schools are at Fisk or Dillard or Howard or Atlanta University. In ordinary course, these skilled persons are sometimes directly consulted. A know-how eager to be used is being by-passed. An omission to use Negro know-how is a failure to enlist an important segment of Negro responsibility toward the joint solution of the problem of integrating the schools.

Our plan is to bring some of the talents of the ablest social science consultants to bear, for periods of two or three days, on training conferences of our state staffs and board people. The consultants would also, in a good many situations, be brought into contact with state and local school officials.

We need somebody to plan the program and put it through. It isn't a full-time job. It is a job for a special consultant. After a good deal of thinking about it, we are convinced that John Hope is the right man. Problem is whether you can let him give up to a maximum of ten days a month for the next five or seven months? We could carry him as a consultant at whatever figure may be agreed upon -- he proposes $40.00 a day plus his travel -- and his consultant's fees for those particular days of service to the Southern Regional Council ought to lighten your budget a bit.

Unfortunately, we began with big-ish plans, calling for an expenditure of around $40,000 a year. We had not been able to find that much, but I think we have $12,000, and we would give John Hope the use of so much of that as may be needed.

Working with us on this part-time basis for a while would broaden his experience, and would give him many new opportunities to do in new places and with another whole layer of people the things your program is after. In any case, the problem of the schools in the South is going to be critical for at least the next few months. I am, therefore, the bolder in asking if you can let Mr. Hope spread his talents in this way.

We do not propose for the program to begin until November 1st or thereabouts. We could undertake to ask for his release for a period not to extend beyond the end of May, 1956. I don't covenant not to ask for slight further extension, but I don't foresee the need for it.

We will be extremely grateful if you will balance your needs against this one and let me know whether we might count on establishing such a working relationship with Mr. Hope and the American Missionary Association.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

Dear Mr. Clement,

John Hope came down to-day, to give us some of the involvements of his prospective assumption of a head-consultant's duties with us, on the Program job.

The main thing I come out with is that it is apparaently going to be necessary for SRC to compensate AMA by a payment of a thousand dollars, for the loss by AMA of the full-time aspect of Hope's services, under AMA's existing arrangement with Hope. In addition to that lump-sum amount direct to AMA (which thousand dollars would not by AMA be taken out of AMA's salary payments to Hope), SRC would give Hope $35.00 a day plus his travel for each day of Hope's services to SRC.

We have the money (and a bit to spare, in the reserve for this program), and on reflection I do not think the arrangement unreasonable. So I would recommend it. But I do not feel that I should take this decision without the agreement of the Personnel Subcommittee of the Executive Committee.

May I have your wishes, at such time as you and Marion Wright have had opportunity to correspond?

A second item: Here is a proposed job description for John Hope, carefully worked out originally by C. H. Parrish, and moderately revised by Fred Routh and GSM., and acceptable to John Hope. I would like decision on this, also.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

MEETING WITH JOHN HOPE, NOVEMBER 18, 1955, GSM's OFFICE

GSM — Sent Parrish a copy of the letter to Weidenhouse "How to limit your budget a bit."

JH — That complicates matters.--A family problem within AMA

GSM — Other people in John' Hope's position would be getting less if he received full AMA salary plus SRC salary.

JH — I called you--As a result, you called or wrote Weidenhouse; financial complications came up but no financial allowance. Herman Long O. Kayed the idea and recommended it to Weidenhouse. It didn't help to bat it about on the SRC Board.

GSM — It wasn't batted about at the Board but at the Executive Committee Meeting where they limited payment to $35.00 a day.

JH — Would I alone be responsible or would I work with a team?

GSM — We would work as a team but you would be in charge and therefore chiefly responsible.

FBR — This is an outgrowth of much thinking--Grace Hamilton's, the AU meeting, etc.--Parrish is the chief architect of the final proposals.--It is not sufficiently solidified so that John Hope's ideas couldn't hold sway.

JH — What commitments were made to consultants at the AU meeting?

FBR — They understand the possibility of a per diem consultants relationship.-- No formal comitments made to any individuals. $35.00 a day suggested salary.

GSM —
1. The diamonds in Africa illustration.
2. The demonstration of qualified Negro professionals.
3. The involvement of Negroes in getting responsible assignments.--Negro committees more responsive with Negroes participating--in decision making.

GSM — Pay Hope his per diem plus his expenses.--Reimburse AMA $1,000 for John Hope's time; sweeten the deal.

JH — Weidenhouse needs to be protected if charges brought re: lost time and services. Actually this is a creative responsibility that will absorb most of my thoughts and time? Question. If this baby is in my lap and I am supposed to come through, do the other consultants get the same amount -- $35.00?

GSM Yes, but they get far less in the overall picture--for you are fairly regular but they are only occasional.

JH I feel that either of us should be able to sever our relations on a two weeks notice. In other words if I felt I was getting no where, or if you thought I was getting no where, we could talk it over and decide to either modify or drop the project.

GSM Yes. That sounds reasonable.

JH We should review the project in May which is the end of the AMA fiscal year and determine at that time what should be our future relation and what should be the future of this special project.

Dear Mr. Sissel,

This confirms my telephone call about the possibility of getting hold of consultants in social science, for work with local groups on matters of school desegregation.

We have engaged John Hope, who works mainly for the AMA in the Race Relations Institute at Fisk University in Nashville, to serve SRC part-time as a Chief Consultant. He will manage a program that will make available to local groups (for our own purposes mainly SRC-called groups of citizens or of interested school officials or of SRC staff and State Board people), social science people from various Colleges and Universities, on a one or two day basis. If your group, working with some local unit, should wish to make a direct arrangement with John Hope I am sure he would welcome it. I think the arrangement would be that suitable social science people could be used at a cost of thirty-five dollars per working day, plus the travel expenses involved. He will have both white and Negro persons available; our recommendation would be favorable to the use of Negro persons in many instances.

If we can be helpful on it we would want to, but what Mr. Hope is setting up is available to you without our intermediacy.

Sincerely yours,

(Dr. George S. Mitchell,

RECEIVED DEC 13 1955

MEMORANDUM

To: Dr. George S. Mitchell; Mr. Harold C. Fleming; Dr. C. H. Parrish; Mr. Fred B. Routh

From: John Hope II

Subject: Plans for Meeting of Prospective Consultants

At a conference in Milwaukee including Parrish, Routh, and Hope, it was agreed that a conference of consultants (after receiving their acceptance) should be held preferably no later than January 15, 1956, that certain materials should be prepared in advance of this meeting and circulated to the consultants for their thoughtful consideration in order that they might react to it at the meeting; that such materials should as far as possible be completed and sent to Hope far enough in advance of the conference date to allow "the team" to consider them together and make such adjustments, revisions, and additions as seem necessary before presenting them to the consultants.

Certain specific responsibilities were accepted by each of those present at this conference and the assistance of Mitchell and Fleming will be requested as our plans develop.

I am trying to get all basic materials in hand as soon as possible for the January meeting and to this end expect to confer with Dr. Robert Johnson next week on one phase. I would like to know from C. H. and Fred whether their materials can be expected by Christmas and if not when I may expect them.

There are certain types of information and guidance which the co-ordinator and the consultants will need in order to establish an efficient service which only you experienced insiders can give. Since it is quite probable that as the program develops more and more persons will be involved who have not had the advantages of the briefing given at the August meeting and before they assume the role of consultant for the Southern regional Council or other co-operating agencies, I believe it would be valuable to reduce the useful results of your experience to writing so that all subsequent consultants would have the benefit of your experience and wisdom in a fairly standardized form.

I can think of three major types of information which would be helpful to me as coordinator or consultant. Insofar as such information could be classified by sub-groups of states and individual states, e.g., hard-core, waiting, and desegregating states when comments for each state within these three categories, its value for briefing purposes would be increased.

These are listed as follows:

1. A clear picture of the major program needs at the state level. If the top two or three of these could be listed in descending order of importance it would be helpful.

2. The principal problems, barriers, obstacles, etc., to the attainment of program goals whether from internal or external sources. Again, if these can be rated roughly it would be helpful.

3. The major positive attributes, resources, conditions, etc., favoring the achievement of program goals and on basis of these and other considerations the specific program developments considered most urgent and also achievable in the immediate or near future.

It would be helpful to us to have information of these three types separately and independently from the points of view of the various staff and board member groups on the one hand and from the central staff point to view on the other. C. H. has agreed to analyze and evaluate the reports received from the state offices last summer and thus it is expected that the types of information mentioned, from the point of view of the state staffs and boards and other valuable information, will be forthcoming in this report.

If it is at all possible, I would like to have both C. H. and Fred independently give their reactions to items 1, 2, and 3 above on the basis of their personal experiences and reactions in the various states since they have probably been more closely associated with the field groups as a whole than anybody else except George who is probably too busy with other matters for this. For neophytes like myself, it would probably facilitate our comprehension of this rather complex material if these reports are framed in terms of the three group division (hard-core, waiting, desegregating) or some other more satisfactory division which you are much better able to make than I am. However, I would hope that the same classification can be used by C. H. and Fred (and any others who add to our stock of knowledge in this regard) so that the materials can be put together easily.

If any of this seems presumptuous or if my expectations are based upon error, please bear with me and accept the will for the deed. The only way to swim is to get in the water. I am depending heavily upon "the team" to see that I "swim" with you -- not drown.

I am leaving for Philadelphia and New York tomorrow and expect to be back in Nashville Thursday or Friday (December 15 or 16). May I hear from you. Then as soon as I have a clearer idea when all materials needed for the meeting of consultants will be ready, we can proceed with the setting of a definite date. If possible, I would like to be able to suggest two or three alternative dates to the consultants when I call them.
alternative I have dictated this memorandum to the soundscriber and am asking that it be typed and mailed without my reading it. If it is not clear I will be in Nashville and ready to assist in any way I can after December 15.

Mr. Routh.

Dear Mr. Vorspan,

Here are copies of the letters I sent to Dudley Ward, for the Methodists, and Malcolm Calhoun, for the Presbyterians in the U.S.A. They will explain more formally than my 'phone call what we have in mind.

John Hope is now getting together his string of people, and in any present pinch could supply competent people now. We pay Hope $35.00 a day plus his travel for those days on which he serves as consultant to us, and I suppose that John Hope will be using that same figure for the others who assist him. Some of the people will be white and some Negro.

If you can use this machinery it is wide open to you. John Hope can be reached by mail at Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., and his office telephone in Nashville is 42-3396.

Sincerely yours,

MEMORANDUM

From: John Hope II 20/56.

Subject: Suggestions and Procedures for Launching the Consultant Service Program and the SRC career of one John Hope II

I am attaching in tentative form, double spaced to facilitate revision, three suggested letters: one from Mitchell to the state directors; one from Mitchell to the prospective consultants; and one from me to the consultants which should follow Mitchell's letter to them.

I have thought of various approaches and have considered carefully suggestions made at Milwaukee. In light of the organization and the highly mobile character of all members of the team, it seems to me that the channels of regular communication between the person immediately responsible for program and the field group and consultants, respectively, should be very clear and definite in order to avoid delays. On the other hand, the director should be fully and promptly advised of all program developments in order that they may always be in complete harmony and proper perspective with the total program of the Council. Thus, the suggestion that communications from these two sources come to me at Fisk with copies to Mitchell, this copy being readily available to other members of the team.

I have suggested that the initial letters to consultants and field staff come from Mitchell because they involve matters of policy and executive decision which I believe should be clearly distinguished from the details of procedure and administration. On the other hand, it is my belief that after details of procedure and administrative decisions have been discussed with the team and cleared by the director, they should properly be communicated by the assistant director for program to field staff and consultants in order that the administrative functions and responsibilities might rest firmly upon him and thus relieve the director and others of many details, some of them troublesome, which might interfere with their more important duties. Thus, the third letter which, I hope, will establish a permanent line of communication between these groups and the Assistant Director for Program on matters of a routine administrative nature.

It will be noted that I made no reference to the part-time nature of my relations with the Council or to my present position as Director of Industrial Relations or to the temporary tenure of my employment. While I would not hide these facts if questions were asked, I do not believe that they strengthen my position as a coordinator and motivator of others and in some cases they might weaken it. In the same vein, I would suggest that "Mr." be freely used before my name in communications to the field and to outsiders in order to promptly get rid of the erroneously assumed "Dr." so that I won't be parading under false colors. I might also add that such an omission in light of southern racial etiquette still in vogue, though not within the family of the Council I Hope, might be misconstrued as a status difference based on race made by you. Obviously, all of us know that this is not the case but such a precaution might avoid difficulties for me in dealing with less enlightened persons removed from SRC and its philosophy.

In the letter marked Exhibit I, it will be noted that I did not spell out the prospective functions of consultants in as much detail as C. H. suggested because I felt that your statement should be more flexible in light of recent developments among the religious denominations and other needs that might arise. Likewise, the details of size and qualifications governing consultant fees is omitted in all letters until we can jointly draw up a clear statement that can be used universally.

With regard to the consultants to be used, it is my suggestion that for the present the names of the consultants not be disclosed but rather that we take the position that they are being sought on the basis of qualifications to meet particular program needs of the Southern Regional Council and their availability for assignments, and within the limits of funds now available. On the other hand, I think it quite appropriate for members of the staff or others to feel free to suggest the names of prospective consultants including clear statements of their qualifications. This may seem strange to you but knowing something of the plans of the Society for Applied Anthropology, as a member of a committee considering the prospects of a consultant panel service by this group, I think it important for us to avoid as far as possible outside pressures and the necessity for having to defend our choices before our program is well under way.

The copies of the three suggested drafts are attached. It is strongly urged that the two letters from Dr. Mitchell be sent at the earliest possible moment, particularly those to the consultants. If copies of these are sent to me promptly, I will follow-up with telephone calls to consultant prospects.

The list of prospective consultants who attended the August meeting are - - Dr. Robert Johnson, AFSC, 20 South 12th St. Philadelphia, Pa.; Dr. Louis Killian, Dept. of Soc., Florida State Univ., Tallahassee, Fla.; Mrs. Preston Valien, Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee; Mr. Harry J. Walker, Howard University, Washington, D. C.,; Dr. G. D. Wilson, Kentucky State College, Frankfort, Kentucky; Dr. Whitney Young, Atlanta University, Atlanta; Miss Irene Osborne, ~~AFSC, 104 "C" St., N. E.,~~ SRC Washington, D. C.

Please advise, if I have omitted any names.

GEORGE S. MITCHELL,
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South.

Dec. 30, 1955

Through a loan arrangement with the American Missionary Association of the Congregational Christian Churches, Mr. John Hope II has assumed the duties of Assistant Director for Program. He will be in touch with you in the near future with specific reference to your program needs and how the central office can best assist you in meeting them. You may feel free to write Mr. Hope on any other matters concerning program and training on which he and the central office staff may be of assistance.

For the present he will maintain his base at Fisk University though he will spend considerable time at the Atlanta office and in the States. In order to speed all communications with him about program, he has suggested that for the present all letters to him be mailed to --

Mr. John Hope II
Assistant Director for Program,
SRC
c/o Fisk University
Nashville 8, Tennessee

and that a copy be sent in my care to the Atlanta office in order to avoid unnecessary delays. His office telephone number in Nashville is Chapel 2-3396.

You will be interested to know that an arrangement has been made for the employment of the limited number of highly qualified consultants who will be available to you for the purpose of conducting workshops for your staff and board members and such other uses as their talents can be put for the further development and extension of your program and its further coordination with the overall program and objectives of the Southern Regional Council.

Specific planning of this consultant service will begin with the new year. Any comments and suggestions that you feel will assist us in making these plans of maximum efficiency and assistance to you should be directed to Mr. Hope at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Dr. Killian:

You will recall that at a meeting last August 10th under the guidance of Dr. C.H. Parrish, several distinguished social scientists took a look at the work being attempted by the Southern Regional Council and developed some fruitful suggestions for the expansion of council activities. Since that time I have been able to arrange payment for the occasional services of a limited number of consultants. They will be charged with responsibility of conducting workshops for board members of state groups affiliated with the Southern Regional Council, staff training institutes, and such other purposes as appear necessary for the successful prosecution and extension of the council's program.

These consultants are to be compensated on a per diem basis in addition to their traveling expenses. I would like very much to have you serve as one of these consultants. A preliminary meeting of the consultants is planned for a convenient time early in January.

Through a loan arrangement with the American Missionary Association of the Congregational Christian Churches, Mr. John Hope II has assumed the duties of Assistant Director for Program and he will have the responsibility of coordinating the work of the consultants. He will be in communication with you shortly concerning plans for the January meeting and other matters relative to the consultant service program.

Dear Dr. Killian:

You have received, no doubt, Dr. Mitchell's letter of December 30 asking your participation in a consultant service program. I cannot urge too strongly my personal wish or that of the central office team of which we hope you will be an important member that you join us in this important service to the Southern Regional Council, the South, and thus to the nation.

It seems imperative that we get a good start by attending a conference of all consultants early in January and, consequently, I am asking you to advise me promptly whether you will serve, and whether you can attend such a conference for the planning, orientation, etc. on Saturday, January 14 in Atlanta. If you cannot attend on this date, please indicate on which of the following dates you can attend: January 13; January 18; January 28.

Your travel expenses will be borne by the Southern Regional Council and per diem at the rate (not yet decided) for consultant services will be paid. I am sorry I cannot indicate this rate at this time, but we expect it to be a reasonable figure.

Answers to the attached list of questions are necessary for further planning and scheduling this service. Please return them to me immediately so that they can be tabulated and analyzed prior to this conference. Do not delay in returning this sheet because you cannot immediately answer all questions. Send it back promptly and supplement it, if necessary, by letter as soon as you can fill in the gaps. Mail all communications to:

Dear Mrs. Valien:

You will recall that at a meeting last August 10th under the guidance of Dr. C.H. Parrish, several distinguished social scientists took a look at the work being attempted by the Southern Regional Council and developed some fruitful suggestions for the expansion of council activities. Since that time I have been able to arrange payment for the occasional services of a limited number of consultants. They will be charged with responsibility of conducting workshops for board members of State groups affiliated with the Southern Regional Council, staff training institutes, and such other purposes as appear necessary for the successful prosecution and extension of the council's program.

These consultants are to be compensated on a per diem basis in addition to their traveling expenses. I would like very much to have you serve as one of these consultants. A prelimdnary meeting of the consultants is planned for a convenient time early in January.

Dear John,

Fred and H.C.F. and I have read your letter of December 20th, and its proposed outgoers.

I like the plan in general.

I am sorry you can't write and say what fee they will get. They will want to know. Why don't you give them $35.00 a day, plus their travel?

Exhibit 1: OK, except that I doctored to read "to arrange payment for the occasional services of a limited number", and split that great long sentence by a period after consultants, and changed state board into "members of state groups affiliated with SRC".

Exhibit 11: OK, except that I changed "field" to "States". If I were field I would hate to be field. Also, being GSM, I changed expedite to speed and relative to about. Forgive.

Exhibit 111: At end of third paragraph I added "but we expect it to be at a reasonable figure". I would prefer that you announce it, but do as you please. If there's money enough to do the job at all we should do it right, and make people feel they are being worthily compensated. Otherwise OK.

Questionnaire I leave to your technical judgment.

We will type any or all of these letters any time you say go, and supply appropriate dates and figures, if supplyable.

I balanced between Fred Routh and Gabe Alexander to serve clerically hereabouts for your things.

Fred Routh has to be out so much that I have asked Mr. Alexander to take on the job.

Except as advised by you, none of us here would undertake policy decisions on your matters; neither will Mr. Alexander. But when you need minor details handled, lean on him to do it. Such matters as totting up who could come to what meetings when; letting Zipkins know that a June 3rd meeting changed to June 8th, and so on.

If you have other wishes, let us know.

HCF

MEMORANDUM

To: John Hope II January 9, 1956

From: C. H. Parrish

Subject: Agenda for meeting of consultants, January 14, 1956.

Over the week-end, I have been mulling over our Friday conversations. Specifically the work of the consultants would seem to be related to the following situations:

1-Meeting with a state board for the purpose of evaluating its program.
2-Subregional strategy conference, e.g., "The Hard-Core States."
3-The staff institute or workshop involving the staff members from all twelve SRC-affiliated states.
4-Servicing conferences, institutes or workshops held under other than SRC auspices, as for example, a church group or the school board of a community wishing to effect a smooth desegregation of its schools.
5-Occasional "trouble-shooting" when full-time state or Atlanta staff persons are otherwise engaged.

Perhaps it would be desirable to devote most of the time to a discussion of these situations. When would the consultant likely work as a member of a team? When would he be completely on his own? What are the objectives of a board institute as contrasted with a staff institute? When consultants work as a team, what is a desirable division of labor? To put this another way, what are the areas in which we would be prepared to offer professional service?

Offhand it would appear that the work with the state boards promises most in the way of immediate tangible results. An effort should be made to define more clearly what the responsibilities of board members are. Much of the burden is theirs for finding and involving new people, assessing the readiness of a community for constructive action, getting the story out and for inducing other organizations to which they belong to move in the right direction. Particular stress should be placed on techniques for counteracting the propaganda of the WCC and other pro-segregation outfits. Here it should be recognized that state board members themselves may be puzzled and confused about the nature of race; about whether or not desegregation will lower the standards of the schools; about the dangers of miscegenation; about the role of the NAACP; about whether or not Negroes really want to "go to their own schools." Consultants must be prepared to discuss all of these matters dispassionately from the point of view of recent scientific research. In such discussions the professional manner of presentation has equal importance with the materials presented.

I agree with GSM on the importance of reaching that large segment of the South's people who want to do something but who are not sure what. They would like to do the right thing but cannot bring themselves to enter upon the immediate drastic changes which are being proposed. My notion is to get them into a situation in which the process of attitudinal change can be initiated. Start with the area of agreement, however small, then expand it. If anybody can do this job, our professional consultants can do it.

Dear Mr. Hope:

A letter under date of December 30, 1955, from the desk of George Mitchell in the Central Office, informs of your association with "us" on the Central Office Staff as Assistant Director for Program. We were more than pleased to hear this, and want to make it a part "of the record" that we in Arkansas bid you welcome to the fold.

We, the Arkansas legates, had a chance to get to know you at the Institute this summer, and quite frankly were impressed with your keen insight and sincerity, and are enthusiastic about the contribution you can make to the efforts of Southern Regional Council and its affiliates.

The letter suggests that you be contacted on any matters concerning program and training wherein a need for assistance was felt. Though everything in Arkansas couldn't be considered as "peaches and cream," we don't have at present any specifics to casue us to immediately holla "H-E-L-P!" However, we are looking forward to strengthening our program through increased "know-how" on the part of both members and staff--and to this end could very well utilize your services. We anxiously hope that this might not be too far in the distant future--and may do just a bit of scheming. (Smiles) Of course, your contact with us does not have to await our invite, we would welcome your suggestions and instructions, in fact, we encourage them.

We expect a good "harvest" from this newly inaugurated service by SRC, of which you are an integral part, and hereby declare the availability of all our facilities.

Nat Griswold, my co-worker, whom I am sure you remember from his stay at the Institute, joins me in this whole message, and in wishing you every success in your new endeavor.

You will please find enclosed a brochure which we use as an introduction for the Arkansas Council. Just thought you might be interested in this aspect of local color which you might not have had access to.

Sincerely yours,

EXPENSE AND COMPENSATION REGULATIONS

An honorarium of $35.00 per day for actual days of service (excluding travel time) will be paid by SRC. Compensation at this rate for half a day will be paid for participation in an afternoon or evening ocassion. The minimum pay unit will be one-half day. Income tax and social security contributions will not be withheld by SRC but will be the personal responsibility of the individual consultant.

Consultants will be reimbursed for their travel and actual living expenses for the period they are away from their homes on authorized SRC business. Such trips are to be authorized in advance by the Assistant Director for Program. Voucher (Form CSP 1) should be prepared in duplicate: original to the Secretary-Treasurer at the Atlanta office, copy to John Hope II, Assistant Director for Program, c/o Fisk University, Nashville 8, Tennessee.

A Consultant Report (Form No. CSP 2) should be filled out immediately after completion of an assignment and should accompany Voucher Form No. CSP 1. This form will provide for a report of basic information about the completed assignment and may be supplemented by such narrative reports as the consultant deems desirable.

Consultants are expected to use the most appropiate mode of travel for the assignment -- train, plane, bus, or private car. When your private car is used, the SRC will reimburse you for expenses at 6¢ per mile travelled. The SRC does not assume any responsibility beyond this, e.g., car repairs, accident liability, etc.

Dear C.H.:

Lewis Jones submitted this, among other items, to foundation friends of ours, who opined that this one had implications for our program. I agree. Will you ponder, and in so far as you think fit, try to feed the idea into our States?

MEMORANDUM # 4
TO: Mr. Hallock Hoffman
FROM: Lewis W. Jones
Re.— Manipulation of Community Resources: Education in the Practice of Democracy.

This notion probably belongs within the province of adult education but I don't have access to that organization to get a hearing on it. I am also a little leary of professionals who reject the unorthodox.

It is amazing how little Negroes and other low-income groups know about the manipulation of community resources. They may not even think of public and private agencies as "resources". Rather they get a little cynical about the democratic system and attribute the failure of their interests to be served to having no "pull" or to not "knowing the right people" rather than to the fact that they simply are ignorant of what to do and how to do it. This circumstance seems to foster the development of political machine control and in a measure may account for the influence of non-democratic organizations. The informed leadership of an organization can do for adherents what they cannot do for themselves because the leadership has the requisite knowledge and may find it to be to its advantage to restrict such knowledge to the hierarchy. Little research has been done on the "withholding" of knowledge and the importance to a system of social control of withholding knowledge. (A neat research project could be designed on this subject but from unstructured observation we know enough to propose a simple action program.)

A couple of incidents mayillustrate what I am getting at. In politics, Negroes are very happy to be able to vote but are not aware of the importance of the "Precinct Convention" which the political organization likes to control. The Eisenhower supporters in Texas, you may remember, caused quite a furore by appearing en masse to take over precinct conventions in 1952 to the consternation of the small "organization" groups that had previously controlled them. Negroes in Alabama periodically make appeals to the Governor and resort to the courts to secure the suffrage. They don't realize that the County Democratic Committee controls the Registrars who enroll or fail to enroll voters on the eligible lists. It is to the advantage of the county committee to keep their influence hidden when in their roles as merchants, professional people, and neighbors they might feel pressure and called into account for their actions in their roles as committeemen. Catholic pastors, labor union leaders, NAACP officials, et al, as sophisticates who know how to manipulate community resources, may find it desirable to "do" for their rank and file rather than informing them.

The poorly informed seeking action in their interest may appeal to a school superintendent, to a hospital administrator, to a FHA supervisor without realising that these are administrative personnel rather than policy makers. Actually these administrators may influence policy but ultimately policy decisions rest with the "boards" to whom these administrators are responsible.

What about an educational program on effective democracy providing study materials that may be used by all sorts of groups and organizations. I am not sure that political leaders would appreciate having people know how to hold them responsible for their stewardship and to know how to interfere with their effective practices in engineering the consent of the governed in support of their practices.

If people know how to proceed to use the resources of the community there might be reduction in the explosive mass action that dissatisfied people engage in when they know no other way to express their wishes. Effective education is regarded here again to mean not simply literacy but information that familiarizes people with the community in which they live and instructs them in the manipulation of the resources of the community in an orderly manner.

Harold

RE: State Workshops for Boards and Staffs

First, I want to repeat in writing the very sincere personal thanks which I expressed at the January 19th meeting for your important contribution to my thinking on SRC program and to express on behalf of the Council our appreciation for your initial guidance in launching the Consultant Service Program in which you have agreed to participate. We look forward with confidence and satisfaction to the positive results of the professional "know-how" and stimulation which you will inject into the various state SRC affiliates which you will service in the coming months and, I hope, years.

I wish to report that the State Organizations have been advised of the Service and tentative workshop dates have been offered with the request that they give alternative dates if ours are not convenient for them. We hope to hear from them within a week. Immediately thereafter, tentative consultant assignments will be made and I will write you indicating where and when we will want each of you to serve in State Workshops. We are hoping to have our first workshop on February 17 and 18 and then to hold at least one each week thereafter so that we can complete this phase of program by mid-April and look to the next steps. I am also hoping that "next steps" for consultant services will be in a sense generated out of the valuable contributions that you make to the state affiliates that you serve.

You will find enclosed the following documents for your use:

1. Expense and Compensation Regulations
2. Travel and Expense Voucher
3. The second of Bob Johnson's Technical memoranda which I fell is most pertinent as background for your thinking as you plan for the workshops. The other will follow as soon as it can be mimeographed. These memoranda should be considered as confidential until you are advised to the contrary.

Other pertinent information will be made available about the situation in the state, agenda, etc. before your Workshop dates but I would caution you not to expect too much or lean too heavily upon these expected data. From your wide knowledge and experience, I think you will agree that the fundamental needs are pervasive and that they will probably differ more in degree and emphasis than in kind and quality from state to state in the 6 or 8 states being considered. Bear in mind the concensus of the January 19th discussions that the major need of the state organizations in program development is expert knowledge of How? not Why? though expert knowledge of the latter is a valuable basis for effective guidance regarding the former.

I shall welcome any comments you may have from time to time or suggestions for program development which occur to you as you think about the various aspects of the cause we serve.

I am attaching Dr. LaViolette's letter about our role in the Southern Sociological Society meeting.

I have suggested as nominees for our consultant group the names of-- Mrs. Bonita Valien, Dr. Lee Coleman.

I have indicated that we will designate a third (or more if desired) a little later after our program gets under way.

The emphasis on case material "observed directly" in their work seemed to me a limiting factor for some of our consultants. As far as possible, these should involve descriptions of the desegregation process in communities where is near completion.

As I see it now, we may want to "draft" Irene Osborne to tell about Washington or get descriptions of cases in West Virginia, Arkansas, or in other states where we may have a story to tell by April. George Mitchell, Fred Routh or some other member of the staff might do this "off the cuff" if necessary. Suggestions welcome.

February 7, 1956

Dear John:

This letter has been delayed a little, but not for reasons which you would predict! A few hours after talking with you on Thursday evening, I had a very violent gastrointestinal upset; hence with registration, Friday was a rather gruesome day; Saturday somewhat better. Then on Sunday I chopped my left big toe with an ax! We rushed some 12 miles to the hospital and doctor. It was really doubtful if I should have gone, but a bleeder is a bleeder, and since my coagulating time is always a little slow, and since it is always nice to avoid osteomyelitis, I went down and had to washed up and sutured with about eight statiches. All this is, from my perspective, rather humorous.

Now to the main point. The plan which we wish to work out for the Race Relations section of the Atlanta meetings is this:

First, we shall have Dan Thompson give a fifteen minute statement on the significance of studies in race relations to general sociological and social psychological theory. In view of his work on the Children of Bondage project, I felt that he would be almost an ideal person to do this; furthermore, his residence here makes it possible for us to talk over in some detail the plans for the content of the whole session.

Second we plan a panel of about three people. These people we wish to select in terms of their ability to present a series of problems which they have observed directly in their own work. It occurred to us that the magnitude of the change in the South and the fact that some have been engaged in consulting work and in community action--it occurred to us that your group would be a good place to look for people to work on the panel.

The panel personnel are to deal with problems defined by a community or communities, the procedures undertaken for working on those problems, the kind of personnel involved in solving the problems, the response of the various segments of the community to the solution of the problem. We are interested in some concrete evidence and data.

Third, we intend after the panel has completed its statements, to have a concluding speaker pick up the major points of the panel and relate it to theory and to opportunities for research and theory testing. At the present moment this person is Leonard Reissman, of this department, who is a social stratification theorist and research man, extremely able and highly verbal, and very quick on his intellectual feet.

We have chosen the general to pick of Stratification and Community Action. Several years ago I looked over a widefield of literature and decided that it was time to 1) look again at the significance of studies in race and ethnic relations as they had directed sociological theory in the United States, and 2) to see what the trends of theory were in stratification as they related to community organization.

When we did the Mobile study for Civil Defense, we approached Mobile from the perspective of stratification and community action, It is a very effective perspective.

We need to secure from you nominees for the panel. I am deeply impressed with the idea of inviting Mrs. Valien to join it. I suppose that we should have a list of six, so that those who are not going to Atlanta will let us know at once. We would hope that each would prepare a short paper or extensive notes; we will plan to have at least one meeting before the session after we get to Atlanta.

Again, we want to have you suggest names with respect to actual work on problems--direct consulting with responsible community leaders, advising with consultants, the news reporting service, etc. I will telegraph individuals as soon as I hear from you.

With best wishes, I am

Cordially,

RE: State Workshop Prospects

In my memorandum of January 3rd, I described our plans for State Workshops for Board members and staff in those states where it is actually left by the state affiliate and the central office that such a device would be workable and highly valuable in giving effective Program Assistance.

I shall appreciate your answering the attached list of questions at your earliest convenience and returning them to me so that we can put this service into operation at the earliest possible moment.

I realize that some of these questions will require communication with your Board members and that some of you will need more time than others. If some cannot reply with assurance by February 9th, do so as soon thereafter as possible. I know the full schedule that you are carrying and I certainly do not want to seem unreasonable in my requests. The only motive is to serve you as efficiently and promptly as is realistically feasible.

State Workshop Scheduling

1. Does the Human Relations Council want such a State Workshop helpd for its Board and Staff? Yes____; No____; Uncertain____.

2. Can you arrange for such a one day workshop within the next two months? Yes____; No____.

3. If so, where should it be held?

4. The best date for your workshop from our point of view is Saturday (all day). Is this date satisfactory? Yes ____: No____. If so, give your appraisal of the number of Board members we may expect____.

Please advise me whether this date is satisfactory at your earliest convenience — on or before Thursday, February 9th if at all possible. We hope to prepare a final schedule in Atlanta on Friday, February 10th so that we can advise the consultant teams by mid-February when and where their services will be required. Bear in mind that the success of this workshop depends upon your finding a date when virtually all of your Board can be present for a full day's session. Only financial limitations restrain us from making it a two day meeting.

5. If this date cannot be met, please suggest two alternative dates, one on a Saturday and one on some other day in the week (preferably but not necessarily Wednesday or Thursday) and indicate your estimate of the number of Board members who will attend.

Re: Virginia Workshop for Staff and Board

The first state Workshop will be held in Richmond on February 17 and 18, at the Central YMCA, First and Fourshe. Reverend Marion suggests that we meet at Virginia Council office (100 E. Franklin Street, Phone No. 3-8538) between 5 and 6 p.m. Friday, February 17th. We will go over to the YMCA where he has arranged for us to have dinner with his staff and Executive Committee. We will then go to the evening meeting of this group.

This meeting will be of an exploratory and stock-taking character. I consider the full attendance of participating central staff members and consultants at these Friday evening gatherings essential to the success of the Workshop and therefore suggest that all of us arrange to arrive in Richmond no later than 5 P M, Friday, February 17th. Unless you hear to the contrary, I suggest that you go directly to the Council office where Reverend Marion will advise you about your lodging arrangements.

It is my understanding that Hope, Parrish, and Routh from the central staff will definitely attend. Please advise me whether Fleming and Mitchell can attend.

Fred - - the Briefing statements should reach the consultants as soon as possible.

I can be in Atlanta Tuesday - Thursday (2/14-16).
Can you & Fred work with me on planning brief process for all state workshops, Agenda, and begin planning of Hard Core Conference, etc. ??

Dear John:

Just received your latest memorandum (February 9) and I write you hastily to say that I will, for once, not be here when you come Tuesday to Thursday of next week. I am to be in New York on SRC business for precisely that period. I don't expect this to alter your plans for coming, but I thought you should know.

You asked about Central Staff attendance at the Virginia Workshop. I assume that Fred and C. H. Will represent us. Certainly the public relations of the workshops should be given careful consideration. My own notion would be that each state executive, with such lay advice as he may wish, should recommend the degree and nature of publicity or non-publicity that is advisable. In general, I should think the best thing to do in most cases would be to forego publicity, since the object is to get full and uninhibited participation by state board members. In places where the press is quite friendly, state staff might arrange for interviews or other types of stories based on the Consultants.

If you do come and I am not here, I hope you will discuss with Florence Irving the question of background briefing to be done for the Consultants by this office.

Best regards,

Harold C. Fleming,
Assistant Director.

Our Executive Committee met this morning and agreed that it would be very helpful to have you come to us for a one day work conference. We think the staff and as many board people as can arrange to attend will gain inspiration and a sense of direction for facing our situation in Mississippi.

In the meantime we are open to guidance from the Central Office as to the most practical approach to utilizing your services.

Dear John Hope:

This letter will confirm our telephone conversation of yesterday and supplement the information passed along to you at that time. We are notifying members of our board of the work conference asking them to reserve the date. As soon as possible we would like information about who the consultants will be and thoughts you may have as to program.

Last Monday our Executive Committee discussed the matter of emphasis for the conference. The following topics were listed:

1. Solution of school problems and the economic development of Arkansas.
2. How to influence state officials toward real leadership responsibility.
3. How to reach people with facts.
4. How to make more responsible citizens vocal.
5. How to get action from school boards.

In addition to these, our conversation with George Mitchell leads us to believe that this would be an excellent opportunity to formulate a wise public policy statement for the state officals which might be called "The Arkansas Way."

I believe there was most enthusiasm for the first topic listed. Undoubtedly, business men are vulnerable at the point of profits. As Edwin Dunaway pointed out, Arkansas has a real opportunity to go ahead in the race among southern states toward industrialization. They can do so only if they exploit their present advantage in the matter of sane and calm approach to the school problems. You get the drift of the thinking. We are enclosing a copy of a letter in this morning's paper which indicates that we are not the only ones thinking in these terms.

I trust this will help you in your thinking and planning about the Arkansas work conference. We look forward to it with real hope.

John Hope called. It appears that it will be many weeks before meetings for training can be held in North Carolina, Florida and Tennessee. Would it be well to invite the staffs from those States, plus the usual Chairmen and State Representatives, from those States, to the Hard Core meeting?

GSM said invite NC; and not the others. Cheaper to train Tennessee's consultants in Tennessee than here. Florida seems to me not yet Hard Core.

John Hope says he half forgot and half misunderstood my ruling that for getting to the Hard Core meeting, State staff people would have to have half their expenses borne be the State organizations. Whereupon, good old uncle, SRC, agrees to foot the bill for all their travel (which comes, John Hope hopes)to just about the thousand extra that SRC made available).

Asked John Hope to develop a conscience as prickly as mine about using SRC money.

Upshot: NC will be here. Others (except old-designated Hard Core ones, won't).

John Hope says now he is not going to pull in North Carolina on Hard Core.

RE: MEETING OF NAACP SOCIAL SCIENCE CONSULTANTS, NEW YORK, MARCH 3, 1956

The Committee of the Social Science Consultants for the NAACP met on March 3 at the Hotel Martinque. Inasmuch as there was a joint conference with the Society for Study of Social Problems and the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues meeting at the same time, practically all the consultants were at the special closed committee meeting. Some of the top people in the social science field that have contributed much through their meetings, teachings, and research to this whole program of prejudice and discrimination were present. The meeting was chaired by Dr. Alfred McClung Lee, Chairman of the Department of Sociology, Brooklyn College.

The agenca included (A) Statement of purpose and procedure; (B) Summary statements of status of public school desegregation; (C) Round table discussion - 1) what can school authorities accomplish even in a hostile community--to what extent can desegregation depend upon administrative decision - 2) for guidance in strategy, what are typical weaknesses in organized resistance to desegregation - 3) how can standardized tests be used to evade desegregation - 4) other questions; (D) Consideration and authorization of a brief statement for public release on the work of the Committee.

The first item on the agenda was covered rather quickly by the chairman stating that this committee's purpose was to provide the NAACP with the best thinking of social scientists as gathered from their research and experiences and to channel this information to the appropriate person in the organization.

The second item on the agenda as to present status of desegregation presented nothing new on the subject, and in fact, I was able to bring them even more up to date on the basis of information which Southern Regional Council had gathered.

Item C, which was supposed to have been the real meat of the meeting sort of bogged down on items one and two, but finally came out with the almost general concensus that while we would not ignore those so-called "hard core" states, greater emphasis would be placed on getting those states that seem to be moving to complete the job and in this way it was felt that efforts of the "hard core" states would be weakened. While I generally accepted this point of view, I indicated that SRC felt that it was important to recognize that the reverse is also true, i.e., if the "hard core" states were able to successfully and completely, without any difficulty, defy the Supreme Court's decision that it would give aid and comfort to the law defiant elements in the other so-called desegregated states.

There also seemed to be general concensus that more success could be obtained in getting the school authorities and administration officials to move if our attack was beamed at grass root organizations rather than the so-called power structure. There was some disagreement on this however, though Washington and St. Louis were cited as two cities that had successfully integrated through the education of the many clubs and organizations who in turn influenced the Board of Education and others in authority,

Item D related to the possible use of standardized tests to evade desegregation. It represented what I considered to be the most important thing that came out of the meeting and some thing which will be of great value to us here in the South on the local firing line. It was a report of a meeting attended by the top people in educational testing in the country where they met for the expressed purpose of discussing how the test which they administer might be misinterpreted and used to delay efforts in integration. Dr. Stuart Cook gave the report.

Dr. Cook indicated that the test would reveal an average grade level difference of two years between Negro and white students in the South, especially in the area of reading and arithmetic. He also indicated that attitude seruveys would reveal that the overwhelming majority of people would be in favor of maintaining the status quo. In neither case did he feel that this offered any scientific argument for the continuation of segregation. He further stated that there was ample research to prove the latter contnetion. At the committee meeting he attended, he said representatives from these various tests disciplines suggested that in order to avoid their findings being misinterpreted and misused it might be well if a pamphlet was compiled and given wide distribution interpreting the meaning of these various tests.

There was considerable discussion around this point and after I indicated our experiences here in Atlanta where Dr. Finley of Princeton University had been brought in to give these achievement tests, and our fear of how they might be used, the group felt that this brochure should be immediately compiled and distributed. Incidentally, Dr. Finley was in attendance at our meeting.

On many occasions, during the course of the meeting, where questions were raised as to what was happening and by whom, I had the opportunity of interpreting the program and efforts of the Southern Regional Council. Suprisingly, there were some few present who were unaware of the organization and the majority as might be expected was not completely aware of the great job which I feel we are doing.

I believe that my attendance at this meeting was highly significant and important, not only for what I was able to receive but from the standpoint of giving us representation and the opportunity of interpreting our program on a national level.

I thought what I wrote to you was foggy, and I was surprised and in no wise prideful when you let so much of the foggy language stand.

I took a couple of sharp words out of your draft ("rash and presumptuous") and otherwise smoothed up a phrase or two. Here's the revised draft.

I have sent an original of it directed to Myles, and an original of it directed to Henry and Betty Shipherd, plus an extra copy for each. I do not know what the school will do for a statement on which they can base any news release. But I will let them worry about that.

Dear John:

Some money review, as I want to nick you!

As of today here are Mrs. Alexander's figures on what balance remains to you. Observe that the hard core conference thousand has not yet been spent.

I have highly credible rumors by the grapevine that we will get some more money for your show, to keep it on at least for some months to come, and hopefully beyond that.

'Tis a principle of these things that projects get nicked for overhead. Specifically: general telephoning, bookkeeping, money-begging, and that lightly-resting finger of informed and assisting administrative care -- to speak with tact. How much to get nicked? Five per cent is little, more than ten is high. Considering the general need hereabouts I would like to nick your project a thousand (before it gets spent). Sure, call it "Injun Giver" -- that would be about right. But obviously the whole show has to live, and it has made some contribution to what your part has accomplished. So I red-ink off a thousand from the balance of $4,280 shown as of today. I hope you will find the project's life in no wise shortened or straitened thereby. But at all times the show can be argued with, and often into agreement with what ought to be done!

QUESTIONS RELEVANT TO THE
JASPER, SOUTH CAROLINA SITUATION

It is desirable that as full an account as possible be made on the Jasper situation, but these are some special points which should be given attention.

1. What was the background of the protest incident, i.e., the keeping of children out of school? Had there been any other racial incidents within the past one or two years?

2. How did the protest incident take place? Had there been a recent approach to the school board? If so, what requests were made and what were the results? Was there an organized plan to keep the children out of school starting on a certain date?

3. Who are the leaders in the present protest? What are their occupations and what is their status in the community? Have there been other leaders before the present ones?

4. What are the goals of the protest?

5. What has been the reaction of the whites toward the protest? Are there any known white sympathizers? What has been the attitude of the press?

6. Are there any Negroes who are opposing the protest? Who are they, as to occupation and status in the community? What are their stated reasons?

7. What are the channels of communication between the whites and the Negro protesters?

8. How do the Negroes communicate with one another? Through mass meetings? Through small committee meetings? Is there any formal organization supporting the movement?

9. What temporary arrangements, if any, have been made for the children involved?

10. Has there been any pressure (economic or social) applied on Negroes or on whites since the beginning of the protest? If so, what form has it taken?

11. Has there been any outside help to the protest?

12. How long will the protest last? If it does not produce action, what will be the outcome?

John Hope called June 15th. Can GSM be at Fisk July 11th? Answer - no. Can Fred come? Answer - yes, so far as GSM is concerned. SRC would be willing to pay Fred's fare to Nashville and back, but would expect FIRR to feed and sleep Fred free.

Hope is pressed for time and has a little trouble giving the Consultants' Services program as much time as he should. Now additionally he gets pressed for this or that service to Muravchik; and he can see looming up considerable policy consultations as to the labor movement in the current situation. What does SRC want him to do?

Answer - GSM distinguishes between John Hope as a research practitioner and as a policy brain. GSM sharply discourages John Hope's being a research participant, and pressingly encourages John Hope as policy consultant on labor things.

There is the possibility that if John Hope would get substantially used on fact-finding, some of the funds of that program could cover (HCF agreeing). But Hope agreed that he, Hope, ought not to be doing more than advising on method of research. I gave Hope every encouragement to feel free as an SRC person to advise the labor movement on policy at SRC expense.

Was pleased with Florida meeting.

Had finally had conversation with the Mayor of Nashville, who is not yet ready for effective use of consultants. However, His Honor did think that maybe before long Nashville would be ready to move.

Dear Fred,

First let me repeat my personal appreciation and deep satisfaction for the excellent job you did in organizing and handling the SRC panel at the institute.

I am enclosing the appraisal form with many gaps. Some of the categories are completely omitted because without reading the monthly reports, I felt that judgments on these would not only have been subjective as in the case of the others but really unfair to the affiliates. Likewise, for the states that I have not visited, I doubt whether my guesses would have been even "reasoned guesses" and thus I refrained.

My appraisal of N.C. is probably questionable since it is based upon my short visit with the director.

Re: Developments to date and anticipated programs for the fall, 1956

Since the initiation of the ~~Consumer~~ Consultants' Service Program with the Virginia State Board and Staff Workshop on February 17th, certain conclusions may be drawn. In the first place the idea is sound, it seems to have been successfully "sold" to the state affiliates, and the effectiveness of the panel of consultants has fully lived up to our expectations for them. By October 1st, consultant service programs workshops will have reached all state affiliates except North Carloina, Kentucky, and Tennessee and individual state board and staff two-day workshops will have been held in seven states, e. g., Virginia, Arkansas, Texas, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, and Georgia. In three of these, South Carolina, ~~xx~~ Georgia, and Alabama, these sessions have been in addition to their participation in the hard core ~~xxxxxxxxx~~ conference of five deep South states -- Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, and Louisiana. Plans for such a workshop in Kentucky in early fall are in the making and internal problems of the North Carolina and Tennessee affiliates may account for their inability to use this service to date.

Despite the vigorous pro-segregationalist atmosphere of South Carolina, our April board and staff workshop in that state provided the impetus to board members which resulted in the scheduling of a community workshop by the Sumter, South Carolina unit of the South Carolina ~~xxxxxxxxx~~ Council during mid-summer.

Don't know outcome??

State Board ~~xxx~~ and Staff Workshops Since May, 1956

On June 10~~xx~~-12, 1956 a highly successful workshop was held by the Florida Council on Human Relations at ~~xxxx~~ Florida Southern College, Lakeland, Florida~~x~~ with eighteen people in attendance. A professional staff included John Hope, II, chairman, and ~~Dave~~ Fred R. Routh, as representative of SRC and Dr. A. ~~xxx~~ Lee Coleman, University of Kentucky, and Dr. Harold Walker, Howard University, serving as consultants. This meeting was noteworthy for several reasons: first, the depth, penetration, and candor with which the specific problems of Florida were discussed; second, the place of the workshop on the beautiful campus of a small private white college in central Florida ~~this being the first mixed conference held at this college~~ and the partially successful attempt to obtain meals in a mixed group in a downtown restuarant; and third, the successful joining of the regular business meeting of the board and the workshop confined solely to the discussion of program without harm or confusion of the problems of organization and program. Because the Consultant Service Program is confined to assistance in the development of state program, not problems of finance and organization, assistance has previously been offered to the affiliates on condition that these workshops would be confined solely to problems of program and consequently the board members had to be convened at the expense of the state affiliates for an additional meeting over and above the regular business meetings of the board. During this period of rather limited funds, this specification has been a major obstacle for some states. By conducting a workshop of a day and a half (three sessions) confined to program followed by a business meeting of the board on the second day, it was found that the discussions successfully complemented each other and at the same time utilized the services of consultants fully on matters of program in which their maximum skills were applicable. This plan has been offered to the remaining states and will, no doubt, facilitate the scheduling of the remaining State Board and Staff Workshops.

Complete plans for the state workshops at Chapel Hill, North Carolina and Tuskegee, Alabama had to be cancelled a few days prior to the meeting dates because the number of board members who were able to attend was insufficient to warrant the expenditure. The canvas of board members by the directors in Alabama and Kentucky indicated that a large turn-out of board members would be impossible during the summer months but both are planning early fall workshops at times mutually satisfactory. A large attendance is promised at an Alabama Board and Staff Workshop to be held at Tuskegee Institute on September 25th and 26th and a similar workshop will be held by the Kentucky Council as soon after as a mutually satisfactory date can be found.

The services of SRC consultants and three SRC central staff members are being provided to the Georgia Committee on Interracial Relations for a two-day conference to be held at Atlanta University, Atlanta, Georgia on September 28th and 29th. Indicative of the flexibility with which the Consultants Service Program attempts to work and its desire to assist and facilitate the program of the state affiliates rather than to impose its program, may be seen in the fact that this conference is the culmination of several steps taken by the Georgia Committee in consultation with the assistant director for program and other SRC staff members over a period of several months. Unlike the State Board and Workshops sponsored by the Consultant Service Program, this conference is sponsored by the Georgia Committee and in addition to board and staff members, will include carefully selected local community leaders, white and colored, from many communities scattered over the state. Some thirty-five to forty persons are expected and of necessity the content of the program will differ from our workshops. Services of Georgia State consultants as well as SRC consultants will be utilized and through the joint planning of program details it is expected that the particular specialties as well as the overall compentencies of our consultants will be fully utilized.

Other Offerings of the Consultant Service Program

While our services are not confined to the boards of state affiliates (see my report of March 31, 1956, pp.3-4), primary attention has been given to this group to date because it was felt that maximum improvement in the Council program throughout the South could be achieved by beginning with the top echelon of liberal leadership represented in the boards and staffs of the several state affiliates and then moving progressively as rapidly as possible to the next level of leadership, community leaders both within and outside of the local units of state SRC affiliates, thus providing the largest amount of transfer and acceleration of liberal ideas and action throughout the region. Thus, it is no accident that this program has been in a sense " underwraps" with no publicity given to its availability until July 21st, when the executive committee of SRC authorized the assistant director for program to prepare an article for New South which would describe the service and indicate its availability to the general public. If the level of acceptance of this service by community leadership inside and out of the SRC family is anywhere near the level of acceptance enjoyed from the state affiliates, we may anticipate a greatly increased demand for our services in the fall of 1956 and thereafter and will be seriously faced with the need for greater resources, both financial and manpower. However, it must be emphasized that this service is not imposed even upon SRC affiliates but must be "marketed," and that quite tactfully.

At the community level some of our major targets include the following:

(A) Local community units of state SRC affiliates
(B) Community human relations organizations not affiliated
(C) Local organizations or local units of regional and national organizations having broader interests one of which is intergroup relations, e.g. churches, labor unions, race organizations, etc.
(D) Government and quasi-government bodies or committees of such bodies specifically concerned with the implementation of the public school desegregation decision, e.g. school boards or study groups of school boards, PTA groups, teachers and other education officials, etc.

Despite limitations of resources and time, services have been rendered in some of these areas and cautious canvassing of prospects in some others. The request for a Negro consultant as a speaker at a dinner meeting at a down town Daytona Beach Hotel sponsored by the Daytona Beach unit of the Florida Council was successfully met with quite favorable reactions. The speech was well received and favorably reported in the daily press. The consultant spent a day thereafter in consultation with officials of this organization. The services of another consultant were requested by the Tennessee Council to train and supervise a group of about five interviewers who conducted professional interviews with white and colored leaders in various phases of community life and public officials concerned directly or indirectly with the desegregation process in Nashville and other communities in middle Tennessee over a period of six months. The analysis and report of these interviews is to serve as a basis for action by the Tennessee Council. The services of a consultant as the speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Birmingham unit of the Alabama Council was requested during June but could not be provided. Assistance will definitely be provided to the Birmingham group as soon as the best use of our resources there can be determined.

On July 12th a panel of six representatives of the Southern Regional Council conducted a four-hour seminar on the subject "Role of the Southern Regional Council in a Changing South" at the annual Race Relations Institute of the American Missionary Association of the Congregational Christian Churches at Fisk University. The membership of this Institute numbering about 125 persons is composed primarily of persons professionally involved in human relations problems of varied, race, religion, and national origin from all over the country many of whom are working in the South. The participants included the following: Fred Routh, chairman; Dr. C. H. Parrish; Miss Irene Osborne; Miss Florence Irving; Mrs. Bonita Valien; and John Hope, II.

While no direct request for consultant services has come from governmental bodies, the directors in at least three states where such a prospect is most imminent are canvassing this possibility and watching for an appropriate opening. I have conferred with the Mayor of Nashville who is also President of the Tennessee State Organization of Mayors. Efforts in this direction will be continued.

An intensive two or three day conference of all staff members of SRC and its affiliates in early or mid-fall is, in my opinion, a "must".

FILE COPY

January 8, 1957

To: The New World Foundation
From: The Southern Regional Council
Subject: Report on SRC's Consultant Service Program

The aim of this memo is to give a more comprehensive picture of SRC's Consultant Service Program. In previous reports to the New World Foundation, we dealt mainly with the "process" of the workshops held with our state affiliates' boards and staffs; here we seek to spell out the "content" of those sessions. This, along with our letters dated May 21st, September 10th, and November 20th, 1956, will provide an overall summary of our experiences with the program.

CONSULTANT SERVICES TO SRC STATE AFFILIATES

Each of the sessions described in this report followed a general pattern. (1) Early in the session a resource inventory was taken; this included resources in staff, in board membership, and in other key individuals and organizations in the area considered to be (as a minimum requirement) "for law and order." (2) The next step was to divide the listed resources into potential and active categories. (3) A problem census was taken, including the listing of resistance groups. (4) An attempt was made to relate particular resources to specific problems.

Stress was laid on the importance of developing local integrated councils to work on a variety of local problems such as health, sanitation, recreation, education, law enforcement, employment, etc., on a community-wide basis. Care must be taken, it was pointed out, that Negro members of such groups truly represent the Negro community and are not merely "window-dressing."

Each state group was warned against political activity as a tax-exempt organization; it being recognized, however, that board and general members could be politically active as individuals.

Two of our state affiliates, Kentucky and Tennessee, started operations using a consultant staff plan of their own. Since the development of SRC's Consultant Service Program, the idea and practice have been adopted by four more states - Alabama, Georgia, Texas and Virginia - testimony, we believe, to the effectiveness of the program.

INDIVIDUAL SESSIONS:

Virginia: The consultant session with the Virginia Council on Human Relations took place on February 17 and 18, 1956, shortly after the passage of the Grey Amendment. Those attending felt depressed because the organization had been unable (due to its tax-exempt status) to take an active part in the political fight which had raged across the Old Dominion. The two basic questions asked were: (1) What can we do that is effective, other than political activity, at this time; and (2) What can be done by a volunteer group when the power of the state government is being used to maintain segregation?

The consultants suggested that intensified effort to move some "soft spots" toward desegregation would prove fruitful. The group listed communities which had previously announced plans for desegregation and others which seemed inclined to accept it, such as Arlington, Charlottesville, Hampton, Norfolk, Richmond, and Waynesboro. Since the workshop, "locals" have been formed or strengthened in most of these key communities. The Charlottesville Council made national headlines when it brought Louisville School Superintendent Charmichael to the community and again when John Kasper (later of Clinton infamy) sought unsuccessfully to disrupt a meeting.

Arkansas: The work conference was held March 9 and 10, at a Methodist camp outside Little Rock. Hoxie, Arkansas, with the aid of our state affiliate, had successfully weathered opposition to school desegregation, but no further communities were moving toward desegregation of their schools. Arkansas is predominently a rural and agricultural state. Thus, a real problem is how to proceed in rural areas where there isn't regular community organization structure.

The consultant team suggested several approaches, among which were: (1) working with such groups as do reach rural people, e.g., church groups, the Grange, PTA's, teachers associations; (2) working out from county seats; (3) picking for concerted effort key areas which are pace-setters for surrounding areas; (4) picking strong personalities who influence others in rural areas; (5) getting news releases to all rural weeklies; (6) concentrating effort in Little Rock to move the entire state; (7) raising with appropriate state authorities the question of what effect defiance was having on incoming industry.

The Arkansas Council, which has an unusually good Board and able staff, had been doing many of these things, but some Board members who had been inclined to "let George (George being the staff) do it" agreed to take a more active role themselves. A committee visited the Industrial Development Commission and the Chairman of the IDC, Winthrop Rockefeller, later publicly warned that prosegregation activities would jeopardize the state's industrialization.

Texas: The Lone Star State is almost an empire of itself. In recent years it has been facing more and more to the West, but the Old South still tugs at it - particularly in East Texas. The main problems confronting the state organization are covering so vast an area and planning a sufficiently varied program for a state with such great diversification of racial attitudes and practices.

At the meeting March 16 and 17, the consultants suggested (1) using the "locals" which existed as information gathering centers for the central office at Austin and as disseminating centers for information from Austin. This provides a two-way pipe line into key communities and provides information on which to base program planning. Further, it was suggested that programs be planned around these "locals," each seeking to move ahead as rapidly as possible. It was also suggested that special effort go into the soft spots to attain as much integration as rapidly as possible.

As a result of the recognized need for staff assistance to each of these local groups, the Texas Commission has adopted a consultant plan, making use in each of these communities of professionals who work on a per-diem basis, with the Executive Director serving as coordinator.

Hard Core Conference: This was a sub-regional meeting held March 23-24th in Atlanta for board members and staff from Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, and South Carolina. The bringing together of these people so that each knew he was not alone, that others shared his problems, was of great value in itself. There were both general sessions and individual state sessions.

Generally it was recognized that one of the chief problems in the Hard Core Area is keeping open the lines of communication between whites and Negroes. Small, informal, integrated groups were suggested as a help in this direction. It was also suggested (and this has since been put into practice) that workshops should be quietly held with "locals." The problem of maintaining law and order was also heavily stressed by consultants and much discussion was devoted to the mobilization of the "moderates" to this end. The problem of documenting and counteracting reprisals against whites and Negroes who favor, or are purported to favor integration, led to various suggestions for getting their story out through the national media.

South Carolina: This is one of the five hard-core states which are in open defiance of the Supreme Court decision. When they met on April 25-26, the board and staff of the state group had a sense of frustration, for it seemed impossible to work directly on the problem of school desegregation.

The consultant team quickly recognized the need for a more elemental program aimed at mobilizing public opinion for the defense of the basic rights of freedom of speech, association, and assembly. After considerable round-table discussion it was decided: (1) that special effort should be made to document incidents of economic and social reprisal against Negroes and whites who favor compliance; (2) to get the story of these reprisals out to the national press through SRC (this has been done with considerable success); (3) that considerable attention should be given to work with church and civic groups and newspapers to support law and order, for it was recognized that without this support no progress was possible; and (4) that with the cooperation of SRC an attempt would be made to relocate the new class of "D.P.'s" - displaced parsons. (We have since played a modest part in assisting several such "D.P.'s.")

Florida: This meeting was held on June 11 and 12 at Florida Southern College, Lakeland, shortly after the Democratic primary in which a retired general from the Florida National Guard had campaigned for the governorship on the single plank of white supremacy. Though he lost, things were not all orange blossoms in the "Sunshine State," for a special session of the state legislature to consider means of preserving "our way" of public education was in the offing.

The Florida Council's Board is sophisticated and the integrated staff works well as a team. After deliberation with the consultants it was decided: (1) that special effort should be made to reach friendly elements in the major dailies of the state to have them editorially urge preservation of law and order and, where possible, compliance with the decision; (2) to undertake renewed and concerted effort with "locals" to keep open the lines of communication between the racial groups; (3) to help develop local interracial groups which would work to relieve tensions but which might not - or might not care to - formally affiliate with SRC; (4) to prepare for a joint meeting of all agencies in the state concerned with human relations. (This has been done with considerable success and the Florida Council continues to play a coordinating role.)

Alabama: This is a hard core state, but one with some liberal influences at work in several areas, notably TVA in the Tri-City area (Florence, Sheffield, and Tuscumbia) and the coastal influence of the deep sea port of Mobile. Alabama was also the site of the Montgomery bus protest, which was peaceful, and the Miss Lucy affair, which was not.

At the session with Consultants on September 25 and 26, considerable time was spent discussing means of preserving law and order and winning recognition for national public policy. A careful analysis of how law broke down in Tuscaloosa during the Miss Lucy affair was undertaken and plans were made to work with the ministerial association in that town to prevent similar disturbances when the next Negroes apply for admission. (This is in progress.) Differing roles of Board members were discussed. These were identified as (1) safe roles - white church women, retired white ministers, Negroes who were independent of the white community; it was recognized that these people were more free to act and take public stands than most; (2) one-shot roles - the use of a person from out of town who could say things that needed to be said but which no local person felt safe in saying; (3) continuing role - the use of a person over a period of time in a given area calling for more discretion and sophistication than the "one-shot" role, etc.

Georgia: For a more complete picture of what happens at one of these Consultant Service Program workshops, we attach a copy of the rough summary of this conference, prepared by the conferees themselves.

Kentucky: The Bluegrass State is moving rapidly ahead with desegregation; indeed, the state board of education reported this fall that 84% of the school systems were in the process of integrating their schools. The Kentucky Council therefore is turning toward problems of teacher integration and non-discriminatory employment practices. The state group itself makes use of consultants in its community relations work.

The SRC consultants met on November 17-18-19 with the Kentucky Board members, Executive Director, and state consultants. Some time was spent defining the role of consultants as professional advisers, rather than as "advocates." There was general concensus that advocacy should be left to the Board, the Executive Committee, and the Executive Director. The problem of opportunities for professional training for Negroes was next on the agenda. (As a result of this, a survey of nurse training facilities done by the Kentucky Council has received wide newspaper coverage.) The Kentucky Council is now surveying employment practices by industries in Kentucky. They are cooperating with the President's Committee on Government Contracts.

BROADER APPLICATIONS OF CONSULTANT SERVICE PROGRAM

As part of the expanded activities of the Consultant Service Program, three special consultant services have been undertaken. The first two should be regarded as confidential. More such strategic consultative approaches are anticipated.

Montgomery, Alabama. Just prior to the issuance by the Federal District Court of the bus desegregation decision of the U.S. Supreme Court, Emory Via (SRC's labor consultant) and Fred Routh (Assistant Director) went to Montgomery. There they conferred with local white and Negro leadership to ascertain what preparations were being made for the peaceful acceptance of the order. A second purpose of the visit was to stimulate thinking and action on the part of these leaders to prepare the community for the order. Among those conferred with were Dr. M. L. King, Jr., Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, and E. D. Nixon of the Montgomery Improvement Association; Grover Hall, editor of the Montgomery Advertiser; Rev. Thomas Thrasher, key white minister; E. C. Pippen, AFL-CIO labor leader; Dr. James Pierce and Dr. Council Trenholm, (President) of Alabama State College.

This service helped bolster the plans of local leaders to prepare the public for peaceful acceptance of the Court order. It also helped SRC's Information Service prepare the background story on the Montgomery bus protest movement which was widely distributed to Southern newspaper editors just prior to the implementation of the decisions.

Nashville, Tennessee: John Hope II, G. H. Parrish, and Fred Routh attended an "off-the-record" meeting with some key leaders of the Nashville area to assist them in their thinking on how to move the Nashville Conference (a local interracial group of influential people who identify themselves as "moderates") ahead more rapidly. There was also the question of supporting the governor in his previous stand of opposing all pro-segregationist attempts to influence public opinion in the state. Committees from two influential non-SRC groups have since called on the governor. When the legislature convened, members found a letter from the Tennessee Council of Churches on their desks asking them to act in moderation and Christian humility.

Davidson College, N.C.: Fred Routh attended the sessions of the USCC - United Student Christian Council at Davidson on December 28-29 as a consultant and as leader of the section on race relations on the campus. Some 350 students from across the South met on an interracial basis to consider "Our United Campus Witness." The sessions in race relations were well attended and well received. Great concern was manifested by students over the dichotomy between their position and that of their parents. This was a first step toward communication and concerted planning among college student groups in the South.

Memo to Harold Fleming
From: C. H. Parrish
Re.: SRC Consultant Program

Our conversation some days ago concerning the SRC consultant program prompts me to comment briefly on what I conceive to be its rationale.

At the risk of underlining the obvious, mention should be made of the superordinate-subordinate character of the relations between whites and Negroes in the United States. In the South this relationship has been crystallized by law. However, in other parts of the country where there are few discriminatory laws, the prescribed behavior patterns are generally recognized and observed. Segregation by statute (as pointed out in The Strange Career of Jim Crow) is of relatively recent origin but the status relationship itself goes back to the early Colonial period. It is small wonder that people brought up to accept the traditional pattern should find it difficult to reorder their relations in terms of equality.

The old committees on interracial cooperation never succeeded in making the shift in approach that would challenge directly a relationship that had for so long been taken for granted. SRC has struggled manfully with this problem and some progress has been made but among many of the state groups the old attitudes persist.

Because of its heritage and its essential nature SRC has relied heavily upon the "appeal to conscience" and the morale-building effect of the high class reporting of the "happy Story" through the pages of New South. There has been no real opportunity to provide people on the field with the specialized "know-how" so urgently demanded for dealing with concrete problems at the local level. And not always has the distinction between advocacy and professional service been sufficiently clear.

Another facet of SRC's problem is the difficulty of securing the services of qualified Negroes for top level, full-time staff positions. Whatever the reasons for it may be, the lack of Negro personnel in responsible regional jobs has hampered the Council's efforts to operate as an integrated agency. It is easier to teach by example than by precept.

The consultant program is a partial answer to all of these problems. With deliberate intent the consultant group has been overbalanced a little in favor of Negroes. Thus the status relationship is attacked by indirection by presenting the Negro expert in a unique relationship of equality with his white colleagues.

In their contacts with state boards and staffs the consultants act on the assumption that the people attending such an institute do not need conviction on the basic matter of desegregation but rather want advice on the best social techniques for achieving their goal. This has the wholesome effect of diverting attention from unproductive disputations at the ideological level to concrete problems of implementation.

As is true of most operations of this sort there is no adequate statistical measurement available of the results of the consultant service. However, those of us who have been intimately associated with it are convinced of its crucial importance. The initial involvement and continued interest of the consultants themselves constitutes an increasingly valuable asset to SRC and the whole South. Because of the consultants there has been more attention paid to the "soft spots" thus through concentrated efforts making more efficient use of limited resources. There is a clearer understanding of what needs to be done and more willing acceptance of responsibility for doing it. There have been several instances reported of individual consultants being called back to communities for specific jobs. This perhaps is the real test of worth.

Dear John:

Here is the report of expenditures of funds for the Consultant Service Program under the grant from the New World Foundation.

Copies have been sent to Burton Eagle and Katherine Taylor. This one is for your files.

Note the slight change in Consultant travel costs - due to some U-Drive-It bills which just came in for you and C.H. on Consultant activities.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

"SRC over-head charge of 10%." This is the percentage allocation for overhead which the Council customarily charges against the budgets of special projects. In one way or another, all of the resources of the organization are involved in the planning and implementation of the consultant program. SRC's Administrative Assistant handled much of the paper work and routine administrative tasks for the project here at the Central Office in Atlanta (Mr. Hope's headquarters are in Nashville). The Research Assistant spent considerable time pulling together and editing pertinent background about each state which consultants were to visit. This material, distributed in advance, saved as much as half-a-day's time usually needed for on-the-spot orientation and briefing of consultants. All of the professional staff have spent considerable time working with Mr. Hope in planning and evaluating each of the activities. Included in the overhead allocation, of course, are such routine costs as secretarial help, mimeographing services, use of office facilities and local phone calls.

"Held in Reserve." Both of the items listed under this section were planned for execution late in the last calendar year but had to be postponed because SRC was in the process of important change. Dr. Mitchell had retired as Executive Director and Harold Fleming had been chosen his successor. The Council began to rethink its own program focus in terms of greater centralized and regional emphasis. Until the new administration and emphasis had "shaken down" a bit, we felt it wise to postpone these two crucial meetings.

"State Staff-Consultant Conference." This is the last year SRC's state affiliates will receive aid under the grant from the Fund For the Republic. We hope, during this last year, to give them a real push toward self-sufficiency in program planning, development and execution; and in fund raising ability. Careful consideration has been given to this task. The most important step, we believe, will be taken in bringing their professional staffs together to talk through their problems with a battery of our best consultants. We have also obtained from the American Friends Service Committee the offer of services, on a gratis basis (except for travel), of a fund raising expert. Chief emphasis, however, will be placed on further developing a program worthy of local support.

"Consultant Workshop." It has been almost eighteen months since we last drew together all of SRC's consultants. There is a real need now to bring them together to evaluate the program as it has developed, to examine where we are, and to plan where we are going. There is an increasing demand for consultant services from other agencies and from community leadership. We must enlarge both the number of consultants and the range of specialties represented to meet these demands. New consultants must be orientated in our approach and methods. As more and more Southern communities meet the stress of social transition, the availability and ability of such consultants may well determine the course these communities follow.

Dear John:

While we never sent you a formal thank you note after our Consultants Workshop in November I want to say again that we very much appreciated your help. I think you played an extremely difficult role in our meeting but you did it with great skill and made a substantial contribution.

In response to your request for a Superintendent I would suggest Dr. Turpin of the Fayette County schools. I think they have done more than any other system including Louisville. Lee Coleman has worked closely with the Fayette County schools, particularly those located in Lexington. If you haven't asked Lee about this, then one of us should. Lee would probably be more effective but I judge you want a superintendent. We will soon have a four page report by lee on what the County system has done. Mr. John M. Ridgway, the Lexington Superintendent might also be good, but they haven't done as much. Best bet is Dr. N.C. Turpen, but lets contact Coleman first.

For a minister you couldn't do better than Rev. C. Sumpter Logan (Presby) and Rev. Ted Braun (Evangelical and Reformed). Logan was the leader at Henderson but Braun is a very effective speaker, whom I got to know at the recent FOR meeting in Atlanta. Both can be addressed at their churches. Lewis S.C. Smythe of the College of the Bible in Lexington (Disciples of Christ) and KCHR Board member Rev. Olof Anderson (Presby) would be good. Anderson's address is, 4213 Church Way, St. Matthews, Ky.(Louisville suburb).

I hope this is what you want. Let me know if I should contact Lee Coleman. Tell me of other ways I can help.

Sincerely,

Galen Martin

Mr. Harry S. Jones,
Executive Secretary
North Carolina Council on Human Relations
Room 209
121 East Third Street
Charlotte, North Carolina

Dear Harry:

I have just returned to Nashville and wish to hasten to congratulate you on a job well done in making the plans for the North Carolina board and staff workshop. You brought together not only a large but a rather diversified group despite the adversities of bad weather. As always, I had the feeling that there were many important things that we did not get a chance to discuss thoroughly. However, I hope that it was successful in stimulating, prodding, and positively challenging your board group and visitors to more positive support of your program and a more active role in their respective communities. You have done an effective job in strengthening and broadening your board membership since we last talked in Charleston last spring. I was further encouraged by the meeting at High Point on the following Tuesday. I spent sometime that evening in further conversations with John Alexander and the following morning with Mayes Behrman and left with the feeling that there were many points at which your respective programs might effectively complement each other and thus through the type of co-operation and co-ordination discussed at this meeting that some significant tangible goals might be achieved in the next several months. For instance, through your valuable connections with business interests in Charlotte and the skills and resources which Mayes has in the field of merit employment, significant "breakthroughs" in merit employment in the metropolitan area of Charlotte are possible. I suggested to Mayes that it is possible that the consultant service program might be of assistance at some point in the merit employment field. I further suggested that he talk with you further on basis of our discussions.

Back to the workshop, I would appreciate your giving me some summary information for our files. I would like to have the names, positions or occupations, and addresses of all persons who attended the workshop whether they attended on Friday evening or Saturday with a designation as to whether they were board members or visitors. It would also be very helpful to us in future planning if you could indicate as far as you know organizational connections of significance to our interest which are held by the various participants in their cities or in the state whether in educational, business or service, civic, professional, or religious organizations. For instance, it was very valuable for me to know that Mr. Clark was a member of the school board and that Mrs. Holiday was an official of the PTA and I am sure that there are many other connections of value to us represented in this excellent group of people.

It will also be helpful to me for purposes of reporting our developments to the foundation and for improving our services in the future if you would indicate to me what, if anything, of value to your program was derived from the workshop, give me any criticisms and suggestions which you have on basis of observing the workshop in action (please be quite candid), and indicate next steps, if any, which you think the consultant service may take to be of assistance to you and to the general situation in North Carolina.

Again, thanks for your co-operation and feel free to call on us when you feel that we can be helpful to you.

Sincerely,

John Hope II, Chief Consultant

Dear John:

Enclosed is a letter from Milton Vigo of the Louisiana Council inquiring about your services.

You will recall that I sent you a copy of Harold's letter placing the Louisiana Council on provisional status. One of the stipulations for the Louisiana Council was that the state administrative committee hold a work session with you and the consultants.

Would you please indicate to Milton when we can meet in New Orleans, taking into account, of course, that provisional status extends to May 1 and the work session should be held prior to that time.

See you soon.

MEMORANDUM

TO: ALL SRC CONSULTANTS April 8, 1957
FROM: JOHN HOPE II, Chief Consultant

The main purpose of this memo is to ask you to mark the dates May 10 and 11 on your calendar. We want to convene all consultants who have been involved in our Consultant Service Program in the past year for a meeting in Atlanta on these dates. The purpose is to appraise our past and plan our future program. The effectiveness of your important contribution to the effort is apparent in many ways but one of the most obvious of these is the fact that a Foundation has seen fit to underwrite this phase of the SRC program for another year. Thus, we are "in business" with greater opportunities before us and at the same time more of a challenge to our ingenuity, training, technical skill and "horse sense" to find the best ways of using this apparently effective tool for the best interest of the South and the nation during this crucial transitional period.

Please hold these dates open for us. I will advise you further about the specific plans for this meeting in the near future. It will probably begin with dinner at 6:00 p.m. May 10 and end the next day (Saturday) about 4:00.

In the meanwhile, if you have suggestions or criticisms that might be helpful to us in planning this conference, they will be gratefully received.

Finally you will be interested to know that we hope to give greater emphasis to servicing local communities in the coming year and assisting within the limits of budget organizations and groups unaffiliated with SRC as well as our affiliates on the basis of need and the prospect of improving and enriching their contribution to the objectives which we seek. This may necessitate the broadening of our consultant panel both as to number and range of training and experience. To this end, I will welcome your suggestions of the names (address and brief statement of qualifications, etc.) of persons who are qualified by training, temperament, and interest to serve as consultants. These may include persons with the more specialized skills pertinent to particular problem areas as well as those with the broader qualifications for general consultative purposes such as our present panel demonstrates, e.g., professional educators; persons trained and experienced in religion but with training and/or experience in the area of community organization and social action; industrial and labor relations persons; functionaries in and students with training and experience in dealing with law enforcement, municipal administration, school boards and administrators, etc. However, I must emphasize that this request does not imply resources for major expansion of our services but rather the somewhat selfish interest in adding a few of the very best persons available to fit the needs of our service while compiling a much larger list from which we may comfortable suggest competent persons to others seeking consultant services, some of which are outside of the scope of our program. Such requests are on the increase and any contributions that can be made toward furnishing qualified technical resources to points of need is itself an important service at this time.

Please advise me promptly whether you are free to attend this meeting on May 10th and 11th.

Consultant Service Bro.

Dear John,

What material or information is already available on this Summer's Institute? I've discussed with Ben the idea of getting labor participation and think it a good one. We would like to get out a letter immediately. If printed matter is available, then about fifty (50) copies would serve as a starter for me.

If nothing is in print, then I would like such information as you now have about program participants, costs, exact dates, program schedules and whatever else you feel is pertinent.

For the labor groups, we were thinking of covering such topics as the background of resistance groups; activities of pro-segregation groups, how to counteract the resisters, educational programs in Southern unions, resources available to union staff persons, and the use of racial issues against unions. Comments from you are welcome.

Best personal wishes.

Sincerely yours,

Dear John:

I think it would be helpful if you would prepare a memorandum for distribution to our state staff when they come together May 21-22. The purpose of the memo would be to put down in writing our ideas of the expanded consultant program. It could detail some of the possible uses of consultants in this new phase of program development. It could also contain the types of opportunities we particularly seek.

Nothing too elaborate. Certainly no longer than Myrdal's An American Dilemma.

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: DIRECTORS OF SRC STATE AFFILIATES AND CONSULTANTS

FROM: JOHN HOPE II, CHIEF CONSULTANT, CONSULTANT SERVICE PROGRAM, SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

SUBJECT: THE CONSULTANT SERVICE PROGRAM -- PURPOSE, REQUISITES FOR EFFECTIVENESS, AND SCOPE

The major purpose of the Consultant Service Program (CSP) is to provide technical assistance in program development to SRC affiliates and other groups whose objectives are similar or compatible with those of SRC, e.g., the elimination of segregation and discrimination based upon race in the Southern economy. It seeks to provide professional guidance on how to achieve democratic race relations; not persuasive advocates to foster and promote acceptance of the principle. Effective implementation of the policy, not its establishment, is emphasized.

Such assistance is provided by a panel of consultants highly qualified by formal training, experience, and temperament, who are available on a part-time basis to organizations, community groups, official bodies concerned with and/or committed to the desegregation process. Initially, the service was confined primarily to the SRC state affiliates as an SRC service without cost to them, though it was available to outside groups on a cost or partial cost basis. From the start, this restriction in scope of service was simply based upon limitations of resources and the recognition of a priority to members of the SRC family. But the operations of the first few months clearly demonstrated a broader need for such aid to unaffiliated local groups and official bodies if the common aims of these and SRC affiliates were to be achieved expeditiously and efficiently.

Foundation aid was sought and obtained which now allows us to provide technical assistance to non-SRC as well as SRC affiliated local as well as state or regional groups on basis of need and their ability to effectively use such resources either without cost or on basis of their ability to pay for it. This, it is believed, has greatly extended the range of potential availability of technical assistance in program development, community organization, etc. to groups fostering the goals and spirit of the Desegregation Decision in the South and has further increased the flexibility and efficiency with which these professional talents can be allocated so as to gain maximum positive results for the region as a whole.

On the other hand, it places a heavier burden upon SRC and state affiliate staff members to publicize the CSP and in a sense "selling" the services to potential users. Figuratively speaking, the writer and, indeed, the SRC as a whole, is a broker whose function is to bring together in the most effective way those groups or key individuals who have need for such professional services and those who possess the talents required but are not organizationally situated so as to focus them where they can be most fruitful in gaining SRC objectives. Since the resources of the CSP are limited, all requests for assistance cannot be accepted however deserving they might be. Rather, our role appears to be that of choosing from the requests submitted those which appear to be most promising and most likely to be multiplying and accelerating in their impact upon the productivity and sophistication of leadership, those which will not only render needed high level scarce services to groups involved in our cause but may activate and encourage other groups to similarly employ and finance such skills. Ours is the task of complementing and supplementing existing (and sometimes dormant) resources in the community, not competing with them; of providing the additional element that may motivate liberal groups to constructive action and prevent frustrating inertia in the face of complex and discouraging obstacles; of supporting the dedicated and effective volunteer layman with limited technical skill and advice at the time and point of need and getting out of his way when he is ready to move forward unaided,with skill, understanding, and courage.

But the function of administration of the CSP goes far beyond mere brokerage of a given service. The service itself though requiring a definite level and type of formal training as social scientists or practitioners, must be subtly and deftly tailored to the individual needs of each group and frequently is not separable from a particular consultant. Such a person through temperament, personality, or experience may give as a part of his total professional contribution a unique element (or spark) that gives his service a plus value in particular situations -- and, indeed, may conceivably provide a negative one in others.

Consequently, if the CSP is to be equal to the varied types of present demands and ready to meet new ones as they arise, the panel must be varied enough in its composition to provide maximum flexibility without loss of the basic common qualifications necessary for overall efficiency. On the other hand, if lofty standards are to be maintained, the consultants should receive frequent enough assignments to motivate their continuous awareness and study of new developments in the Southern situation and periodic re-evaluation of the situation as scholars. Thus, in terms of present limits of resources and consultation opportunities, very real restrictions on panel size are necessary, while pressure for overall competence and flexibility seem to increase as the demands move closer to the specific friction points, e.g., the local community with a pending court order, the school board, the park commission, etc. Under these conditions, the consultant is challenged to give rather specific suggestions to fit the particular conditions, advise as to whether particular plans or strategies seem sound or not.

Therefore, effective administration of the CSP, in addition to bringing consultant and consultee together, depends upon the extent to which the composition of the panel includes and the program utilizes the blend of specialties and high professional qualifications needed to meet varied demands; the extent to which the individual consultants are able to accept assignments when requested; the amount and quality of their preparation for assignments, and the support given by SRC research and information facilities.

A clear distinction should be made between efforts aimed at gaining adherents and achieving acceptance of the principle of equality and the policy of desegregation and integration, and those directed to the application of these principles and policies with maximum speed and efficiency and a minimum of overt conflict. Both of these are necessary and should be pursued by staffs of all state affiliates but the emphasis given to each will vary from state to state at a given time and in each state from time to time. It is imperative that the director always have clearly in mind which of these aims he seeks, or the relative significance of each, in every project developed -- policy acceptance or effective implementation of policy in specific program areas chosen to fit the needs of a particular community -- because the best techniques for achieving these respective goals are not necessarily the same.

The primary field of operation and usefulness of the CSP is the latter -- implementing the letter and spirit of the Desegregation Decision. Its major sphere of operation is among organizations and strategically placed individual community leaders who have accepted in principle, at least, the Desegregation Decision and those who, without regard to their personal attitude, are by their positions impelled to seek its implementation (or to maintain order and avoid illegal opposition) -- willingly or unwillingly. The CSP should prepare to assist those who are working for implementation whether through personal conviction, organizational involvement and consequent implicit acceptance of group discipline, or administrative responsibility to implement laws, court orders, etc. applied to their employer.

Its prime target is thus leadership, not rank-and-file membership; those in a position to motivate, multiply, and accelerate affirmative action, not followers. Therefore, efforts at "selling" the CSP should be aimed at leadership groups who for some reason are ready to at least consider action. This is where the state and SRC staffs should cooperate as broker. The success of this operation requires rifle shot, not shotgun, methods of promotion; careful choice of persons or groups who can most profitably use consultant service; and specific promotional efforts, mainly personal, aimed at encouraging them to seek such help. Mimeographed general mailings are not likely to be effective and may alert the opposition thus generating counteractive efforts which may unnecessarily cause the diversion of some of our efforts to defensive channels.

The following are some of the organizational frameworks through which, it is felt, the CSP can be effective in the next two or three year period which may be used as a basis for determining where it can be useful in strengthening and broadening program:

I. SRC state affiliates and their local units, with emphasis upon more promising local community situations. (Utilize the assistance and other organizational contacts and associations of board members in developing opportunities.)

II. Assistance to and coordination with other organizations and agencies insofar as they are promoting activities with goals similar to ours, including purely local groups and local units of national, regional, or state organizations.

A. Religious groups, e.g., United Church Women, Council of Jewish Women and other Jewish groups, the Catholic Interracial Committee, the organizations of various religious denominations and/or their subordinate agencies and commissions concerned with our cause; local inter-denominational ministerial associations, etc.

B. Civic Organizations, e.g., League of Women Voters, American Association of University Women, PTAs, etc.

C. Professional Organizations, e.g., organization of social workers, nurses, etc.; Council of Social Agencies; etc.

D. Organizations of Economic groups.

1. Labor Unions.

2. Business and Industrial Organizations and Service Clubs, e.g., Chambers of Commerce (Sr. and Jr.), Kiwanis, Lions, Rotary, and other such clubs.

III. Official governmental bodies concerned with problems of desegregation and the elimination of discrimination.

A. Departments and/or Boards of Education (local, state) and their administrative heads.

B. Law enforcement officials and/or agencies, e.g., municipal police chiefs, commissioners, etc.; county sheriffs; state officials (patrol, troopers, rangers, etc.); state guard.

C. Public transportation officials and commissions and their administrative heads (municipal, county, state).

D. Public recreation officials and their administrative heads (municipal, county, state).

E. Other public bodies concerned with segregation and discrimination, e.g., industrial or labor and industry commissions; health and welfare commissions; etc.

Among the principal methods by which consultants can serve the above groups are the following:

I. By the use of consultant teams working in group study situations of leaders or policy level officials, with participation usually by invitation only.

A. Developing plans and contributing (some or all) consultants or resource persons needed for a workshop, institute, or conference, by invitation from the consultee group and in participation with it.

B. Selecting and providing resource persons in particular problem areas for participation in workshops, conferences, etc. of other organizations, usually as part of a larger group of consultants, e.g., the LeMoyne Race Relations Conference.

II. By the use of technical assistance on a specific problem from a consultant with specialized competence in that particular problem area. Such aid is likely to come from one consultant and conceivably could involve a more sustained association than is characteristic of workshops and conferences. Consultants for this purpose may or may not be members of our panel and some may not be used more than once.

The choice of method for a given consultant service request will depend upon the specific needs and circumstances involved.

Dear ~~Dr. Walker~~ Mr. Walker:

You will note from the attached statement (2 copies) that the SRC has established an internship in intergroup relations. I think you will agree with me that a person with the qualifications described on this job description statement would enjoy a rare opportunity to participate fully in a dynamic and many faceted operation which would mature and season him with unusual speed. Because of the numerous and widely varied demands upon the small professional staff of SRC, such a person would get full encouragement and, indeed, pressure for the realization of his full potential.

It will be a great help to us if you will suggest as promptly as possible the names of persons whom you feel are qualified for this position. Send your recommendations directly to Fred Routh.

You have my best wishes for a pleasant and renewing vacation.

REPORT OF SRC CONSULTANT SERVICE PROGRAM

MAY 15 to SEPTEMBER, 15, 1957 27

BY JOHN HOPE II, CHIEF CONSULTANT

The Consultant~~s~~ Service Program has ~~continued its normal functions~~ had an unusual amount of activity during the summer months, ~~A~~although this period is traditionally the time of least activity in the region, ~~t~~The immediate prospect of partial desegregation in several southern communities and the increasing realization on the part of community leaders and government functionaries that the Desegregation Decision cannot be indefinitely evaded, have led to a variety of kinds of requests for immediate assistance and also to planning for anticipated service ~~needs~~ on the basis of current and probable developments. Partially because of these activities, the Council has been able to review and strengthen this phase of its program.

A major step in this process occurred during May when our panel of consultants, augmented by additional participants, ~~some of whom may be added to the panel,~~ ~~were~~ was brought together in Atlanta to review the effectiveness and needs of this program. This conference is described below.

During the period of this report, continuing efforts have been made to increase the ~~adequacy, adaptability, and~~ flexibility ~~as well as~~ and efficiency of the Consultant~~s~~ Service Program (CSP), ~~within the varied and dynamic circumstances in which it must be administered~~. In contrast to the emphasis of the first year of operation (i.e., concentration upon assistance to the boards and staffs of state SRC affiliates), ~~this period reflects with increased intensity,~~ are our efforts of the last quarter to focus our resources upon leadership of local communities, particularly those places which for some reason (voluntary or otherwise) are ready ~~to~~ at least to consider action aimed at implementing the letter and spirit of the ~~and~~ Desegregation Decision. This we believe to be a field of ~~intense and~~ growing readiness for consultant help. (Exhibit I)

Community Leadership Workshops

Workshops conducted in April in New Orleans, Memphis, and Jacksonville (described in the last report), have been followed during the summer period by similar community workshops in Charlottesville and Hampton, Virginia, and preliminary workshop-planning assistance to groups in Norfolk and Arlington. ~~which gives some promise of materializing within the next two or three months.~~ Within each of these Virginia communities, the local boards of education are under court order to desegregate and judicial and legislative maneuvers to circumvent the Desegregation Decision have been nearly exhausted. It is hoped that the CSP can assist community leadership in so anticipating the hazards of transition and planning their specific course of action that they may minimize, if not avoid, the acute pain and high cost of desegregation so recently witnessed in Nashville and Little Rock.

Our contribution of specialized consultant service to an off-the-record meeting of western Arkansas school superintendents and other officials involved in the desegregation process during July further illustrates our ~~determination~~ approach to ~~meet~~ local needs at the cutting edge of social change. A brief account of these meetings with local community leaders and with local officials follows:

1. On July 19-20 the university city of Charlottesville, Virginia, was the site of a workshop of community leaders. It was sponsored by the Charlottesville-Albemarle Council on Human Relations (an affiliate of the Virginia Council) and drew about 125 participants some of whom came from as far away as Hampton, Newport News, Richmond, and Roanoke. The services of three SRC consultants and two from the local communities were utilized. Mr. Benjamin Muse, columnist for the Washington Post and one-time Congressman from Manassas and candidate for governor, was the keynote speaker. The group was divided into three discussion sections which dealt with the local school situation, employment practices and job opportunities, and housing for Negroes. These groups were about equally divided racially and concentrated upon what to do and how to do it in bringing about the desired changes. ~~after~~ Brief reports on the current situation in each of these discussion areas were made by local leaders.

2. The Peninsula Council for Community Co-operation sponsored a similar type of workshop at Hampton Institute on September 6-7 which drew participants mainly from Hampton, Newport News, and a few observers from Norfolk. A bi-racial group of eighty-three persons participated, of whom 21 were involved in leadership roles as local consultants, speakers, section chairmen, and recorders. The keynote speech was given by Dr. Peter Mellette, Regional Director, National Council of Christians and Jews of Richmond, Virginia. Three SRC consultants were furnished, one assigned to each of the following three discussion groups section: Coping with Interracial Disturbances; Working through Civic Groups; and Minority Job Opportunities. As in the Charlottesville Workshop, each of these discussion sections was introduced by a report on the local situation ~~by~~ from a qualified local participant. This workshop drew significantly from outside of the ranks of the Peninsula Council; approximately one-third of those not in leadership roles were non-members.

3. Following ~~and in support of the~~ intensive ground work ~~laid~~ by our Arkansas state affiliate, (ACHR), three SRC consultants were supplied for an ACHR sponsored Arkansas School Administrators' Conference on Desegregation on August 7-8 in a small town in western Arkansas. Seven superintendents, one head of a college department of education, and one county superintendent out of an expected attendance of 12 to 15 persons participated. Most of these were from small school districts in western and northern Arkansas which had small Negro populations and thus costly though inadequate segregated facilities for them. The CSP met their request for consultants who could help them with their particular problems by providing two superintendents from the neighboring states of Missouri and Oklahoma who had experienced the desegregation process in communities similar to those of the partic-pants. In addition, one of our regular consultants, a sociologist with considerable experience in desegregation matters in Kentucky, was asked to serve as a co-ordinator of the meeting. They discussed the fears —real and imaginary— and also the application of local resources to the problems which they encountered. The local superintendents made no promise to move ahead this fall, nor did we expect them to. They did learn, first hand, that desegregation is possible in small rural and semi-rural communities. The two "consultant" superintendents were enthusiastic about the educational and financial benefits derived from desegregation.

In the planning and staging of each of these meetings, the close co-operation and co-ordination of the SRC and state SRC affiliate staffs were important factors in the success of the meetings.

Inter-Agency Assistance and Co-operation

Assistance to and co-ordination with other organizations and agencies with goals similar to those of SRC have involved the resources of the CSP in both formal consultations and informal, but none the less important, efforts. Illustrative of these are the following:

1. SRC provided a consultant-resource person to the annual meeting of the Presbyterian Church, US (Southern) at Montreat, North Carolina, on The Committee on Christian Citizenship made full use of his knowledge and insights as they discussed the role of the churchman in a changing society.

2. The American Friends Service Committee called a meeting of all human relations agencies in the state of North Carolina to consider co-operative strategy in the three desegregating communities, i.e., Charlotte, Greensboro, and Winston Salem. An SRC consultant participated in this important session which discussed such things as what role each agency should and could play, and the evaluation of the roles of the press, law enforcement agencies, and the role and potential danger of opposition groups in these communities.

3. Through the intermittent activities of an SRC consultant, close but inconspicous assistance was provided to the principal community organizations supporting partial desegregation of the Nashville public schools. This was accomplished primarily through contacts with key leadership in the Nashville Conference on Community Relations, the Tennessee Council on Human Relations; and through indirect "pipe lines" to the mayor, chief of police, and local department of education.

4. Assistance to the Knoxville desegregation efforts through informal but continuing contact with the Knoxville field representative of the Unitarian Service Committee ~~involved~~ in that city have ? contributed to some improvement in ~~the~~ desegregation prospects ~~in that city.~~ there.

SRC Consultant~~s~~ Conference

A two day consultants' conference held early in this period was ~~might well emerge as~~ one of the most important activities ~~of the period~~ in terms of its long-range value to ~~constructive impact upon~~ the effectiveness of the CSP.

On May 24-25 SRC held a meeting of all consultants and a carefully selected group of additional professionals at Atlanta University. There were twenty-five persons (excluding six participating SRC staff members), of whom eleven were on our existing ~~present~~ panel and 13 were guest participants from whom the panel will be augumented in response to needs. The need for supplementing the areas of specialized training and experience represented in our panel ~~in order~~ to meet the varied and somewhat specialized needs of local communities was taken into account in the selection of the latter group. These included the fields of religion, political science, ~~and~~ government, ~~and~~ economics, and labor relations. ¶ The meeting opened with a brief orientation session at which the CSP was placed clearly within the framework~~s~~ of SRC policy and programs ~~role~~, and its origin, nature, scope, and results to date were described. The participants were then divided into four discussion groups, each chaired by a member of the consultant panel and including both consultants and guests, which spent ~~a~~ half a day evaluating various aspects of the program and making recommendations for future operations. For each of these groups, key questions were provided in order to focus their deliberations as sharply ~~and practically~~ as possible. The following key questions were considered:

Group I. What is the most effective role of the Consultant Program within the frame of reference of SRC's operation? Definition, scope, and assumptions of such a program. Chairman: Dr. Kenneth Clark.

Group II. What standards should be applied in selecting problem-areas (e.g. housing, employment, education, transportation, etc.) for consultant services? What are the local variables that should determine the focus in a given community? Chairman: Dr. Lewis Killian.

GroupIII. What are the strong and weak points in the consultant techniques used to date? What are the elements of effective reporting and analysis that will make possible follow-through by SRC? What forms should reports take? Chairman: Mrs. Bonita Valien.

GroupIV. What criteria should be applied in choosing the best opportunities for consultant services — as between different leadership groups; as between local, state, and wider spheres of operation? What factors of timing should be considered in the selection and co-ordination of opportunities? Chairman: Dr. Lee Coleman.

While the pressure of urgent demand upon staff time ~~have~~ has delayed final publication of the findings and suggestions of this conference, the staff has already put into operation some of the recommendations, and future actions will reflect other suggestions made. (Exhibit II — to follow later)

Review of Consultant Activities

One of the needs long recognized is for systematic follow-up of CSP workshops and institutes to evaluate the effectiveness of such activities in motivating positive action and developing leadership. Related to this, of course, is a determination of ~~the prospects of~~ what further SRC staff assistance ~~that~~ might ~~be appropriately~~ contribute ~~to promote~~ the and facilitate the desegregation process and what form such aid should take. Such an exploratory effort was made by an SRC consultant in July following the Lemoyne Conference held in Memphis in April. This consultant conferred individually with various community leaders, some of whom were actively involved in this workshop and some who were not, in order to measure the tangible results of this conference, in the brief period that has elapsed, and to determine what next steps might be appropriately taken in this community. Among the key people interviewed were the president of the Chamber of Commerce, a prominent attorney, and a leading newspaper man. It was generally felt that the Lemoyne Conference was a start in the right direction. Further cultivation of these key persons will be continued.

"Straws in the Wind"

SRC has received inquiries from a rural editor about the possibilities of holding an off-the-record consultant meeting with key people in Celo and Spruce Pine, North Carolina. This is being followed up and the results will be reported in a subsequent report of the CSP.

An offer to the Mayor of Nashville of the services of a special consultant on law enforcement techniques in racial crisis situations through a special committee of the Nashville Conference on Community Relations was not accepted. A "feeler" from a high Arkansas state official regarding the prospects of such assistance during August did not materialize either. Subsequent developments in both Tennessee and Arkansas suggest that our efforts in this direction should be pushed harder in the future.

Requests for assistance in community workshops in Birmingham and other Alabama cities are in the exploratory stage and show promise for the coming months. The on-the-spot help of the Alabama Council on Human Relations Staff will be crucially important in reaching progressive leadership in this beleaguered state.

HAROLD C. FLEMING
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

May 23, 1957

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South.

MEMORANDUM

TO: DIRECTORS OF SRC STATE AFFILIATES AND CONSULTANTS

FROM: JOHN HOPE II, CHIEF CONSULTANT, CONSULTANT SERVICE PROGRAM, SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

SUBJECT: THE CONSULTANT SERVICE PROGRAM -- PURPOSE, REQUISITES FOR EFFECTIVENESS, AND SCOPE

The major purpose of the Consultant Service Program (CSP) is to provide technical assistance in program development to SRC affiliates and other groups whose objectives are similar or compatible with those of SRC, e.g., the elimination of segregation and discrimination based upon race in the Southern economy. It seeks to provide professional guidance on how to achieve democratic race relations; not persuasive advocates to foster and promote acceptance of the principle. Effective implementation of the policy, not its establishment, is emphasized.

Such assistance is provided by a panel of consultants highly qualified by formal training, experience, and temperament, who are available on a part-time basis to organizations, community groups, official bodies concerned with and/or committed to the desegregation process. Initially, the service was confined primarily to the SRC state affiliates as an SRC service without cost to them, though it was available to outside groups on a cost or partial cost basis. From the start, this restriction in scope of service was simply based upon limitations of resources and the recognition of a priority to members of the SRC family. But the operations of the first few months clearly demonstrated a broader need for such aid to unaffiliated local groups and official bodies if the common aims of these and SRC affiliates were to be achieved expeditiously and efficiently.

Foundation aid was sought and obtained which now allows us to provide technical assistance to non-SRC as well as SRC affiliated local as well as state or regional groups on basis of need and their ability to effectively use such resources either without cost or on basis of their ability to pay for it. This, it is believed, has greatly extended the range of potential availability of technical assistance in program development, community organization, etc. to groups fostering the goals and spirit of the Desegregation Decision in the South and has further increased the flexibility and efficiency with which these professional talents can be allocated so as to gain maximum positive results for the region as a whole.

On the other hand, it places a heavier burden upon SRC and state affiliate staff members to publicize the CSP and in a sense "selling" the services to potential users. Figuratively speaking, the writer and, indeed, the SRC as a whole, is a broker whose function is to bring together in the most effective way those groups or key individuals who have need for such professional services and those who possess the talents required but are not organizationally situated so as to focus them where they can be most fruitful in gaining SRC objectives. Since the resources of the CSP are limited, all requests for assistance cannot be accepted however deserving they might be. Rather, our role appears to be that of choosing from the requests submitted those which appear to be most promising and most likely to be multiplying and accelerating in their impact upon the productivity and sophistication of leadership, those which will not only render needed high level scarce services to groups involved in our cause but may activate and encourage other groups to similarly employ and finance such skills. Ours is the task of complementing and supplementing existing (and sometimes dormant) resources in the community, not competing with them; of providing the additional element that may motivate liberal groups to constructive action and prevent frustrating inertia in the face of complex and discouraging obstacles; of supporting the dedicated and effective volunteer layman with limited technical skill and advice at the time and point of need and getting out of his way when he is ready to move forward unaided,with skill, understanding, and courage.

But the function of administration of the CSP goes far beyond mere brokerage of a given service. The service itself though requiring a definite level and type of formal training as social scientists or practitioners, must be subtly and deftly tailored to the individual needs of each group and frequently is not separable from a particular consultant. Such a person through temperament, personality, or experience may give as a part of his total professional contribution a unique element (or spark) that gives his service a plus value in particular situations -- and, indeed, may conceivably provide a negative one in others.

Consequently, if the CSP is to be equal to the varied types of present demands and ready to meet new ones as they arise, the panel must be varied enough in its composition to provide maximum flexibility without loss of the basic common qualifications necessary for overall efficiency. On the other hand, if lofty standards are to be maintained, the consultants should receive frequent enough assignments to motivate their continuous awareness and study of new developments in the Southern situation and periodic re-evaluation of the situation as scholars. Thus, in terms of present limits of resources and consultation opportunities, very real restrictions on panel size are necessary, while pressure for overall competence and flexibility seem to increase as the demands move closer to the specific friction points, e.g., the local community with a pending court order, the school board, the park commission, etc. Under these conditions, the consultant is challenged to give rather specific suggestions to fit the particular conditions, advise as to whether particular plans or strategies seem sound or not.

Therefore, effective administration of the CSP, in addition to bringing consultant and consultee together, depends upon the extent to which the composition of the panel includes and the program utilizes the blend of specialties and high professional qualifications needed to meet varied demands; the extent to which the individual consultants are able to accept assignments when requested; the amount and quality of their preparation for assignments, and the support given by SRC research and information facilities.

A clear distinction should be made between efforts aimed at gaining adherents and achieving acceptance of the principle of equality and the policy of desegregation and integration, and those directed to the application of these principles and policies with maximum speed and efficiency and a minimum of overt conflict. Both of these are necessary and should be pursued by staffs of all state affiliates but the emphasis given to each will vary from state to state at a given time and in each state from time to time. It is imperative that the director always have clearly in mind which of these aims he seeks, or the relative significance of each, in every project developed -- policy acceptance or effective implementation of policy in specific program areas chosen to fit the needs of a particular community -- because the best techniques for achieving these respective goals are not necessarily the same.

The primary field of operation and usefulness of the CSP is the latter -- implementing the letter and spirit of the Desegregation Decision. Its major sphere of operation is among organizations and strategically placed individual community leaders who have accepted in principle, at least, the Desegregation Decision and those who, without regard to their personal attitude, are by their positions impelled to seek its implementation (or to maintain order and avoid illegal opposition) -- willingly or unwillingly. The CSP should prepare to assist those who are working for implementation whether through personal conviction, organizational involvement and consequent implicit acceptance of group discipline, or administrative responsibility to implement laws, court orders, etc. applied to their employer.

Its prime target is thus leadership, not rank-and-file membership; those in a position to motivate, multiply, and accelerate affirmative action, not followers. Therefore, efforts at "selling" the CSP should be aimed at leadership groups who for some reason are ready to at least consider action. This is where the state and SRC staffs should cooperate as broker. The success of this operation requires rifle shot, not shotgun, methods of promotion; careful choice of persons or groups who can most profitably use consultant service; and specific promotional efforts, mainly personal, aimed at encouraging them to seek such help. Mimeographed general mailings are not likely to be effective and may alert the opposition thus generating counteractive efforts which may unnecessarily cause the diversion of some of our efforts to defensive channels.

The following are some of the organizational frameworks through which, it is felt, the CSP can be effective in the next two or three year period which may be used as a basis for determining where it can be useful in strengthening and broadening program:

I. SRC state affiliates and their local units, with emphasis upon more promising local community situations. (Utilize the assistance and other organizational contacts and associations of board members in developing opportunities.)

II. Assistance to and coordination with other organizations and agencies insofar as they are promoting activities with goals similar to ours, including purely local groups and local units of national, regional, or state organizations.

A. Religious groups, e.g., United Church Women, Council of Jewish Women and other Jewish groups, the Catholic Interracial Committee, the organizations of various religious denominations and/or their subordinate agencies and commissions concerned with our cause; local inter-denominational ministerial associations, etc.

B. Civic Organizations, e.g., League of Women Voters, American Association of University Women, PTAs, etc.

C. Professional Organizations, e.g., organization of social workers, nurses, etc.; Council of Social Agencies; etc.

D. Organizations of Economic groups.

1. Labor Unions.

2. Business and Industrial Organizations and Service Clubs, e.g., Chambers of Commerce (Sr. and Jr.), Kiwanis, Lions, Rotary, and other such clubs.

III. Official governmental bodies concerned with problems of desegregation and the elimination of discrimination.

A. Departments and/or Boards of Education (local, state) and their administrative heads.

B. Law enforcement officials and/or agencies, e.g., municipal police chiefs, commissioners, etc.; county sheriffs; state officials (patrol, troopers, rangers, etc.); state guard.

C. Public transportation officials and commissions and their administrative heads (municipal, county, state).

D. Public recreation officials and their administrative heads (municipal, county, state).

E. Other public bodies concerned with segregation and discrimination, e.g., industrial or labor and industry commissions; health and welfare commissions; etc.

Among the principal methods by which consultants can serve the above groups are the following:

I. By the use of consultant teams working in group study situations of leaders or policy level officials, with participation usually by invitation only.

A. Developing plans and contributing (some or all) consultants or resource persons needed for a workshop, institute, or conference, by invitation from the consultee group and in participation with it.

B. Selecting and providing resource persons in particular problem areas for participation in workshops, conferences, etc. of other organizations, usually as part of a larger group of consultants, e.g., the LeMoyne Race Relations Conference.

II. By the use of technical assistance on a specific problem from a consultant with specialized competence in that particular problem area. Such aid is likely to come from one consultant and conceivably could involve a more sustained association than is characteristic of workshops and conferences. Consultants for this purpose may or may not be members of our panel and some may not be used more than once.

The choice of method for a given consultant service request will depend upon the specific needs and circumstances involved.

PENINSULA COUNCIL FOR COMMUNITY COOPERATION

Mrs. James Cherry
Chairman
307 Chesapeake Ave.
Newport News, Va.
24 September, 1957

Dear John,

Many thanks for all the time, energy and know-how which you so generously contributed to our workshop on human relations. I should say your workshop, for we would not have attempted it without your help. We were also highly pleased with the consultants you secured for us.

There were 83 people present. 21 of these were consultants, speakers, chairmen or recorders. However, with the exception of the visiting consultants, we can truly say that the workshop was a learning experience for this group, particularly so for those* who were not members of the council but were influential members of the community. I think we are well on the way to having Dr. Walkers' "fifth column" as a result of the workshop.

Mr. Hicks, The Hampton juvenile officer, told a friend that it was the most inspiring experience of his life. (He was in Dr. Clarks' group). I think he will be a valuable ally. Rabbi Schwartzman was also much impressed. (He had been cool to a committee which visited him earlier.)

Of the remaining 62, roughly 20 were non-members. I forgot to ask the people who came in for the afternoon session to register before they left, but I think this is a close guess.

Several very good suggestions came out of the discussion groups which we will incorporate in our program for this year. If you would like copies of the group reports, let me know and I'll send them.

It was very pleasant getting to know and work with you. I hope that we will have the opportunity to see more of you. Again, for myself and the council, our deepest Thanks.

Sincerely,

Marjorie Cherry

Dear Dr. Hope:

I want to thank you for coming to the Florida Leadership Education Institute at the Silver Springs Assembly Grounds. You added a great deal to our meeting and I am grateful to you for your fine contribution.

I also want to thank you for bringing so many other illustrous gentlemen with you. I do not think that they would have ever come on my invitation. We have so many of the same aims that I feel that it will be mutually beneficial for us to work closely together.

You have had so much experience in the field of race relations that I would welcome any helpful criticism from you. We want to profit by our mistakes and improve from year to year so if you have any suggestions we shall appreciate them.

The Southern Regional Council has been a real friend to us and has helped to give us guidance and direction. It was most generous for all of you to come with no expense to the United Church Women of Florida and I was really embarrassed when we could not even give you lunch on Thursday. I promise it will never happen again!

Sincerely

Mrs. Norwood Phelps

Of course we were glad to have Mrs. Valiens but I am writing her a separate note-

JOHN HOPE, II

TO: Messrs. Harold Fleming & Fred Routh

RE:

DATE: 10/2/57.

I have finally gotten this report typed.

You will note that I have tried to set the facts within the frame of reference we set-up some time ago which was reviewed in my memo. This is the reason for introducing this memo as Exhibit I. However, I don't consider it an essential and you may want to leave it out. In this case, mark out the reference to it on page 2.

I hope this reorganization of Fred's statement meets your (HF) criticism re: interpretation. Cut and alter as you see fit.

P.S. I am enclosing two recent letters re: the Hampton & Florida workshops.

Dear John:

I have read with great appreciation the report you have done for Consultant Service Program. It is the analytical and qualitative type of report that I have hoped we could do. I note in the bottom of the note you sent along that you say that you hope this reorganization of my statement meets with our approval. The rough notes I gave you could hardly be considered a statement, and they were in drastic need of reorganization. They were the first rough draft of enumerating the events in which the CSP participated - nothing more. You have taken these loose threads and woven them into an attractive piece of material. Congratulations!

I am enclosing a letter which was sent to you at the Willard Hotel back in mid September. I opened it because I thought it might be something important that had long gone without attention. Fortunately such was not the case. The Willard Hotel was obviously derelict in its duties in not getting this to you.

Hope to see you soon.

Warm personal regards.

Dear Nick:

I shall probably be in New York on November 14 and 15, but doubt whether I can make it earlier and thus will probably just miss you there. However, I might be able to talk with Dr. Davis or Thurgood Marshall at this time. I could make a better pitch if I knew more about your plans. Have Dr. Queen's plans gotten to the prospectus or design stage yet or is this a prospect before that time?

If it is convenient, I would like to know more about the plans so that I could talk more specifically (and, I hope, more intelligently) about what you have in mind. I believe personal contact if at all feasible, is better than a letter for such matters.

Dear John:

It was good to talk with you yesterday and to get your thinking on Ken's memo. We are rather well pleased with it too. Harold and I have talked over the possibilities of having a white social psychologist do a comparable job in the white community of Little Rock. We have concluded that this should wait until after Ken has completed his study. Both of us feel that bringing a man from Harvard would run the expenses unduly high. I would suggest that while Ken is in Arkansas he fish around and come up with somebody good from one of the Universities out there. It should not be forgotten that the Veterans Administration hospitals often have such a person attached to them, and as I recall there was one in Little Rock who was once a member oftheir Board, or perhaps just general membership.

Haroldaand I are both pleased with the idea of a report on the Consultant Service Program in a professional journal. We would suggest that you are the logical person to prepare such a report.

While we believe the Demerath study has some potentialities of interest for us it is a little removed from our normal scope of operation, but we would be glad to talk further about this and perhaps find some way of focusing the study more closely on our interests.

Harold is going to be in Philadelphia the week of December 17th and could run up to New York to meet with Ken's proposed group during that period. I would suggest that Ken get in touch with Harold by phone.

Mr. John Hope, II November 27, 1957

I am not surprised that nothing much is doing in the Old Dominion at the moment, but I am disappointed for there is little question that they are going to come face to face with the reality of a court order to desegregate in the immediate future. I still think it might be wise to try for Arlington.

Dear John:

I am anxious to make the field services division of SRC as effective as possible. From time to time I get the feeling that we have not shown the imagination we might in program developments. I would very much welcome a memo from you suggesting how we can improve our efforts. Such questions as these you might answer:

I Strategically what are the most important communities on which to concentrate at this time?
a) What should we do in these communities? (1) Role of Consultant Service Program. (2) Inter-agency cooperative effort.

II Can we develop meaningful program suggestions for state organizations in the hard core area?

III How can we improve communication between SRC and a) state organizations, b) other organizations in the inter-agency cooperative effort, c)church denominations, d) labor organizations, e) key people and status persons, and f) universities and youth groups?

IV What specific recommendations do you have for our internship training program?

V What better use can we make of our Board of Directors?

Any other suggestions you might have are more than welcome. Please feel free to write frankly and in detail.

RECEIVED JAN 20 1958

MEMORANDUM

To: Dr. N. J. Demerath, President, The Society for Applied Anthropology
From: John Hope II, Director of Industrial Relations, Race Relations Department, Fisk University; and Chief Consultant, Southern Regional Council
Subject: Notes on Proposed Inter-Disciplinary Conference of Social Scientists on Research on the Desegregation Problem and Related Issues

In response to your request at our recent luncheon meeting in New York, I am setting down some highly tentative observations concerning the proposed conference as a means of beginning the exchange of ideas and, I hope they may be at least provocative enough to promote the formulation of rather specific and workable plans for such a meeting at the earliest possible date. I should probably emphasize that these ideas have been too hastily drawn in the hope that I might get them typed before my secretary leaves for the Christmas vacation.

The optimum objectives of such a conference appear to me to be the following:

1. To focus the attention of social scientists as scientists (not practitioners) using the training and skills of their respective disciplines on the various aspects of the desegregation problem to which these disciplines are best able to contribute.

2. To attempt to integrate these various actual (and potential) research contributions of the various social science disciplines in terms of their relevance and applicability to the respective major problem areas in which action must be sought by practitioners, i. e., to facilitate the "how" of the desegregation and integration processes by more systematically and thoroughly under-girding them with sound scientific propositions and where these are not available even the shrewdly contrived tentative hypotheses and hunches of imaginative social scientists.

3. To attempt to pin-point the gaps and strong points of available research results (including verified principles and propositions, and perhaps even thoughtfully drawn tentative hypotheses and clues) presently available for guidance to efficient action in the various major problem areas of the desegregation issue.

4. To provide on basis of verified propositions, tentative hypotheses, clues and scientists hunches, some suggestions for revising and improving, methods, strategies, and tactics of day-to-day operation for the use of practitioners in their programs of action.

It is quite possible that these goals are much you ambitious and that we may have to content ourselves with number (1) or numbers (1) and (2) in a first conference; but I would hope that such a meeting might be planned so as to come as close as possible to the achievement of most or all of these.

Nature and Organization of the Conference

1. Composition

In my opinion, the participants should be composed of social scientist with interest in applied or action research directed toward the solution of intergroup relations problems of the South under equalitarian assumptions as they would be framed by each of the respective disciplines represented--anthropological, psychological, sociological, economic, and political. Neither present sectional location nor place of origin should be a standard for choice of major resource persons or participants. However, a conscious effort should be made to secure wide participation from interested scholars in the South for obvious reasons. On the other hand, it is conceivable that in the broad conceptualization of problems, persons farther removed from the "battle lines" might have certain advantages over those more immediately and perhaps emotionally involved, other things being equal. A blend of both is essential.

In my judgment, a special effort should be made to involve a few eminent social scientists in each of the major disciplines who have also had experience in the more pragmatic and less clearly defined area of the intergroup relations practitioner, or social engineer, as a means of insuring against emphasis on the "ultra-academic," on the one hand and undue dilution of the scientific quality by the pressure for "practical" answers by practitioners on the other. Another approach aimed at the same precaution might be to invite a limited number of practitioners involved in the desegregation issue from agencies working in the field which have participated in or promoted action research, e.g., The Anti-Defamation League, American Jewish Congress, American Jewish Committee, Race Relations Department of the American Missionary Association, at Fisk University, etc. These two approaches are not mutually exclusive. Rather, in many cases, the same people would be drawn from both groups. On the other hand, on the basis of experience with two NAIRO research conferences, I believe it would be a mistake to seek broad and unrestricted participation from intergroup relations practitioners.

2. Nature and Organization

The major emphasis, in my opinion, should be placed upon the full and unrestricted exchange of ideas and, as far as is feasible, the pooling and synthesis of research information. For this reason, such a conference might be essentially of the private workshop type, composed of persons attending upon specific invitation. We have found in SRC that such an arrangement avoids the cramping effect of unrestricted coverage by the press and the presence of persons who might be obstructive or hostile to our objectives. Furthermore, the number and length of prepared statements to be presented should be reduced to a minimum, probably confined to the first session, and prepared far enough in advance of the conference to allow the circulation to each participant the complete manuscripts from which such statements are drawn at least a week or two before the meeting is convened. A thoroughly scholarly paper critically reveiwing the research relevant to the desegregation problem in each of the major disciplines appears to me to be the essential foundation for such a conference.

Such papers might include such topics as the following:

a) Review of research relevant to the desegregation problem.

b) Classification of research on basis of the problem area of its major relevance, e.g., general and theoretical significance, education and school desegregation, full resource utilization and southern economic development, political participation and involvement and utilization of government facilities and personnel, etc.

c) Designation of major gaps and strong points in research development preferably classified by major problem area (as in (b).

d) Suggestions of needed new areas of research, preferably classified on the basis of relative need and urgency as a foundation for effective program and action in the major problem areas. No attempt should be made to make this an exhaustive treatment, but, rather, a provocative beginning that would foster further suggestions from other participants.

e) Guidance clues for practitioners' use suggested by research and/or through the preparation of this paper.

In my opinion sections (a), (b), and possibly (c) are of primary importance as a foundation for the conference, but minimum treatments such as suggested in (d) and (e) would challenge the imaginativeness and ingenuity of the writers and might foster the development of new areas of practical action research prospects with some semblance of a priority ranking as to need and feasibility in the solution of the desegregation problem.

On the basis of my experience with two conferences of our SRC consultants the following broad divisions of the Research Conference are suggested:

1) An introductory session for general orientation and the presentation of resumés of the research review papers, probably an evening meeting of one and a half to two hours.

2) Small discussion group meetings, one for each major social science discipline for an intensive discussion based upon the content of the relevant paper and the pre-planned topic. This might include suggested questions or issues for the purpose of stimulating discussion along relevant lines and minimizing duplication between groups and undue emphasis upon matters of secondary importance for the goals of the conference.

3) A Plenary Session for the purpose of hearing brief reports of the findings of each of the small group discussions and for the purpose of attempting a synthesis of the work of the various discussion groups, e. g., where do various research suggestions, etc. fit into the pattern of major problem areas? Which discipline is best fitted to deal with each; and where and how can various disciplines collaborate with each other, etc.? What suggestions, clues, and scholarly "intelligence" for immediate use of practitioners can be gleaned from the sum total of these deliberations?

3. Time Period

In my opinion, such a conference should run for a minimum of a day and a half and preferably two days, preferably on the week-end. The urgency of need for such a pooling of ideas and the desirability of holding such a meeting before the annual meeting of the Society for Applied Anthropology in April leads me to suggest that the meeting be held in late February or early March, which means that the writers of the research papers should be chosen at the earliest possible moment.

4. Number of Participants

For a meeting of the type I am suggesting, I would think in terms of a minimum of 25 to 30 and a maximum of 60 to 75 persons. From three to five discussion groups would probably be involved. Certainly anthropology, sociology, and psychology would each comprise a group, and it is possible that groups might be drawn from political science and economics (including labor-management relations) or a combination of these two.

5. Place of Conference

This need not be determined at this time but such factors as central location, place of maximum freedom of discussion, and nature and extent of facilities and services available from the host institution might be considered.

6. Sponsorship

I would hope that such a conference plan might be initiated by the SAA and that joint sponsorship of the action-research oriented societies of each of the major social science disciplines might be realized. As far as I know, there are three of these e. g., SAA, SPSSI, and SSSP. There may be others that should be approached e. g., GAP (?). It is possible that some intergroup relations organizations with definite research interests might be interested in sponsorship. We should decide whether this is desirable before we make any approaches in this direction. There may be a possibility that the Southern Regional Council and the Race Relations Department of the American Missionary Association might be interested, and others might also participate, if asked.

7. Financing

It is quite obvious from my rather ambitious suggestions, that I favor an effort to obtain Foundation support for such a conference. If this is not available, a much less ambitious beginning might be made, with plans for a second meeting at a later date. In my opinion, a sizable honorarium and expenses should be offered to the research review drafters, in light of the demanding nature of their task and the limited time available for preparation; a more modest honorarium and expenses might be expedient for persons chosen to lead the small group discussions and report their findings; and probably a few other persons in leadership roles. There remains the question of whether expense money or more should be provided for all invited participants.

Our experience in SRC leads me to believe that some financial recognition of the responsibilities borne, at least by a nucleus of conference leaders essential to its high quality and efficient administration, constitutes an effective incentive.

I hope these random observations will be of some value to you in your discussions, if for no other reason than that they indicate some of the things you do not want to do. Be assured of my continued interest in developing a constructive joint-conference of social scientists. I have also discussed this matter with Dr. Herman H. Long, director of the Race Relations Department; Mr. Harold Fleming, director, Southern Regional Council; and Dr. Preston Valien, chairman, Department of Social Sciences of Fisk University, and all express an interest in this project.

Dear Will:

Sometime ago you sent me a set of cartoons drawn by Jack Hamm. I think the series carries in a very vivid way several messages which we need to get across to large numbers of readers. I feel confident that you have called these to the attention of the various Intergroup Relations Organizations which we both know about, but I am wondering whether it has been put into the hands of the labor press. There are literally hundreds of labor weeklies and a few daily papers. Some of the more liberal of these do use cartoons dealing with race relations. I don't know whether such papers would consider the scripture quotation an obstacle to their use or not. However, Ben Segal could advise you on this matter and furthermore, if this is the case and they seem otherwise useful, Mr. Hamm maybe interested in making some adjustments so that these excellent cartoons may get wider circulation. The current sensitivity of organized labor on this subject may make labor editors more amenable to the use of such materials.

I have two suggestions. First, I know that the Bureau of Labor Statistic's new Directory of National and International Labor Unions in the United States, 1957 has just been released and is available at forty cent per copy. This publication gives the names and addresses of all labor journals. You may get a copy by writing to the Regional Office, Bureau of Labor Statistics, U.S. Department of Labor, 57 Street, North East, Room 664, Atlanta 23, Georgia or from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D.C. The address of Ben Segal is as follows: Mr. Benjamin Segal, Director, Trade Union Program on Civil Liberties and Rights, 1244-19th Street, North West, Washington 6, D.C.

Dear John:

Thank you for your recent letter regarding the cartoons drawn by Jack Hamm and for the suggestion that they be called to the attention of the various labor newspapers. This, to my knowledge, has not been done by anyone concerned with the distribution of these drawings. You mentioned the possibility that the scripture quotations might prove an obstacle to their use by the labor press. You will be interested to know that the prints which I distributed were chosen from a set of thirty or more and I am sure that I tended to select those with a religious theme. Many of the others are equally as clever and effective in the message which they seek to impart.

This office will get a copy of the Directory of National and International Labor Unions in the United States, and will send the samples which we have on hand with a letter pointing out that these are but a few of the set and describe others in which they might be interested. Newspaper mats are available free from Mr. Hamm upon request.

Thank you for bringing this to my attention. Personal regards to you in your work.

Dear Emory:

In response to your query about our interest in a Labor Seminar in connection with the Race Relations Institute, we look forward with enthusiasm to a repeat performance. Herman and I have discussed this matter and feel that the Labor Seminar made a very real contribution to all involved in the Race Relations Institute. We are happy that you and Ben are sufficiently pleased with the results to go forward with plans for the summer of 1958. We feel that the general format of the seminar and the effective integration of this group into the total structure and spirit of the institute proved to be mutually advantageous and from our point of view see no reason to change it. As to the subject matter of the seminar, you and Ben are in a much better position than I to determine the needs of the members. However, there maybe additional areas for the joint ~~of exchange~~ use of materials and resource consultants between the Labor Seminar and my clinic. You will recall that by pooling our moving picture resources and running them at a hour open to all, the range of usefulness of this medium was extended considerably with little increase in cost.

As to program and mechanics, I agree that we should discuss this in some detail in the near future. I talked with Ben in Washington last Thursday and was advised that the administration of the seminar was pretty well in your hands so that you and I should move forward in the planning without his direct participation. This simplifies procedural channels and I would hope that we might sit down together on my next trip to Atlanta, if that is not too far away. In the meanwhile I would suggest, since you carried the primary responsibility for administration and dealt most directly with our departmental staff, that you review your experience and indicate the major "headaches" and have in mind any suggestions you have for improving the efficiency of all processes where co-ordination is necessary. As to program, it would help me to know in advance what you and Ben conceive to be the major subject matter areas southern labor leaders and staff members need to cover in light of the realities of the present situation and some rough estimate of the division of time among these. On basis of last year's experience, we might give some attention to techniques of minimizing north-south and International-~~Labor~~ Union cleavages and sensitivities with a minimum of dilution of the quality and comprehensiveness of the treatment of specific intergroup problems. This, I know, is a tough problem but insofar as we are fully aware of it in relation to specific issues and can anticipate possible frictions, the learning process will be enriched.

Ben tells me that you are planning a two-day meeting in Atlanta in March. We should get together before this meeting so that we might have a basis for some brief promotion work and because some of our seminar planning might have relevance to that meeting also. I talked briefly with Ben about possible evening speakers. He suggests three names in the order ~~of~~ which they are listed: Victor Reuther: James Carey: and Amil Mazey.

You may recall that Walter Reuther declined last year after careful consideration but I was advised by advisers close to him that our invitation came too late and that if we wanted him for 1958 we should extend the invitation in January ~~and~~ or February. Ben is quite favorable to having him as a speaker but expresses concern because of the very real prospect that even if he accepts it, he might have to send a substitute at the last minute if more pressing matters arose. Thus he feels that it is better to get a speaker who is more certain to be able to meet his commitment. Furthermore he feels that Victor would make an excellent speaker and that his appearance could be assured if he were invited in the very near future. I have not had a chance to talk to Dr. Long about this matter yet.

You may now consider yourself "counter-needled." Seriously speaking, you maybe assured that we are ready to cooperate fully in the joint venture in the hope that the 1958 Institute will be the best ever and that the Labor Seminar will be a major reason for this.

Sincerely yours,

John Hope II

Confidential

February 7, 1958

Mr. Harold C. Fleming,
Executive Director
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.,
Atlanta 3, Georgia.

Dear Harold:

As you know, I spent Thursday and Friday, January 30-31 in New York conferring with various people on the Negro teacher displacement project and the proposed conference of social scientists and the role of the society for applied anthropology in such a venture.

With regard to the teacher study, I talked with John W. Davis, Wilton Dillon, and then jointly with Dillon and Fred Patterson. I found that Nick Demerath spent Thursday in New York talking with Patterson and Dillon and left the study prospectus with them. Incidentally, John W. Davis knew nothing of this and I did not so advise him. According to Dillon, the plan is that Dr. Patterson will present this prospectus to the Rockefeller Foundation (Dr. Kimbal?) and seek full support for this project but Demerath has indicated a readiness to move forward if as much as $7,500 can be raised. Patterson asked that the Negro state teacher associations be approached for financial help because he feels that this will strengthen his hand in dealing with this foundation. My understanding is that Demerath is to write some of these state groups, sending them copies of the prospectus and asking for financial participation. Dr. Aaron Brown (Phelps-Stokes) will assist in dealing with state teacher organizations.

There appeared to be no apparent plan to involve the ATA (Trenholm and Ridley). In my conference Friday afternoon with Patterson and Dillon I suggested that ATA officials were brought into our first committee meeting in December with the hope that they could be involved financially. I suggested that Dr. Patterson now in the role of "usherer of the plan to a fundation" in accordance with the strategy decided on at this meeting now approached the ATA for initial help, on condition that foundation help is forthcoming, so that Dr. Patterson would be able to use this as leverage in his appeal to this foundation. He agreed that this was a stronger approach and that he would have strong justification for asking ATA help since such a study might ultimately be a factor in protecting its membership generally from displacement as pupil desegregation proceeds.

It is my belief, and I think Patterson and Dillon concur, that the efforts to involve directly the Negro state teacher associations should go forward as planned but with the hope of later contributions after the pilot project is wholly or substantially underwritten by foundation and ATA funds rather than depend upon this as a primary basis for interesting the foundation. I indicated that in my opinion, time is of the essence in getting this pilot project started before the proposed director and perhaps even Demerath become involved in other matters and thus are less enthusiastic about this project.

I have two suggestions as to the next steps which you might wish to take on behalf of SRC:

1. That you suggest that Patterson acting in the above mentioned role and at the request of the initial sponsoring group formally request financial assistance from the ATA on the ground that its interest in a pecuniary way would increase his chances of getting favorable foundation money. Dr. Trenholm might be impressed with the urgency of prompt support so that Patterson could seek foundation funds early in the present calendar year. You will recall that some participants at the December meeting expressed the view that a grant of the size we are seeking might be acted upon without awaiting formal board action by the Rockefeller Foundation.

2. That you encourage the present efforts to involve Negro state teacher organizations but not as a primary condition for seeking foundation aid but rather for its psychological value in involving such major sources of information in anticipation of the needs of the research staff for their co-operation and as a long range source of supplementary funds.

For reasons which I will indicate later, I suggest that your communication go directly to Dr. Patterson with copies to Dillon and Demerath, not to Davis, et al.

As to the proposed conference of social scientists, I withhold final judgment until I get a report directly from Demerath on the SAA board meeting which was held in Chicago in December. However, my view on the basis of Dillon's somewhat vague report is that no action was taken that would interfere with an SRC conference of scholars of the type I outlined within the next six or eight months if we should decide upon such an effort in connection with our consultant service program.

Technically, there was not a voting quorum at this meeting but I understand that Demerath was authorized to seek co-operation from and to co-operate with the two action-orientated societies SP and SPSSI in setting up conferences, vaguely termed summer seminars of social scientists and practitioners in the intergroup field. It is my understanding that Demerath received my statement before this meeting but it is not clear to me whether it was presented systematically to the group though it was mentioned.

The positive results seem to be confined to the following:

1. Demerath has a "green light" to negotiate with the other social science action groups in developing some kind or kinds of meetings on the desegregation issue. What form such meetings might take, when such efforts might be initiated, how far these organizations might go have not been canvassed. Demerath may give us some guidance on developments as he proceeds.

2. Conceivably, these SAA efforts might serve to more sharply focus the action-minded scholars on this issue. Even this may be wishful thinking. But, we have "a foot in the door."

Finally, I see nothing in the SAA action or my initiative in this direction that would in anyway restrict the SRC if it should seem appropriate for us to develop an invitational conference, selecting from individual members in any or all three of these groups and perhaps others aimed at helping us in further developing and strengthening our program. Incidentally, I am not pushing for such a conference, but simply indicating that this effort has not, in my opinion, "muddied the waters" if we feel the need for some type of scholar orientated conference.

I have not forgotten about my visits to Charlotte and Monteagle upon which I reported briefly by phone a few days ago but hope to give more careful attention to the issues involved in each, if I can stay home next week, before sending you a memorandum.

I am enclosing for your information a copy of some action suggestions which Herman prepared for our panel discussion before the women's fellowship at the mid-winter meeting last week.

Sincerely yours,

John Hope II

Dear John:

Thanks for your recent letter bringing me up to date on the teacher displacement project and the proposed SAA conference of social scientists.

In New York last week, I had an opportunity to follow up on the first matter with Wilton Dillon. (Unfortunately, I couldn't make connections with Patterson.) Wilton promised to press for the direct approach to Trenholm, possibly to the extent of getting ATA to underwrite the whole project so that it can proceed pending negotiation with possible foundation sources. This seemed to me the best way to get an early go-ahead.

I'm looking forward to our next get-together, at which time we can discuss next steps toward an inter-disciplinary conference of social scientists.

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South.

February 7, 1958

Mr. Harold C. Fleming,
Executive Director
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.,
Atlanta 3, Georgia.

Dear Harold:

As you know, I spent Thursday and Friday, January 30-31 in New York conferring with various people on the Negro teacher displacement project and the proposed conference of social scientists and the role of the society for applied anthropology in such a venture.

With regard to the teacher study, I talked with John W. Davis, Wilton Dillon, and then jointly with Dillon and Fred Patterson. I found that Nick Demerath spent Thursday in New York talking with Patterson and Dillon and left the study prospectus with them. Incidentally, John W. Davis knew nothing of this and I did not so advise him. According to Dillon, the plan is that Dr. Patterson will present this prospectus to the Rockefeller Foundation (Dr. Kimbal?) and seek full support for this project but Demerath has indicated a readiness to move forward if as much as $7,500 can be raised. Patterson asked that the Negro state teacher associations be approached for financial help because he feels that this will strengthen his hand in dealing with this foundation. My understanding is that Demerath is to write some of these state groups, sending them copies of the prospectus and asking for financial participation. Dr. Aaron Brown (Phelps-Stokes) will assist in dealing with state teacher organizations.

There appeared to be no apparent plan to involve the ATA (Trenholm and Ridley). In my conference Friday afternoon with Patterson and Dillon I suggested that ATA officials were brought into our first committee meeting in December with the hope that they could be involved financially. I suggested that Dr. Patterson now in the role of "usherer of the plan to a foundation" in accordance with the strategy decided on at this meeting now approached the ATA for initial help, on condition that foundation help is forthcoming, so that Dr. Patterson would be able to use this as leverage in his appeal to this foundation. SOME ACTION SUGGESTIONS PREPARED FOR DISCUSSION BY THE WOMEN'S FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES AND THE UNITED CHURCH OF CHRIST

Midwinter Meeting of the Missions Council
Buck Hill Falls, Pennsylvania, 1958

by Herman H. Long
Race Relations Department
Board of Home Missions

THEME: WHAT DOTH THE LORD REQUIRE OF THEE?

1. Discover some basis for effective and rewarding group action through loyal membership and participation, with groups whose purposes embrace a christian concern for the betterment of racial and intergroup relations -- both within
(a) your local church fellowship and (b) your local community.

Such groups are already in existence, and part of the immediate task is to achieve identity with them.

Where they do not exist, a major demand for action is to take initiative to see that they are created -- both in the local church and the community.

Question: What groups are available to you for expression of your concerns in race relations? Is membership in these groups enough? What, beyond this, does your identification and interest require?

2. Give stimulus and support to the formation in your own community of some intergroup relations organization dedicated to education and action. Ideally, this effort should take the form of a general and enlightened civic concern for the welfare of the city as a whole in this area of potential conflict and divisiveness.

Some of the typical organizations which have grown up in many communities are the "councils," "forums," "commissions," and "committees" which carry the identification of "human relations," "race relations," or "intergroup relations" groups. They are traditionally informal and volunteer groups, but they have taken the form of official "mayor's" or "governor's" citizens on other occasions. In other cases they have become important adjuncts to local councils of churches and chambers of commerce.

Question: Is it important to have an actual interracial and interfaith character to these civic groups? What other interests should be represented in them? What about goals and policies?

3. Work toward the clarification of the policies of the organizations and institutions to which you belong and give support in terms of having such policies be "inclusive" -- especially if you are a member of the policy-making boards of such organizations. This is the natural context of your leadership function and where matters of private conscience can lead to formalized group commitment

Some such organizations are: Hospitals, social service agencies, private and public schools, sororities and fraternities, business and labor groups, youth and adult camps, voters' leagues, university women, and the like -- and especially your local church.

Question: What about policies determined at the national level of organizations and institutions? Is it a good thing to face policy matters in this field "head-on," or as some people express it -- "force policy decisions on racial matters?" What about "token representation" of minority groups?

4. Work to eliminate actual and potential practices of discrimination in public accommodations in your own community -- hotels, restaurants, motels, and places of recreation

This should be grounded in fact and not hearsay about the policies and practices of such places. So, get the facts by formal, non-accusatory, face-to-face conversations with owners of these establishments. Ideally, this should be a group or committee undertaking, involving the processes of discussion and negotiation.

Question: What bases are ther for constructive negotiation? What limits should be recognized by groups in their role of negotiators? What sanctions are there available, if and when negotiation fails? Should sanctions be used or threatened? If so, when can they be justified?

5. Anticipate the need for some form of effective public and leadership education on the critical issues which are present in this field. local, community-wide institutes and workshops are one important vehicle for such educational efforts. Be sure to involve and use the resources of television, radio and the press toward achieving the maximum public impact of such discussions.

Using informed and constructively-oriented consultants and lecturers is important. Local colleges and universities are key resources, and so are the local religious leaders, ministerial associations, church councils and public officials.

Your own gropu -- church or lay -- can take the initiative for a local human relations workshop or institute

Question: What about the needs of young people in the effort to educate the community: What information should be gotten across? What basic values should undergird this effort and be communicated to the public-at-large? What about the mechanics of institute and workshop efforts?

6. Develop methods of approach and strategies of making an impact upon the major national issues involving minority groups: e.g.

Civil rights legislation
Individual liberties and freedoms
American Indian rights
Immigration policy
Etc.

a) Use channels available for expressing views to all political leaders -- senators, representatives and state officials.

b) Use the resources created to intervene between the public and the federal government on these matters -- e.g.

Presidents Committee on Government Contracts
Presidents Committee on Government Policy
Federal Housing Administration
U. S. Office of Education
Department of Interior -- Office of Indian Affairs
Commission on Civil Rights.

c) Develop organized letter-writing projects. Determine when the letters should be made public. Share the contents and positions-taken with those with whom and through whom you are acting.

Question: What about trying to influence legislation generally, and especially at the state level? Without being politically partisan, what roles can the person concerned with Christian social action assume?

7. Develop a long-range program for working at the basic problems of open-occupancy housing in your community. (See entire issue of Social Action magazine, November, 1957, Volume 24, No. 3)

Excerpts of action suggestions -- pp. 28-29

Find out the facts of racial segregation in your community.

Are persons prevented from buying or renting available houses because of race?

Present the facts to the members of the church.

Work with the city authorities responsible for slum clearance and urban renewal.

Stay in the neighborhood and welcome newcomers.

Work with others to form a committee for fair play in housing

Join with others to form a corporation to build houses open to persons of all races.

Question: Are there any sanctions available in this area? If so, how can they be used ? What about realtors and developers and what can be done with and through them as responsible local citizens? What important human and Christian values underly this issue, and how do they relate to the choices and decisions of the individual in the changing community?

15. Racial prejudice is an inborn, natural antipathy which individuals have toward others different from themselves. (T)___ (F)___.

16. In most cases it is possible for parents to have strong, private racial prejudices and not have these attitudes influence those of their children. (T)___ (F)___.

17. Strongly developed racial prejudices are a symptom to the psychologist of some underlying personality conflict. (T)___ (F)___.

18. The high rates of crime among minority groups indicate that "criminal tendencies" have an hereditary racial base. (T)___ (F)___.

19. The sanction of law and legislation is one of the most effective methods now being used on a large scale basis for eliminating actual discriminatory behaviors against Negroes. (T)___ (F)___.

20. As racial segregation has been in process of elimination, and as improvements in the Negro's economic and educational status have taken place -- as during the past 15 years, the rate of intermarriage (Negro-white) has increased. (T)___ (F)___.

Score your paper as follows:

Count the number of correct answers.
Count the number of wrong answers.
Multiply the number of wrong answers by 2.
Subtract this figure from the total correct answers.
Multiply the remainder by 5, and this is your score.

A perfect score is 100.

MEMORANDUM

FROM

JOHN HOPE II

TO: Messrs. Harold Fleming & Fred Routh

RE:

DATE: 3/10/58.

You will find attached rough copies of the list of consultants. The original information which I drew from the vitae was listed with the objective of brevity uppermost. Some sketches seemed thin for our purposes so that I listed within parentheses at the end additional data that seemed more or less important.

I would appreciate your respective judgments as to what can still be cut out of the original statement what substitutions added (if any) from the data in parentheses and any valuable data which have escaped me completely.

This will give us a final statement to Vernon Eagle's taste --- I hope!

I had no vitae on C.H., Kyler, or G.D. Wilson. I hope you can strengthen C.H.'s sketch from your information.

The copy of my letter from Dillon is self-explanatory. We can talk about this later.

Arthur

P.S. The list is double spaced so that "you can "have a ball" writing in & marking out. The final draft would, of course, be single spaced.

Phelps-Stokes Fund

February 27, 1958

Dr. John Hope, II
Race Relations Department
Fisk University
Nashville, Tennessee

Dear John:

By now you should have received a copy of my letter to Trenholm. I have not yet heard from him.

I am writing now about another item on our joint "docket," namely the Hope Memorandum of December 23, 1957 on the "Inter-Disciplinary Conference of Social Scientists on Research on the Desegregation Problem and Related Issues."

This morning I showed your memo to Mrs. Nishi, National Council of Churches, in connection with our conversation about a proposed small conference of New York area social scientists to talk about what cues church leaders might take from the Suchman-Dean-Williams document, Desegregation: Some Propositions and Research Suggestions (A.D.L.).

She felt that the New York conference might tie in with the one you are proposing in that: (a) both would be referring to the current state of research; (b) how this imperfect knowledge might be used by "practitioners," including churchmen; and (c) participants at both conferences would like to discuss ways for social scientists to solicit research funds for neglected areas.

So this is just to inform you that the National Council of Churches and the Phelps-Stokes Fund are beginning to talk about joint sponsorship of a New York Conference, and that Stewart Cook and M. Brewster Smith will be brought into early "negotiations" about it. There will be nothing definite on this, however, until April. If you plan to be at the Syracuse meetings of the S.A.A., we will be able to talk further at that time about the connections and division of labor: (a) the proposed National Council-Phelps-Stokes conference; (b) your proposal; and (c) the communication between Nick Demerath and Ronald Lippitt dated February 13.

I assume you are being asked for opinions on Tilman Cothran's tentative outline for the "Little Rock Desegregation Crisis" project of A.D.L.

Cordially,

Mr. Paul M. Rilling,
Associate Secretary
National Council of the Young Men's Christian Associations
The Southern Area Council
706 Standard Building
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

I am happy to reply to your letter of March 5th. I recall our conversation in Atlanta and I am sending you a list of persons who, I believe, can very effectively direct the workshop of white and Negro YMCA secretaries. I am sending several names because the demands upon some of these are great and the time as I recall (early June?) is inconvenient for some. I would add also that I believe the combination of leaders chosen is almost as important as the qualifications of each individual. As far as possible, they should complement each other. One aspect of this is race. Our experience in the Consultant Service Program has strongly confirmed for me the unique value to workshop groups of having a bi-racial team of consultants. This in itself demonstrates better than words many of the fundamentals of sound intergroup relations. Likewise, because Negro scholars have understandably given intensive attention to such problems and because some qualified white scholars do not feel that they can participate in such meetings, some of our most effective and experienced consultants are Negroes. On the other hand, persons like Lewis Killian who is "tops" are increasingly swamped by requests from you, me, and no doubt many others. Thus, your chances of getting them are decreased.

The following is a list from which you may draw with confidence:

Mr. Will Campbell
National Council of Churches
1716 West End Avenue
Nashville, Tennessee

Dr. A. Lee Coleman
Department of Sociology and Rural Sociology
University of Kentucky
Lexington, Kentucky

Dr. Lewis M. Killian
Department of Sociology
Florida State University
Tallahassee, Florida

Dr. Herman H. Long, Director
Race Relations Department
Fisk University
Nashville, Tennessee

Dr. C. H. Parrish
Department of Sociology
University of Louisville
Louisville, Kentucky

Dr. Willis A. Sutton
Associate Professor Department of Kentucky
Lexington, Kentucky

Dr. Daniel Thompson, Chairman
Division of Social Sciences
Dillard University
New Orleans, Louisiana

Dr. Harry J. Walker
Associate Professor
Department of Sociology
Howard University
Washington 1, D. C.

Dr. Forrest La Violette, Head
Department of Sociology and Anthropology
Tulane University
New Orleans, Louisiana

The following combinations seem to me particularly well fitted for your purposes:

Inter-racial

Long or Parrish — Campbell
Walker - Killian or Coleman
Hill or Thompson - Sutton or La Violette

White

Killian - Campbell
Campbell - Coleman, Sutton, or La Violette

I hope these suggestions will be helpful to you in assembling a strong staff for this important institute. If I can be of further service let me know.

MEMORANDUM

To: Harold C. Fleming

From: Frederick B. Routh

Re: Telephone call from John Hope II, March 7, 1958.

On Friday afternoon at 5.15 pm. John Hope called to outline developments with the Consultant Service Program. We covered the following points:

1. The meeting in Kentucky regarding merit employment went well. C.H. Parrish, Charles Steele (Louisville Urban League), Rufus Attwood, and others were present -- about ten in all. They are planning a major conference on merit employment to be held at the student union of the University of Kentucky on May 10th. The Consultant Service Program will participate in the conference.

2. The proposed meeting of selected Consultants with Vernon Eagle is now set up for March 29th in Nashville. In addition to John Hope the Consultants who have been invited and who have accepted invitations to attend are Lee Coleman, Bonita Valien, and Harry Walker. I have written Vernon Eagle to this effect.

3. The spring conference at LeMoyne College has again requested Consultant Service assistance from SRC. John Hope and I agreed that no more than two people in the Consultant Service Programme would participate; either he and one Consultant or two Consultants. We felt there was some possibility that I might attend as an SRC staff member.

4. Alice Spearman's letter asking for Consultant help in South Carolina has some unique aspects. She raised the question of what can be done to avert social and economic reprisals. John Hope and I felt that this is an important question we shall have to face in the deep South in the period which lies ahead. He is therefore writing Alice to ask her for clarification of her proposals.

5. The Nashville Conference on Community Relations is gearing up for another workshop. There was some question about SRC-CSP participation in it. John Hope and I agreed that there is enough local talent in the Nashville area that our participation, though desirable, was not necessary, and that due to the stringent financial situation we would bow out gracefully.

March 13, 1958

Mrs. Alice N. Spearman,
Executive Director
South Carolina Council on Human Relations
1745 Sumter Street - Room 100
Columbia, South Carolina

Dear Alice:

It was helpful to me to talk with you this afternoon about your request for consultant service assistance along the lines described in your letter of February 20 to Harold Fleming. I am enclosing three copies of the questionnaire form in the hope that you will send one copy to me, one to Fred Routh, and keep one for your files and for further use by consultants if it is found feasible for us to render this service in the near future.

As I indicated, there are certain questions which I have marked on one copy which seem most essential in order for us to have the necessary information to make a decision. These have been marked with a double check others with a single check mark are important but not indispensable. Of course, if it is convenient we would find it quite helpful to have the entire questionnaire completed insofar as it is now appropriate so that we and our consultants might be able to make comparisons of shift in the nature of your problems, etc. since you filled out the first questionnaire in 1956. Since we are using the old questionnaire forms you will see reference at several places to the "fall of 1956." In all such cases because reference is "fall of 1958."

It is my understanding that you will move forward with your plans for your annual meeting and not attempt to combine the suggested workshop with it and that we might best think in terms of the prospects of a workshop in early June.

Please feel free to give us any information which will help us to appraise your situation in South Carolina and determine how we might best serve you whether it is requested in the questionnaire or not. It might be most convenient for you to make any additional comments you may wish to make on the back of the questionnaires with appropriate references to answers given to questions therein. Please be assured of our appreciation for your good work and our intense interest in giving any assistance to your program which it is possible for us to give with our resources.

Sincerely,

John Hope II
Chief Consultant

MEMORANDUM

To: Mr. Fred Routh

From: John Hope II

I am sending you my only copy of Bonita's letter to Maceo Smith. This should be held confidential and I would emphasize that it is an informal personl communication sent to Mr. Smith at his request. Since Mrs. Valien has shared it with me, I see no reason why those most closely involved should not receive copies but it should not be considered a part of the SRC-CSP consultation.

I am sending it on to avoid delay. I hope you can have it copied. Please return my copy. Certainly C.H. should have a copy. Because of the references to Kloppe and Falk, I question how much further it should be distributed in whole. Possibly with the deletion of the last three paragraphs, it could be sent to Will and Jean Fairfax.

Will accept your judgment.

John.

P.S. Kentucky and Memphis workshops shaping up well. Don't write off S.C. workshop yet.

Put temporary "hold" on following dates:

Kentucky workshop.		May 10 or May 17
Memphis	"	April 26 or May 3
S.C.	"	June 7 or June 14

Alice will go on with plans for Annual Meeting prior to this time. Have advised against mixing the two.

Awaiting further information from her. Thus, her dates very tentative but plans in Kentucky and Memphis are well under way and I should have specific proposals within week or ten days.

P.S. Received Falk document. Very good! He is a reliable resource. One thing, I though Maceo Smith was on convening committee -- and I think he does too. He! He!

Not serious.

CONFIDENTIAL

339 21st Avenue, North
Nashville, Tennessee
March 6, 1958

Dear Maceo:

I have been giving considerable thought to the Dallas situation and next steps since my recent visit there. While I am certain that you will get something of an "official" report and general impressions from the Council, I wanted to send this note on to you for whatever value it might have, especially for use in the meeting which I believe you are to have this Monday.

"Communication" seems to be the major and real problem as I see it in the Dallas situation. Somehow we have got to work out means whereby talking about desegregation is respectable; we have got to "build our bridges of understanding in little less secrecy." I think the meeting we had was a real valuable beginning and I think we should follow through on some of the important suggestions. I should like to list them as follows:

1. Get the Reverend Estelle to push Mr. Crossman for the meeting with the school board. I believe Mr. Crossman said he would look into this, and I think this should be followed through. It was mentioned that the Negroes would be those whom the Negroes themselves respect as leaders. I think you can tell Reverend Estelle what to say and the importance of pushing this. I am certain you would want to say the Negroes whom you think should best appear at such a conference.

2. It is important that we get the press on our side. The TIMES HERALD seems to be educable; Crossman seems to be sufficiently disturbed over the position and behaviour of the DALLAS MORNING NEWS that I believe we could make some real headway. In my conference with Mr. Chambers he impressed me as being very concerned; at the meeting McKnight exhibited a rather receptive attitude, I think. A newspaper doesn't have to take on a "crusading role" in order to take a positive and objective approach to the issue of school desegregation. I think we can do a great deal in couching all this in terms of education and community pride. Dallas is a proud community. The newspaper can begin an education campaign even before the school board announces its plan. They might want to run a series of articles which will simply digest what has been done in other communities in preparation for desegregation. I am sending to you copies of these studies for your own personal use.

3. The ministers should be pushed to get out a positive statement regarding school desegregation. This statement should come out NOW. I understand that they have been working on such a statement, but it is being revised; also, they seem to be waiting "for the right time". This, I think, they mean would be after the school board announces a plan. In my opinion, the right time is now since we need very much to "break the silence" as it were. This initial statement might be one which simply addresses itself to the issue of law and order. This certainly is not the ideal; they will want, I know, to follow this with a much stronger statement. But what we desperately need now is a respected group to speak out positively on the issue and NOW. This would give courage to other groups, break the silence, release some of the fears and inhibitions, making possible more positive action on the part of other groups. This statement should be given a prominent place in the press; it should carry the important and well respected ministers of the community. The TIMES HERALD could carry such a statement as a front page item.

*(On this point, I believe Cunninggim at SMU would be very valuable. I also picked up that they hold Rev. Loud in very high regard. Douglas Jackson mentioned that Rev. Loud had spoken at SMU. He might be drawn into this to help give the necessary push to the ministers' statement. Remember also Joe Allen (SMU) was at the meeting.)

4. We need to disseminate materials over as wide an area as possible; however, I think we would want to first educate selecte status groups first. There are valuable materials available; these materials could be studied with the view of Dallas working up its own educational program. Ideas might be gained from some of the material I am sending on to you. I am also certain that this is an area where the Southern Regional Council, ADL, American Friends Service Committee and like agencies would be in a position to give valuable assistance.

These are some impressions growing out of my visit and the meeting which we had. You might want to discuss some of these at your strategy meeting. This is sent on to you as a personal and not an official document, and you can use it as you see fit.

There is, however, one point which I should like to emphasize. I know you are an extremely busy person, but of all the people with whom I spoke and worked in Dallas, I believe that what happens or does not happen in Dallas will depend very strongly upon you and your activity. You are the moving spirit, there is no doubt about that. I know you don't have time to do the job that needs to be done, but SRC does have a worker in Dallas in the name of ED KLOPPE whom you know very well. I am convinced that Kloppe could do much of the leg work and can do a job if he has strong and intelligent guidance. And I am also convinced that Kloppe wants to do a job. I think he ought to be involved and pushed. While I think Gus Falk is a good person, he has a job to do and has his own agency program and commitments. Kloppe is free and is available. If you can furnish the brain and the push, I believe Kloppe can be depended upon to do the job. I hope you think well enough of the idea to give this a try.

It was good seeing you and your dear wife in Dallas. You two are very fortunate in having each other, and so is Dallas! I hope you good luck in your meeting and would so much like hearing from you on what you accomplish.

While this is a personal letter, I know John Hope would want me to extend to both of you his personal good wishes also.

Sincerely,

(Signed) Bonita Valien.

Dear Galen:

It was very good to hear from you and to know that your group is now thinking in terms of a workshop. This is a hasty note to advise you that the tentative date of May 10 has been set for a state wide conference on merit employment at Lexington, sponsored by the Kentucky Council on Human Relations. However, they are now considering the prospects of shifting this date to May 3 in which case the May 10 date would be available for your workshop. I should know definitely which of these will be used by the middle of next week and will advise you. At present time the May 23 date is opened but I hope that you can arrange to have it earlier since this is dangerously close to the end of the spring quarter for several of our consultants. I supposed May 3 would be too early, wouldn't it? You might want to consider this as well as May 10 date at your meeting Monday night. I will advise you by phone if I get any final word from Kentucky by Monday night.

As to the remainder of the latter I will answer more fully next week but in the meanwhile be assured of our continuing interest in your program in Knoxville and our desire to cooperate in any way that we can.

Dear Hugh:

Thanks for your letter of April 4. I am happy to know that we have a firm date and place. It sounds as if your plans are moving forward in good order.

I have just returned from New York and while there talked to Dr. David of the National Manpower Council about the possibility of his giving the keynote address at the Lexington Conference. He expresses real interest and states that he believes that either he or Dr. Eli Ginzberg (author of The Negro Potential) can attend this conference. I would suggest that if your committee wants this service, that a formal request be sent to him immediately as both of these men have rather heavy demands on their time and the date might be filled if it is not promptly put on their calendar. As you probably know, the National Manpower Council has given close attention to the problem of minority manpower both through speeches of its members and widely distributed and highly authoritative publications. Both of these men are first rate economists on the faculty of Columbia University and have had wide experience in conducting conferences dealing with various aspects of manpower utilization. In short, this prospect is better than any I have anticipated when I talked with you last. Charlie Steele may recall that a seminar on Mr. Ginzberg's book The Negro Potential was a major feature of the ceremonies which dedicated and opened the new National Urban League headquarters in New York.

I shall look forward to hearing from you as to the specifics of your program plans as soon as they are developed as these will be helpful to me in choosing the consultants for this important conference.

Best wishes.

Dr. G. James Fleming
Morgan State College
Baltimore, Maryland

Dear Jim:

I appreciate very much your willingness to serve as an SRC consultant at the Conference on Merit Employment at Lexington, Kentucky dispite your heavy semester-end responsibilities. I look forward to seeing you there

As I told you the consultants will meet with the conference leadership group at a dinner meeting Friday evening at 6 p.m. Information as to place of this meeting and lodging arrangements will be sent you directly by Dr. Hugh A. Brimm, Executive Director, Kentucky Council on Human Relations. If you will advise him as to your time of arrival, arrangements will be made to meet you at the airport.

The present plan is to have the Friday night meeting in Louisville, we will all stay over night there and drive over to Frankfort Saturday morning. Dr. Brimm will advise you specifically on the Louisville plans. I am enclosing a copy of the program. I would like for you to serve along with Dr. David as a consultant to Group No. 1 -- Development and Utilization of Educational Resources for Merit Employment. We would be particularly interested in any recent vocational developments in the Baltimore public schools and the role that the Baltimore FEPC is playing in training. A list of key questions and issues particularly pertinent to the situation in Kentucky as seen by the conference leadership will be sent to you soon. In your preparation for this assignment primary attention should be given to these.

I am enclosing a copy of a memorandum prepared for a meeting of consultants last year which will give an impression of the philosophy and aims of the CSP-SRC. Up to this time our services have been confined almost totally to school desegregation but the employment problem will probably get increasing attention. I am happy to be able to tap your broad knowledge and experience in this area.

You will receive a travel advance shortly from the SRC office in Atlanta and further payments will be made in accordance with the enclosed regulation statement. As I indicated, expenses plus consultant fee for 1½ days will be paid by SRC.

The best connection by air which I have found is Eastern No. 573 which leaves Baltimore Friday May 16th at 10:47 a.m., arrives in Washington, 11:09 a.m. Change to Eastern No. 463, leaves Washington 12:54 p.m. (luncheon aboard), arrives in Louisville, 2:33 p.m. You will be free Saturday in time to take Eastern No. 464, 5:41 p.m. arrives in Washington 9:10 p.m. You can take it from there. For your convenience, I have made this reservation and you should confirm it in Baltimore and purchase your ticket before 5 p.m. Thursday May 15th.

Feel free to change this if another plan is more satisfactory to you. But since flights are limited and we feel the 6 p.m. orientation session is as importance as the conference, I didn't want to take a chance on the flights being full.

I will be at the NNPA Conference at the Raleigh Hotel in Washington, May 12-13. Will I see you there?

Sincerely,

John Hope II

MEMORANDUM ON

MEETING OF CONSULTANTS WITH REFERENCE TO VIRGINIA COMMUNITIES, August 8, 1958
Washington, D.C.

After a survey of three Virginia communities, namely, Arlington, Charlottesville, and Norfolk, SRC consultants (Bonita Valien, Harry Walker, and ~~Will~~ John Alexander) met in Washington, D.C., on August 7 and 8 and discussed their findings and general impressions of these communities with the Chief Field Consultant, John Hope, and Associate Director of SRC, Fred Routh. On the basis of their general field impressions, the consultants were asked to indicate what, in their opinion, were the urgent "next steps" in the action field which would contribute to a smooth transition from a segregated to a desegregated school system. The consultants divided these "urgent action needs" into three categories -- (1) general -- those that were applicable to all communities; (2) specifics -- those applicable to the individual communities; (3) those functions which might best be carried on by the SRC central office.

I. WITH REFERENCE TO GENERAL NEEDS:

1. There should be made immediately available a special police manual dealing with the handling of interracial incidents. Such a manual should, as far as possible, deal with specifics of mob control, violence, etc., and should be written by a law enforcement official. (It was suggested that SRC explore the possibility with ADL of making immediately available the manual which has been written by Dallas Chief of Police, Hansen.)

2. Local groups should immediately ascertain the relationship and responsibilities of various law enforcement groups and agencies -- local, state, and federal. They should know well FBI agents and their function within their respective communities.

3. There should begin preparatory workshops for (a) Negro pioneer families and (b) white supporting families. In each community there should be organization of persons, or groups whose specific responsibility it is to maintain morale among Negro pioneer families -- a sort of identification, as it were, with the larger goals of democracy and public school education.

4. There is need for some local agency or agencies to see that troublemakers are well-known to law enforcement officials. The type of work done by ADL in Arlington, as an example, might be done by appropriate organizations or persons in other communities.

5. At the appropriate time, it seems indispensable that community organizations (ministers, councils, etc) issue statements appealing for respect for law and order and asking for impartial enforcement of the law by public officials.

6. Every attempt should be made for as wide agency cooperation and coordination as possible. This serves the useful function of not only keeping lines of authority clear and the elimination of duplication, but also serves as a device to re-enforce each other -- it eliminates the all-too often feeling of "being alone with our necks stuck out."

7. In view of the tenseness of the situation, there is need to work out a pattern whereby public school officials -- superintendents, principals, and teachers may, by "informal" means get preparatory training through:

a) workshops
b) visits to desegregated school centers
c) conferences with superintendents, principals and teachers who have participated in desegregation

8. Some community organization or organizations should assume responsibility for passing on to appropriate public officials the suggestion that if schools are closed recreational facilities should be kept open. This suggestion has already been made to an official in Arlington.

9. When it becomes clear that schools must desegregate, it is urged that public officials be encouraged to call in community leaders, both Negro and white, and ask for cooperation in implementing the desegregation plan.

II. IN THE INDIVIDUAL COMMUNITIES:

1. The need for agency cooperation and coordination seems urgent and of the greatest importance. The following are suggested as positive and useful groups from which to make a beginning:

In Charlottesville - The Ministerial Alliance
League of Women Voters

Norfolk - Women's Interracial Council

Arlington - Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith

2. In Norfolk, there is need to make clear the distinction between the relationships, roles and lines of authority, between navy and city police in law enforcement.

3. In Charlottesville, there needs to be a re-definition of the role of the Director of the Virginia Council with the hope of establishing communication and cooperation with groups heretofore inactive and unapproachable.

III. AT THE SRC CENTRAL OFFICE:

On the basis of their work in the field, consultants agreed that there is:

1. Urgent need for a public statement at the national level giving support to the principle of desegregation of the schools. It was therefore suggested that the Director of SRC, Harold Fleming, might work through the new Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (Fleming) as a possible approach to the President for the issuance of such a statement.

2. There is need for the Central office to have readily available the names of persons who could be contacted and immediately available to do a specific job in a community. This need is especially urgent in the: (1) field of law enforcement; (2) at the educational level, well qualified and effective superintendents who have undergone the desegregation experience.

CONCLUSION:

Visits of consultants to the various communities confirmed the belief that the consultant service has a definite purpose and fulfills a positive role. As a detached, but interested observer, the consultant is able not only to move throughout the community assessing the various points of view, but as an outsider, he performs the useful function of providing a sympathetic "ear" for a public official or "troubled person" to express himself. In the very tense communities where people are afraid to "talk among themselves," the consultant, as an outsider, provides a welcomed type of relief for expression. Since the consultant is also a trained social scientist, it is not at all uncommon for his "off-the record" advice to be sought as to the objective appraisal and relative merits of various desegregation plans, etc.

The consultants expressed interest and willingness to go into the community as observers and offer continued consultative services as needed.

MEMORANDUM

To: Harold Fleming

From: Fred Routh

Re: Virginia Situation - Report of telephone conversation with Paul Rilling

ARLINGTON

There is no basic change in the situation in Arlington from that reported in the papers last week. The Federal District Judge has not yet (as he said he would) ordered the admission of specific Negro children to specific white schools. This action is still expected since the judge was awaiting the decision of the Supreme Court in the Little Rock case.

CHARLOTTESVILLE

In Charlottesville the public schools have opened except for those affected by court order. The school board has asked the Circut Court of Appeals to delay the District Court's desegregation order. Judge Sobeloff who heads the Court of Appeals recently refused delay as requested by the Front Royal, Warren County school board. A strong Save Our Schools Committee has come out into the open since Monday, September 15th. Over two hundred people are already involved - they include conservative to moderate leadership, led by Dr. J. A. Rolston of the University of Virginia School of Engineering. This committee is patterned after the Arlington committee to preserve the public schools. It includes among others, Dr. Cherry, Dean of the school of education; Mr. Mott, principal of the Venable school; amd Mr. Welch who represents McGraw-Hill. There are several additional groups in Charlottesville. One of them, favoring private school plan, is also well organized.

FRONT ROYAL

The ministers of Front Royal have issued a good statement urging compliance with the law of the land; Paul Rilling assisted in its preparation; it has appeared in the Washington Post among other newspapers. School officials are actively seeking ways of re-opening the schools, even on a desegregated basis. They are waiting for citizenry reaction to build up and demand re-opening of the schools on a desegregated basis. Among those actively working for re-opening of the schools are: the president of the PTA's; the editor of the local paper (weekly); and the Baptist minister, Paul Stagg, who is, Rilling reports, probably the most effective guy on our side. Richmond reporters on the scene feel that community sentiment is shifting in favor of compliance.

NORFOLK

The Unitarian Church has spoken out strongly in Norfolk asking for compliance. A large group of protestant ministers is about to do the same. The Norfolk school board has been in touch with the Governor and the Attorney General. Schools open September 22 with seventeen Negro students assigned to specific white schools. City officials and the school board are watching the situation in Charlottesville and Front Royal closely. The private school group has had almost no success. The committee to preserve the public schools is rapidly gaining strength.

GENERAL

The Virginia Council has released to the press a statement aimed at maintaining and increasing community pride in the public school system and saying that the welfare of the children - both Negro and white - must come before all other considerations. It goes on to say that the governor has fulfilled his pledge to resist with all legal and honorable means; that there are none left; and the time has come to comply with the court decision. They also raised the question of the academic ability and the constitutionality of any "private" school system hastily set up.

The letters to the editor column in the Richmond, Norfolk, and Charlottesville papers are beginning to mushroom with demands that the public school system be saved.

Paul Rilling reports that there is increasing evidence of public dissatisfaction with the state program of massive resistance.

Mr. John Hope II
Apt. #53
54 Morningside Drive
New York, New York

Dear John II:

Harold and I have talked over future uses of the Consultant Service Program; we reviewed our understanding of our separate conversations with you. His understanding was somewhat different from mine of the proposed project of using educational consultants in Little Rock. My misunderstanding--if that it be--is probably due to the 10:30 Sunday morning meeting after a heavy date Saturday night.

Harold's idea of what you two discussed has more meaning than my understanding of this particular project. As we now see it, the idea is to send into Little Rock an interracial team of two or more well qualified educators to survey the situation and ascertain the costs of closing public schools in terms of subjects-not-offered, hours-not-spent in learning, extra burdens on parents, etc., etc., of the children out of school. Then we would hope that this could be written up so that it could be distributed to key people in communities which soon must face the choice of some degree of desegregation or no public schools. Their findings could also assist other community leaders in handling interim services to pupil DP's. What needs to be done is for you to write an outline of what these educational consultants will do, what they will look for, and what use might be made of the report.

Some special effort should be made to show that though Negro kids are less well cared for under "private" tutorial schools, white kids also lose a great deal when public schools are closed. One section might deal with the question of emergency, temporary tutorial classes for displaced pupils (another new class of DP's).

I feel that this should be aimed at both white and Negro groups; Harold tends to think in terms of Negro groups mostly. This needs further thought.

In terms of our thinking about special efforts in key cities, what would you think about adding to our panel of consultants several of the leaders of the Committees to Preserve the Public Schools from Arlington and Norfolk? They could tell local leaders in key cities what they did to get such groups off the ground, whom they contacted, techniques used, etc. This would be both informational and action oriented. Your reactions, please.

Next, as to the question of a monthly minimum or a "retainer fee" for you; what do you propose as to amount; what relationship would this have to per-diem use of your services; how can we determine in advance how much time to allow for? Please let us have your thinking on this matter.

Finally, as to merit employment projects, we are in general agreement that this is an area where we should push ahead with more than all deliberate speed (as defined by the Southern states). We feel that North Carolina, Kentucky, and Arkansas probably offer the best opportunities for this effort. We need to explore with our state organizations how this can best be done, who should be involved on the local level, what our role should be. Again, please let us have your thinking on this matter.

What seems called for is a program prospectus for the Consultant Service Program for the next six months to a year. You are in the best position to do this, what with your experience as SRC's Chief Consultant and your long experience with the American Missionary Association, and Fisk.

Let us hear from you soon.

All good wishes.

Dear Fred:

Enclosed you will find the prospectus which I worked out during the Thanksgiving break. I had hoped to get it typed Monday only to find that one of our secretaries broke her finger, the other had a bad cold and would Not stay after hours, and Elise came down with Flu. However, Elise finally did her best -- she wouldn't let me send the long hand draft.

As to your query about adding to our CSP panel leaders of Committies to Preserve the Public Schools from Arlington and Norfolk, I am strongly against any apparent link with these organizations because of the basic differences in our avowed policies. However, I would not favor ruling out particular individuals fitted for our panel because they were CPPS leaders. Why not consider each such person on the basis of our needs and his qualifications but don't list as permanent members of the panel.

Maybe we should talk about this.

Sincerely,

c.c. to H. F.

Re: A Prospectus for CSP Activities for the Next Year

December 6, 1958

The following are the major areas of service suggested in descending order of their priorities.

I Service to communities where public school closings have occurred or are imminent.

II "Advanced guard" exploratory (intelligence), community orienting, indoctrinating, and mobilizing services to communities in which court orders to desegregate are impending and which are moving toward an educational crisis of some kind, e.g., Atlanta, Dallas, Knoxville, Houston, Miami, New Orleans, Raleigh

III Assistance to state organizations and local groups in developing merit employment (training and utilization) programs where the prospects seem favorable and such efforts do not restrict or compete with major school desegregation attempts

Role of CSP in Each of These Service Areas

I Assistance to communities regarding public school closings may involve a survey of the cost of such closings and an appraisal of the prospects and means by which temporary emergency private tutorial arrangements can be made to fit the needs of Negro pupils.

The development of this area of service seems justified under the following assumptions:

1. That public school closings are likely to occur in several cities during the transition period from segregated to desegregated public school systems;
2. That students may be expected to be displaced from such schools for as much as a year or more before more stable adjustments are made to the court orders;
3. That, in general, Negro pupils are less likely than whites to find opportunities for emergency "private" education in their communities and such opportunities as they obtain are likely to be inferior to those available to whites because of the smaller resources of the Negro community unless such resources can be supplemented from outside sources
4. That failure to find adequate temporary educational facilities during this period may undermine the morale of Negro community leadership generally and deter Negro parents and children from seeking desegregated placement of Negro pupils, particularly high school pupils

The two phases of this service mentioned above are separable and may be rendered independent of each other but they tend to be complementary and may be rendered by the same team of consultants if the areas of professional competence are carefully selected and balanced among the team.

In my opinion, a survey of the cost of closing public schools should emphasize its costs to the community as a whole -- to all pupils and their parents; to the economic, social, and psychological potential of the community. But, it should show the nature and, as far as possible, the differential cost to the minority.

On the other hand, our appraisal of the prospects and character of a practical plan for the temporary private tutorial system should focus primarily upon the needs of Negro pupils because this is the area of need least likely to be met by normal local community action in the present social atmosphere of the southern community. However, we should recognize the superiority of establishing desegregated private facilities where these seem feasible. Our consultant teams should be ever alert to possiblities of such facilities, even if available only on a token basis. Nevertheless, the primary aim should be to establish such facilities for Negroes as would minimize their educational losses relative to those of their white counterparts as promptly as possible. This is urgently needed to maintain morale in the Negro community, the essential complainant group, so as to avoid the possibility of a progressive weakening of the Negro's will to resist the segregationist pressures for this capitulation.

Even though such a service is directed specifically to Negro pupils this does not imply that such efforts should rely solely upon Negro means -- personnel, facilities, funds, etc. Ample opportunity should be given for sympathetic white individuals and groups to participate in such an endeavor in various ways -- overt or secret, financial or services contributions, etc.

Among the major questions to which consultants should seek answers are the following:

1. What is the nature, magnitude (as far as possible), and incidence of the cost of closing public schools to the communities in which it occurs, the region, perhaps the nation?
2. What is needed to meet the community crisis if and when public schools are temporarily closed in a community --

   Resources - staff, facilities funds;

   Methods, techniques, strategies, etc.,?
3. What is the relative importance of the various needs that must be met, in what order, and by whom?

4. How can these needs be met most efficiently without jeopordizing or retarding the achievement of the primary objective -- public school desegregation?

5. What positive by-products of long range value can be obtained in the process of meeting this immediate problem, e.g., motivation of Negro community leadership for a larger and more sustained effort to foster the educational attainment of Negro children?

Nature of Consultant Resources Needed and Their Uses

Two alternative ways of initiating this service seem apparent:

1. Pilot project approach --

A consultant team might be sent upon request to a major city (e.g., Little Rock) where school closing is already a problem to make a survey of the situation and prepare a plan of action which would meet the needs of that community. Such a team would be composed mainly, if not solely, of professional educators with high competence in dealing with primary and secondary school problems, highly knowledgeable about the current southern situation, and preferably bi-racial in composition.

It would be hoped that its report would have trnasfer value for use in other communities faced with a similar crisis.

2. Consultant Conference Approach --

A small confernece of professional educators but with representatives of our regular panel who are most conversant with this problem might be called to discuss questions such as those mentioned above and to seek answers which would suggest a more comprehensive and universally applicable plan with sufficient flexibility for adjustment to varied specific manifestations of the basic problems posed by public school closing.

The first approach seems superior as a means of promptly meeting existing problems. Even if the second approach should seem appropriate at a later date, experience gained in dealing with the issues of a specific community in advance of such a meeting would prove crucial in assuring that the conference would yield concrete guidance for action on varied fronts.

Some Issues and Assumptions to be Considered in Dealing with the Problems of School Closings

A. Survey of Costs of School Closings

1. Costs of closings -- economic, social psychological, e ducational

   (a) To the community, e.g., loss of manpower potential, increase in juvenile delinquency, loss of school accreditation, increase in burden of child care for parents, particularly employed parents, etc.

   (b) To the families of displaced pupils -- all parents, whites, Negroes, e.g., cost of private education, decreased prospect of higher education for children, etc.

   (c) To pupils -- all, white, Negro

2. Costs to various categories of pupils and their parents:

   (a) Pupils not in school;

   (b) Pupils enrolled in "private" tutorial arrangements;

   (c) Pupils using other means of partial schooling, e.g. TV courses, private tutoring, etc.;

   (d) Pupils sent to other communities for schooling, e.g., cost of travel and maintenance, tuition, fees, etc.

3. Incidence of cost under various conditions, i.e., who finally pays:

   (a) To parents

   (b) To private subsidizing organizations, agencies, individuals, etc.

   (c) "Hidden" costs to city and/or state, e.g., idle educational facilities, salaries of idle public staff, capital losses

4. Extent to which "private school plans" shift the public education function, usually established by state constitution or statue, to private parties — parents, local private institutions (churches, civic organizations, etc.), private philantropies, etc.

5. Current position of southern education relative to national norms and effect of current pattern of resistance in widening the present gap.

B. Plan for temporary emergency tutorial education system for displaced Negro pupils — facilities, personnel, equipment and supplies, subject matter of courses, etc.

1. What is the most efficient and practicable use and combination of resources for this purpose?

The following list of alternative assumptions suggest important questions that must be answered before the most effective practical plan can be chosen:

(a) Regarding period of such service —

1) One year?

2) More than one year?

(b) Regarding objective of service —

1) Educational service to Negro pupils comparable to those being provided for whites?

2) Curriculum and scope of instruction aimed solely at meeting the needs of the elite, i.e., mainly those in the present junior and senior classes in high school who are planning to or are qualified to go to college?

3) Curriculum and quality of instruction aimed at the needs of all displaced Negro pupils who want to continue their

(c) Resources available for the Plan —

1) Limited to those of the Negro community?

2) Those available from the whole local community - Negro and white?

3) Local resources supplementable from outside sources —

a) General appeal - regional, national?

b) National organizations of which local units are members, e.g., churches, fraternities and secret orders, professional and civic organizations, etc.?

c) Foundations and philanthropic organizations and individual donors?

4. Private resources supplemented by those availble from government — local, state, Federal, e.g., teaching services of public school personnel still on salary, use of supplies, equipment, or facilities other government bodies?

Relationship between temporary goal and ultimate objective of complete public school desegregation —

1) Does the emergency plan in any way jeopardize the prospect of attaining the ultimate goal — desegregation?

2) Does the emergency plan for Negroes in any way contribute to making such a system a permanent means of educating Negroes as a substitute for public school facilities?

II "Advanced Guard" exploratory — consultant services to communities where school crisis is imminent

Such services would probably follow the general pattern used in Virginia during the summer of 1958. (This will be developed further in a subsequent memorandum)

III Assistance in developing local merit employment programs

(This will be developed in a subsequent memorandum)

A tentative outline for use by groups developing merit employment projects has been submitted and is being revised for more general use in this field.

Dear John:

I goofed. I misunderstood that the checks had not been sent, hence the delay in sending them along. Hope this did not inconvenience anyone too much.

I have been in touch with Horace Mann Bond and it is not possible for him to meet with us on the 25th. I am to see him tomorrow afternoon. He is interested in the project but probably could not do it before April. I don't feel this is a prohibitive delay. We will know more of his thinking after tomorrow.

What do you feel should be the next steps in view of the letter I am enclosing? With the proposed study of the Norfolk "costs" by the University of North Carolina should we look for another educator or should we reconsider the whole project?

I'll be out of town for a few days; if you think it important, call Harold.

Dear Mr. Routh:

I have received your letter of January 23 and appreciate very much your considering me to help with the survey which you have proposed. I must say immediately, however, that it will be impossible for me to take on this task at this time. My second semester schedule is indeed crowded, and in view of teaching and outside meetings, I could not possibly spare a week or ten days for this purpose.

Even if I were available, I might make the observation that the information you have proposed to be secured would be quite, quite difficult to get in any sort of objective or accurate way. For example, point no. 2 suggests the relation of socio-economic status to each of the categories explained in no. 1. This could be obtained, but would take a great deal of time and searching. Also, I might point out that item no. 3, "How does the curriculum of the private 'evasive' schools compare with the closed high schools?" constitutes a rather extensive investigation and even at its best would certainly be subjective.

I do commend you and the Southern Regional Council members for attempting to get further information relating to the Little Rock situation which might be helpful to the entire South, but I see it as a gigantic job.

My family and I are quite happy here in New Mexico and even though we miss our friends in Georgia and South Carolina, are indeed thankful to be living in this part of the country. Will you please convey my best wishes to Mr. Dabbs, Mr. Wright and others connected with the Council.

Dear John:

It was good to talk with you after so long a period without communication. I believe that the idea of sending a consultant on a "roving" mission to key cities in the South is a sound one. Out of it should come new opportunities to make constructive use of the Consultant Service Program. Whomever we choose to do the job should stop by and touch base here first for briefing purposes.

As I promised when we were talking, I am sending a list of cities which face desegregation in the near future, perhaps in September of this year. In my view the key cities are:

Arkansas - Little Rock

Florida - Miami and St. Petersburg

Georgia - Atlanta

Louisiana - New Orleans

North Carolina - Durham

Tennessee - Knoxville

Texas - Dallas, Houston and perhaps Ft. Worth

Virginia - Charlottesville, Newport News, and Richmond

And that, my friend, makes a dozen cities where we may expect desegregation moves, if not desegregation, next fall. However, the central staff will deal with Atlanta and the time is not propitious for a Knoxville visit. I would be glad to look into Miami, St. Pete and New Orleans if no one else wants to! With that in mind, it seems probable that two consultants might be used to advantage. Let me have your thinking on these cities and how and with whom we should divide them.

Best regards.

Dear John:

I just received a call from Miss Trigg at LeMoyne College in Memphis. They are holding their annual workshop on April 4, and she asked if it would be possible for us to supply a team of consultants for the workshop sections, in addition to having me as their keynote speaker. I suggested that this was too much of an investment for the consultant program to put in one effort. I therefore suggested that while I would be happy to speak to them, I did not feel we could supply more than one other person, or at the outside, two for the workshop.

The over-all theme for the workshop is "Improving the Climate of Opinion." The four sub-groups are: (a) role and function of the press, (b) role and function of educational institutions, (c) role and function of cultural activities, and (d) role and function of leaders.

I suggested that she ask Spence, the reporter in Memphis, for the first session; Herman Long, representing Fisk, for the second; Will Campbell, representing the National Council of Churches, for the third; and we would supply a consultant for the fourth. Question: whom would you suggest? Please let me hear from you on this at once, as the time between now and the 4th is short.

Dear Fred:

I am enclosing my statement for February. You may alter the form, if necessary to convey our agreement to the "records" of the Council and advise me for future purposes.

Did you reach Lewis Killian? Can he help us in New Orleans and/or Florida? Is the Memphis Conference fully manned? Who?

I have reached Bonita and Lee Coleman. April 18th conflicts with the Southern Sociological Society but both can meet on Sunday April 19th, 10 A. M. (sharp) at the Willard Hotel. I have set this date since no other near this time was satisfactory for all. Please advise me that you can be there. Because of the dangers of delays in arrival, I hope you can come in Saturday night, if you aren't already there at the other meeting. In fact, if you and Harold are going to be there through Friday, the three of us might profitably meet Saturday to pull several matters together, e.g., what if anything, can be gotten out of the present position of the Commission on Civil Rights (and vice versa).

Have they talked to you or Harold about a conference of intergroup relations professionals in the South? They are thinking in that direction and talked to me about it at Nashville.

I have agreed to myself and one other consultant (probably Jim Flemming?) for a Conference on Employment at Charlottesville on May 16th.

Let me hear from you.

Sincerely,

John Hope II

Dear John:

Thanks for your recent letter raising a number of questions about the Consultant Service program. Let me answer these questions in order:

1. I did reach Lewis Killian. He is over-burdened for this spring and cannot help us in New Orleans or Florida.

2. The Memphis conference is fully manned. I am enclosing a copy of the letter I wrote Miss Trigg yesterday. The CSP will be responsible only for C. H. Parrish and me.

3. Harold is not sure at this point whether or not he can stay over for the Sunday meeting with the consultants, but I can and have now planned to do so. And it may be possible for Harold to stay over, too.

4. I, or we, will be happy to discuss with you what, if anything, can be gotten out of the present position of the Commission on Civil Rights.

5. They have not talked with Harold or me about a proposed conference of intergroup relations professionals in the South.

6. Glad to hear that you and probably Jim Fleming will attend the conference on merit employment at Charlottesville on May 16th.

7. The form you used for your February statement is satisfactory.

Enclosed is a check covering the statement.

I look forward to seeing you in Washington.

Dear John:

We are sending you our check for $259.07. This covers your voucher of May 15 for consultant services and your voucher for May 15 for expenses.

Thank you for sending us a more detailed copy of your voucher for April 25.

We are also sending Jim Fleming our check for $65.10 for the voucher you submitted for him.

I am impressed with the extensiveness of the program at the Charlottesville meeting on Job Opportunities. Good work.

Best regards to you and the family.

Dear LaVergne:

I have just heard of Harry's death and find it difficult to comprehend and even more so to accept. You and young Harry have my deepest sympathy.

As you well know from the frequency with which I have called on him as a consultant in our Consultant Service Program, we regarded Harry as indispensible in this important undertaking and I am now at a loss to know how we will get along without him. But even more important, I regarded him as a warm and devoted friend with a rare blend of the scholar, the social practitioner, and one who loved people and wanted in a very personal way to see their lots improved in this troubled world.

Difficult and discouraging problems were always made easier and the determination to solve them greater by having Harry working on them. To my certain knowledge, he has had an impact upon the solution of the desegregation problem in the South in his varied roles far beyond that which can be readily measured.

Sincerely yours,

John Hope II

TO: Mr. Harold Fleming

RE:

DATE: 3/10/60.

The attached list of questions was developed rather hurriedly in anticipation of possible needs of some members of the Mayor's Committee now considering the "Sit-in" situation here.

I am wondering whether it would be advisable for me to send such a list as a memo to consultants and state directors. Negotiation of some kind is beginning to occur at various places and, I fear, our side knows little about the marketing aspects of the question. Would welcome you, Les, Phil, and Killing considering prospects of refining and extending the list. We might even go further but more of that later.

What do you think??

Dear John:

Harold is out of the office this week on vacation. He will be back by Monday. Paul and Les and I have carefully gone over your list of suggested questions and decided to communicate with you this week in order to facilitate their use.

I definitely feel that it would be useful to send such a list to consultants that will be moving into local situations and also to state directors of human relations councils. Although the list is somewhat long to be used as is with each business person, it is always helpful for an interviewer or negotiator to have a guide of various types of useful questions.

I thought that a few of the questions by being obviously slanted might have an adverse effect on any interview. I would therefore suggest that we eliminate questions 6 and 8 and 21 and 22 as being in this general category. We thought that question 12 was a little involved in its present wording. And that question 15 might be asking for the kind of information which the business manager might consider none of our business. Except for these minor comments, I think the list to be excellent and I can think of no additional lines of inquiry which would be helpful for this purpose.

Let me know if you want us to send out the copies after you have completed the final draft.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Field Director

SUGGESTED QUERIES TO STORE MANAGEMENT

1. Is your store a retail store?

2. Who determines policies followed by your unit? e.g.,

   Sales and purchasing policy?
   Advertising policy?
   Customer service policy?

3. Are you bound by top-management policy or can you use your discretion in any of these areas? (Centralized or decentralized?)

4. Do you have a uniform policy regarding food services to Negroes in all of your units? In all geographical areas?

5. Is your policy uniform for all southern units?
   What do you call the South? Oklahoma? Missouri? Salisbury, North Carolina

6. Do you believe there is a Monolithic South?

   Why differences in speed, methods and extent of public school transportation, park, library, etc. desegregation from state to state and community to community in the "South"?

7. Have you (or has your firm) made any objective studies of racial character of your market?

   Proportion of sales?
   Satisfaction with present service pattern — by Whites? by Negroes?

8. Do you seek the general public as customers? Do you differentiate between any groups of customers as to price charged for merchandise? Kinds of merchandise sold?

9. What customer services do you offer other than actual merchandise sold? Eating facilities? Rest room facilities? Credit services? Play rooms for children. Courtesy refreshments, fashion shows, etc.?

10. Do you differentiate between groups of customers in the quantity, quality and form of services offered in any of these customer services?

11. If so, why do you so distinguish? Personal attributes — cleanliness, decorum, etc.? Size of group relative to total customer group? "Local custom"? Top-Management policy?

12. If your Negro customers generally became aware of the full extent of the difference in terms of goods plus customer services between what they get per dollar spent at your store as compared with that provided all other customers and as a consequence exercised rational consumer buying judgment by seeking other outlets for their purchases,—

(a.) Would you object to such action? If so, what would you do as a retail merchant to counteract or offset such exercise of free choice? As a white citizen —?

(c.) Would you consider such action a fair buyer practice in a free competitive market — a fair exercise of the consumer buyer's proper and expected right and responsibility in a capitalistic system?

13. On the basis of past performance, do you believe that your store unit can operate profitably, if your Negro market were lost? Your firm (nation-wide)?

14. Approximately what proportion of your present gross sales volume would you judge to come from white customers? Negro customers?

15. Approximately what proportion of your present total annual gross sales volume do you feel must be maintained in order for you to "break even" (no profit or loss)? For you to earn 4% on your investment?

16. How far do you think you can expand your sales volume from white customers? From Negro customers?
(Assuming continuing high level general employment, and little change in population of your selling area)

17. Do you believe that you would lose a significant part of your present white market, if you instituted a policy of equal customer services for all buyers without regard to race?

(a.) What proportion would you guess that you would lose by such action?

(b.) Would you expect this loss to be significantly offset by increased Negro trade?

18. Would such expected losses of white trade be significantly reduced, —

(a.) If all units of national variety chain stores operating in the community adopted simultaneously the same equal customer service policy?

(b.) If all units of national and regional variety chains did so?

(c.) If the major department stores (local and parts of chains) joined the variety store group in such a change in practice?

19. Do you (or does your firm) have any objections or misgivings about instituting or applying an equal customer service policy other than the fear of loss of the majority market?
Personal prejudice or commitment to the prevailing patterns (local customs)

20. Would you be willing to make such a change,

(a.) If authorized by top-management of your firm?

(b.) If units of all competing national variety chains in the community would join you in such a change?

(c.) If all competing national and regional variety chains would do so?

(d.) If all competing variety and department stores would do so?

21. What do you consider "equal consumer services" to mean?

22. Is maintenance of the human dignity of the individual customer a part of this.

THE CONSULTANT SERVICE PROGRAM (CSP) OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, JANUARY 1 - JUNE 30, 1960

by

John Hope II, Chief Consultant, SRC - CSP

The CSP continues in its fundamental objective to provide professional assistance to community leadership in its effort to efficiently and harmoniously apply the basic principles of democratic intergroup relations in developing programs of race relations. In order to achieve this goal, it has provided consultants competent to assist in the problem areas which leaders have given top priority in their respective communities.

Public Accommodations -- "Sit-Ins"

During this period, the vigor, pervasiveness, imaginativeness, and increasing effectiveness of the "Sit-in Movement" has in many communities catapulted problems of public accommodation from a secondary and frequently a residual position to one of top priority. Established liberal white and Negro leadership has found itself frequently faced with the unaccustomed and uncomfortable position of not being able to determine either the priority of problem areas in which positive changes in race relations patterns should be sought under the new circumstances, or the tempo and techniques by which such change would be brought about. In this near-crisis situation, the CSP in close co-ordination with other phases of the SRC program has assisted this leadership as expeditiously and quietly as possible in interpreting the nature and significance of this movement, placing it in proper perspective within the overall community race relations program, and determining the proper and legitimate roles of various community organizations, interests and government agencies involved -- whether voluntarily or involuntarily.

To this end, formal consultations were held with the joint boards of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations and the Nashville Community Relations Conference (March 2, 1960), the Mayor of Raleigh (February 26-27, 1960), the Board of Directors of the Knoxville Area Human Relations Council, (April 8-9, 1960), and the Governor's Commission on Human Relations of Oklahoma (June 9-10, 1960).

The first of these was planned prior to the outbreak of violence in Nashville and there is little doubt that the process of determining whether such an interpretative consultation was needed and the process of getting ready for it contributed to the prompt and constructive role of these intergroup organizations when the crisis occurred. At the culmination of this consultation, action was officially taken to have a committee call on the Mayor and request the prompt formation of a Mayor's Committee to study and make recommendations for the settlement of the issues. Such a committee was appointed within 18 hours of this meeting and two of the three members of this committee were appointed to the Mayor's Committee.

The Oklahoma consultation in a sense "opened a new front" of activity for the CSP. In the first place, this Commission is state-wide in its scope of activity and the potential range of its program includes efforts to eliminate discriminatory practices in a wide range of public activities. In the second place, it has a strong mandate from the Governor to get results or recommend legislation that will accomplish the desired purpose. Its immediate concern and the one upon which it sought assistance from the CSP was eating facilities which are not a part of a general retail sales operation. Lunch counters at department and variety stores are generally open but picketing of restaurants and cafeterias was in progress with the same vigor recently witnessed at lunch counters in other states further east. Thus, effective results in this area may well give guidance for constructive advice in other cities at a later date.

In addition to these formal consultations, the chief consultant has probably spent more time than ever before in informal, frequently highly confidential, consultation with leaders of various agencies and organizations involved in the various ramifications of the sit-in demonstrations as they developed their plans of action. This role was most important during the months of March and April when negotiations for settlement were widespread and the channels of communication between the negotiators in various cities very limited.

During this period, the chief consultant consulted intermittently with the executive committee of the Nashville Community Relations Conference, its president, and with two members of the Mayor's Committee on the sit-in situation, and had one formal and two informal meetings with the Mayor. Periodic exchanges of ideas and information took place between members of Mayor's Committees and other concerned leaders in Knoxville, and various North Carolina cities, and the chief consultant. If the judgments and suggestions ventured by the latter in these highly informal and confidential consultations served any useful purpose, the full and rapidly up-dated factual information which SRC was able to furnish was the most important cause since it, along with other "bits and pieces" of confidential information passed to the chief consultant by various negotiators provided a broader perspective from which to form judgments than was generally possible for the leaders and negotiators completely submerged, if not overwhelmed, by the day-to-day developments in their local situations.

While the significance of the CSP's role in lunch counter desegregation cannot be determined accurately, it is encouraging to note that Nashville, where its most intensive effort was made, was the first city in the Southeast to successfully integrate and Knoxville has recently joined as the third such city, the second being Winston Salem, North Carolina.

General Community Organization and Resource Mobilization

As in previous periods, the CSP assisted communities in more effectively mobilizing and co-ordinating the roles and functions of various community organizations concerned with developing more democratic patterns of race relations in various phases of community life. In Houston, Texas, under the sponsorship of the Houston Council on Human Relations, a workshop operating under the general theme "Improving Intergroup Relations" drew some 85 participants out of an advance registration of 110 from a dozen different organizations despite the worst snow storm in a decade. While the immediate concern was preparation for public school desegregation, two other problems, minority group employment opportunity, and housing and public accommodations, were discussed. More than 50 per cent of the participants were white. This conference used the services of four consultants and the membership was divided into four discussion groups: two on education and one each on employment, and housing and public accommodations.

In anticipation of school desegregation in September 1960, the Knoxville Council on Human Relations conducted a workshop (April 8-9, 1960) attended by about 35 of its 50 board members. Under the direction of two SRC consultants (but financed by the Unitarian Service Committee), about three-fifths of the time was spent discussing ways and means of preparing the local community for the fast approaching public school desegregation while the remaining time was given to problems of employment and public accommodation with major emphasis on the then serious and unresolved lunch counter sit-in issue.

Employment Conferences

During the period of this report, requests for consultant services to deal with the problem of employment have been met. This is not new. Employment has been one of the areas of primary concern of community leadership from the inception of this program. However, the unique development is to be found in requests for specialized consultations confined to a consideration of this and directly related issues coming from predominantly Negro leadership groups. They seem to portend an increasing awareness by this leadership of the indispensibility of aggressive, constructive, and imaginative action on their part if Negro employment disabilities are to be eliminated. Whereas, in past workshops and discussion groups on employment have placed primary emphasis on current racial discrimination and means of eliminating it, these have, in addition, focused more sharply upon the need for an increase in the quantity and quality of education and skill development and the unique role of the Negro community, family, and school in contributing to this end. Likewise, post-conference developments indicated an unusual interest in systematic follow-up action to implement the findings and recommendations of the meetings.

A two day Community Conference on Employment Opportunity was held at Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee on April 22-23, 1960. It grew out of a growing awareness of Negro leaders that the city is in the midst of significant economic growth and industrial expansion in which Negro manpower is not effectively participating. This group was particularly mindful of the presence of two Negro colleges one of which has an engineering school while Negroes continue to be employed almost solely in traditional categories. A group of 40 assembled to determine the steps necessary to initiate a change in this practice. As a result, the group agreed to sponsor this conference, aimed primarily at the Negro leaders, organizations, and institutions but inviting representation of interested bi-racial groups and white leaders. The reason for this emphasis was that the group felt that the initial step in a drive for equal job opportunity should be to moblize the full and informed support of the total Negro community behind such a program. In order to do this, the conference was convened to apprise leaders of the nature and importance of the employment problem, the means by which it could be alleviated, and the role of various organizations and individual leaders in achieving the desired goals.

Some 75 persons representing a good cross-section of the Negro community participated. The consultants included Dr. Henry David, Executive Director of the National Manpower Commission of Columbia University, the Chief Consultant who worked with him last year on a study of manpower problems of racial and ethnic minorities, and Dr. V. W. Henderson, Chairman of the Economics Department at Fisk University. In preparation for his role as a consultant, Dr. Henderson conducted a survey of the present pattern of Negro employment in Nashville. This formed the back-drop for the conference discussions and its sympathetic reporting in the daily press aroused unprecedented interest in business circles. Already, the Nashville transit company has taken the initiative in hiring Negroes as bus drivers and has stated that it would henceforth hire on merit without regard to race. One soft drink bottling company has hired its first Negro route salesman and is reportedly on the brink of adding a second because of the initial success of this change in employment practice. There is a good prospect that a major chain grocery firm may begin employing without discrimination in the near future.

A report of this conference has been prepared for wide distribution, the sponsoring group has decided to become permanent so that it can develop a continuing program. Officers have already been elected, committees have been appointed, and a plan of action with prescribed target priorities is in the making. Negotiations are beginning with the telephone company and other firms will be contacted according to plan. (See attached Report)

On April 25-26, 1960, the CSP conducted its first consultation with college administrators of predominantly Negro institutions of higher learning. This meeting was developed and sponsored by the South Carolina Council on Human Relations. It brought together presidents, deans, and guidance personnel from five colleges and two junior colleges in South Carolina. This group of 30 administrators examined present curriculum, guidance, and placement practices in relation to expected industrial trends and manpower needs of the decade of the 60's in an effort to, at least, begin the process of appraising the kinds and quality of its offerings in relation to prospective employment opportunities for its graduates during the coming decade.

Two consultants were used, Dr. Horace Mann Bond, Chairman of the School of Education, Atlanta University, an outstanding scholar and educationist who has had a career as teacher and former president of two colleges, served as the authority on the character of the manpower potential available from such institutions and means of improving it. The Chief Consultant gave primary attention to the nature of the present and future demand for the products of these institutions.

According to Mrs. Spearman, the participants considered this meeting a highly successful beginning and have requested that it become an annual event of the South Carolina Council on Human Relations.

Report of Activities of the Field Department and of Associated State Councils

The fundraising efforts of the state councils during 1960 demonstrated the effectiveness of the matching-fund, incentive plan used by SRC in handling state assistance. During 1960 these groups raised locally a total of $51,793. This is the greatest self-support effort since these groups were organized and represents an increase of 54.5% over the $33,324 raised during 1959. Of the ten groups, eight raised more funds during 1960 than in 1959.

The Florida Council on Human Relations received notice of federal tax exempt status near the end of 1959. All of the state councils have now been so classified.

Two state councils, Alabama and Georgia, have been looking for new professional staff. The Alabama Council is seeking a replacement for Bob Hughes, now training for missionary service in Africa. The Georgia Council is planning to move from a part-time to a full-time operation. Both groups plan to announce the appointment of new directors within the next few weeks.

During the last months of 1960 new cooperating groups of state councils were established in Memphis, Tennessee; in Norfolk and Fredericksburg, Va.; in Raleigh, N.C.; and in several Alabama communities. The membership of the Virginia Council on Human Relations was increased by the end of 1960 to a total of 2,500.

Last fall the board of the Southern Regional Council approved a conditional grant of assistance of $1,500 to the Houston Council on Human Relations provided that the Houston Council raise a total of $3,000 in local funds by January 1, 1961. This condition has been met. This promising community council has opened an office, employed staff, and has launched a constructive program.

Consultant Service Program. John Hope II, chief consultant, has been active since the last meeting of the executive committee, meeting with members of state advisory committees to the Civil Rights Commission in four states, conferring with a citizens committee in Beaufort, S.C. on a possible community self-survey, conducting a workshop in Louisville, Kentucky, for consultants of the Kentucky Council on Human Relations who plan to work on merit employment problems in several Kentucky communities. As a result of John's consultations with members of state civil rights advisory committees, several of these groups are planning ~~mmxik~~ statewide merit employment surveys.

Activities of the Field Director. Since last September the field director has made a number of trips to New Orleans, working with local groups in connection with the school crisis there. During January of 1961 he has been primarily in Georgia, in touch with groups concerned with the developments at the university and in connection with the Atlanta school situation.

He has participated in annual meetings of state groups in Tennessee and Georgia and has visited state offices in North Carolina, Florida, Alabama, and Arkansas. He has consulted with local groups in Houston and Austin, Texas, in Birmingham, Montgomery, ~~xxxxxx~~ and Talladega, Alabama, and in Columbus, Georgia. He has been involved in a ministers workshop in Virginia and a teachers conference in Chattanooga. He has attended meetings of the Southern inter-agency conference and of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Program Activities of State Council Groups during the last three months have included:

1. A retreat of ministers in the Little Rock and Pine Bluff, Ark. area, led by Kyle Haselden and Dr. ___ Pettigrew.

2. A partially successful effort to desegregate Brownie Girl Scout groups in Nashville, Tennessee.

3. Planning of a state-wide, inter-racial, college student workshop in South Carolina, to be held Feb. 5.

4. Successful efforts to gain the employment of a Negro nurse in the Veterans Hospital, Columbia, S.C.

5. Consultations with school officials and white and Negro parents to encourage smooth implementation of school desegregation rulings in Chattanooga, Tenn. and in Atlanta, Ga.

6. A statement by the North Carolina Council on Human Relations to the state advisory committee to the Civil Rights Commission protesting tokenism and the Piersall Plan in the state.

7. Organization of an informal, ad hoc committee of leadership calibre to consider settlement of the sit-ins in Pine Bluff, Arkansas.

8. Establishment of a cultural opportunities study and action group in Richmond, Va.

9. Sponsorship by the Virginia Council of a speaking tour throughout the state by the Rev. Robert Hughes of Alabama.

10. Release of a summary of the state of of human relations in Virginia by the V.C.H.R.

Note: Reports on the Southern Leadership Project will be delivered verbally by Mr. Muse & Mr. Bewley at the close of the Exec. Comm. meeting.

Mr. Stephen R. Currier
President
Taconic Foundation
666 Fifth Avenue
New York 19, New York

Dear Mr. Currier:

I wish to express to you and to the Board of Directors of the Taconic Foundation my deep personal gratitude and the appreciation of the Race Relations Department for your gift ($4,860) made for the analysis of employment data. I will keep you advised as this project goes forward.

I received this generous contribution just before leaving Nashville to attend the important meeting with the Honorable Robert Kennedy and his civil rights staff which Ralph McGill and Harold Fleming arranged. I left Washington Tuesday with very mixed emotions. That a group of persons primarily concerned with civil rights and intergroup relations generally could get the sympathetic ear of the Attorney General and the Vice President of the United States and their aides, all within the brief period of some eight hours, was a source of extreme satisfaction and sent my hopes for the future soaring.

On the other hand, the news that my good friend Harold was leaving the Southern Regional Council was disconcerting, to say the least. His contribution in race relations to the South and to the nation has been large and decisive in recent years. His discerning choice of targets and deft deployment of resources to achieve the goals sought have been outstanding. As a result, the impact of the SRC has broadened and deepened during the crucial period since the School Desegregation Decision. The comfort that we who work with him may take is that in his new endeavor he will apply his talents on a broader stage for the greater benefit of mankind — nationally and internationally. And thus, I congratulate the Taconic Foundation for its excellent judgment in selecting him for this new role and pledge my support in the projected program of the new agency in any small way in which I can help.

Sincerely yours,

Subject: John Hope Expenses and Consultant Service Program

As I understand it, the agreement which we meant to make with John Hope was as follows: As of March 1, 1961 ~~&&~~ there remained for use by John and the CSP a total of $2,000. These funds could be used by John as he saw fit, by himself or with the use of other consultants, and with any breakdown he might choose as to fees and travel expenses.

Expenses since that time are:

Hope - consultant fees, 8 days - March	$ 320.00	+360
- Apr	160
Routh, Young, et.al. - Louisville	225.00
Hope - travel and communication - March	~~146.47~~	+20.90
- travel - April	123.53	~~140~~ 38.81
- travel - May	133.93
Balance of	$ 992.14

Note that the above accounting does not include communication or consultant fees for April. Therefore, when John's expenses for April are submitted, the above balance will probably be considerably reduced.

As you know, when these funds are exhausted we see little possibility of new assistance to the Consultant Service Program in the near future.

I am sorry to say that we are not in a position, at present, to offer you any regular consultative arrangement out of general support funds. We expect to continue to service special needs from time to time and would hope to call on you for such services on a per diem basis. I certainly hope that you will continue in the role of Chief Consultant so that we can call on your advice and assistance in future months.

~~I realize that it is not easy for you to be in a position to help us in such an~~

Under your leadership the Consultant Service Program has made a significant contribution to the work of the Council and to the entire South. We regret its approaching termination but look forward to continued cooperative activity with you, even if on a regrettably more informal and irregular basis.

Dear John:

This is an effort to set forth in writing the substance of the talk which you, Harold, and I had some weeks ago regarding the revised terms of your role with the Council. As I said this morning, a further conversation is desirable, and I hope that our schedules will permit that this Friday. This letter, however, can be a basis for discussion. Here goes:

(1) We earnestly wish that you continue in your position of Chief Consultant. As such, you would continue as an adviser and resource person in all activities of SRC. Any work on your part involving appreciable amounts of time would be billed by you at the Council's standard per diem rate ($40.00). As Chief Consultant, your presence at Executive Committee and Board meetings is desirable.

(2) Your other function, that of director of the Consultant Service Program, needs to be put on a different standing. It is no longer advisable to budget the Program as a special project; consequently, the guarantee of a minimum level of fees can no longer be made.

(3) We hope to continue to provide the sort of services carried under the Program. We hope that you would be available as in the past to undertake these at the Atlanta office's suggestion. Moreover, we hope that you would, as in the past, take the initiative in proposing to the Atlanta office such services.

(4) If you are, any consultant services of the sort formerly carried under the Program would be planned only through you.

(5) Generally, the Field Director or the Executive Director would be your liaison with the Atlanta office, in proposing or approving plans.

(6) You would be paid the Council's standard per diem on all assignments. Only work authorized by the Atlanta office can be reimbursed .

(7) Per agreement, you had $2,000 to spend according to your best judgment after March 1, 1961. Our records show expenses since that time as:

Hope - consultant fees,
8 days, March	$ 680.00
April	160.00
Routh, Young, et.al. fees	225.00
Hope - travel and communication,
March	167.37
April	162.44
	$1,528.74

(8) This indicates a balance of $471.26. As we do not yet have all of your May expenses or fees and expenses in connection with the Atlanta meeting scheduled for this week, the probability is that the fund is exhausted.

Please let me have your thoughts.

Best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

Montgomery, Alabama, has had a lot of strain in recent weeks because (for sufficient reason) Negro citizens have been refusing to ride the buses. A Negro minister from Montgomery was lately visiting a Texas College President. Texas man asked anxiously about the situation in Montgomery. "Yes," said the Montgomery man, "it looks bad. The white people have run out of arguments. They haven't got any more moral argument, they haven't got any more religious argument, and they haven't got any more legal argument. And they've taken to violence. But, Reverend," he said, "WE haven't run out of arguments, and there won't be any trouble."

PROPOSED LETTER FROM MITCHELL TO PROSPECTIVE CONSULTANTS

Dear :

You will recall that at a meeting last August 10th under the guidance of Dr. C. H. Parrish, several distinguished social scientists took a look at the work being attempted by the Southern Regional Council and developed some fruitful suggestions for the expansion of council activities. Since that time I have been able to arrange payment for the ~~services~~ occasional services ~~for the employment~~ of a limited number of consultants. They ~~who~~ will be charged with ~~the~~ responsibility of conducting workshops for ~~state~~ members of State board, staff training institutes, and such other purposes as appear necessary for the successful prosecution and extension of the council's program.

These consultants are to be compensated on a ~~perdiem~~ per diem basis in addition to their traveling expenses. I would like very much to have you serve as one of these consultants. A preliminary meeting of the consultants is planned for a convenient time early in January.

Through a loan arrangement with the American Missionary Association of the Congregational Christian Churches, Mr. John Hope II has assumed the duties of Assistant Director for Program and he will have the responsibility of coordinating the work of the consultants. He will be in communication with you shortly concerning plans for the January meeting and other matters relative to the consultant service program.

Sincerely yours,

SUGGESTED LETTER FROM MITCHELL TO STATE DIRECTORS

Dear :

Through a loan arrangement with the American Missionary Association of the Congregational Christian Churches, Mr. John Hope II has assumed the duties of Assistant Director for Program. He will be in touch with you in the near future with ~~each~~ specific reference to your program needs and how the central office can best assist you in meeting them. You may feel free to write Mr. Hope on any other matters concerning program and training on which he and the central office staff may be of assistance.

For the present he will maintain his base at Fisk University though he will spend considerable time at the Atlanta office and in the ~~field~~ States. In order to speed ~~expedite~~ all communications with him about ~~relative to~~ program, he has suggested that for the present all letters to him be mailed to --

Mr. John Hope II
Assistant Director for Program,
SRC
c/o Fisk University

and that a copy be sent in my care to the Atlanta office in order to avoid unnecessary delays. His office telephone number in Nashville is Chapel 2-3396.

You will be interested to know that an arrangement has been made for the employment of the limited number of highly qualified consultants who will be available to you for the purpose of conducting workshops for your staff and board members and such other uses as their talents can be put for the further development and extension of your program and its further coordination with the overall program and objectives of the Southern Regional Council.

Specific planning of this consultant service will begin with the new year. Any comments and suggestions that you feel will assist us in making these plans of maximum efficiency and assistance to you should be directed to Mr. Hope at your earliest convenience.

SUGGESTED LETTER FROM HOPE TO CONSULTANTS

Dear :

You have received, no doubt, Dr. Mitchell's letter of December asking your participation in a consultants service program. I cannot urge too strongly my personal wish or that of the central office team of which we hope you will be an important member that you join us in this important service to the Southern Regional Council, the South, and thus to the nation.

It seems imperative that we get a good start by attending a conference of all consultants early in January and, consequently, I am asking you to advise me promptly whether you will serve, and whether you can attend such a conference for the planning, orientation, etc. on Saturday, January 14 in Atlanta. If you can not attend on this date, please indicate on which of the following dates you can attend: ~~Jan 13; 15, or 22.~~ January 13; January 18; January 28.

Your travel expenses will be borne by the Southern Regional Council and per diem at the rate (not yet decided) for consultant services will be paid. I am sorry I cannot indicate this rate at this time, but we expect it to be at a ~~we~~ reasonable figure

Answers to the attached list of questions are necessary for further planning and scheduling this service. Please return them to me immediately so that they can be tabulated and analyzed prior to this conference. Do not delay in returning this sheet because you cannot immediately answer all questions. Sent it back promptly and supplement it, if necessary, by letter as soon as you can fill in the gaps. Mail all communications to - -

MEMORANDUM

To: Dr. George S. Mitchell; Mr. Harold C. Fleming; Dr. C. H. Parrish; Mr. Fred B. Routh

From: John Hope II

Subject: Plans for Meeting of Prospective Consultants

At a conference in Milwaukee including Parrish, Routh, and Hope, it was agreed that a conference of consultants (after receiving their acceptance) should be held preferably no later than January 15, 1956, that certain materials should be prepared in advance of this meeting and circulated to the consultants for their thoughtful consideration in order that they might react to it at the meeting; that such materials should as far as possible be completed and sent to Hope far enough in advance of the conference date to allow "the team" to consider them together and make such adjustments, revisions, and additions as seem necessary before presenting them to the consultants.

Certain specific responsibilities were accepted by each of those present at this conference and the assistance of Mitchell and Fleming will be requested as our plans develop.

I am trying to get all basic materials in hand as soon as possible for the January meeting and to this end expect to confer with Dr. Robert Johnson next week on one phase. I would like to know from C. H. and Fred whether their materials can be expected by Christmas and if not when I may expect them.

There are certain types of information and guidance which the coordinator and the consultants will need in order to establish an efficient service which only you experienced insiders can give. Since it is quite probable that as the program develops more and more persons will be involved who have not had the advantages of the briefing given at the August meeting and before they assume the role of consultant for the Southern regional Council or other co-operating agencies, I believe it would be valuable to reduce the useful results of your experience to writing so that all subsequent consultants would have the benefit of your experience and wisdom in a fairly standardized form.

I can think of three major types of information which would be helpful to me as coordinator or consultant. Insofar as such information could be classified by sub-groups of states and individual states, e.g., hard-core, waiting, and desegregating states when comments for each state within these three categories, its value for briefing purposes would be increased.

These are listed as follows:

1. A clear picture of the major program needs at the state level. If the top two or three of these could be listed in descending order of importance it would be helpful.

2. The principal problems, barriers, obstacles, etc., to the attainment of program goals whether from internal or external sources. Again, if these can be rated roughly it would be helpful.

3. The major positive attributes, resources, conditions, etc., favoring the achievement of program goals and on basis of these and other considerations the specific program developments considered most urgent and also achievable in the immediate or near future.

It would be helpful to us to have information of these three types separately and independently from the points of view of the various staff and board member groups on the one hand and from the central staff point to view on the other. C. H. has agreed to analyze and evaluate the reports received from the state offices last summer and thus it is expected that the types of information mentioned, from the point of view of the state staffs and boards and other valuable information, will be forthcoming in this report.

If it is at all possible, I would like to have both C. H. and Fred independently give their reactions to items 1, 2, and 3 above on the basis of their personal experiences and reactions in the various states since they have probably been more closely associated with the field groups as a whole than anybody else except George who is probably too busy with other matters for this. For neophytes like myself, it would probably facilitate our comprehension of this rather complex material if these reports are framed in terms of the three group division (hard-core, waiting, desegregating) or some other more satisfactory division which you are much better able to make than I am. However, I would hope that the same classification can be used by C. H. and Fred (and any others who add to our stock of knowledge in this regard) so that the materials can be put together easily.

If any of this seems presumptuous or if my expectations are based upon error, please bear with me and accept the will for the deed. The only way to swim is to get in the water. I am depending heavily upon "the team" to see that I "swim" with you -- not drown.

I am leaving for Philadelphia and New York tomorrow and expect to be back in Nashville Thursday or Friday (December 15 or 16). May I hear from you. Then as soon as I have a clearer idea when all materials needed for the meeting of consultants will be ready, we can proceed with the setting of a definite date. If possible, I would like to be able to suggest two or three alternative dates to the consultants when I call them.
alternative I have dictated this memorandum to the soundscriber and am asking that it be typed and mailed without my reading it. If it is not clear I will be in Nashville and ready to assist in any way I can after December 15.

From: John Hope II

Subject: Plans for state workshops

I I am attaching a suggested draft of an initial letter which I propose to send to each state director and state chairman. This can be a memographed with the names and addresses filled in and should be mailed on Tuesday, January 31, if possible.

II I am also attaching a highly tentative schedule for state workshops for your consideration and candid criticism and subsequent adjustment. The main purpose of this schedule is to give you something to start from. From the dates suggested, you will realize that your suggestions should reach me at the earliest possible date, preferrably on or before Thursday February 2. As soon thereafter, as possible, I shall make contact with at least the first four or five organizations in whose state we wish to hold workshops and with the consultant team chosen for these in order to determine their ability of carrying out these plans. On basis of this information I will prepare a final schedule for our guidance in putting rush programs into operation at the earliest possible moment. Some of these contacts, no doubt, will be made by long distance telephoning in order to expedite matter.

III I suggest that Fred and Harold, and perhaps Florence Irving, determine the major points of information to be included in Briefing Statements regarding each state situation for use by the consultants relying as fully as possible on data already available in files of the Atlanta office and from staff located there. In this way, the process might be standarized and handled by Miss Irving in a more or less routine manner in chronological order of our needs. It might expedite matters if tentative rough draft was prepared by Miss Irving and then circulated to Fred, Harold, C. H., George and to me for any additions and changes that are needed. Then the final draft might be prepared for distribution to the consultants

IV I have just received a revised copy of the consultant expense statement form from Gabe which as I understand it is adjusted to fit the bookkeeping procedures now in use. This form is quite satisfactory to me and I suggest that you take a look at Gabe's copy and add your approval and make any further suggestions that seem necessary.

I expect to see Fred and C. H. in Nashville Monday, January 30th about these and related matters.

Suggested letter from

Assistant Director for Program to both State Directors and Chairmen

Dear _____:

My role in the SRC organization was indicated to you by Dr. Mitchell in his letter of December 30th, I believe.

For the last few weeks, my efforts have been directed primarily to getting better acquainted with the Council and to formulating with the assistance of other members of the central office staff, some tentative program plans, i.e., means by which the central office staff might help you to further increase the scope and efficiency of your program to the end that we together may breathe life and vitality into the lofty and democratic policies and goals of the Southern Regional Council in each of the twelve states in which it has affiliates. I am well aware that for some states such a possibility may seem remote at this moment when the opposition has the newspaper headlines and seems so defiantly determined to stay the trend toward a democractic South. However, I sincerely believe that in terms of historical perspective, they, not we, are on the defensive; that long range social, economic, and political forces as well as the foundations of legal sanction are now moving inexorably in our favor. Nevertheless, the speed and efficiency with which these constructive forces assert themselves in day-to-day intergroup practices within our communities and the extent to which costly, destructive counteractions can be avoided depend more than ever upon the effectiveness with which we play our role.

In a sense, this is the hour for which you and I have "trained" for many years (if not generations). For us the question of whether the SRC objectives can be attained is behind us. Our prime question is: how can the constructive democratic leadership which constitutes the boards and staffs of the several state SRC organizations affiliated best operate within the framework of SRC policy to bring about the "New South" which we seek with maximum efficiency and speed, and with a minimum of costly, unnecessary social conflict and interracial tension. Each state organization will have to appraise carefully and realistically its resources and the social terrain in which it must operate in answering this question with respect to its current program. Its plans needs to encompass projects aimed at immediate, short range, and long range objectives. In short, we must try to perceive clearly the "forest" dispite the (sometimes painful) fact that the individual "trees" seem to loom high and ominous above us. This, I fully realize, is not easy but it is urgently necessary. It is my candid belief that your dynamic leadership contribution during the next crucial twelve to eighteen months can be decisive in shaping the new patterns of Negro-White relationships in the South for many years to come. We may gain or lose a decade in the speed of social change during this fluid period.

We are tentatively formulating our plans to this end. We have employed for your (occasional) use a panel of nine highly qualified consultants trained in the disciplines of Social Science and having wide experience has practitioners in the field of intergroup relations to advice you in regard to program. Within this group will be found a variety of specialized competences which we hope to make available to you. Within the next eight to ten weeks we will make them available in teams of two each for a series of workshops for state Boards and staffs, in some six to eight states. In each of these, a team along with central staff members will be put at your disposal for a period of from one to one and a half days for a frank and open discussion (note lecture) of your program. The membership of each of these workshops is purposely confined to the board members and staffs of one state so that you may discuss your program plan, problems, etc. fully and specifically - - for your guidance, not for publication, Obviously, such a meeting should be scheduled at a time and place convenient for as large a number of board members as possible, particularly the executive committee, program committee, chairmen of other committees, and other key board members. Since several of the consultants are members of college and university faculties, the most convenient time for the majority is the week-end, e.g., Friday night and all day Saturday, or Saturday and Sunday. However, I shall try to meet your time preferences as closely as possible. You are the best judge of place for such a workshop.

Because of the number of states and consultants involved, we shall have to draw up a tentative date for each state workshop. We hope that the date selected for you will be convenient since this would expedite the completion of this initial project and free us for other efforts. However, if it is not, ~~do not hesitate to~~ let me know promptly, indicating suggested alternative dates so that we can re-schedule your workshop with a minimum of delay.

I cannot emphasize too strongly my hope that each workshop can be "tailored" to the specific needs of the state organization where it is held. It is hoped that the consultants will spend most of their time reacting to your questions and the statement of your problems, and that formal statements will be reduced to a bare minimum. Consequently, I am asking that you think through your program in the near future and indicate to me the brief outline of your present program, your principal problems, and the needs which you feel the consultant team (and central staff members) may fill during this brief period. This will give sharp and positive focus to our discussions.

We will try to brief the consultants in advance as far as possible but your statement in advance of the workshop is imperative.

Sincerely yours,

John Hope II

Memo to Harold Fleming
From: C. H. Parrish
Re.: SRC Consultant Program

Our conversation some days ago concerning the SRC consultant program prompts me to comment briefly on what I conceive to be its rationale.

At the risk of underlining the obvious, mention should be made of the superordinate-subordinate character of the relations between whites and Negroes in the United States. In the South this relationship has been crystallized by law. However, in other parts of the country where there are few discriminatory laws, the prescribed behavior patterns are generally recognized and observed. Segregation by statute (as pointed out in The Strange Career of Jim Crow) is of relatively recent origin but the status relationship itself goes back to the early Colonial period. It is small wonder that people brought up to accept the traditional pattern should find it difficult to reorder their relations in terms of equality.

The old committees on interracial cooperation never succeeded in making the shift in approach that would challenge directly a relationship that had for so long been taken for granted. SRC has struggled manfully with this problem and some progress has been made but among many of the state groups the old attitudes persist.

Because of its heritage and its essential nature SRC has relied heavily upon the "appeal to conscience" and the morale-building effect of the high class reporting of the "happy Story" through the pages of New South. There has been no real opportunity to provide people on the field with the specialized "know-how" so urgently demanded for dealing with concrete problems at the local level. And not always has the distinction between advocacy and professional service been sufficiently clear.

Another facet of SRC's problem is the difficulty of securing the services of qualified Negroes for top level, full-time staff positions. Whatever the reasons for it may be, the lack of Negro personnel in responsible regional jobs has hampered the Council's efforts to operate as an integrated agency. It is easier to teach by example than by precept.

The consultant program is a partial answer to all of these problems. With deliberate intent the consultant group has been overbalanced a little in favor of Negroes. Thus the status relationship is attacked by indirection by presenting the Negro expert in a unique relationship of equality with his white colleagues.

In their contacts with state boards and staffs the consultants act on the assumption that the people attending such an institute do not need conviction on the basic matter of desegregation but rather want advice on the best social techniques for achieving their goal. This has the wholesome effect of diverting attention from unproductive disputations at the ideological level to concrete problems of implementation.

As is true of most operations of this sort there is no adequate statistical measurement available of the results of the consultant service. However, those of us who have been intimately associated with it are convinced of its crucial importance. The initial involvement and continued interest of the consultants themselves constitutes an increasingly valuable asset to SRC and the whole South. Because of the consultants there has been more attention paid to the "soft spots" thus through concentrated efforts making more efficient use of limited resources. There is a clearer understanding of what needs to be done and more willing acceptance of responsibility for doing it. There have been several instances reported of individual consultants being called back to communities for specific jobs. This perhaps is the real test of worth.

CONSULTANTS FOR SRC STATE ORGANIZATIONS

COMPETENCIES:

A. Required:
1. Ability to quickly establish rapport with people.
2. Technical ability and skills in field of consultation.
3. Intimate knowledge of his area of state.

B. Desirable:
1. Experience in organisational work.
2. Professional training in the broad field of social sciences.
3. High degree of verbal ability.

PERSONALITY:

A. Required:
1. Committment to democracy (non-authoritarian).
2. Mature, integrated personality structure.

FUNCTIONS:

A. Communication and Information:
1. To serve as observer-recorder-reporter for state office.
2. To interpret program of SRC to area's "spark-plugs."
3. To keep abreast of developments in South through SRC publications, Southern School News, etc, etc.

B. Process:
1. To ferret out "spark-plugs" in area and involve them in state organization. (Future Board members, etc.)
2. To consult with state Executive Director and other consultants in planning state programs.
3. To work with state Executive Secretary in programs in specific area.
4. To assist state Executive Secretary in professional interpretation of program to state Board of Directors.
5. To keep finger on the pulse of the community he serves.
6. To help build a democratic climate of opinion in his area to prevent effectiveness of demagoguery.
7. To work for an increasing commitment and understanding of democratic process by Negro and white leadership.
8. To make himself and his services known and available to local officials, particularly public school people.
9. To assist local people who desire to inaugurate integrated democratic groups.
10. To assist people in thinking in terms of problem-solving rather than "togetherness for togetherness sake."

REGARDING: Evaluation of State Organizations

Perhaps the best approach to an evaluation of the State Organizations is to indicate my own personal acquaintance with the people involved in the initial stages of the new state groups. During the summer of 1954, I made visits to 10 of the 12 states in which we opperate with a view of stimulating reorganization. I did not visit Virginia and I made no effort to make state contacts in Georgia. My purpose was to find a nucleus in each state around which to build a Board of Directors which could later employ a staff. In passing it might be noted that State Staff directors had been selected for Georgia and Louisiana peior to my 1954 tour. Perhaps more should be said about this later.

The most persistent problem of reorganization was the difficulty of achieving a new prospective in light of the desegregation decree of the Supreme Court. Many of the people who had been connected with the Southern Regional Council and even earlier with the old Committee on Interracial Cooperation were more or less committed to a continuation of segregation and were concerned primarily with bettering the lot of negroes within the segregation pattern. Too often the attitude of paternalism was quite evident. Consequently, my efforts were directed, not only toward converting these people to a different point of view but also, toward involving new people who would accept responsibility for the work of the state.

When attention was later directed to the employment of a staff person, the problem was one of selection from available persons who had the necessary qualifications for the job. In some instances, in an effort to begin a full scale opperation at once, the staff person was chosen without deliberation. In one or two instances it was the first person who came along. It is understandable, therefore, that some mistakes were made and that the staff persons finally decided upon differed widely in training, experience, and concern for the work they were asked to do.

The difficulties became apparent very quickly. In some cases, the members of the boards were at odds with each other. There were instances in which the old SRC membership was completely bypassed in the formation of the new board and they became disgruntled. It was also the unfortunate tendancy for the board to feel that it had completely discharged its responsibility when it hired a staff person and turned over all the work to him. And, of course, there was the anticipated friction between a stubborn board and an aggressive director.

These problems, although recognized for the most part very early, were not readily resolved once the state directors had been hired. Consequently, there were crises of organization in two or three of the states. Most of the time from June 1954 to June 1955 was spent in dealing with these problems of organizational adjustment in the various states. Fred Routh and I made numerous visits for the purpose of meeting with the organizations in order to clarify the financial arrangements with the Atlanta office, to offer suggestions about persons to be hired, pointing out the gaps in representation on their boards and trying to give to these boards a continuing sense of responsibility even after a staff person had been hired. In August, 1955, we attempted to make an evaluation of the effectiveness of the state program. Requests for data were sent to:-- the directors and chairman of the state boards, state representatives on the SRC board and SRC board members residing in the state. The results were not particularly gratifying because of the failure on the part of board chairman, state representatives, and SRC board members to reply. We got complete coverage only from the state directors. Among the problems uncovered, however, were the following:-- Many of the boards were not representative either geographically, racially, or occupationally. Most of the time of the state directors is spent in organizing local groups, securing memberships, and other activities, either directly or indirectly, designed to raise funds. There was a lamentable neglect of program. It was this rather gloomy picture that in part suggested the need for a stronger guidance and program development from the Atlanta office.

Perhaps, with this background, it would be possible to give a brief personal reaction to the opperation of each state. In all cases the observations will not take into account changes in the state opperations during the last three months. I have had no recent contact with the situation in Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, or Virginia.

ALABAMA -- A strong religious influence. The staff director and seven out of nine white men on the board are Methodist ministers. In my opinion too much time has been devoted to the district organizations. There is some indication, too, that our districts are setting up programs which are not altogether consistent with the avowed adjustives of SRC. The members of the executive committee have a strong sense of responsibility and the executive director has been doing an effective job in counteracting the efforts of the Citizens' Councils. Recently a Negro Associate Director (half-time) has been employed.

ARKANSAS -- This is the nearest approach to a sound state opperation. The Board is representative both racially and occupationally, although there can be some improvement in the matter of geographical distribution. The Personnel Committee exercised great care in the selection of staff, and almost from the very beginning, two full time staff members have been employed.

FLORIDA -- The Florida staff was hired late this summer and it is perhaps too early to make an evaluation here.

GEORGIA -- Georgia has raised more money than any other state. Its board is perhaps too cumbersome to be effective. It contains a list board members which indludes a number of big names but for the most part they are persons who do not have the time to work on committees. The Georgia Committee has had a long tradition and bears the mark of the work of Mrs. Tilly. There are several fairly autonomous local committees in Georgia which same to be doing a good job.

KENTUCKY -- Kentucky has a Consultant Program which has been used with average success but there is a lack of consistent staff leadership. A problem will shortly arise when the present staff director's resignation becomes effective in January. The board is representative occupationally and racially but is too much concentrated in Louisville.

NORTH CAROLINA -- There has developed some lack of understanding between the board and executive director as to the proper method of proceedure. There is a tendancy now to concentrate attention on the areas in the state that seem the most willing to go ahead with desegration of the schools. There is some pessimism, however, because of the political pressures. Perhaps North Carolina illustrates better then any other state the difficulty of shifting from the paternalistic to an integrated approach in race relations.

SOUTH CAROLINA -- I have had no contact with South Carolina since early 1955. At that time the main problem was that of liaison with NAACP. I do not know how that matter has been resolved. This is another hard core state, and perhaps is closer to Mississippi then any of the others.

TENNESSEE -- After several false starts Tennessee, as you know, has inaugurated a consultant program which has permitted contacts with some thirty counties of the state. The board membership is heavily concentrated in the eastern part of the state. And there seems to be little chance of working out a basis for full cooperation with Memphis, the states metropolis.

TEXAS -- Texas has had difficulties because of almost continuous friction between the board and the executive director over matters of policy. The old elements on the board have maintained control up until recently and have made it difficult to achieve a representative group of people who would assume responsibility for making policy. A Negro Associate was hired this summer but has had little chance to show his capabilities.

VIRGINIA -- Virginia was not organized until July of 1955 and has been more or less under the direct supervision of Dr. Mitchell, himself.

* LOUISIANA -- The State Director was hired during the Spring of 1954 before the Louisiana board was organized. This has led to difficulties and several old SRC members have been alienated. There is a district organization but there is little evidence that the districts have started to opperate in any effective way.

MISSISSIPPI -- The work in Mississippi is of the listening-post variety political pressures being what they are. In a sense, Mississippi is a special case and there is no point in applying the standard criteria here.

MEMORANDUM

FROM: Fred B. Routh

SUBJECT: Evaluation of States for use by Consultants.

If we are to look at the Southern Region as it faces transition from a segregated society to a desegregated, and toward an integrated public life it will be helpful to divide the area into three categories: "Desegregating" states, "Waiting" states, and "Hard Core" states. In the following list the states are listed from those making most progress to those making least, within each category. Desegregating: Kentucky, Texas, Arkansas; Waiting: Florida, Tennessee, North Carolina, Virginia (almost hard core). Hard Core: Alabama, Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi. This establishes a sort of continuum on which rank has been based on reports from our state organizations, the press, and field observation by this writer. But we are interested here in the social scene only in so far as it affects the working efficiency of our state programs.

We shall examine each state and our resident organization under the following classifications: (1) Major Program Needs at State Level; (2) Principal Problems and Barriers to Attainment of Program Goals; and (3) Major Positive Attributes, Resources, etc. Favoring Achievement of Program Goals. Let us, then, to the states.

DESEGREGATING STATES

KENTUCKY:

(1) Major Program Needs:

The excellent Consultant Program under way in Kentucky needs closer coordination from a central office. There needs to be a clearer definition of the respective roles of Consultant and the Executive Director. A better understanding of how to seek invitations to the various communities is needed. Broader coverage of the committees of the state would be beneficial. (Generally speaking this group of Consultants has a good understanding of program development and execution. The board, too, is endowed with skilled persons in this field.)

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

There has been a constant turnover of executive professional personnel. There has been something of a contest for power on the board. The group has been confused with other agencies in the state. There was a clash of personalities between staff and certain board members.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

The Kentucky group is wealthy in skilled professional personnel both as Consultants and as Board members. A good understanding of Community organization is present. The Consultants are generally well accepted in the communities. The board is made up of mature individuals (with few exceptions). The state government has accepted the idea of desegregation. The state population seems willing to go along.

Kentucky looks like the most favorable state in which to bring about rapid compliance with the Supreme Court decision. Here we should be able to demonstrate in a semi-Southern scene what can be done to help communities accomodate themselves with the Supreme Court decision and to a more democratic society.

TEXAS:

(1) Major Program Needs:

There is need for specific program aids and plans to assist communities which are desegrating or are planning to do so. A better understanding of community organization is necessary on the part of the staff. The board needs to be brought up-to-date on the present operations of a Twentieth Century Human Relations Agency. There is need for developing a sensitivity in differentiating between and working in compliant and non compliant areas. There is need to develop a working relationship with other Human Relations Agencies.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

The very vastness and diversity of Texas is a great barrier. The board has been strongly maternalistic. The relationship between staff and board has not been satisfactory. The organization does not have the full confidence of the Negro nor the progressive white communities. The business of the organization has not been handled in a business like manner. The governor and the attorney general of Texas have been arch opponents of desegregation. Formation of white citizens councils.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

Much of Texas is in the process of desegregation. The Supreme Court of Texas has ruled money may be allocated to desegregating districts. The board has a new advisory group in Austin composed of leaders in labor, the churches, AFFC, NAACP, and others in this field. There is strong church backing for the Texas Commission. The Associate Director is an able young Negro attorney.

Texas, in many ways, because of its size and the diversity of the problems confronted in desegregation reflects the problems of the entire region; from areas that have desegregated to areas which are hard care. A well planned carefully executed program here would have great significance for the rest of the South.

ARKANSAS:

(1) Major Program Needs:

Specific programs and techiques in assisting districts to desegregate. The need for increased skill in working with school people. Good ongoing program, well thought out by highly competent board, and well administered by a very good staff.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

The barriers in Arkansas do not come from within the organization but from without. A sort of laissez faire attitude on the part of the state government. A "specialist" in Negro education in the state department of education who gives the outward signs of wanting to desegrate but who advocates extreme caution and stand patness. The eastern part of Arkansas -- the delta-- is comparable to upper Mississippi.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

Arkansas has an excellent board. It is aggressive, skilled, knows what it wants and pretty well how to get it. Contains prestige people who are willing to work for desegregation. The staff is integrated, works well together, and is composed of skilled people.

Arkansas, in so for as our resident councils go, in my opinion should be listed first on the continuum. It may well rank first in the number of communities which desegrate within the next year and a half.

WAITING STATES

FLORIDA:

(1) Major Program Needs:

There is need to develop skills motivating public opinion to bring about desegregation in specific communities. The board needs assistance in understanding what good program is. There is a need for tighter organization and functional application of the board. Need for increased skill in differentiating between and working in probable and improbable areas.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

The Board of Directors, though made up of outstanding individuals has yet to solidify into real group awareness. It is not broken up into functional committees. Outside influences, namely the hard core of the north central and western Florida and the Wait[illegible] and see attitude of even the most progressive areas tends to slow down the process and the effectiveness of the organization.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

A good staff which works well together on an integrated basis. Some outstanding board members who are skilled in the field of Human Relations or who are status people committed to desegregation. The Episcopal Church of South Florida committed to the program. Strong assistance from other Church groups. Decent newspaper support in Daytona Beach, St. Petersburg, and Miami. White state PTA advocated formation of interracial study groups on the local level.

Florida is a unique southern state. It is as old south as Tallahassee and Pensacola, as industrial as Jacksonville and Tampa and as jet-propelled as Miami and Miami Beach. It is a state where in some areas fairly rapid compliance should be expected and where in other areas the die hards may be expected to stand on the ramparts.

TENNESSEE:

(1) Major Program Needs:

Tennessee's board needs to better define the role of the Consultant program in their over all effort. There is a need to pull the board together so that there may be a continuing effort at planning. Special program planning development for districts which wish to integrate needs attention.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

The board has an internal problem of not having solidified as a group. It has been difficult to obtain functioning committees. The chairman does not feel secure with some members of the board. Western Tennessee is an external factor that makes work difficult. The Consultants do not have a sufficient knowledge of Negro personnel.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

The Consultant group is well skilled in community organization and in Social transition know-how. Consultants have the confidence of many school superintendents in east Tennessee. The state government of Tennessee is not defiant of the Supreme Court decision.

The full state has had long experience with the TVA and unionism. Its governor has Vice Presidential aspirations. There is a spirit of moderation in Tennessee that could be used toward fruitful ends. The Chattanooga Times is a spokesman for that which is best in the South.

NORTH CAROLINA:

(1) Major Program Needs:

There is a rather great need in North Carolina in all phases of program development with the exception of public relations and the formation of local councils. The board needs to be brought more up-to-date on developments and current program in the field of Human Relations. The staff, though skilled, seems to lack enthusiasm. Special program plans for Mountain Counties should be developed.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

The North Carolina Council seems to be suffering from undulant fever -- or the equivalent thereof. The state government led by Governor Hodges has been opposing the Supreme Court decision and advocating voluntary segregation and threatening to cut off funds from districts which desegregate. The board has not yet pulled itself together as a working group.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

There are numerous skilled persons on the board of directors. The The organization enjoys good public relations with the press. The executive director has considerable skill in working with ministers and religiously motivated people.

North Carolina has had the reputation of being the most progressive of the Southern states. This reputation has not been fully utilized in defining the situation for North Caroleans. The University of North Carolina has been one of the real intelectual contributors to the progressiveness of the new south.

VIRGINIA:

(1) Major Program Needs:

Virginia's program is one of the more comprehensive. Generally speaking it is well thought out and well executed. The use of another part time associate director would be helpful or perhaps the use of Consultant services.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

In the old domain the principal problems are external. They center around the governor and the state government, both controled by the Byrd machine.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

The Virginia Council has an excellent staff and a very fine board. The staff works as an integrated team and has won the respect and confidence of both the Negro and progressive white communities. The board operates as a group and has considerable knowledge in the field of Human Relations.

Virginia varies from places willing to,or not opposed to, desegregation to the eastern shore and down state which is hard core in nature. The real problem is to take the state government off the backs of those communities which will proceed.

HARD CORE STATES

ALABAMA:

(1) Major Program Needs:

There is a need for program development in community organization. To strengthen the determination on the part of the board to proceed on more than the religious basis. The executive director is skilled above average and is well accepted in the state. There is a serious question of what can and should be done in a hard core state where the governor at least gives strong indications of liberalism.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

The board is composed very largely of ministers -- Methodist ministers -- which is not necessarily a dettriment in Alabama, but a limiting factor in terms of representing a cross section of the state. The board is almost always impatient to get through meetings and doesn't give adequate consideration to some of the problems faced. There is a strong White Citizen's Councils movement in the state and Birmingham is probably the "meanest" big town in the south.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

A board and staff that is deeply morally dedicated to the equality of mankind as children of God. Staff and some board members who are skilled in dealing with people and who are aware of conditions in Alabama.

Alabama enjoys a Governor who has a long record of New Deal. In the north there is strong TVA influence. In the south, the Catholic Church is powerful, in the Mobile area. Our resident organization has spent considerable time organizing the state and the districts, some of which are beginning to grow and to flourish.

LOUISIANA:

(1) Major Program Needs:

The board needs to be pulled together so that it can give consideration to program development. A work shop was held for this purpose but little tangible results have been forthcoming. An over all evaluation of what the organization has been doing and what it should now be doing is needed. The staff is not integrated at this point.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

Old SRC members of the board feel they have been ignored. The board has not been pulled together as a group. The executive director is only fairly well skilled in this field. The state government is unalterably opposed to desegregation. The board has been rather badly split because of personality conflicts.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

The executive director is deeply dedicated to desegregation. There are three going, though not strong, district organizations. New Orleans, Lake Charles, and Baton Rouge. The Arch Bishop, hence the Catholic Church, is active on our side in the scrape. New officers have just been elected in Louisiana and a new, highly skilled advisory committee has been appointed, but they have yet to hold a meeting.

Louisiana varies from a continential influence in the New Orleans region to a red-neck Delta influence up state. The problem here is to take the state government off the back of the down state areas where the Catholic Church could use its influence to help bring about desegregation.

GEORGIA:

(1) Major Program Needs:

Considerable time has been spent in speech making to large civic organizations and to school assemblies. Both good but there needs to be considerable program development for activities and other phases of this work. The Georgia committee was active in defeating the Cook proposed ban on teachers who belonged to the NAACP. Part of their effort obviously must be devoted to defensive tactics. Major program question is what can such an organization do in a state where the government and probably the majority of the voting population are opposed to desegregation and any attempts toward desegregation.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

The board has not felt a group cohesiveness by in large. The executive director has not been able to have the board assume responsibility as functioning committees. Externally,we have Marvin Griffin, Eugene Cook, Herman Talmange and Roy Harris, what more could be said?

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

The executive director is president emeritus of a well recognized college and a former governor of Rotary, has access to many people in the power structure and is difficult to attack. He is committed to desegregation. The associate director is a skilled Sociologists who has the confidence of the Negro community. Other attributes might be listed as the governors and the attorney generals considerable ineptness in choosing issues on which to fight.

There are no bright areas in Georgia. There are few areas in fact where the sun of the twentieth century is allowed to shine.

SOUTH CAROLINA:

(1) Major Program Needs:

There is need for developing more skills in community organization and in working in the small nubbin of mountain where progress may be possible.

Over all program re-evaluation and future program planning would be most helpful.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

The most of the problems and barriers in South Carolina are exterior. The governor and the majority of the population seem unalterably opposed to desegregation. There has been strong organization of Citizens Councils, and economic reprisal has been fairly widely used. Fear on both the part of Negroes and whites in the down state area is evident.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

The integrated staff works well together, has access to state wide and local conferences of women's groups, some educational groups, ministerial groups, etc. One other considerable attribute is Rock Hill and the director of the Catholic Committee of the South and several highly vocal, deeply dedicated board members.

It should not be forgotten that South Carolina is the home of Judge Waring, as well as Jimmy Byrns, and George Timmerman.

MISSISSIPPI:

(1) Principal Problems and Barriers:

The basic program question in Mississippi is what can a Human Relations Agency which can not engage in litigation or legislation do? The entire program of the Mississippi Council really needs re-evaluation and skillful planning for more effective work. Special assistance in digging out substantiated facts on cases on economic reprisals and physical violence and the release of these facts to national news sources could be very helpful.

(2) Principal Problems and Barriers:

Internal: Wide schism between staff and board. State chairman and executive director often at logger-heads. A staff not well skilled in community organization nor public relations. Inadequate white representation on staff. Also, as the state chairman says "In a state that is 95% protestant, the leadership of the Council is a Jewish Rabbi and a Catholic Monseigneur."
External:- The situation in Mississippi is comparable to Nazzi Germany about 1934-35. There is considerable fear even for personal safety in both the Negro and the white communities. This has been heightened by four notorious killins and the apparent inability or unwillingness of the state government to act.

(3) Major Positive Attributes:

The deep dedication of the little band of brave souls on the board of directors to desegregation and Hodding Carter and William Faulkner and the Methodist ladies.

Mississippi is without a doubt the most difficult state by far in which to work in this field. It is an area that is suffering from a social blight of the eighteenth century. The chance for violence is high. The ability of the state government to deal fairly with the problems involved is low.

Besides the problems which have been outlined, state by state, there is the over all problem of finances which are extremely serious for some of the state organizations and somewhat serious for all. In working with the state organizations, the Central Office has continually stressed that Fund raising is primarily a function of the state board and its finance committee, that the chief focus of the staff must be program. It has also been stressed that if effective program is developed and maintained, adequate resources will be forthcoming from the communities which are served. People will invest in something that is demonstrably worthwhile.

Subject: The American Case Against Segregation - A Reply to Thomas R. Waring

Section I

Within the past year increasingly successful attempts have been made by white Southerners to present the case for the maintenance of segregated schools in terms which are acceptable to reasonable white Northerners. The most effective of these Southern spokesmen has been Hodding Carter, who has published such articles in Reader's Digest, Saturday Evening Post, and Look Magazine. The most recent expression of this "moderate" white Southerners' point of view in a national publication is found in the article by Thomas R. Waring, published in the January 1956 issue of Harper's Magazine. There is some evidence that this reasonable pro-segregationist approach has influenced the editorial opinion of some of the more conservative national publications.

Mr. Waring, like other spokesmen for the "reasonable white Southerner," starts from the assumption that there are valid and compelling reasons - described by him as "facts" - which make it impossible for white "Southerners to accept the desegregation of the public schools." He maintains that white Southerners of good-will, who are in the vast majority, "favor uplift of the Negro," but fear that this uplift "is being forced at too fast a pace." He also insists that white Southerners resent the interference with the sovereignty of their states in their right to maintain segregated schools; and, he adds, that the Southerner believes that "he is better equipped by experience to cope with race problems than people from other regions."

These opinions are not novel. In the context of Mr. Waring's article, however, some of them are clearly inconsistent with other statements which he makes, and their lack of relevance to the basic issue of the Constitutional rights of Negro Americans appears to be quite clear. Undoubtedly there must be many Southern whites of good-will who favor the uplift of the Negro people. More pertinent questions, however, are: How effective have these people been in protecting the rights of the Negroes; and how active or open were they in supporting the Negro in his struggle for the equalization of teachers' salaries, equalization of schools, voting privileges, and adequate graduate and professional state-supported education.

The argument of "too fast a pace" is also not uncommon, but again leaves many relevant questions unanswered: What is a desirable pace for the righting of an injustice? To what extent can those who are not the immediate victims of the injustice be expected to arrive at the same judgment concerning the rate of change which the victims believe to be necessary? It is precisely because of these expected differences in opinion that it is necessary to resort to the more objective arena of the Federal courts.

The sovereignty of the states in matters of education is not in itself at issue in the discussion of the problem of segregated schools. More pertinent to this problem is the issue of whether the states have the "right" to perpetrate injustice and inequality upon some of ~~its~~ their citizens. In its May 17, 1954 decision, the United States Supreme Court answered this question clearly by stating:

> Such an opportunity (for education), where the state has undertaken to provide it, is a right which must be made available to all on equal terms.

Mr. Waring's assertion that the Southerner believes that he is "better equipped by experience to cope with race problems than people from other regions" is made without supporting evidence. Seen in the light of his discussion of the question of the sovereignty of states, it is necessary to point out that problems of racial justice in the South are no longer matters of regional concern, but have tremendous national and international implications. Furthermore, there is no evidence that the Southern states in and of themselves have voluntarily contributed to the progress of the Negro or have stimulated or encouraged economic, political, or educational equality.

It is of ironic significance that the one extensive quotation cited by Mr. Waring in support of the "Liberal" Southerner's position was made by an Atlanta editor in 1888. Reliance upon the position considered liberal 70 years ago in an article published in 1956 is in itself evidence of the time lag in this type of thinking which seeks to understand and deal with contemporary problems in terms of the conditions and perspective of the past. This may well be the essential weakness and futility of the position of those "reasonable" white Southerners who seek to justify or explain the continuation of segregation in the modern world; namely, that segregation and other forms of racism are not compatible with the economic, industrial, technological, political, and international forces of the middle of the 20th Century.

Section II

Under the heading of "cultural differences" Waring lists the following reasons for the maintenance of segregated schools in the South:

1. That Negro children are not equal to white children in health and cleanliness;

2. That the home environment of Negroes is inferior to that of whites;

3. That the marital and sex habits of the Negro are inferior and more primitive than those of whites;

4. That there is a high incidence of crime among Negroes;

5. That the Negro child is retarded in intellectual level and achievement compared with the white child.

If one accepts, for purposes of discussion, Waring's assertions on these points, they still do not justify the maintenance of schools segregated on the basis of race. It is agreed that the "facts" which he presents do not reflect innate racial differences. They, therefore, must be interpreted as indications of the detrimental consequences of past segregation and the general inequality and discrimination associated with racism.

In view of the meretricious effectiveness and the emotional appeal of the specific points raised by Waring, it is necessary to answer each point separately:

1. Health

Waring maintains that Negro parents are not as careful, on the average, as their white neighbors in looking after the health and cleanliness of their children, and that the incidence of venereal diseases is much greater among Negroes than among whites. After admitting that statistics to document this statement are difficult to obtain, he nonetheless cites statistics from South Carolina for the year 1952-53 which purport to show that while 1.3% of the white persons examined were found to have syphilis, an average of 9% of the Negroes examined had this disease.

Waring did not state that these percentages applied to Negro and white children; but he nonetheless concludes that fastidious white parents "just don't want to take risks of any kind with their children." He presented no evidence to prove that a disproportionate number of Negro children are contaminated with contagious venereal diseases or that these diseases may be communicated to white children in a school setting.

It is now clearly understood by public health officials that communicable diseases are not to be understood or dealt with primarily in racial terms. These diseases are related to socio-economic status, overcrowded housing, and other social problems which are aggravated by problems involved in segregated living. Furthermore, white children and white adults are not immunized against these diseases by rigid patterns of segregation in the schools. Certainly, necessary and prevalent contacts with Negroes in the role of servants or workers provide greater opportunity for the transmission of communicable disease.

Utilization of advances in medicine and public health and a well-organized school health program for the benefit of the entire community should provide protection for all children from dangerous communicable diseases. Non-segregated schools will necessarily have to maintain the same health facilities and safeguards that are now maintained in any well-run school - and unfortunately not provided in the majority of segregated Negro schools. As the economic and social conditions of the Negro improve, and as the public health facilities available to the entire community are also made available to Negroes, the incidence of certain diseases among Negroes will decrease.

2. Home Environment

Waring contends that the home environment and cultural background of Negro children is different in many ways from that of white children. He states that the relationship between whites and Negroes is still generally that of the master and the servant and the boss and the laborer. While he recognizes the emergence of a middle-class among Negroes, he believes that this group is small and in the most "unenviable" position of all since they are not accepted by whites and have progressed beyond the cultural level "of the vast bulk of their own people."

Aside from the stereotyped generalizing which suggests that all whites are basically superior to all Negroes culturally, economically, and in home environment -delusions of group aristocracy - Waring's discussion of this point reveals the basic inconsistency of his whole approach. On the one hand he maintains that white Southerners of good-will favor the uplift of the Negro and that the Negro should qualify himself fully for association with "the white man's company"; while on the other hand he betrays the fact that even if the Negro were to raise his cultural and economic level to a point acceptable to whites, that this would not lead to "the white Southerner's acceptance of non-segregation." He rejects the idea that the admission of "a few well-scrubbed and polished colored children of cultivated parents" may be an opening wedge for integration in the schools by stating that "this would be no more acceptable to the colored people than to the whites." He insists upon a continuation of segregation even among middle-class Negroes by suggesting "private schools for prosperous Negroes as for prosperous whites." This point of view clearly reveals the intransigence of the pro-segregationists and the fact that they really want no part of non-segregation. The issue of cultural differences and inferior home environment of the average Negro as a reason for maintaining segregation is revealed to be spurious.

3. Marital Habits and Sexual Looseness

Waring opens his introduction of the problem of marital habits and sexual morals of the Negro by again admitting that "statistics are not readily available, for obvious reasons..." He maintains, however, that on the average "one Southern Negro child in five is illegitimate," and that even among Negroes who observe marriage conventions, "illegitimacy has little if any stigma."

His position is revealed in its essential inconsistency when he, on the one hand, discusses the "more primitive view of sex habits" found among Negroes, and, on the other hand, is forced to recognize that extra-legal inter-racial sex relationships were "due largely to lustful white men seeking out acquiescent Negro women..." Certainly these "lustful white men" developed their lust and "primitive view of sex habits" in a rigidly segregated society.

Problems of sex and inter-racial marriages were not at issue and do not appear to be relevant to the struggle for racial justice and equality before the law. The fear of social and sexual mingling among races, understandable though it may be in a segregated society, cannot be offered as a justification for the continued denial of the full citizenship rights of any group or individual. Social relations and marriage are always matters of personal choice and decision. These intimate aspects of inter-personal relationships cannot and should not be legislated and were not involved in the judicial decisions preventing the states from segregating children in public schools solely on account of their race.

A confusion of the issues of citizenship rights of the Negro with problems of personal, social, and sexual relations may reflect, among other things, the anxiety on the part of certain whites that if the barriers imposed by the state against equality of treatment for the Negro were to be removed, then the whites themselves would not be able to exercise personal restraint and control in the expression of positive feelings for Negroes. In a curious sense these types of arguments may be viewed as an attempt on the part of individuals to have the state deny equality of citizenship rights to Negroes in order to protect whites from the consequences of their own confused, mixed, and ambivalent feelings toward Negroes. The rights of Negroes, however, cannot be denied on the implicit grounds that whites might find them acceptable if the barriers are removed.

4. Crime

In his discussion of crime, Waring maintains that crime in the South has been more prevalent among Negroes than among whites and that much of the outbreak of crime and juvenile delinquency in Northern cities is due to the influx of the Negro population. Again he does not present the evidence or statistics upon which he bases these assertions.

The problem of differential definition and the meaning of crime statistics according to race has long concerned objective criminologists. The ease with which Negroes are arrested and convicted for minor infractions, which under certain circumstances would be over-looked among whites, certainly has been observed and must be taken into account in any evaluation of racial factors and crime.

Students of the psychological consequences of segregation have recognized that one of its most obvious manifestations among Negroes is an increase in hostility toward whites and toward other Negroes. This may well, under certain circumstances, express itself in delinquent and criminal behavior. Again, therefore, the discussion of crime among Negroes must be seen as at least in part a consequence of segregation rather than as a justification for continuing segregation.

Waring makes the blanket statement: "Maintaining order is a first concern of Southerners." This statement must be scrutinized in the light of his own implicit admission that conservative, law-abiding Southern whites are helpless in their fear "that hatred and bloodshed would increase without separation of the races." He supports this fear by the warning that "The thin tolerance of the ruffian and lower elements of the white people could erupt into animosity and brutality if race pressure became unbearable." He warns further that in this riotous bloodshed it will be "Negroes' blood which will flow for the most part." Certainly it is difficult to reconcile these dire predictions and the inevitability of racial lawlessness among the lower elements of white Southerners with the stability of the government of these sovereign states whose leaders are concerned with the maintenance of law and order. Furthermore, it might be germane to point out that the hatred, violence, and bloodshed described by Waring are more likely to occur under conditions of racial segregation or in the transition from segregation to non-segregation than under conditions of equality of the races.

In his anticipation of racial disturbances associated with desegregation in the public schools Waring states that such disturbances would occur "first among pupils themselves, and later by enraged parents." Systematic studies of the desegregation process show that there is no evidence that prolonged racial disturbances associated with the desegregation of schools ever occur spontaneously among the pupils themselves. Whenever there has been such trouble among the students, it has been found that these disturbances were initiated and encouraged by adults.

5. Intellectual Development

Waring maintains that "colored children are about two grades behind the whites in attainment..." He insists that the integration of Negro and white children will place an excessive burden on "a single generation of white children," and that, "while they are rubbing off white civilization onto the Negro children, Negro culture will also rub off onto the whites." Again the sense of Waring's argument is that one of the consequences of past segregation - academic retardation of the Negro child should be used to justify continued segregation. The lack of validity of this argument is apparent and is clearly illustrated by the fact that in the legal fight against segregated schools some of the states argued that the Negro child was not being harmed by being required to attend all-Negro schools. Now that this point is no longer at issue before the courts, the proponents of segregation not only admit this intellectual damage resulting from past segregation, but attempt to use it in support of continued segregation.

Many generations of Negro children have borne the brunt of the educational and psychological damage inherent in their attendance in segregated schools. There is no evidence that a single generation of white children will suffer any permanent damage as a consequence of attending well-regulated, non-segregated schools.

Existing psychological evidence obtained from the research of such outstanding psychologists as Otto Klineberg reveals that when Negro children are transferred from segregated schools to non-segregated shcools with higher educational standards they tend to make up their academic deficiency within a few years. More recent evidence involving older children shows that Negro children of superior intellectual ability who attend inferior segregated high schools are able to overcome their academic deficiency during the first college year and compete successfully in northern interracial colleges. It is clear, therefore, that the academic handicap resulting from segregated education is not a permanent one if the child is provided with an opportunity for an education in a non-segregated school with high educational standards. Under these conditions there is evidence that the Negro child benefits and no evidence that the white child is disadvantaged.

Section III - Summary and Conclusions

The latter part of Waring's article is devoted to a general castigation of the role of the NAACP in the struggle of the Negro for racial justice and equality. Waring maintains that until the school question became agitated in recent years, race relations in the South "on the whole were good"; that the leadership in this racial crusade comes from outside of the South and is sparked by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; that if the schools were integrated, Negro school teachers would be displaced by whites; and that Negroes in general are not eager for mixed schools "so long as the schools for Negroes are adequate." These arguments, too, are not new and probably reflect a perspective of race relations which is tolerable and acceptable for some "reasonable" white Southerners. The question, however, is the extent to which they are compatible with the actual facts and the social reality which the South faces today.

In asserting that race relations in the South were good up until the agitation for non-segregated schools, Waring takes the position that good relations are synonymous with the Negroes' acceptance of the status quo. From another point of view one could argue that such acceptance in the face of the reality of injustice is evidence of the poorest type of race relations and synonymous with social stagnation. Social progress, on the other hand, necessarily brings with it symptoms of tension, disturbance, and inevitable transitional difficulties. These are the concomitants of progress and the indications of an eventual bettering of the substance of race relations.

The NAACP is a convenient target or scapegoat for those who are disturbed by the insistent demand of the Negro for his full citizenship rights. It is true that the national headquarters of the NAACP are in New York City. It is equally true, however, and should be known by all, that the role of the NAACP in the school segregation cases and in any other area of its activities is determined exclusively by the degree to which the Negroes in a given community initiate a case and seek and invite the participation of the NAACP in the quest for justice. Under no circumstances does or can the national NAACP initiate a case prior to the desire or the demand of the Negro citizens of a given community.

The argument that Negro teachers would lose their jobs in integrated schools must be evaluated in the light of the national problem of a general shortage of competent teachers, which is no less acute in the South. Certainly, in the transition for a system of segregated to non-segregated schools in a given community there will be questions of the most efficient utilization of teaching personnel. In an attempt at solution of these problems there may be instances in which less competent and professionally qualified Negro teachers will be displaced by more competent Negro or white teachers; presumably, also, there will be cases in which less qualified and competent white teachers might be displaced by more competent and qualified Negro and white teachers. If, however, there are cases of discriminatory and punitive discharge of Negro teachers, these cases will have to be brought to and decided within the halls of the Federal courts.

The assumption that Negroes in general are not eager for mixed schools, but would settle for adequate Negro schools, is one which may be seriously questioned in the light of the social tensions, potential disturbances, and worsening of race relations which Waring himself so graphically describes. If the Negro people on the whole were content to repudiate the clear decision of the United States Supreme Court, which maintained that separate educational facilities can never be equal, then there would be no agitation on their part for non-segregated schools. They would passively accept the pious and belated offers of even the most backward states to "equalize" the physical facilities of Negro schools, It has become clear to almost every Negro who is aware of the problem that it is not only psychologically but economically impossible for the Negroes to have separate schools that are equal. This is particularly true in those states in which there is the maximum amount of resistance to the Supreme Court's decision. A dual school system in these states would necessarily be at the expense of the Negro schools. The fact is that there is no possibility of compromise on this issue without continuing the hardships on the Negro children or imposing additional and new hardships on white children.

Section IV - What Has the Supreme Court Decided?

In presenting the hope that Negroes will accept voluntarily continued segregation, Waring leans on Judge John J. Parker's interpretation of the May 17, 1954 decision of the United States Supreme Court. In this interpretation

Judge Parker states:

> It (The United States Supreme Court) has not decided that the states must mix persons of different races in the schools... Nothing in the Constitution or in the decision of the Supreme Court takes away from the people freedom to choose the schools they attend. The Constitution, in other words, does not require integration. It does not forbid such segregation as occurs as the result of voluntary action. It merely forbids the use of governmental power to enforce segregation.

A further interpretation of the meaning of the Supreme Court's decision which Parker does not give, but which might be relevant to an evaluation of many of the issues raised by Waring, is that the United States Supreme Court, in its May 17, 1954 decision, did not forbid the states from segregating its pupils in state supported public schools on the basis of health, home environment, marital status, legitimacy or illegitimacy of students, criminal or delinquent behavior, and level of intellectual functioning. Nothing in that decision prevents a state from setting up schools for children with or without communicable or venereal diseases; or setting up schools for children from broken homes or who are adjudged legitimate or illegitimate; nothing in the decision forbids the state from setting up schools in terms of intellectual level of students. Some groups of educators or welfare workers might wish to test the constitutionality of these forms of segregated schools when and if they are established.

The present decision, however, clearly, specifically, and only forbids the state from setting up schools for children "solely on the basis of race." This application of the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution means that all explanations, rationalizations, techniques, devices, and subterfuges which result in racially segregated schools are unconstitutional. If a state desires to protect the health of the 98% of the white children whose parents do not have syphilis, it must equally protect the health of the 91% of the Negro children whose parents do not have syphilis by setting up, if it so desires, schools for those Negro and white children whose parents have syphilis. If the state desires to protect and nurture the cultural and intellectual potentials of those white children from higher cultural and intellectual backgrounds, then it must equally and without separation protect and nurture the cultural and intellectual potentials of those Negro children from similar cultural and intellectual backgrounds by setting up schools attended by Negro and white children of similar cultural and intellectual backgrounds and potentials. Anything short of this is a clear violation of the supreme law of the United States as interpreted by the United States Supreme Court and is therefore illegal. Widespread illegality, rationalized or not, is anarchy - a government by whim and prejudice rather than a government by law. No amount of "reasonable" or emotional arguments and explanations can obscure this basic fact.

Subject: A Review of More and Less Effective Actions in Intergroup Relations

In American intergroup relations today, an increasingly great interest and emphasis is being directed toward determing what is effective action and toward attempting to minimize wasted motion. Part of America's increasing sophistication about racial problems involves a thorough knowledge of the best way of utilizing existing resources and techniques. Customary and conventional modes to taking action are more and more being re-examined and, in some cases, discarded in favor of newer and more imaginative methods. Some things that are known about more and less effective action in intergroup relations will be considered here.

In advance, we state a warning: The question of effectiveness is the "$64,000 Question" in contemporary America, and if any individual practitioner in race relations asks us how he can be optimally effective in his own specific program from day to day, we must answer modestly but cautiously that we just don't know.

But the studies of social scientists and the experience of intergroup relations practioners are adding greatly to our knowledge. We now feel that we can present a few general principles, suggestions and diagrams, that might at least enlarge the perspective and general knowledge of the person working in the race relations field. In the hope that these suggestions might add to a person's general ability to cope with his specific community problems, we will discuss the following general areas:

A. Social scientists believe it is more effective to work toward changing discriminatory patterns of behavior than to concentrate on changing individual prejudicial attitudes.

B. Social scientists are evolving a new battery of propositions on race relations that the practitioner may find helpful.

C. There are more and less effective practitioners in intergroup relations, whose characteristics may be spelled out in detail.

D. There are more and less effective action techniques, whose merits should be assessed in terms of their probable impact in a given community.

E. There are more and less effective ways of utilizing each action technique.

F. There are certain "specifics" that each effective practioner should know.

G. There is a variety of possible alternative actions in each area of segregation and discrimination.

H. The individual can add to his general effectiveness by learning to live the effective personal life in intergroup relations.

Recognizing the highly tentative nature of these propositions and suggestions, we nevertheless request that the reader consider them carefully, asking himself whether they are meaningful, or would "hold water" in his own community.

A. Social scientists conclude that it is more effective to change patterns than to change attitudes.

American thinking on race relations has long been influenced by the theories of social science. Possibly the best known American sociologist of the 19th century was William Graham Sumner, who had a gloomy and pessimistic view of the possibility of effecting positive change in race relations. He is best known for his references to such things as "the absurd attempt to make the world over," "the tide will not be changed by us," "stateways cannot change folkways," and "you cannot legislate against the mores." This, when he applied it to race relations in the South, indicated that the relations between whites and Negroes were static and could not be altered by social action.

Social scientists have since modified their pessimism considerably, spurred on chiefly by Gunnar Myrdal who vigorously expressed "grave skepticism" toward Sumner's views and pointed out the bias in American social science "against all attempts to intervene in the social process by legislation." However, some social scientists maintained the view that it is necessary to change individual prejudicial attitudes before actual racial behavior would change. But more recently, social scientists who have actually looked at the evidence of change in American race relations, are beginning to take the opposite view. Here are some examples:

(Dr. Gordon Allport, at Harvard) "Turning now to social programs...there is first of all considerable agreement that it is wiser to attack segregation and discrimination than to attack prejudice directly."

(Dr. Robert MacIver, at Columbia) "Wherever the direct attack is feasible, that is, the attack on discrimination itself, it is more promising than the indirect attack, that is, the attack on prejudice itself. It is more effective to challenge conditions than to challenge attitudes or feelings."

(Dr. Kenneth Clark, at City College of New York) "...Desired changes in the behavior of individuals and groups can be brought about by a change in the social situation in which they are required to function....Some of the examined evidence suggests that compatible changes in attitudes and motivation may occur as a consequence of the changed situation and changed behavior".

(Cornell University Intergroup Relations Study) "Major changes in individual prejudices occur most quickly and thoroughly from exposure to social interaction in a new social environment rather than from information and exhortation alone."

These conclusions are supported by other social scientists, such as Milton Gordon and John Roche at Haverford College, Dietrich Reitzas and Joseph Lohman at the University of Chicago, and John P. Dean and Alex Rosen at Cornell University. The future thinking of the American layman may become strongly affected by these studies of sociological evidence, indicating the desirability of attacking discriminatory practices as well as, or rather than, prejudicial individual attitudes "in a vacuum." The reader might ask himself what practical implications this point of view has in his own community.

B. Other social science propositions on race relations.

We will not detail the numerous social science propositions here. The job of pulling them together and systematizing them still remains for some thorough analyst to do. We seek here merely to indicate that they exist, to offer some brief examples, and to urge the practitioner to ask himself whether they are consistent with or contrary to his own past experience. First we cite five of the summary principles suggested by Robert MacIver in his book, The More Perfect Union.

---Rally to the cause of national welfare and unity rather than to particular groups.

---Attacks on discrimination along several fronts are more effective than giving priority to a single strategy.

---The primary business of strategy is to explore the weaker points and lines of least resistance of the discriminatory forces.

---Appropriate leadership must be recruited from the great potential forces that can be rallied to fight discrimination.

---Minority groups have an essential part to play in the conquest of the discrimination to which they are exposed.

A succinct and concise book on the "how-to-do-it" of integration has recently been published by the University of Chicago press. It is A Manual of Intergroup Relations by John P. Dean and Alex Rosen, and it presents 27 propositions on racial change, drawn from careful study of successful integration experiences. Some sample propositions from this book are as follows:

Proposition 5: Fullest minority participation in planning policy and program involves the participation of minority persons with insight into minority problems, skills in social relationships with persons of different social and ethnic status, articulateness in discussing minority-majority relations, and the emotional poise to handle touchy subjects and situations without becoming bitter or hostile.

Proposition 9: Leaders who control the operating practices of an institution or social enviroment can establish intergroup policies and practices for that environment within a wide range of community customs...

Proposition 10. Desegregation that proceeds by firm and decisive steps backed by the responsible authorities is more readily accepted and taken for granted than a halting desegregation that appears unsure of itself.

Proposition 16: Interaction in a favorable environment generally leads to friendship formation between majority-and minority group persons, regardless of the level of disengaged prejudice in the individual.

Proposition 23: Social conflict on an intergroup relations issue, if successfully resolved, usually leads to a further movement toward better intergroup relations.

A final example of principles on the process of desegregation and integration might be summarized from Kenneth Clark's monograph on Desegregation: An Appraisal of the Evidence. After reviewing hundreds of examples of successful desegregation, Dr. Clark concludes that the accomplishment of successful desegregation with a minimum of social disturbance depends upon the following five factors: (a) A clear and unequivocal statement of policy by authorities; (b) firm enforcement of and persistence in the execution of this policy by authorities; (c) a willingness to deal with violations by resort to the law and strong enforcement action; (d) a refusal by authorities to resort to subterfuge or other evasions of the policy; (e) an appeal to the individuals involved in terms of moral or democratic principles.

Other sources of general principles on race relations might be cited. The Governing of Men, by psychiatrist-anthropologist Alexander Leighton, contains numerous principles of government for the administrator, drawn from experience in the Japanese-American relocation center. Robin Williams' The Reduction of Intergroup Tension, contains 102 propositions summing up the best of social science knowledge on subjects like tension and conflict, individual prejudice, the minority community, and propositions for successful change in intergroup relations. Robert Johnson's The Nature of the Minority Community suggests hypotheses on raising the action potential of the American Negro community. These materials are easy to obtain; a harder task looms when the practitioner seeks to translate the general statements into specific actions in his community. However, they might serve as a valuable adjunct to his own tried-and true-experiences.

C. There are more and less effective intergroup practioners whose characteristics may be described.

In large part, the success or failure of a given intergroup relations program is related largely to the caliber and abilities of the staff member assigned to carry out the program. A staff member may grow through instruction or experience, from a less able practitioner to a more able one. Finally, we believe that careful study of more and less effective practitioners may reveal the salient characteristics of each, and contribute greater self-insight to whoever reads it.

We report here on one study that attempted to state the characteristics of the effective and the naive, ineffective professional worker in intergroup relations. This study was done by John Dean and Alex Rosen, in A Manual of Intergroup Relations. The authors were able to match the responses of practitioners to a questionaire with ratings of these practitioners by a national body. With the assistance of statistical tables, the authors listed the characteristics of the effective and the ineffective worker in terms of (a) attitudes, (b) knowledge, and (c) skills.

Briefly, the effective professional worker was characterized by these attributes: In terms of attitudes, a commitment to integration, a longrange view, self-insight, an understanding of the minority community. In terms of knowledge, an understanding of the nature of prejudice and the diversity of minority experience, the bases of friendly action, the processes of social change, and the available community resources. In terms of skills, being at ease and putting others at ease, interpreting minority and majority experiences accurately, handling tension incidents wisely.

These are the characteristics of the naive, ineffective worker: (attitudes) timidity and vagueness about intergroup goals, patronizing actions that resent the minority group's non-appreciation, consideration of self as completely unprejudiced, oversentimentality toward minorities; (knowledge) failing to understand the nature of prejudice, lack of understanding of the diversity of minority experience, expecting prejudice to wither away by itself, using crude rules of thumb and cliches, feeling that his particular intergroup problems are unique; (skills) making "slips" or using testimonials or stereotypes toward minorities, by-passing interpretation in favor of exhortation that people are all alike, perceiving racial incidents as bad and shying away from anything that might lead to friction.

The activity of any intergroup relations organization might well be directed toward (a) trying its best to recruit staff members who possess the characteristics of the effective professional worker; (b) trying to determine the kinds of training and experience that might move a staff member to a more effective performance in this field; and (c) taking a careful inventory of staff and personnel practices in terms of the criteria that Dean and Rosen have outlined above.

D. There are more and less effective techniques, assessable in terms of the varying types of community.

Effective work in the intergroup relations field requires a great degree of flexibility and a fertile imagination. The range of specific techniques that may be applied to a given community problem is great. But past social research and social action experience is beginning to give a small but growing body of knowledge on which specific techniques are more effective and which are less effective. In other words, if a program's finances, energies, and other resources are to be optimally allocated, the organization must decide "which horse to back," as far as techniques are concerned.

As an example, we might state a few brief conclusions of social scientists and practitioners on some actions that are considered somewhat less effective. A primary example is the use of mass media in the intergroup relations field. This is especially important if an organization has to decide whether to invest in mass media, in educational programs, or in legislative drives. Sociologist Robin Williams has suggested that "it is reasonable to doubt that racial and cultural conflicts can be appreciably alleviated by conventional methods of mass education," adding that "it would appear that the most promising area of study here is rather that of attitude and behavioral change resulting from education in group situations." Sociologist Robert MacIver adds that while he cannot question the high potential value of mass appeal materials, he believes that "they constitute the most hazardous of all the activities undertaken"by the Jewish agencies that he studied.

Numerous other reservations have been stated about various techniques in this field. However, in order to view at firsthand the range of action methods available to the practitioner, we present the following "exercise." A research instrument was constructed by the Cornell Intergroup Relations Study group, for the purpose of determining intergroup practitioners' evaluations of the most effective and least effective techniques of intergroup relations. (It is attached as appendix A.) In analysing the results of this inventory, the 17 suggested methods are re-arranged into a continuum ranging from methods that do not attack either prejudice or discrimination, to methods that attack prejudice only, and finally, to methods that attack discrimination directly. The reactions of practitioners to this instrument may be matched against the best available knowledge about what is effective in intergroup relations. Methods and techniques known to merely waste time and money, or to have "boomerang effects" may then be discarded in favor of proceedures that are more effective. In addition,practitioners from a wide variety of communities might assess the relative effectiveness of various methods in terms of the unique structure and functioning of their own community.

E. There are more and less effective ways of utilizing each action technique.

A further point may be added here: the effective community worker should concern himself not only with which techniques are effective and which are not; he should also consider that there are more and less effective ways of utilizing each technique that exists, on the continuum ranging from action within the minority community, through action to change majority group prejudices, to action to change majority group discriminatory practices. We present, on the ensuing two pages, a suggestion of the more and less effective practices in regard to each technique.

We recognize the tentativeness of this scheme, and realize that each person may relate himself to it by classifying himself "on the side of the angels." We, nevertheless, present it on the next two pages hoping (a) to end some of the fury of the "change attitudes -- change practices" controversy; (b) to suggest that practitioners should move away from excessive emphasis on a single technique since action should be undertaken along a multitude of fronts; and (c) perhaps to illustrate the slang phrase; "'Taint what you do - it's the way that you do it."

F. There are certain "specifics" that every practitioner should know.

So far, we have emphasized general principles applied by social scientists and practitioners to race relations. We feel that we should move increasingly toward "specifics" - toward the more immediate details affecting the life of the race relations worker. Our observations of intergroup practitioners at the Fisk University Race Relations Institute and at other gatherings convince us that the effective practitioner should know the following things:

1. Know the best of the theoretical thinking on race relations that can be applied to his specific program, as suggested above.

MORE AND LESS EFFECTIVE TECHNIQUES EMPLOYED BY INTERGROUP PRACTITIONERS

Type of Action	Less Effective Procedures	More Effective Procedures
1. Action in minority community.	Laying the burden on minorities to improve themselves in order to end prejudice; making the minorities take the initiative in changing patterns; forcing minorities into painful situations without support.	Raising minority aspiration levels; promoting minority initiative; increasing minority self-conficence and self-esteem.
2. Exhortation.	Speaking over and over to those already "saved"; using broad generalizations like "the wages of sin are death".	Dramatic presentations accompanied by recommendations or action proposals; speaking to groups in terms of their most cherished values.
3. The media approach.	Signs, slogans and posters that do not tell people what do do. For example, "Love thy neighbor" or "All men are brothers".	Statements by "culture heroes"; immediate personalized media that reach the individual and indicate specific courses of action.
4. Education.	The straight recounting of corrective facts, sometimes insufficient, because of the many emotional facets of prejudice.	Education involving emotions as well as intellect, becoming educated is part of an integrated interaction process; "learning what we live".
5. Surveys.	People confining their actions to gathering and discussing facts, or duplicating surveys already done; using surveys as an excuse for not taking action.	People participating personally in fact-finding, increasing their emotional involvement, with a stated intent to implement any facts they find, and with interpretation.

6. Revelation or "shock treatment".	Stating unverified facts without context or interpretation, engendering surprise, disbelief and resistance.	"Shock treatment" of audiences backed by solid fact, and involving process of (a) confrontation, (b) interpretation and (c) redirection.
7. Participation.	Self-conscious inter-cultural "talent shows" that place an undue emphasis on the cultural characteristics of the minority that are unique; throwing unprepared persons together without goals, context or guidance.	Joint integrated activity on an area of vital common interest, preferably involving equal status contact.
8. Negotiation.	Quelling each individual discrimination complaint by private agreement without consulting others; compromising, appeasing, or "selling out".	Representative community groups persuading discriminators to adopt and state a specific, clear-cut non-discriminatory policy; holding a spirit of no compromise.
9. Legal and legislative action.	Failure to coordinate action, resulting in confusion, crystallization of resistance, or acceptance of compromise solutions.	Carefully planned and coordinated action with an unassailable case, access to competent legal talent, thorough knowledge of all sanctions and "klobbering" devices available.
10. More direct action.	Adopting the illegal or immoral tactics of the opposition in the process of picketing, boycotting, mass demonstrations.	Determining the legality of these "protest techniques"; operating within the frame work of the law; mobilizing maximal community support.

2. Know the total range of possible effective race relations techniques, and study the timing and strategy involved in applying effectively the most appropriate technique.

3. Know how to work with his board; how to keep them (a) interested, (b) informed, (c) active, and (d) flexible. More specific ways of doing this can be outlined for the interested reader.

4. Be familiar with the best resources. In addition to social science knowledge, the effective practitioner should know the best of the intergroup relations materials and how to obtain and distribute them rapidly, without getting involved in too much needless paper work. The term "resources" should also include all the other intergroup organizations, and the practitioner should readily know (a) what they are set up to do, (b) what they actually do, (c) what their limitations and advantages are, and (d) how they can help his organization, and how he can help them.

5. Know the policy statements of community organizations and how they propose to implement them locally. Study the 40 or so statements made at Fisk's Southwide Interorganizational Conference in 1955, and press local constituencies of these groups to implement them as far as possible. Also, local bodies might be "moved" through their regional or national headquarters.

6. Know about the conditions of tension and violence and the ways of handling them. Social scientists have done some study in this area but even more directly useful information may be obtained from such persons as sociologist-sheriff Joseph Lehman, who has developed effective techniques and handbooks, in teaching policemen how to quell racial tension.

7. Know all the outside sanctions that can be brought to bear on a community in times of stress or crisis. For example, under what conditions can the practitioner take legal action, bring in the State Bureau of Investigation; get the state to cut off local school funds?

These actions, ambitiously stated will call upon the best of the practitioner's knowledge, attitudes, and skills. But we believe that maximum effectiveness will be definitely hampered unless the race relations worker masters them.

G. There is a variety of possible alternative actions in each area of segregation and discrimination.

We gather that some organizations are set up specifically to work on problems of schools, others on employment, others on housing, etc. But there are also organizations that are not limited in this way, but are dedicated toward working in any area where segregation and discrimination are rampant, and where human rights are being violated. For organizations such as these, we urge them to decide (a) in what area they can work most effectively, and (b) what the most effective action is, that they can pursue in that area. For example, suppose an organization wants to work in the area of public school desegregation but is unable to do so because (a) other organizations are working in that area, or (b) the area is "too hot to handle." Then the organization might consider that It could be working effectively in any one of these areas:

1. Employment
2. Transportation, and other public accomodations
3. Housing
4. Dealing with tension incidents
5. Religious life
6. The Negro community

The criteria for selecting a given area over others might be these: (1) it is not an "impossible" situation, (2) there is "symbolic value" in the area as far as the minority community is concerned. (3) there is a serious need for improvement in that area, and (4) staff or directors have some knowledge, influence, or experience in that area. We suggest, briefly, a range of actions that might be pursued in each of the above mentioned areas:

1. Employment:
   - (a) Persuade qualified minorities to make personal application for non-traditional jobs.
   - (b) Seek integration of Negroes into city, state, and federal jobs.
   - (c) Approach key employers in the community to see if they will establish a precedent by changing their employment patterns.
   - (d) See that the non-discriminatory provisions of the President's Committee on Government Contracts are fully followed in the community, helping persons discriminated against to file a complaint, if necessary.

2. Public accommodations
   - (a) Gather the facts on the amount of public accommodations available to Negroes, and the amount of discriminatory incidents that occur.
   - (b) Write to all relevant transportation authorities asking them to issue policy statements implementing the recent Interstate Commerce Commission rulings.
   - (c) Set up a "test case" to show how this ruling is being evaded.
   - (d) Boycott the Negro facility and ask that facilities be opened to all.

3. Housing	(a) Seek better housing for Negroes, particularly new developments, within the existing area where Negroes live.
	(b) Encourage and support Negro families seeking homes in predominantly white neighborhoods.
	(c) Work to stabilize "changing neighborhoods" by encouraging whites to avoid "panic selling."
	(d) See if the powers of FHA or VA can be invoked to prevent the construction of government-financed segregated housing developments.
4. Handling Tension incidents	(a) Keep an accurate, up-to-date file on all incidents of racial tension, conflict, atrocity
	(b) Try to get publicity for anti-Negro tension incidents in the media of communication.
	(c) Be "on-the-spot" in order to do what you can to solve tension incidents personally.
	(d) Be alert to the forces of law and order that can be evoked in event of racial tension, and keep them informed of potential problems, e.g., the police, national guard, governor, FBI.
5. Religious life	(a) Urge white and Negro ministers to deliver more church sermons urging tolerance and understanding.
	(b) Encourage church clubs and youth groups to have joint meetings and discussion groups.
	(c) Urge white and Negro ministers to meet together or to integrate the Ministerial Alliances.
	(d) Review the national policy statements about segregation and discrimination made by each local church body; urge the local body to implement the policies in the most effective manner possible.
6. The Negro community	(a) Persuade minorities to be on their best behavior, and to equip themselves for possible new opportunity.
	(b) Remind Negroes of all state and federal laws protecting their rights, and indicate wherever these laws are being violated.
	(c) Help or persuade the Negro community to pay poll taxes or otherwise qualify to vote; teach youths how to register as they come of age.
	(d) Organize the most effective economic counter-boycott possible in the Negro community.

These are but a few of the actions that are possible in Southern communities. Note that under each heading, they tend to range from less to more "direct action" methods, in order that some allowance may be made for differences between various communities or states. The area of action in public schools has been omitted here, but numerous publications on effective action in school desegregation exist and are readily obtainable. We recommend here that each staff member of an intergroup organization, in collaboration with his board of advisors, consider the criteria for selection of an action area, and then decide within the limits of his environment, and its policies, what is the most constructive and decisive action that can be pursued effectively.

H. Living the effective personal life in intergroup relations.

In conclusion, we feel that in addition to the perhaps overwhelming recommendations on effectiveness that we have listed above, the effective worker can add to his contribution by considering how to lead the personally effective life as far as race relations are concerned. Each person must work out for himself the best way of doing this. We will not detail our suggestions here, although the writer has advanced some suggestions in the 1956 Winter issue of Child Study Magazine, in an article called "The Family's Stake in Desegregation." Briefly, the suggestions are: "Know thyself" and the extent of your own prejudices; know the facts - know what is effective; learn how to "silence a bigot;" learn how to handle tension incidents; and "set a good personal example." And a sixth point might be added for all white and Negro persons interested in effectiveness: Wherever possible, stop supporting segregation. And who knows, we may wake some morning only to find, happily, that we have "worked ourselves out of a job."

APPENDIX A

QUESTIONNAIRE ON ACTION TECHNIQUES IN INTERGROUP RELATIONS

Instructions

Suppose that you and several other interested persons wanted to develop a program to improve intergroup relations in your community.

Check in the appropriate column how effective you think each of these techniques would be if you undertook them: very effective, fairly effective, or not so effective. Also make a check if you think a technique might have negative effects.

Now go back and check which one of the "very effective" techniques you think would be most effective.

	Very effective	Fairly effective	Not so effective	Might have negative effects
1. Arrange group discussions among parents to modify their intergroup attitudes, since prejudice begins at home.	___	___	___	___
2. Protest discriminatory acts by petitions, open letters to officials, and other publicity.	___	___	___	___
3. Arrange forums, lectures, and public meetings to interpret to the community the accomplishments and cultural backgrounds of different minority groups.	___	___	___	___
4. Organize a citizens' committee to study the local situation and make recommendations.	___	___	___	___
5. Set a good personal example of your social circle, work relations, and friends.	___	___	___	___
6. Get dramatic posters and exhibits in public places such as restaurants, libraries, show cases, and public transportation.	___	___	___	___
7. Arrange meetings at which outside experts can discuss intergroup relations with civic leaders and influential persons.	___	___	___	___
8. Persuade minorities to stop agitating and give time a chance to solve the problem.	___	___	___	___
9. Get a few influential persons to negotiate privately behind the scenes with establishments that discriminate.	___	___	___	___
10. Get clergymen throughout the city to deliver sermons urging greater tolerance and understanding of minorities.	___	___	___	___

	Very effective	Fairly effective	Not so effective	Might have negative effects
11. Organize boycotts or mass picketing of firms that practice discrimination.	___	___	___	___
12. Negotiate with violators of civil rights and fair practices legislation to initiate better intergroup practices or face legal consequences.	___	___	___	___
13. Arrange for radio programs, newspaper articles, etc., that will attack prejudice.	___	___	___	___
14. Bring legal action against persons or firms that continue to practice discrimination.	___	___	___	___
15. Organize intergroup relations workshops for specific groups that are handling intergroup situations.	___	___	___	___
16. Get minority leaders to spend most of their time encouraging members of the minority to improve themselves so majority group members will be more willing to accept them.	___	___	___	___
17. Arrange education courses on intergroup relations that are open to the public.	___	___	___	___

AVAILABILITY FOR SRC CONSULTANT SERVICE PROGRAM

1. Are your services available as consultant in SRC Consultant Service Program? Yes___; No___.

2. If so, during what periods of 1956? Answer (a), (b), or (c).

   (a) January through December, 1956? Yes___; No___.

   (b) January " " " excluding vacation period? Yes___; No___.

   Please indicate vacation period._____

   (c) If not available for the entire year, indicate for the following periods (1956) whether you will definitely or probably be available, or not available:

	Available Definitely	Available Probably	Not Available
January thru March April " June
July " September
October " December
Other single months or combinations: (List them)

   Would you be willing (and able) to use a rental car, if available, for such assignments? Yes___; No___.

   Do you have any objection to travel by scheduled airlines for such purposes? Yes___; No___.
   Trains? Yes___; No___.
   Buses? Yes___; No___.

minister, with whom Alexander had previously talked, seemed reluctant to talk with the consultants unless the other ministers were present.

Somewhat more preparation, arranging, and "spade work" would probably have been desirable. The biographical data on the consultants had not been sent by the Council to Mr. Alexander or to the local people, as we had understood they would be. Mr. Alexander's contacts with the Swain County school people apparently had been fewer and less recent than we had anticipated; a visit to the county a few days before the consultation, if possible, might have helped in pinning down arrangements, preparing the superintendent and the Board, and being ready to utilize the consultants to the fullest. A list of questions the Board wished discussed might have been useful. However, I am aware that Mr. Alexander is an outsider, as well as the rest of us, and it undoubtedly would have been a mistake to push things too far or too fast. If the Council insisted on adequate preparation, it might not get invitations at all.

Dr. Turpen's performance as a consultant was entirely adequate. It was good of him to agree to take two days out of a busy schedule, and the cooperation of the Fayette County School Board in allowing him to go should be appreciated. Dr. Turpen said nothing which would in any way conflict with the objectives and philosophy of the Council. His being able to speak as an administrator who had "been through the mill" on desegregation was most useful.

It may be that the most immediately useful result of the experience will be a by-product. While we were there, Mr. Alexander discussed with us a workshop he is tentatively planning for Greensboro in the late spring. The Superintendent of Schools has encouraged him to go ahead, although the schools cannot participate officially. The plan is to assemble a group of key white and Negro teachers for discussion of desegregation problems, with consultants brought in who have been involved in desegregation. Dr. Turpen was willing to allow and encourage Fayette County school personnel to participate, if invited, provided there would not be a lot of publicity. The tentative plan that emerged was to bring in a white principal and a Negro teacher from a mixed school in Fayette County, plus perhaps a white and a Negro high-school student from a desegregated school. The Friends Service Committee would sponsor the event.

Harry Walker Of Howard U.

Harry J. Walker, an associate professor of sociology of Howard University who lent his findings on community and race relations to a host of desegregation troublespots, died of a heart attack Saturday at Freedman's Hospital. He was 54.

Mr. Walker's studies throughout his career aimed at documenting community reaction to key questions of desegregation and slum clearance. He was known as an extremely articulate student of race problems with a keen sense of humor.

Mr. Walker

Last fall he testified in Alexandria Federal Court on the Arlington desegragation issue, saying he felt the County could desegregate as easily as Washington had, if not more so.

He devoted a year's research in 1955 with Robert T. Bower of American University on adjustment to integration in Washington public schools. Another study, made with a Howard colleague, G. Franklin Edwards, uncovere adverse effects of urban renewal on minority group housing in six Eastern cities.

Other testimony helped the Interior Department decide to desegregate Washington's swimming pools in 1950, and helped pave the way for hiring of Negroes by the Capitol Transit Co. in 1954. The Southern Regional Council in Atlanta found him a valuable consultant to desegregation trouble areas throughout the East.

Mr. Walker, a native of Muncie, Pa., had served the Howard University faculty from 1939 to 1942 and from 1948 to the present. In the interim he earned a doctorate at the University of Chicago.

While in Chicago he served on the Mayor's Committee on Human Relations and was a member of the city's Southside Planning Board. He was also a lecturer at Roosevelt University there.

Currently serving as president of the D. C. Chapter of the American Sociological Society, Mr. Walker was the author of the pamphlet, "The Negro in American Life."

He is survived by his wife, LaVergne, and a son, Harry J. Jr., of their home at 4711 Blagden ave. nw.

Re: Situation in Little Rock - report of telephone conversation with Nat Griswold

The city of Little Rock at least on the surface is calm. There is the obvious presence of the U. S. Marshals. There is a growing ground-swelling, according to reporters with whom Nat has talked, to re-open the closed high schools, even on a desegregated basis. This sentiment got a shot in the arm when the school board voted to cancel all football games, dances, and other school activities for this semester since the schools are closed.

There is some evidence that the state would like to open a "private" segregated school system but fears that the federal government has anticipated this move and is prepared to counter it. Governor Faubus is trying desperately to hang the monkey on the back of the federal government but the man on the street is beginning to recognize Mr. Faubus as the hand-organ player.

Mrs. Terry, who has been in touch with Mrs. Tilly, is holding a meeting of church women. She reported to Nat that interest in this has increased terrifically, that many more people than she originally expected now want to come to the meeting.

A group believing in the non-violent approach to social problems has held an eighteen hour vigil in one of the Little Rock churches, praying for acceptance by the community of the court order. This was covered by the press, radio, and TV. Nat worked with the sponsoring group.

The State Advisory Committee to the Civil Rights Commission has asked the Arkansas Council to do a study on the status of desegregation and civil rights in Arkansas. They have asked Cartwright to do the writing.

Subj: Little Rock - a report of a phone conversation with Nat Griswold

The sixty-one lawyers who signed the statement opposing closed schools and "private" schools represent the cream of the Little Rock Bar Association.

The president of the student body at Hall High School polled the students; 70% voted for an open, desegregated school! This has caused quite a stir in Little Rock.

The Boards of two churches have gone on record opposing the closing of schools and defiance of the Court decision. Two ministers - one at Brooks Hays' home parish - preached sermons urging compliance with the Court decision.

The "ladies" went to the TV stations and asked for equal time to answer Faubus' speech of the other night. One TV station has granted this, the other will probably do so, too. The "ladies" have a panel all set to go - three lawyers and three laymen - who will hit at the constitutionality of the "private" school plans. The Arkansas Council has had quite a part in this.

The Board will meet this afternoon for the first time since it received the petition from the Women's Emergency Committee to Open Our Schools. The Board will have an agenda meeting—the session at which it will decide what matters it intends to formally consider at its bi-monthly meeting Monday night.

Mayor Werner C. Knopp said Committee probably would be discussed if any Board member wanted it taken up. He said the letter would be answered when the Board tries to answer all communications.

City Manager Dean J. Dudley said he thinks the letter probably would be considered at the agenda meeting.

'Commission on Unity'

The Committee, in a letter dated December 19, suggested the formation of a "City Commission on Civic Unity" which would have a membership drawn from "all areas of society."

The Committee said the new group could "cultivate understanding and friendly relations between all the various segments of population" and attempt to restore lines of communication that have been disrupted by the integration controversy.

The letter suggested 18 organizations and city agencies as a "beginning list" from which the Board might choose Commission members. It recommended that these organizations submit a list of names from which the Board could make its appointments.

Mrs. Joe R. Brown of Scott, chairman of the Women's Committee, said other cities had established such groups and that they had been successful.

So, That's How It's Done

Here Robert L. Thornton of Dallas, who has a reputation as a "City Builder", whispers the secret of his success to E. Grainger Williams (right), 1959 Little Rock Chamber of Commerce president, who figures he can use them.

Time to Evaluate School Situation, Leaders Advised

The new president of the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce said last night that "the time has come for us to evaluate the cost of education and the cost of the lack of it."

E. Grainger Williams, a vice president of the insurance firm of Williams & Rosen, Inc., touched briefly on the Little Rock school situation in an informal speech at the Chamber of Commerce annual dinner. At the outset, Williams substituted Warren E. Bragg.

"I have neither the purpose nor the desire to discuss the political and social aspects of the [illegible] problem," Williams said in making his statement about the evaluation of education.

He urged that the business leaders, while [illegible] to re-establish [illegible] means of communication, "so the city's problems could be discussed without anger and [illegible] without fear of reprisal." Doing that, he said, "would be one of the greatest contributions we could make, and to that end I am dedicated."

His remarks were applauded.

The Extreme Stand —And the Moderate

In his well organized and sometimes eloquent inaugural address, Governor Faubus, in perhaps the strongest terms he has used, called for continued defiance of federal laws and federal court orders relating to the operation of the public schools.

In a summary paragraph he said this:

> To say that we must resist such unwarranted and evil efforts by every means short of violence and armed conflict, is to state it lightly indeed.

This, then, is the extreme position endorsed by a majority of the people of Arkansas. Those who hold it contend that anything less is weakness—and they have made moderation a bad name.

Yet those who are still willing to listen might consider the real meaning of moderation—and whether it does not after all bespeak the conscience of most of us, indeed whether the concept is not essential to an orderly and progressive society.

Here is a definition offered by a man who has reason to know what he is talking about, former Representative Brooks Hays of the Fifth District, who went down to defeat in defense of these principles. Writing in the New York Times Magazine, Mr. Hays offers this standard to which "just and prudent" Southerners may repair:

> (1) Adherence to the concept of equal justice under law and recognition that the Fourteenth Amendment is a vital part of the Constitution (the Supreme Court's "separate but equal" decision of 1896 was based on this amendment, as was the 1954 school desegregation decision repealing that concept);
> (2) A commitment to use only lawful processes to obtain any desired revision of the 1954 court ruling or the 1955 implementation decision, regardless of whether one approves or disapproves of the detailed provisions involved in specific instances;
> (3) The search for alternative methods of desegregation that will do least violence to the South's traditions and attitudes;
> (4) The desire to help the Negro improve his economic condition and generally achieve a status more in keeping with human dignity and self-respect; and finally,
> (5) The continued expression of devotion to country by the denunciation of acts of violence and racial hatred and by repudiation of those who urge defiance of the law.

The Chamber's Concern

From the beginning of the Little Rock school impasse the Chamber of Commerce has remained largely mute, the argument being that this was primarily a political controversy.

But at the Chamber's annual dinner the rising president, E. Grainger Williams, took note of the fact that the school [illegible] has gone far beyond politics and now colors the industrial and commercial life of the city with which the Chamber is directly concerned.

The time has come, he said, for business leaders, [illegible] to evaluate the cost of education and the cost of the lack of it. To that end he said he declared himself dedicated to re-establishing the [illegible] communication so that the problem could be discussed freely without anger and hatred, without fear of reprisal.

The need is certainly urgent. While the side effects of the school impasse have not been measured—and in many cases defy exact measurement — there are alarming indications that the impact is spreading in many directions.

One such turned up in the current issue of the University of Arkansas alumni magazine. In a letter addressed to seven top administrators of the University, Dr. F. Douglas Lawrason, planner for medical affairs, had this to say:

> The University Medical Center, being within the community of Little Rock, could not help but be affected by the public school problem there. I think it would be only fair to say that because of this complicating social change, the Medical Center has had its faculty recruitment program brought to a virtual standstill. So many of the persons we approach and invite to join the faculty are diverted by the events that have been taking place in the community.

If this experience, multiplied as it may well be in the case of many private industries and businesses, isn't a matter of proper concern for the Chamber of Commerce it is difficult to think of what would be.

State's Racial Unrest Blamed on Subversion

ARKANSAS DEMOCRAT 1/16/59

By R. B. MAYFIELD,
(Democrat Staff Writer.)

The special education committee of the Arkansas Legislative Council declared today "that there has been and now is subversion present in the racial unrest in our state."

The findings are the result of a three-day hearing conducted a month ago probing the activities of the NAACP and other organizations which allegedly played a part in events leading to the Central High School impasse in Little Rock.

A report on the committee findings was released today by Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett, who handled the legal aspects of the hearing.

"The committee is convinced that the racial unrest in Arkansas was deliberately planned by the Communist party as part of the directive handed down by Moscow in 1928," the report said.

"The NAACP appears to have been heavily infiltrated with subversives and wittingly or unwittingly, is now a captive of the Communist apparatus," it added.

Bennett told a reporter that he believes this is the first time any investigating agency has ever found the NAACP subversive.

The House of Representatives passed a resolution yesterday adopting the "findings of fact" by the committee, and ordered the transcript of the hearing entered in the House journal. The vote was 95-1.

Permanent Record.

Bennett said that this did not mean that the lower chamber actually adopted the report, which hasn't been presented to it yet, but rather provides that a permanent record be made of the proceedings.

The principal witnesses for the hearing was J. B. Matthews, New York City, a former aide of the late U. S. Sen. Joe McCarthy, and Manning Johnson, New York. A Negro who admitted he once belonged to the Communist party.

The 33-page report today was largely a summation of the proceedings. Here are some excepts from the conclusion.

"This committee has found that the incident which occurred at Little Rock on Sept. 2, 1957, (the beginning of the open integration fight there) was not something planned . . . that just happened overnight.

"It was planned, schemed, calculated, and had as its motivating factor the International Communist conspiracy of world domination squarely behind the entire shocking episode.

Many in Arkansas.

"Communism, heretofore, has

Red Link Denied By NAACP

Mrs. Daisy Bates, president of the Arkansas Chapter of the NAACP, promptly denied today that the organization had any links with subversives.

She told The Associated Press:

"I think I would prefer taking the word of J. Edgar Hoover and the Justice Department about our organization. They have clearly given us a clean bill of health many times."

PROBE

always been something that happened elsewhere; but the record reflects that for a number of years an almost incredible number of Communists, pro-Communists, fellow travelers, dupes and those who make a career out of being duped, have flitted in and out of Arkansas, and while here, they have sowed the seeds of dissension and discord."

"We believe that the NAACP is and has been sympathetic toward Communist causes, and that the goal of the Communist is not to help the Negro as such, but merely to use him. In that desire to use the Negro, we find that the Communists have always tried to infiltrate organizations attractive to the Negro race."

The report also criticized "some segments of the press" which it said attempted to discredit the committee's work.

"Some members of the press seem determined to bedevil the issue, smear the purposes of the hearings, and reach any conclusion other than the fact that there was subversion present in our difficulties here. This the committee deplores," it said.

"It is the conclusion of this committee . . . that subversion was present in the racial unrest. . . ."

The report also castigated the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, and interracial group, and the Southern Regional Council.

Found No Good.

"We have been unable to learn of any public or private good . . . rendered" by either organization, the report said.

The committee was headed by Perry Rep. Paul Van Dalsem, with Sen. Charles F. Smith, West Memphis, vice chairman.

Other members are Sens. Lee Bearden, Leachville; Clifton Wade, Fayetteville; Tom Allen, Brinkley; Max Howell, Little Rock, and Marshall Shackelford, El Dorado. House members are Mississippi Rep. Gene Fleeman, Parkin; Rep. John Bethell, Phillips; Rep. Marcus Howell, Little River; Rep. Marion Crank, Bradley; Rep. Carroll Hollensworth and Pulaski Rep. Joel Leffler.

Dear Fred:

I am sure that you will be interested in the copy of my letter to Nat Griswold of Little Rock, hereto attached, as well as the newspaper clippings regarding the Report of The Senate Education Committee.

I have just completed the reportorial summation of developments in Little Rock from December 15, 1958 to January 17, 1959, and will send you a copy as soon as it is typed.

During my visit to Little Rock, I conferred with E. Grainger Williams, President of the Chamber of Commerce, regarding the organization of a Little Rock Commission on Community Relations. He is interested in the formation of such a group. I also consulted with Mrs. Joe R. Brewer, Chairman of the Women's Emergency Committee to Open Our Schools and suggested that the name of the group be changed to The Little Rock Citizens Committee for Better Schools which will enable the group to retain its original purpose of re-opening the High Schools without identifying it specifically with the integration issue.

You will also be interested to know that the first steps are being taken to interest a group of leaders in Houston to organize a local Commission on Community Relations.

In planning your Texas trip, I hope that you will be able to include Houston and Little Rock in your itinerary.

Cordially,

Gustave

Dear Nat:

Before I left Little Rock, I telephoned your office but unfortunately you were out. Mr. Walker answered, however, and we had an interesting chat. I want to tell you how much I enjoyed my visit with you, John and Mrs. Powell.

I also conveyed our discussion to Jerome Levy, AJC local Chapter Chairman and he assured me of his interest in the Council program. I would suggest that you acquaint him with the Council activities. He informed me that the Chapter would be happy to cooperate with you in providing limited funds for distribution of AJC literature whenever you consider such a piece for distribution. I am also sending you under separate cover 15 complimentary copies of the Louisville Story and other material which you might find useful.

I would like to receive, if possible, two or three copies of the 32 page report of the Senate Education Committee which was reported in the Arkansas Democrat. John promised to inquire about the possibility of securing these copies.

Fred Routh wrote to me of his contemplated trip to the Southwest in February. I presume he will also visit Little Rock.

My meetings with Grainger Williams and Mrs. Brewer were interesting and promising. I am sending them material which I hope will prove useful in furthering their ideas and plans. I am sure that you can be helpful to them.

Please give my regards to John and Mrs. Powell.

Dear Mrs. Brewer:

It was a genuine pleasure to meet with you and your co-workers for the purpose of discussing the important subject of mutual and vital interest. You and the other ladies should be complimented on the courageous and forthright stand being taken in helping to resolve a critical situation and of expending every effort to preserve the educational principles and standards in Arkansas.

In reviewing our discussion, I believe that much could be accomplished without sacrificing the basic aims and purposes motivating your group by changing the name of your organization to The Little Rock Citizens Committee for Better Schools or any other appellation describing the purposes for which the present Committee was formed. This will disassociate the organization directly from the desegregation issue and refute the accusations hurled against your group by its critics. At the same time, however, we all understand that re-opening of the schools cannot be accomplished in any other manner than prescribed by the law. Emphasis could be placed on the broader problems of preparing our children for their place in life through better schools and educational opportunities.

Fortunately, you need not work alone in this fight. There are like-minded citizens throughout the country organized into National and State committees. The National Citizens Council For Better Schools can help you in achieving your goals.

In accordance with my promise, I am sending you the folder of material of the above organization, explaining its purposes and types of services available. Mr. Leads R. Lacy is Southwest Regional Director and is prepared to visit your community and assist you in setting up the necessary functional structure. I shall also be happy to cooperate with you as well as Mrs. Levy and members of the Little Rock AJC Chapter.

Mr. Leeds address is 501 Mercantile Building, 1031 15th Street, Denver, Colorado. I would suggest that you write to him for further information, if desired, mentioning my name in this connection. There will be no obligation in this request.

Please convey my regards to Mesdames John Samuels, Helen Helvenston and Jerome Levy, who are receiving copies of this letter and material. I shall be happy to continue our association and to consult with you in forwarding your program.

Dear Mr. Williams:

I want you to know that I enjoyed the opportunity of meeting you and discussing your plans for the organization of a Little Rock Commission on Community Relations. I hope that I was of help to you in crystallizing your thinking on the subject and pointing out procedure for the implementation of your plans. It is not an easy goal to achieve, especially in the present emotionally charged climate but the backing of the fine leadership of the Chamber of Commerce certainly assures the success of this effort.

In accordance with my promise, I am enclosing a draft ordinance which I believe would be adaptable and acceptable to the community. You will note that emphasis has been placed on the modus operandi for the establishment of lines of communication between the various groups and races in the community, so essential to the future welfare and growth of a progressive city as Little Rock.

I am including several additional types of ordinances already in existence and reports of these Commissions. If you wish further information from these cities, I would suggest that you write to the directors listed on the enclosed roster of Commissions on Community Relations.

Please be assured of my desire to cooperate with you and your community in a constitutative capacity. Henry Spitzberg, Dave Grundfest, Dr. Levy and other members of the Little Rock AJC Chapter are, I am sure, prepared to assist you whenever their services are required.

Sincerely,

ORDINANCE NO.

AN ORDINANCE TO BE ENTITLED LITTLE ROCK COMMISSION ON COMMUNITY RELATIONS

AN ORDINANCE CREATING A LITTLE ROCK COMMISSION ON COMMUNITY RELATIONS PROVIDING THE MANNER OF APPOINTMENT OF THE COMMISSION'S MEMBERS: SPECIFYING THE ORGANIZATION OF THE COMMISSION AND THE TERMS AND MANNER OF APPOINTMENT AND REMOVAL OF MEMBERS; AND PROVIDING FOR THE RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN THE COMMISSION AND OTHER DEPARTMENTS AND BOARDS.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COUNCIL:

COMMISSION ON COMMUNITY RELATIONS

Section 1. Little Rock Commission on Community Relations. There is hereby created a Commission on Community Relations to consist of twenty-one members, broadly representative of the social, economic, religious, cultural, ethnic and racial groups comprising the population of the City of Little Rock. These members of the Commission shall be appointed by the Mayor with the approval of the City Council, and one of the members shall be designated by the Mayor as chairman. Initially, seven members shall be appointed for one year, seven for two years and seven for three years; thereafter, all appointments to the Commission shall be for a term of three years. In the event of the death or resignation of any member, his successor shall be appointed to serve for the unexpired term. Members shall serve without compensation but shall be reimbursed for actual and necessary expenses incurred in official duties, as may be determined and approved by the Commission.

Section 2. General Functions. The functions of the Commission shall be:

(1) To foster mutual understanding and respect among all economic, social, religious, ethnic and racial groups in the City of Little Rock.

(2) To make studies in the field of intergroup and interracial relations.

Section 3. Powers and Duties. The Commission is empowered:

(1) To act as conciliator in controversies involving intergroup and interracial relations.

(2) To cooperate with Federal, state and city agencies in developing harmonious intergroup and interracial relations.

(3) To cooperate with and enlist the support of civic, religious, veterans', labor, industrial, and commertial groups and civic leaders in the development of educational programs dedicated to the improvement of intergroup and interracial understanding.

(4) To make studies and to have studies made in the field of intergroup and interracial relations, and to prepare and disseminate reports of such studies.

(5) To recommend to the Mayor and the City Council such ordinances as will aid in carrying out the purposes of this ordinance.

(6) To submit an annual report to the Mayor and the City Council.

(7) To accept grants and donations on behalf of the City of Little Rock from foundations and others for the purpose of carrying out the above listed functions.

Section 4. Staff. The City Manager with the approval of the Mayor and City Council shall appoint an executive director, qualified by a minimum of five years professional experience in the field of intergroup and interreligious relations, to direct and coordinate the activities of the Commission subject to the provisions of the civil service law, such additional personnel as he may deem necessary and to fix the compensation of persons thus employed within the limits of funds made available to the Commission.

Section 5. Finances. At the June meeting, a budget for the next fiscal year shall be adopted by the Commission and submitted to the Mayor and the City Council. No expenditures shall be authorized without approval by the Commission. The Treasurer shall make a report of the financial condition of the Commission at each monthly meeting.

Section 6. Relations with City Departments and Boards. So far as practicable, the services of all other City departments and boards shall be made available upon request of the Mayor by their respective heads to the Commission for carrying out the functions herein stated. Information in the possession of any department or board shall be furnished to the Commission upon request.

Section 7. Frequency of Meetings and Facilities. The Commission shall meet not less than once a month and shall adopt such rules as it shall deem expedient for the conduct of its business. Eleven members shall constitute a quorum. It shall elect a secretary and a treasurer and such other officers as it shall deem necessary. The chairman thereof shall appoint such committees as the rules of the Commission shall provide, ankd such other committees as the Commission shall find necessary from time to time. The City Manager shall assign to the Commission adequate office space and facilities and necessary clerical help for the proper exercise of the functions of the Commission.

Section 8. Separability. If any provision of this ordinance or the application of such provision to any person or circumstance shall be held invalid, the remainder of such ordinance or the application of such provision to persons or circumstances other than those to which it is held invalid shall not be affected thereby.

Section 9. Effective Date. This ordinance shall become effective ten days after its enactment by the Mayor and City Council.

THE WOMEN'S EMERGENCY COMMITTEE TO OPEN OUR SCHOOLS

Policy and Purpose

The Women's Emergency Committee to Open our Schools is dedicated to the principle of free public school education, and to law and order. We stand neither for integration nor for segregation, but for education.

Our aim is:

to get the four free public high schools re-opened;
to get students back in their classes;
to retain our staff of good teachers;
to regain full accreditation by the North Central Association.

We know that the "school situation" at Little Rock is not simply a local problem . . . and that Arkansas has been disgraced in the eyes of the entire world. We realize that what has happened here is elsewhere considered symbolic of "American Democracy" and so has made every American citizen the object of distrust and even hate.
We believe that our free public school system is essential to the future of our city and state.
It is our hope to say to the world that there are many of us here who care enough to do something about this problem.

A REPORT TO THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

"Attempts of the 'Turks' of Sumter County, South Carolina, to Secure Equal Schooling"

Kenneth Morland -- September 30, 1960

The report that follows is based on a visit I made to Sumter County on September 23-25, 1960. During this time I talked with Mr. Ira Kaye, a lawyer representing the Turks, and with a number of the Turks themselves. I visited in seven of their homes and in two of their crossroads stores where I conversed with school children, their parents, and with older members of the group. I attended a special meeting of the Turks at their church and later interviewed their pastor. Three of the leaders of these people drove me in their car to and from the Columbia airport and took me to the homes I visited. I had especially lengthy talks with them.

Identification of the Turks

The "Turks" are one of several enclaves of people found scattered inland from the Atlantic along much of eastern United States. These groups are especially numerous in South Carolina and in other parts of the state are known as "Brass Ankles," "Red Bones," "Buckheads," "Croatans," "Greeks," "Portuguese." No one seems to know with any degree of certainty just where these people came from, although legends about their origin abound. For example, one story is that the Turks are descendants of Turkish pirates whose ship was marooned on the South Carolina coast. General Thomas Sumter relied on their services during the Revolutionary War, and in recognition of their help gave them land in the county on which they settled. One student of these groups (Brewton Berry, "The Mestizos of South Carolina," American Journal of Sociology, 51 (July 1945), 34-41) suggests that all of these enclaves came from the interbreeding of Indians of small tribes which originally inhabitated the South Carolina coast with whites and probably freed and runaway Negro slaves. Their isolation and inbreeding led to their present distinctiveness, although they are by no means homogeneous in appearance. The Turks themselves vary in physical appearance. Most are darker in skin color than most whites, and most have dark, straight hair. However, there are some with light skin and light hair, and there are others who have some evidence of Negroid characteristics. The Turks think of themselves as white and refer to themselves as "the Turkish people."

Informants among the Turks told me that there are about 100 Turkish families in Sumter County. However, there appears to be less than half this number of families in the northern and western area around the city of Sumter involved in the present struggle for equal education. The Long Branch Baptist Church made up exclusively of Turk members has a membership of 300, including children in their teens. In this church there are about forty-five families. Many of the Turks have jobs of various sorts at Shaw Air Force Base, near which their homes are scattered. Others do construction work, odd jobs, and part-time farming.

Present Status

The Turks remain separate from others who live in the County, both Negro and white. They associate primarily with one another and most of them are kin. They say that there is more marriage outside "the family" at present, however. A few family names like Bennenhaley, Buckner, Hood, Oxendine, and Ray dominate, and one of the chief ways of identifying a Turk is by family name.

Evidently there is stronger prejudice against the Turks in the County than in the city of Sumter. In the city they may attend schools with other whites, go to white movies, and be served in white barbershops.

They are admitted to the white wards of the Sumter hospital, although their children born there are designated racially as "Turk" on official birth certificates. The Turks resent this to the extent that some try to have their children born in nearby Richland County where they will be recorded as "White." The whites in Sumter County, however, look upon the Turks as nonwhite and insist that they tend a separate elementary school. Social separation of Turk from non-Turk in Sumter County is complete.

The School Situation

There are three white county schools north and west of Sumter. One is Shaw, set up to serve elementary and junior high school children of parents connected with Shaw Air Force Base. It is under the supervision of the County School Board, although its financial support is provided by the federal government. Another school is Hillcrest, which has both elementary and high school units. The buildings at Hillcrest and Shaw are modern structures of brick, erected a few years ago. The third school is Dalzell, attended exclusively by Turk children. It is a four-room, wooden structure, built more than 40 years ago. Lavatories and flush toilets were not added until 1957. This school has three teachers and eight grades, with grades 1,2, and 3 taught in one room, grades 4, 5, and 6 in another, and grades 7 and 8 in a third. The fourth room is a cafeteria, in which one woman must do all the preparation, serving, and cleaning. The library consists of a set of World Book Encyclopedia and a few miscellaneous books, supplemented by a bookmobile that comes once a month. Altogether, seventy Turk children are enrolled at Dalzell. Their parents would like to abolish this school and have their children attend either Shaw or Hillcrest, whichever is closer. Since 1954, following a court fight, Turk children completing the eight grades at Dalzell have been going to the high school division of Hillcrest.

Attempts to Transfer Children from Dalzell School

In 1952 parents of Turkish children requested the County School Board that all of those attending Dalzell be transferred to Hillcrest. This was approved by a majority of the Board, but dissenting members went to Governor Byrnes who advised them that they did not have to transfer the children. Following this, the Board changed its decision, and the case was carried all the way to the Supreme Court, which ruled in 1954 that the lower courts were technically correct in refusing to allow the transfer. The ruling was based on a South Carolina law saying that applications for transfer must be on an individual rather than a group basis.

In 1953 the Turks requested that their children be allowed to enter high school at Hillcrest after completing eight grades at Dalzell. A high school certificate, granted upon finishing elementary and high school grades at Dalzell, was found to be unacceptable as a high school diploma in the rest of the state. A Turkish child had been refused entry to a Columbia hospital to study nursing, because her high school certificate was not honored. Through the help of a lawyer, who obtained a court order, the Turks were able to secure a promise from the County Board that their children would be admitted to Hillcrest High beginning in the fall of 1954. Turkish children have been attending since that time, and, at present, about twelve or thirteen are in the high school grades at Hillcrest.

Since 1954 there have been several attempts by individuals to transfer their children from Dalzell. None has been successful. However, in 1957, after repeated attempts, a Turk who works at Shaw Air Base was able to enter his daughter in the first grade of Shaw. In September of 1960 the newspaper published at Shaw Air Base announced that the Shaw schools would accept the children of all personnel, including civilian employees. Several of the Turk families registered their children. But the next day the principal of the school said there had been a mistake and that all the Turkish children, including those of an air force sergeant, must go to Dalzell. No explanation was offered, according to informants. The principal only said, "My hands are tied."

In the spring of 1960 the Turks persuaded Mr. Ira Kaye, Sumter attorney, to take up their case, and through him eight parents sought to have their eleven children transferred from Dalzell. Applications were filed the first part of May, but they were ruled one day late in meeting the deadline prior to the opening of the fall school session.

Present Move

The Turks now plan to get as many parents as they possibly can to apply within the next month for transfer from Dalzell for the 1961-62 term. The purpose is two-fold. The applications will be made in more than ample time to meet the deadline, and a large number of applications will demonstrate the unity and persistence of these people in fighting for equal schooling. Mr. Kaye has chosen to base the case on inequality in schooling rather than on "proof" that these people are white. He contends that race is no longer a legal issue due to the Supreme Court ruling declaring racial segregation in public schools unconstitutional. The opposition would probably welcome a fight on this issue since it could divert from the matter of unequal schooling.

Recommendations

In my opinion these people are suffering a grave injustice, and they and their courageous, able lawyer deserve every support the Southern Regional Council can give. The SRC's purpose of working toward equal opportunity for all in the region can be unqualifiedly carried out in this case through such support. The majority of Turks themselves are apparently willing to exert every effort to secure an equal education for their children. Their lawyer, Mr. Kaye, believes so in their cause that he is making great sacrifices in time and money on their behalf. Mr. Kaye is convinced, and his arguments seem sound to me, that if ever the case is actually tried by a court, the Turks will win. Evidently the opposition realizes this, for their approach has been to keep the case from being tried by dismissing it on the basis of technicalities.

The belief that the case could be won in court are based on the following factors:

(1) The facilities of the Dalzell school are much poorer than those at the Hillcrest and Shaw schools. In the latter there is one teacher and room for each grade, while at Dalzell three grades are in the same room with one teacher. The Dalzell library is pitifully inadequate, as is playground and other equipment.

(2) The school bus that takes Turkish children to Dalzell must pass by the Shaw and Hillcrest schools. The round-trip of the Dalzell school bus is 68 miles in distance and three hours in time. Almost all of the Turkish children live closer to the Shaw and Hillcrest schools than to the Dalzell school. On the other hand, some non-Turk children attending Hillcrest live nearer Dalzell than Hillcrest school.

(3) If the case is actually tried, it might force South Carolina to have its pupil placement law tested. The United States Supreme Court has said that the placement law is valid on its face. However, if it is ever ruled that it has been applied unjustly, it could be declared invalid. It is unreasonable to suppose that the state would allow the law to be tested in circumstances so unfavorable to the law.

(4) One of the reasons for refusing transfer given by the County Board is that the Turk children would not be happy with non-Turk children in Shaw and Hillcrest. While this argument is of doubtful legal validity, there is no evidence to assume that it is sound anyway. I talked with Turk children in each of the grades at Hillcrest High School and with some who had graduated or dropped out. They reported that they got along all right and were unanimous in agreeing that they preferred Hillcrest to Dalzell. They felt that if Dalzell were abolished the Turkish children could get getter training and compete more favorably with non-Turk children. Furthermore, if Turkish and non-Turkish children came together when they were younger, they would get along even better.

Mr. Kaye wants to develop a budget for the case and secure the testimony of expert witness as they are needed. The Turks themselves are poor (some of their homes are without runningwater), and they have already invested money they could scarcely afford over the eight-year period since they began fighting for equal schooling. They desperately need whatever help such organizations as the S. R. C., the A. C. L. U., and the American Friends can give.

Several years back I reported to you on the activities of an organization in Houston called the PARENTS COUNCIL FOR IMPROVED SCHOOLS, whose primary activity was political action in their efforts to elect a "liberal" school board. Since that time the leadership and emphasis has shifted somewhat and in an effort to remove the stigma attached to the old organization, a new one called the HOUSTON ASSOCIATION FOR BETTER SCHOOLS was organized. Needless to say, some of the same leadership prevails, however it's much broader in scope and outlook and might justifiably be considered a mass organization. The antics of the school board of late, on every conceivable item, has been so ludicrous that today persons are members of HABS that never would have considered it before.

While I have been a member of HABS since its inception, I have not played a prominent role other than to serve on several special committees. Of late there has been a growing sentiment on the part of the HABS members that something must be done to prepare the community for desegregation when it does come to Houston. There is a group of PH.D's in the organization, who feel very strongly on this and who wanted to take some action.

This desire for action provided me with an excellent opportunity of working with this group which was formed into a special committee by HABS to look into what might be done. I met with this group at least a half dozen times and spoke to members of the committee by phone even more. On December 29th, a special meeting was held by this committee, to which were invited representatives of all organizations, Negro and white, which either directly or indirectly were concerned with the problem. The purpose of the meeting was to get their ideas as to whether in coping with this problem a new organization should be set up, a coordinating committee of organizations or whether it should be a committee of HABS. I presented a detailed analysis of the desegregation process in other communities, with some specific suggestions as to action which might be taken.

The group was generally in agreement that in the beginning the committee be made up of individuals and organizations interested in desegregation but that much of the direction and activity eminate from HABS; that the committee concern itself with peaceful desegregation and not become involved directly, that is, with a specific plan for desegregation. This is one point which was worked over at considerable length, there being many persons at the meeting who felt that it was essential to submit some proposal for desegregation.

As things now stand HABS will consider the proposals at a Board meeting tonight. There is every indication that they will accept the suggestions of their special committee and help organize a group similar to what I have described above. Plans for this group will consist of a speakers bureau, newsletter, and consideration is being given to radio and TV panel programs dealing with the problem. As I stated earlier the emphasisw will be on law and order, on peaceful desegregation and not on any plan for bringing about desegregation. We are going on the assumption that the School Board will submit the plan. Of course we anticipate that the action of such a committee will tend to keep the pressure on the School Board, so that some plan would be forthcoming. At the same time avoiding any specific proposal will tend to enhance the group's chances of attracting the moderates in the community, who at the moment have no place to go.

At the same time, I am in the process of bringing together some of the social scientists from the University of Houston and Rice Institute along with the few human relations pros in the community, for regular skull sessions in the hopes that these fellows will be able to provide ideas and counsel for activities in the community. As an example, one of the faculty persons I have in mind has done considerable work in the area of public opinion research. It would be invaluable to community action contemplated to have the benefit of public opinion surveys that can be conducted quickly on various aspects of the desegregation process.

As things move along, I will keep you posted on significant steps which are taken in this community.

Dear Fred:

Enclosed is the report which I wrote after my visit to Houston last September. I have borrowed this copy from a colleague and will appreciate it if you will return it to me after you have read it.

Appeals to two foundations were made on the basis of this report. We are anxiously waiting for replies and look forward, if money is forthcoming, to announcing the expansion of our merit employment program into Houston.

I appreciated the comments you made about Houston and hope we can get together sometime to share information on our contacts there.

Best wishes.

Dear Jean:

Thanks for the copy of your fine report on Houston; we have made a copy for our files. I concur with your evaluation of the situation there. A merit employment project would be of real significance and there are sufficient resources in terms of interested people to make it successful. I hope that the AFSC will obtain foundation help for this proposal.

It was good to see you at the recent Southern Interagency Conference here in Atlanta. I, too, hope we can move Houston ahead in the whole area of human relations including school desegregation.

Best regards.

Dear Fred:

I am sure that you will be interested in the confidential resume (attached) of the meeting on February 17 which I prepared to give Mrs. Morton Sanger perspective and guidance in arranging for the next meeting scheduled on March 10. Because of the agreement that the meeting was in executive session and in order not to violate any confidences, I avoided individual references and identifications.

Jack Goren, Dallas Chairman, who was ill on the day of the meeting and unable to attend, also wanted to have a more comprehensive report which he could study at his leisure. He received a copy of the attached. No other persons received copies.

You are at liberty to use the whole or any part of this report at your discretion, ever mindful of the confidential nature of our discussion on February 17.

I am in communication with Ed Kloppe and with Mrs. Sanger. Also, with Reverend Sims - preparing for the session on March 10.

A UNITED FUND AGENCY

The Welfare of the People Is a Concern of the Churches

RECOMMENDATIONS FROM THE STEERING COMMITTEE

The Steering Committee met on February 24, 1959, and on March 4, 1959. There was considerable discussion and exploration among members of this group to arrive at the following recommendations:

1. That, at the next general meeting, those present vote to organize a Council on Human Relations.

2. That those present constitute themselves as a temporary Board of Directors to be responsible for the work of the Council until a duly authorized Board can be elected.

3. That the person now serving as convener be asked to continue to serve in that capacity until officers are elected.

4. That a small committee be authorited to select names for an Advisory body.

5. That the Council consider one or more of the following projects and begin to work immediately:

   a. Ask the Mayor and City Council to organize a Council on Civic Unity and help set up this organization. This could have a quasi-judicial function, with power of subpoena, to investigate discrimination in employment, housing, and other areas. At first it should be a body of responsible citizens who would be called together to analyze the situation, and make recommendations to those who can affect a change.

   b. Encourage the police department to hold a training program on how to handle violence and race riots. Also, help policemen to be more objective in making arrests in situations involving parties of more than one race.

   c. Gather facts on how a community is affected economically by the closing of schools, and share this information through the Chamber of Commerce and other community groups.

   d. Be a coordinating organization for other action groups in the city.

   e. Be an information center, gather facts and figures and material on all phases of human relations.

   f. Organize a program of public interpretation, using forums, speakers to be sent to existing groups, radio, T.V., newspapers, and other media.

   g. Get responsible leaders of both political parties to write into party platforms a statement to the effect that they will not resort to bigotry, and will stand behind a program promoting goodwill among the races.

   h. Stimulate local branches of national organizations, such as Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, labor, church groups, etc., to effectively promote the national policies in race practices.

   i. Work with the United Fund in order that local agencies may be free to pursue policies and practices they deem best without economic pressure being applied.

j. Begin educational spade work with real estate boards to ease the tension in the housing situation.

k. Approach the universities of this area to see what their plans are in regard to desegregation.

l. Encourage cultural institutions such as the Art Museum, the Symphony, the theaters, etc., to adopt and maintain a liberal policy toward the attendance and participation of minorities in their activities.

m. Support the effort of doctors, ministers, teachers, lawyers, and others as they promote integration of their professional groups.

n. Encourage local radio and TV stations to use members of minorities in their various programs - e.g. in a program on history, use a Negro historian, etc.

o. Inquire what plan the local school board has for desegregation. Work with PTA, churches, and civic groups in the geographical areas which will be specifically affected in an effort to build understanding and a smooth transition.

p. Urge the School Board to integrate the faculty and other school personnel.

q. Organize a letter writing campaign to the newspapers, offering rebuttal to those who are bigoted, and supporting the efforts of democratic groups and responsible leaders in making desegration effective without violence.

r. Offer a series of lectures, featuring experts and community leaders, to provide a channel for discussion, pro and con, on the crisis of education in Houston as it is affected by the Supreme Court decision. A nominal charge might be made to cover costs.

s. Work with the teachers who will be teaching in integrated schools to prepare them for this assignment. Approach the University of Houston and the University of Texas and ask them to offer courses on the technical problems involved.

t. Begin a wide-spread advertising campaign using billboards, handbills, bus signs, etc. to promote goodwill in the community. The Institute for American Democracy and the Anti-Defamation League could be helpful in this enterprise.

u. Ask the churches to refuse to use their facilities for private schools in the event the public schools should be closed. A clear cut statement from the churches before the local school authorities consider this possibility would effect their thinking and decision.

v. Organize an effort to eliminate all the signs and symbols of segregation which are embarrassing to Negroes and white people alike. This would include signs on drinking fountains, eating facilities, transportation depots, etc.

Dear Jim:

Thanks for your letter of April 1, containing the recommendations of the steering committee of the Greater Houston Council on Human Relations, and also the constitution.

I am in between trips, hence the delay in answering your letter. I will be back in the office Monday, the 13th, and will answer in some detail at that time. This is just a note of acknowledgment.

In haste, but with best regards,

Cordially,

Some time ago, I wrote you relative to my activities with the Houston Association for Better Schools, Committee on Peaceful Desegregation.

While the progress has been slow, each step has been taken with exacting care. At this writing the group is operating at two different levels. First, there has been involvement of our so-called status or power people, who are being prepared for a specific public role when actual desegregation does take place in Houston. There is general agreement over their need to speak out publicly when the time comes. This group is headed by Palmer Hutcheson, a judge and a person of high repute, who is marshalling supporters for this aspect of the program.

The other aspect of the Committee's work will be of a general informational nature with hopefully mass support. Attached is a copy of the credo they have adopted. One of their first projects will be to attempt to get the Houston Chamber of Commerce to send out copies of "The Economic Effect of School Closing" by Jim Montgomery to all of its members. Failing this, HABS will send it out on their own. They are planning a speakers bureau, a library of information on desegregation and a public meeting featuring a person of the stature of Arthur Fleming.

The group appears to be functioning fairly effectively. How they will hold up under fire when their activities are splashed over the front pages of the local press is another question.

Kindest regards.

Ted

We believe that the uninterrupted operation of the public schools is essential to the continued development of the informed citizenry so important to our existence as a free society.

We believe that legal means of preventing desegregation, short of closing the schools, have failed.

We are opposed to the use of violence or the threat of violence as a means of resisting desegregation.

We believe that responsible leadership can prevent or greatly lessen the emotional tensions that lead to violent actions.

We believe that each of us as a citizen is to some extent a leader in organizations, jobs, church or family. None of us can escape a measure of personal responsibility for the course of events in our own community.

Houston Plan

Selective Desegregation Proposed

Here is the text of the desegregation plan presented to the Houston school board by its attorney, Joe Reynolds. No action has been taken on it:

All of the courts have held that a program to implement desegregation may vary with each school district. What has been approved or not approved in other areas may or may not be a criteria for the Houston Independent School District, hence this special program:

1) Commence desegregation on an area basis rather than a grade basis.

A) Because of the vastness of the Houston Independent School District and because of the tremendous confusion that would result from a district-wide program, schools should be selected on a careful basis to commence the program. Secondary schools particularly should be considered.

B) Because resistance and hostility might arise by the designation of any particular school, it is suggested that a survey be made of every school in the Houston Independent School District by inquiring of the parents of each child in the district as to whether or not they would object to desegregating the school where their child attends on the assurance that the scholastic achievement and grade level would not be lowered appreciably by such a program.

C) Because some parents perhaps would object because of a fear of reprisal, a special committee appointed by the board should tabulate the results of such a survey with the statements of the parents remaining secret.

D) This would allow the board then to designate specific schools where there is the least objection. This method of determination is in keeping with democratic processes. It also serves to advise the board how many schools will be needed for the program originally.

E) Because of a liberal-transfer policy which would have to be part of any such program, an accurate estimate could be made as to the number of pupils that would be involved, necessary arrangements could be made whereby necessary classroom space can be made available and whereby sufficient teacher personnel can be designated to teach such classes. It is suggested that the teachers selected for this type of duty be selected from volunteers among the white teachers. (It is recommended that none of our colored teachers be assigned to teach the white students at this time. We know of no court decision which requires otherwise and it is felt in light of comments made by the Federal District Court that such procedure would be in order.)

F) In order to assure the proper grade level of achievement, it is suggested that students of a different color applying for admission to the school to be desegregated, be individually tested by the regular testing teams of the school district.

G) The Corpus Christi plan required prior to the transfer of a colored student to a predominantly white school that permission of the principal of the school from which the child would be transferred be obtained. This may or may not be desirable, but it is suggested that the principal of the desegregated school, after testing the students, be given the responsibility for passing upon the application of the child seeking transfer. The principal should be instructed that no application would be denied solely on the grounds of race. Moreover, all parents should be advised that if their child is denied admission by the principal that they be given the right to appeal such decision to the Board of Trustees.

2) Inasmuch as the Federal District Court has stated that there are no court decisions requiring an integration of social programs within a school, we do not offer any suggestion in that connection. From our point of view, this is purely a matter of administration.

3) A liberal transfer policy should be allowed.

A) After the program above mentioned has been in operation at an area school, children desiring to attend a desegregated school should be allowed to transfer to said school upon complying with the conditions aforesaid provided space is available.

B) After the selected schools have operated on a desegregated basis for a period of time sufficient for the superintendent to study the programs, the desegregated schools could become available for all the children in the district desiring admission to such desegregated schools. The same strict supervision would apply.

4) At such time as the selected schools became inadequate to house and to take care of students desiring to go to desegregated schools, additional area schools could be designated desegregated schools by following the same procedures and program as outlined for the original schools.

5) It is felt that the above program will meet the spirit and the letter of the law as presently required by our federal court. It complies with the good faith requirements of the court order, allows the school patrons themselves to determine the selection of the schools, maintains the high academic standard desired by the entire school district, does not force integration upon anyone, and provides for desegregation for all who want it. Moreover, it is designed to function without seriously affecting the ever-present problem of overcrowded schools of the Houston Independent School District.

6) The above plan is subject to Article 3900a, Texas Civil Statutes, which provides in Section 1 that no board of trustees shall have the right to abolish the dual public school system unless by a prior vote of the qualified electors residing in such district. Section 2 provides that an election shall be called only upon a petition of at least 30 per cent of the qualified electors residing in such district and further provides in Section 4 that in the event the school district attempts to desegregate without complying with this act that such school district will be ineligible to receive the funds from the foundation program. In addition, any person who violates the act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not less than $100 and no more than $1,000. The federal court in Dallas refused to consider the question of the constitutionality of this statute until the matter was determined by a Texas court. In light thereof, it would appear that we are compelled to follow this statute until otherwise determined.

It is suggested that the board take affirmative action to obtain a petition signed by at least 30 per cent of the qualified electors in the district in order that such election may be called.

AN ASSESSMENT OF THE HOUSTON, TEXAS "CLIMATE FOR DESEGREGATION"

Bonita H. Valien, SRC Consultant
May 10, 1959

After a thorough analysis of the field reports on Houston, Texas, found in the files of the Southern Regional Council, it seemed that the most profitable approach that an SRC consultant could make at this time was not that of "fact-gathering" as such, but rather, by using certain leads gathered from the reports, to see what these "facts" mean. Thus, the emphasis was upon assessing the community climate in terms of "feeling tones" -- what, for example, does the community feel about itself? What is the "community attitude" with reference to its leaders, its organizations and institutions and their relative effectiveness? With reference to their institutions and organizations, to what extent are they value-oriented, power-oriented, or participation-oriented? What are the major problems in the community as seen by the people? As seen by the leaders? To what extent do the people and their leaders see their problems as being of a sort that can be handled through the use of ideas and institutions which they already possess? Do they perceive the problems at hand as those that require collective solution? Do they perceive the possibility of influencing policy makers by the combined efforts of many people working in coordination? If so, do they perceive that such coordination is possible?

In an attempt to answer the above, persons representing a cross-section of the community, both Negro and white residents, were interviewed. Because of a felt need on the part of the consultant, more of the consultant's time was spent "assessing the Negro community" than has usually been the case in visits to other communities.

HOUSTON, As A Community:

Houston, the seventh largest city in the United States, growing rapidly as an important industrial center, can best be described sociologically as a "frontier town." As is to be expected, within this more or less "frontier mentality", one feels rather widespread discontent (still somewhat covert) with the status-quo, and a sense of expanding horizons.

In its institutional pattern, Houston is a rigidly segregated community, but within this segregated community there are many paradoxes. Sociologically, Houston reflects many social patterns characteristic of the deep South. While adhering to a pattern of strict segregation in its more formal aspects, there is considerable rapport established in interpersonal relationships. Negroes and whites work together in some organizations on an equal-status basis, visit together in each other's homes and refer to each other as "friends". This type of association, though limited to a few of the Negroes and whites at middle and upper-middle class levels, has kept lines of communication open between the two racial groups. Within this special group, however, there is the feeling on the part of some Negroes that the relationship between the two races became "somewhat strained" immediately following the 1954 Supreme Court decision. While there is the feeling on the part of some Negroes that there appears still to be a bit of "uneasiness" and "cautiousness" on the part of whites, as compared with pre-1954 Supreme Court decision days, there continues to be sufficient "communication" and "understanding" that cooperation and association across racial lines continue.

There is the feeling among a fairly large segment of the population -- both Negro and white -- that there is far more racial "good will" and cooperation across racial lines than is generally known or believed. The recent conduct of Mrs. White's campaign for membership on the Houston Independent School District Board is given as an example. Mrs. White's campaign manager, Gould Beach, is a white liberal. It was pointed out somewhat significantly that not only did Mrs. White receive the largest number of votes of any other candidate, but that there was not a single box, irrespective of its location (even in the most conservative white areas) which did not carry votes for Mrs. White. There are many interpretations as to why Mrs. White, a Negro, was a successful candiate at this time There are many groups which, naturally, take sole credit for her election. Perhaps no one interpretation is wholly correct; it is reasonable to assume that no one organization did the job. What does seem highly significant is that it was accomplished by Negroes and whites working publicly together, and this in an environment where Minute Women and White Citizen Council Members continue to be vocal and wield considerable influence. Whatever the election says or does not say, it is reasonable to conclude, it seems, that there are positive influences at work in the Houston community which cannot be ignored and which ought to be encouraged. A well-respected Negro leader insists that the election of Mrs. White shows clearly that "the people of Houston are well ahead of their leaders and their politicians". (This, I am certain, could be said of many communities; maybe it can be said of Houston, moreso; I don't know). Whatever might have been the reasons for the election, both Negroes and whites point to Mrs. White's election with pride. It makes their community "look good". It is this intense pride which the Houston community has in and for itself that is one of the big positives which makes one confident that this community could, without too much difficulty, desegregate many of its institutions -- given the proper leadership.

While there appears to be some evidence that there is slowly emerging a small group of whites who are addressing themselves to the principle of "total equality" and unrestricted opportunity for all of its citizens, it seems to be entirely valid to say that by and large, the majority of whites working across racial lines still subscribe to a "separate-but-equal" philosophy, and to the "gradual" approach. This philosophy is not always articulated, and many persons and groups hold it without being aware of it. Some Negroes justify their failure to participate more actively in inter-racial organizations on the basis that "most whites in their racial views are still thinking in "separate-but-equal" terms, and that they view any positive step, no matter how small, as a monumental gain. "What Negroes are gaining in Houston," complained one Negro leader, "is what many communities, with much less the potential, accomplished twenty or more years ago. I can't agree with those who think we are making progress when, in a city like Houston, there are still signs plastered everywhere calling for the most insulting type of segregation and rank discrimination."

What, then, are some of the impediments? In the opinion of many, many citizens, both Negro and white, what happens or fails to happen in Houston is almost invariably attributed to "politics" and "money". Little, if any importance, is placed upon those organizations which operate without the "blessings" of either. Organizations which are formed without this expressed objective are viewed with suspicion -- either they are the vehicle to promote one into the political arena, or it is a means of "getting some quick money." Houston is a city of many organizations. Within this plethora of organizations it is possible to find all types and shades -- ranging from the most reactionary, as found in the Minute Women and Citizen Councils, to the most liberal, characterized by DOT -- the young Democrats of Texas (who refer to themselves as "liberals"). Most organizations fall somewhere in between. Many organizations exist in "name" only, some are"crisis" organizations; some, because of either ambiguous goals or ambivalently-held compromises, carry neither sustained public interest nor action. Sustained public interest require both direction and focus.

Despite what appears to be an over-emphasis on power-oriented organizations, there are value-oriented and participation-oriented groups working across racial lines. Included in these categories are: The Council on Education in Race Relations, composed of: Council of Churches of Greater Houston, YWCA, Ministers Association of Greater

Houston, Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, Jewish Community Council, Houston Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Rabbinical Association of Houston, United Church Women of Houston; the Interracial Forum; the Texas Commission on Human Relations, etc. (This does not exhaust the list). In some of the organizations mentioned above, work across racial lines has begun only recently; some have had a longer history. The nature and extent of interracial cooperation are viewed by both groups as being far from ideal. In dealing directly with the real fundamentals of the race problem, these organizations were often described by some as being "disinterested" or as "giving only token support."

As is true in most communities, such organizations working across racial lines include many of the same people -- the "human relations people". Again, as is true in most communities, Negroes view whites who participate in such groups variously, ranging from the extreme of "deceitful", "opportunists" --"they only use Negroes to make their point to get where they want to get and then forget about the Negro"-- "without courage" -- will fold up and run for cover when there is a major crisis, "do-gooders"; to the other extreme they are described as "hardworking" -- work much harder for the cause than Negroes themselves, "sincere", "dedicated", and a "real liberal". Each person or groups of persons supplying an adjective felt there were adequate examples to document their particular point of view. Whites on the other hand view Negroes as "lacking in aggression", "easy to become discouraged," "suspicious", and "over sensitive"; the other extreme include "sincere", "intelligent", "dedicated" and "militant". They, too, feel that an experience or so justifies their particular adjective as fitting. This group typology is not unusual, neither has it interferred with the normal working relationships between racial groups.

In discussing organizational structure, it became clear that objectives and programs of many organizations are not usually well known (both by the people within the organization and those without) and thus organizations are most often criticized for not doing things which within their organizational structure and programming it was never intended to do. A Negro organization which has as its primary purpose that of holding luncheon meetings and presenting various speakers (and in this role is doing an important job in the community) is described by some as simply useless — "They simply meet and eat!" Almost invariably, one hears that there are "plenty of organizations", "plenty of meetings", but"nothing really significant is being done". This charge is made by many people both Negro and white within and outside of organizations. This, too, is not unique in Houston. But, and this is important, there is not satisfaction with a state of "doing nothing" and one finds a significant group, both within and without organizations anxious to do something constructive. One senses feelings of frustration, and an unwillingness on the part of some concerned people to use their energies in what may be described, and often is "just busyness". There seems to be a real potential in Houston for solid, well focused and directed activity.

What About Leadership?

As is to be expected in any large urban center, there is no one person who is thought of as being the leader. There are many persons and groups considered influential in certain areas of activity. There is, perhaps, no strata of the population in which there will not be found persons concerned, and working in the area of human relations. While white men representing the business interests of the city are considered very conservative, some of the most dedicated workers in the field of community betterment are substantial business executives. Also, persons representing some of the oldest and richest families of the area can be found identifying with groups and organizations working for the betterment of all its citizens. Within the Houston community, there is a significant number of whites who are recognized by both Negroes and whites alike as being forthright and willing to be openly associated with and assume leadership in community groups working for better human relations.

It should be stated, however, that while there are those who identify positively on the side of human rights, for the most part, the voices most often heard, and the influence most often felt by the entire community are those of the conservative elements. It is in this particular relationship where most criticism is voiced. There is the general feeling that had the liberal element taken a more positive and aggressive stand immediately following the Supreme court decision, especially in the election of school board members, the school desegregation story would be a very different one. Instead, the liberal elements have been described as "burying their heads in the sand", and only now are they becoming alive and "asserting themselves in a responsible manner."

Within the Negro community, perhaps the largest potential for leadership -- the Negro minister -- is the weakest. An uneducated group, it is jealous of its position in the community and offers little support to organizations or groups which they do not organize or which they do not control. (In this same vein, the white minister is also considered weak and not a particular dynamic influence in the community). The teachers, representing the largest middle class group in the Negro community, are without any influence, and very little prestige. They are described by the Negro community as "the most pathetic group of all." Fear of the loss of their jobs is given asthe primary reason for lack of participation in human relations activities. Business men give sporadic support to organizations and movements, but have had, in the opinion of the average Negro citizen, little impact on bringing about better human relations in the larger community. Labor groups consider themselves strong. (The estimate of their strength is not shared to the same extent by the Negro community). Labor union members relate more directly to the rank and file Negro, and feel that they are fighting the "battle" in the Negro community alone. With the exception of the militant leadership of publisher Carter Wesley, and perhaps the somewhat less militant but dedicated insurance executive Charles Shaw, this group seems to feel that the "so-called upper-class Negro is interested only in buying fancy homes and cars; they care nothing for the rest of the community, and to escape the discomforts around the school situation, they send their children away to school." The NAACP is weak and, in my opinion, will continue so under its present leadership. While there is excellent potential in both the Negro Chamber of Commerce and the Harris County Council of Organizations, each of these organizations has suffered from lack of effective leadership. There is some hope that under its new leadership, the Harris County Council of Organizations (composed of some 57 organizations) will become a more effective instrument in the Negro community.

The Negro community is, for the most part, a proto-type of the larger community. While one senses an all-too lethargic Negro community, it is, for the most part, a concerned community. There needs to be considerable work done with this segment of the population to help them see their potential and actually set themselves in motion to do something about realizing it. Somehow they must be made to realize that in many of these problem areas they will have to take the initiative. At the present, Negroes seem to be afraid to project themselves alone, yet they stand in fear that by working with other groups they will be either "taken advantage of and committed to a long-drawn out gradual program," or "taken over." This is a natural kind of fear of people in insecure positions. But it has to be both reckoned with and met. The Negro community must be activated, stimulated and encouraged to work aggressively in its own behalf. It must be encouraged to seek out and work with all groups whose concern is for community betterment. Negro women should seek membership in and work with such organizations as the League of Women Voters, American Association of University Women, and like organizations.

With the limited employment opportunities available to Negroes, Houston's loss in human resources has been very great. The major job openings for the Negro college trained has been that of teaching in the public schools. Up until the past two or three years, when national teachers' examinations were instituted, "influence" was the basis upon which a Negro secured a position in the public schools; qualifications were secondary. Under such a system, paternalism was the accepted pattern, and teachers were treated very much as "domestics" rather than professionals. Even today, school officials refer to Negro teachers by their first name, while white teachers are addressed using the appropriate title of respect. Thus, persons without "influence" (this "influence" was usually at the level of servant-master relationship) could not secure a teaching position and consequently left the city. There was also a group which refused to adopt the type of accommodating behavior which was expected; they,too, left. It is, therefore, not surprising that these teachers, for the most part, would exhibit such behavior patterns. It is also understandable that school officials, at the present time, evince much concern regarding the preparation of the Negro teachers for an integrated school system. They know only too well the basis upon which these teachers have been employed. It should be stated, however, that there are within the public school some Negro teachers who are well qualified, and some better qualified than whites.

With industrial expansion, employment other than teaching is gradually being opened up in Houston, and if the AFS Merit Employment Program gets underway (the initial and required $5,000 has already been raised) this should do much to raise the general level of Negro employment. It is expected that TSU, which is already being felt as an influence in the community, will become increasingly effective and will provide some positive leadership.

WHAT ABOUT THE DESEGREGATION OF THE SCHOOLS?

When asked about the desegregation of the schools, the typical and standard remark from the Superintendent of Schools on down is that "It's coming". But just when, no one is able to hazard a guess, and even the most optimistic person doesn't see it "coming" soon. The School Board majority is opposed to the desegregation of the schools. It is reported that the Board has "thrown out" every plan that has been presented them -- even from committees whom they appointed. The Superintendent confided that some consideration had been given to a plan which would be "very gradual and would provide a minimum of integration." A Committee, appointed by the Board has drawn school district lines, and there has been "much study", according to the Superintendent. The Superintendent, having carried through the successful desegregation of the schools in Amarillo, Texas, seems to be knowledgeable, but it is very clear that he will not take the leadership in proposing a plan of desegregation for Houston. He appears to have little or no influence with the school board, and is very anxious to "keep his job" — and this, he obviously interprets, is possible only if he remains uncontroversial and does the bidding of the majority members of the Board. His lack of influence with the Board was clearly demonstrated recently when the Board voted down his nominee for a business officer, and appointed a person whom he said he did not want. The person approved by the Board was the assistant to the business officer who is being retired because of unscrupulous fiscal policies. After the appointment of this business officer, the superintendent stated, he "could work with this appointee."

There is no preparation being made within the school system itself for the desegregation of the schools. With the exception of the work which the superintendent says Negro teachers are doing with the Negro pupils, there is no other preparation.

The superintendent stated that the Negro teachers are working extra hard to bring up the achievement level of the Negro child so that the Negro child will be prepared to meet the competition in a desegregated school. He pointed out that the wide discrepancy between Negro and white children in their achievement scores, beginning as early as the third grade, could make integration almost impossible at this time. He says considerable work is being done to bring the Negro child up to the level of the white child. Negro and white teachers meet separately; there is no in-service training program; neither "is there any anticipated at this time or the immediate future," according to the superintendent.

Every attempt is being made to build physically attractive schools for Negroes. This is with the clear hope that Negroes will then become "satisfied" with their own schools and will not push to enter the public schools nearest their homes. A bond issue, calling for monies to build additional schools, and the replacement of temporary school buildings with more permanent structures, comes up for a vote during the latter part of May. It is being opposed by Negro groups and some white groups, because it is felt that to build additional schools before there is a commitment to desegregation will help to perpetuate segregated schools. The proposed schools are being located, for the most part, in predominantly Negro neighborhoods. There is, however, considerable pressure in support of the bond issue. Attached to the bond issue is a provision for the raising of teachers' salaries. While there will be opposition, there is the general belief that the bond issue will be approved by a substantial majority.

It is believed that the two factors which will most likely contribute to the desegregation of the public schools are: (1) vigorous and consistent pressure from the Negro community for the prompt desegregation of the schools. NAACP officials confided that they have been working secretly and will perhaps start some activity within the next week or ten days. The nature of the activity was not disclosed. The NAACP has been getting constant criticism from the Negroes and whites alike for its lack of activity. Some Negroes have even accused NAACP officials of "selling out", but there are others who consider the officials simply "inept" and give little or no validity to the charge of "sell out". At any event, activity is promised before the opening of the next school year. The nature of it, and its effectiveness are yet to be seen. (2) Defeat of the conservative members of the school board and their replacement with liberal members who will put into effect a plan for desegregation. Two members of the conservative wing of the Board come up for re-election next year. Already there are groups at work in the hope that they might find acceptable liberal candidates tc replace these conservative members.

AN OVERVIEW AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Houston is essentially a power-oriented community. Whatever is proposed as community action must, of necessity, take this into consideration, and it is within this frame of reference that recommendations are being made.

The formation of public opinion occurs in large measure through the interaction of groups. The expression of public opinion is in the form of direct influence on those who are to act in response to public opinion. Through coordinated activity, interested groups and individuals bring their views and positions to bear on the key persons who have to make decisions. Views count pretty much on the basis of how the individual judges the "backing" of the views and the implications of the backing. It is in this sense, again, that the organization of the society with its differentiation of prestige and power, enter into the character of public opinion, and consequently community action. As the sociologist Herbert Blumer once said, unless one wishes to conjure in his imagination a very fanciful society, he must admit that the servant of public opinion is forced to make an assessment of the expressions of public opinion that come to his attention and that in this assessment consideration is given to expressions only to the extent to which they are judged to "count".

As indicated throughout this report, power-oriented Houston is characterized by many organizations, and at every strata of its population there are informed and dedicated persons, both Negro and white, who are willing to be associated with groups working for better human relations. There is communication between the races. There are whites in the community willing to work with Negroes on an equal-status basis. With this potential, the following is being proposed as important next steps in community action:

1. A Clearing House and Central Coordinating Committee: In order to eliminate the feeling of "idle busyness", unnecessary duplication and frustration which seem to characterize the organizational structure of Houston, and to promote a more effective utilization of organizations and the human resources available, it is being recommended that A Clearing House and Central Coordinating Committee be set up. It is being suggested that the committee which has been assembled by Mr. Noland assume this responsibility, and that the committee which is now in the process of being formed not be officially organized until it is clear what function it could more realistically perform. A check among persons in the commuhity revealed that the persons on this committee, including Mr. Noland, enjoy the highest respect in both the Negro and white community. A group enjoying such confidence of persons in the community are ideally suited for performing a clearing house and coordinating function. It would be the function of such a committee, among other things, to set up a complete file of all organizations setting forth their program and objectives; stimulate each group to work in the area in which it is most competent, and seek to eliminate duplication while at the same time it preserves the integrity of each group, creating both a sense of unity and participation in this coordinated venture, rather than one of competition.

2. Involvement of the Professional in Practical Research: To provide a scientific base, and undergird social action, there is need for practical research in Houston in the whole area of human relations. There is a job for the professional. It is being proposed that the university faculties of the various local universities be encouraged to initiate such research. Members of the social science faculties at both the University of Houston and Texas Southern have indicated interest in such inter-disciplinary cooperative research. A professional who might be induced to take the initiative to convene such a group is Ted Freedman, regional executive of the ADL office based in Houston.

3. A Workshop for Key Community Persons: Concerned persons have indicated interest and need of assistance from professionals in defining and working through, in an effective manner, problems in the community as they relate to the whole area of human relations. It is being suggested that a workshop, involving key community people, and staffed by SRC consultants be held. Here major problems and approaches would be discussed.

4. Community Involvement: Following this smaller workshop, and relying heavily upon the smaller workshop (held earlier) for major emphases, there would be an attempt to involve as many community organizations and persons as possible. It is being suggested that SRC would assist in providing leadership and consultant services.

5. A Community Self-Survey: Because of the therapeutic value it would have on the entire Houston community, it would seem to me to be highly desirable that an appropriate group request the AMA Race Relations Department, based at Fisk University, to come into Houston and assist in conducting a Community Self Survey. In my opinion, Houston is ready for such a survey, and my guess is that at the culmination of such a survey, Houston, too, like Minneapolis would report, "How It Beat Its Bigots".[1]

Dear Mr. Routh:

Mrs. Bonita Valien's visit to Houston was very well received and most beneficial. We are grateful to The Southern Regional Council for sending her. Naturally, we shall be eager to receive her evaluation of our situation.

You will be interested to know that since she was here, the NAACP entered the suit against the school board; and our need for a Southern Regional Council program has become more critical.

As I size up the situation it is like this:

1. Our need is critical.

2. There is readiness of community for a constructive program.

3. If we had financing to make a staff person available, we could surround him with strong lay people who are willing to work.

4. A positive move now could save Houston from becoming another Little Rock, and it could be the symbol for other Texas cities, and perhaps cities in other Southern states, to follow.

5. In the meantime our group is moving ahead with a number of limited projects, but I hesitate to build up too much steam unless it can be supported through a professionally offered service.

I should appreciate hearing from you as soon as you can give us a favorable word.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Noland:

This is to acknowledge your letter of June 8 addressed to Fred Routh. Fred evidently failed to let you know that he was leaving the Council to become director of the Michigan Fair Employment Commission.

In any case, I am sorry, as he undoubtedly is too, that his departure from the staff came in the midst of negotiations about possible aid by SRC to a Greater Houston Council on Human Relations. As Fred has told you, our attitude is favorable, provided that the final arrangement can be worked out agreeably with the Texas Council on Human Relations and the other cooperating agencies.

Fred's replacement for field work is Paul Rilling, presently executive director of the Virginia Council on Human Relations, who will join us on July 1. Although I am sorry for the delay, I do feel we must wait until he is on the job before proceeding further; for it will be Rilling who must maintain future liaison between SRC and such like-minded efforts as yours.

Please accept my apologies for this further delay and my assurances that the Houston situation will be at the top of Paul Rilling's list of priorities.

Sincerely,

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Room 432, 63 Auburn Avenue N.E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Rilling:

For myself and for the Steering Committee of the Houston Council on Human Relations, I want to welcome you to your new post with the Southern Regional Council.

Last year your predecessor, Fred Routh, was in Houston and stirred up quite a bit of interest in a local Houston organization to be affiliated with the Southern Regional Council. We immediately found 90 plus citizens, of fine standing in the community, who would work in such a movement.

Out of this number we organized a provisional group, and have undertaken a few ad hoc projects. Mrs. Bonita Valian, a member of your field staff, surveyed our situation, and I understand she felt our situation was ripe for action.

She recommended, among other things, that we sponsor a closed workshop to inform our leaders what the problem is in Houston, and to determine what our resources are, and what our common strategy should be. She said the Southern Regional Council would provide leaders for this and for other public meetings. What would be a suitable early date, and whom could we expect as leaders?

On July 24, at the South Central YMCA, our group will hold a noon luncheon to develop plans for the closed workshop, for a large public meeting, and for a number of smaller projects. I was asked to write you to see whether you would be free to attend this meeting. I personally will not be in town, but I am sure enough of our people will be here to give you a good opportunity to further explore our city for programming.

A UNITED FUND AGENCY

This fall, as early as possible, we would like to have Marion Wright to come to Houston for a large dinner meeting to which we would invite some of the opinion making leaders of this city. We wonder if you will arrange this for us with Mr. Wright and inform us about a suitable date. Also if you will let us know the extent the Southern Regional Council will help finance this public venture, we would appreciate this information. Perhaps Mr. Wright would be available for other educational programs, and if so, we should be glad to make whatever arrangements he needs.

Our situation in Houston, as I wrote Mr. Fleming, is critical. We need: (1) pump priming financial help until we can build local support; and (2) a full-time executive staff person. Your help is earnestly solicited and your service will be rewarded many fold.

Again welcome to your new assignment. We shall await eagerly to hear from you.

Sincerely,

James R. Noland

Dear Jean:

Thanks for your letter regarding the Houston situation. This background is very helpful, and we'll be prepared to give Dr. Bayles and his group any assistance we can.

We've been negotiating for some time with Jim Noland and other human relations people there about the possibility of financial aid to an inter-agency effort in Houston. Did this proposed activity come to your attention while you were there? If so, your reactions would be helpful.

Paul Rilling starts with us next week, at which time the Houston situation will be high on his list of priorities.

I hope you will have an early breakthrough on your projected Merit Employment program; Houston strikes me as a very logical place for one.

Dear Harold:

Shortly after the Houston School Board voted to call for a special election on school integration, I was in Houston and had an opportunity to talk with some of the people who are concerned about desegregation. The call for the election has placed liberals in a difficult dilemma. They do not want to cooperate with the School Board in an election under a state law which they believe to be unconstitutional. If they boycott the election and do not make an effort to get out the moderate vote, there will undoubtedly be an overwhelmingly pro-segregationist victory. This would have no legal significance, of course, if the law is thrown out by the courts but considerable damage could be done if more segregationist sentiment is aroused at this time. I suggested to them that perhaps the best strategy would be to prevent the election if they can possibly find good legal grounds.

One of the new groups which has come onto the scene is the Committee for Peaceful Desegregation which is an outgrowth of the Houston Association for Better Schools. The chairman is Dr. Stephen Bayles, 5018 Indigo, Houston. I had a brief session with some of the members of this Committee on my way to the airport the night I left. They were planning to have a meeting and I have not heard whether any decisions were made. I urged them to get in touch with you and told them of the availability of consultants through SRC who could share with them the experiences of other communities. I am sure he would be very grateful if you would write him about the resources which could be made available to Houston through SRC.

We are still waiting to hear whether several foundations which we have approached are willing to underwrite the Merit Employment Program which we hope to establish in Houston. We have been waiting for almost a year and the delay for an impatient neophyte like myself has been almost intolerable.

Best wishes.

Sincerely,

Jean

Dear Mr. Noland:

Upon receiving your letter of July 1st, I went over the back correspondence concerning the H ouston situation. I agree with you that it is important that we move as rapidly as we can to work out whatever arrangements may be possible concerning the Houston Council.

I will definitely plan to be with your group at the South Central YMCA on July 24th to consider plans for a closed workshop and other activities. I am today writing Mr. Marion Wright in an effort to secure him for a dinner meeting in Houston in September. I am suggesting that Mr. Wright clear his schedule for two or three days in case it may be helpful to use him in other programs around this time. I will write you within a few days and suggest some of the staff leadership that might be available for the workshop; although I would suggest that the final selection of leadership be deferred until after the workshop planning meeting July 24th.

We are still not in a position to make final commitments concerning financial aid to the Houston Council. As Harold Fleming wrote you last month, this depends to a large degree on arrangements with the Texas Council on Human Relations and other cooperating agencies.

I anticipate that we can resolve this matter at an early date. In the event that financial assistance has not been made available to you by early fall, the Southern Regional Council will be happy to handle the expenses of a trip to Houston by Mr. Wright. Your group is in the best position to know when a closed workshop would be possible in Houston. I would think the earlier the better, perhaps some time in late August or early September.

I am disappointed to learn that you will not be on hand for the July 24th meeting. I am anxious to meet with you as soon as possible. Would we be able to get together if I came to Houston several days in advance of July 24th? I have done my best to orient myself on the situation but nothing can take the place of first-hand discussion and evaluation.

Dear Bonita:

True to my word I am forwarding to you the following materials: 1) travel advance for $300, 2) a copy of Jean Fairfax's Houston report, and 3) a letter from Jim Noland of the Houston Council of Churches, with attached materials. Note: please return items #2 and #3; they are SRC's file copies.

As you recall, it is our agreement that you will contact key persons in the Houston area, much as you did in Dallas. The object here, however, is to ascertain their interest in working with an interracial effort - with Jim Noland. The second purpose is to seek agreement with Mrs. Crate that some of the money allocated to the Texas Council for this year be channeled to the Greater Houston Council on Human Relations. We would appreciate a report on this matter. If you need further information, feel free to call me collect.

Best regards to Preston and to you.

Dear Jim:

Sorry about the delay in following up my last letter to you, but I have been out of the office a good deal of the time and administrative details took further time.

I about a week, Mrs. Bonita Valien of SRC's Consultant Service Program, will be in the Houston area. She will talk with you, Mrs. Crate and other community leaders about the possibility of establishing a Greater Houston Council on Human Relations, and of the possibility of providing financial assistance from SRC's current allocation to the Texas Council on Human Relations.

I was well pleased with your program proposals. I believe you will find Mrs. Valien of considerable help in reviewing them. She is one of the most competent, action-oriented social scientists I know. You will find her to be sensitive to the problems of the community and knowledgeable about techniques of involving leadership - both Negro and white. I hope this moves things in the right direction.

Dear Harold:

I have just written to Dr. Stephen Bayles in Houston informing him of the Southern Regional Council's willingness to assist his Committee for Peaceful Desegregation and hope he will get in touch with you to tell you more about the group and its objectives.

When I was in Houston last month, I wanted very much to talk with Rev. John Knowles about a new interagency co-ordinating body which he had called together shortly before my visit. Evidently, three groups recently approached the Mayor requesting the formation of an official human relations committee. Concerned about the fact that many different groups are working for the same objectives without consultation with each other, John Knowles invited representatives of human relations organizations to meet together. Fifteen groups, participated in this meeting including the G. I. Forum. I am not sure whether this will be a permanent co-ordinating group but it could make a very valuable contribution. Although I have been to Houston a number of times in the last eighteen months, I am still very much confused about the relationship which some of the human relations organizations have to each other. Some of them seem to be composed of the same people sitting together under a different name. John Knowles seems to be a central figure and could probably give you good advice on how a financial subsidy could most profitably be used in Houston.

If Paul Rilling plans to go to Houston soon, I would be very glad to give him names of people who have been helpful to us. I would especially recommend that he plan to see Irwin Glatstein of the Jewish Community Council, 2020 Hermann Drive. I do not think that your efforts should be centered in Jim Noland's office at the present time. Jim is a terrific guy and we are very grateful to him for the leadership which he gave our effort in its early stages. He has been on the carpet this year, however. The United Fund requested a study of his Bureau because it was felt that he was trying to do too many different kinds of activities. He may not, therefore, be free to give the kind of oversight to a local co-ordinating effort which you would like to have.

Please let us know what you and Paul plan to do in Houston.

What do you know about the "Circuit Riders?" I heard about this group when I was in Houston and I am curious to know whether it is active in many southern communities. From what I heard it is a laymen's group, promoting in the churches an anti-international and anti-integration program. Somehow I find the picture of modern "Erlkoenigs" more ridiculous than frightening but I am curious.

Best wishes.

Jean

The Role of Deliverer

Friend, 'tis not the role for me. As Barbara and I have talked more about it, we have decided that the time for ceremonial delivery of Intimidation, Violence and Reprisals to impressive personages in Washington has probably passed. If we thought that the personal deposit of this record of sin on some important desks could open up some valuable future contacts, it might be worth putting a priority on it. At this point we are inclined to doubt the value of putting a lot of time on it in view of other pressing responsibilities and would favor a procedure which would get the document to the appropriate people most quickly. What about mailing it with a covering letter from James Dabbs?

Dear Paul,

Good to talk with you today. Here are some addresses. Hope someone will provide you with a car. Houston is terrible without one. The downtown YWCA is a good meeting place and has an open policy in its cafeteria, if you wish to meet someone there for a meal.

Thelma Mills. Executive Secretary, YWCA

Dr. Samuel Nabritt, Southern University, 3201 Wheeler — JA 8-0611
Mrs. Olan Rogers, 1238 Althea (was head of the liberal group when it had the majority on the School Board) — OV 6-1947
Dr. Stephen Bayles, 5018 Indigo Street (Houston Committee for Peaceful Desegregation)

I wanted to see members of the Catholic hierarchy but a local emergency prevented their keeping the appointment. Msgr. Roach, Father Lee and the head of Catholic Charities were recommended to me. Also, members of Latin American groups; I think the G.I. Forum participated in the meeting which Knowles called when he was interested in a coordinating council of human relations organizations. If you are interested in the political situation Woodrow Seals, Chronicle Building, CA 3-4633 would be a good contact. The Harris County Democratic Organization, of which Seals is chairman, works interracially.

Mrs. White is the Negro member of the School Board. She is not considered to be a very strong person. Another Negro whom you might wish to meet is Charles Shaw, head of the Watchtown Insurance Company, 2206 Dowling, CA 8-6363, an active Episcopalian who has participated in many of the interracial groups. Good man but you'd learn more from Plummer or Wesley, I think. Labor is quite active in Houston. Perhaps Irwin could suggest the best contact for you, if you're interested.

Have a good trip and let me know what you find.

Visit of SRC Consultant to Arlington, Virginia

January 23-24

My visit to Arlington coincided with one of the now numerous legal climaxes in the movement toward ultimate desegregation of schools in that county. The important news events, in Arlington and the Federal District Court in Richmond, are adequately covered in the clippings enclosed with this report. To save time they will not be recapitulated here.

The key to what happens in Arlington is almost exclusively now to be found in Richmond and in the Federal courts. The string of appeals has almost run out as certainly the school board lawyers, and perhaps even Governor Almond, knew it would. The board and its attorneys never thought they were doing anything but buying time. To have gained any less time would perhaps have meant closing Arlington schools so the board attorneys now feel that their efforts may positively be credited at least with keeping open Arlington schools (with an assist from Judge Bryan).

The school board has now agreed to accept Judge Bryan's order to admit the four Negro children to Stratford school if a stay cannot be obtained from the Supreme Court, to which they will appeal this coming week the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals decision upholding Judge Bryan. Only one board member, James Stockard, opposed seeking the stay. I had a long luncheon session wth him in which he described his argument with the board on this issue. The board is still frightened of Richmond and are convinced that for the future safety of the community they must play the drama out to the last appeal. For the majority of them this course is consistent with their inermost disposition. Stockard feared Richmond retaliation up to a point and went along with previous board action dictated by such fear, but now he says the board must accept the Bryan decision. The only other previously considered liberal member has become more cautious than he was at the outset.

Stockard is a Texan who grew up with traditional viewpoints but now finds himself the only person on the board with the least bit of conviction and courage to openly support desegregation.. The Northern Virginia Sun school reporter, Helen Dewar, says he is the only person on the board she has consistenly found reliable. The others simply cannot be relied on to give consistently straight reprts as to board activities or intentions. Bernard Joy (an Ed.D. from Oregon employed by the Department of Agriculture) was thought to be the most liberal member and Lee Bean, with whom I talked in August, seemed a cautious but fair and honest fellow. Much of what he told me the board was considering turned out to be not true. The collapse of Joy's liberalism and the failure of Bean to come through has disheartened and even infuriated many liberals in the community.

My informants tell me that there are personal political ambitions and personality conflicts (particularly in regard to Joy and to some extent Bean) behind the collapse of what was thought to be a potentially liberal majority on the board. State pressure does not adequately explain it. State attorney General Harrison met with the board in August but Stockard said his approach was pleading and consisted of forbodings about what the legislature might do rather than one of direct threat from the State administration.

Stockard has tried to get the Board to accept a strictly geogrpphical assignment scheme. He has emphasized to them that the evasive criteria of assignment and selection they have tried to develop will lead to dreadfully complex and even untenable precedents, with no consideration for the future. This idea I worked on with Bean in August and he readily agreed that geography was the only tenable ground for school assignment. He then proceded to support the weird scheme that rejected the 30 applicants. xxxxxxxxxxxxxx There is no question in my mind that Bean and Joy know fully just what they are doing, and are aware of its ultimate folly, at least in terms of any criteria we may find relevant.

The amount of influence I have had on the board muct be rather small when measured by the constant pressure on these men from local leaders with prestige who head the now 4,000 members of the Committee to Preserve the Public Schools (CPPS). Bean may have learned something but his other interests and concerns are constantly present and paramount. He told Stockard that he looks at the school situation with three distinct viewpoints and is very careful not to mix them or let them influence each other: 1) as a Christian , 2) as a school board member and 3) as a native southerner in a southern community. Actually he is a decent and charming guy.

The paradox of this board is that while it votes at the same meeting to seek another stay it also passes a sound and firm resolution that no disorder will be tolerated and that peaceful integration will procede if the stay is not granted. It is a model resolution. From my conversations with two board members andwith the former county board chairman (Kaul, still on the board but no longer chairman) I am confident they know the kind of firmness needed to deomonstrate to the community that they mean business. Bill Korey of ADL and others have emphasized this to them and the statement in the enclosed clippings indicates they have learned their lesson.

The governor has made his position less and less popular in Arlington by its irrational and extreme nature. The bigots have been quieter than ever and no one I met expects anytrouble from them. The police are ready if they make trouble. The liberal majority on the county board is now an outspoken 4to 1 majority andthe county manager and police chief are firmly under their command. At the suggestion of Hope and Routh I urged Bill Korey to get clearance to distribute the Hannson report from Dallas in Arlington. Bill gave it to county board chairman Krupsaw who gave it to police chief Fawver. The latter had it mimeographed--the bulk of it, not quite the whole report--and distributed to every man on the police force.

The only fear I heard expressed was that the governor might get a few Defenders or other bigots from outside to come in and create just enough of an indident to give him and excuse to close Stratford school in the interest of safety. According to present court orders, contingent of course on the Supreme Court not granting a stay order, this is the only recourse left to the governor unless he were to close schools throughout the state. This he well might do as a last resort, until he could summon the legislature into special session and put up some more legal hurdles to be declared unconstitutional. His actions now seem to have lost all rationality and he seems to view himself in a messianic role. There certainly seems to be now way by which anyone can influence him or even hold a sane and rational conference with him on the issue. The stories told about his recent interviews are bizarre.

Even more so than in August I am again able to say that no community could be more ready under the circumstances than is Arlington for desegregation. I spoke with Howard R. Bovee, Assistant Superintendent of Education, who cautiously let me know that they did not expect the least trouble within the schools. The four Negro children that may be in Stratford Junior High on Monday, February 2 are well known to the school authorities as are also the seventh grade children and teachers with whom they will work. The clear implication I received was that they would be divided in pairs and put into two sections.

Bovee is a Vermonter who was formerly an elementary principal in Arlington but he has the same cautious approach of Superintendent Reid in talking about the issue with an outsider such as I was. He believes Reid's past connection with Richmond has given the school system greater security than it otherwise might have had at this time. He is sure, however, that the morale of the system has suffered from anxiety of uncertainty as well as from the inordinate amount of effort devoted to desegregation problems, time that might better have been spent on educational matters. He reiterated Reid's emphasis that because of pressures they could not engage in the understandably desireable preparation for desegregation. No trouble makers are known to be among the parents at Stratford. Although Bovee would not comment on the question I am sure that the school officials have at least met with the parent leaders at Stratford. All Stratford parents attending the meeting Thursday, January 22, described in the enclosed clippings, received copies of "The Truth about Desegregation in Washington Schools", articles by Erwin Knoll of the Washington Post. These were distributed by the local Committee for Social Progress. They also are going to mail it to all the ministers in town and to a number of other key people with a covering letter. I suggested this to them in a gathering I attended Friday night. The nearness of Washington and the use Almond recently made of the issue makes this of strategic importance.

Bovee told me to come right to see him when I called and when I arrived in a few minutes I found him in with Supt. Reid. I gathered I was to get the official word and that was all I received, although it was cordial. I believe them when they say that they will likely have no problems within and in fact I am confident they would have no objection to and no difficulty with a thorough desegregation job. But I found no one able to talk or think about anything but the contested four children and the additional 26. The board and the school system now would not be surprised if the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals were to order desegregation of some of the remaining 26 whose apppeals from rejection are still under study by that court.

There is sheer irony in the fact that now with all State defenses struck down the Arlington case is coming to a head and desegregation will possibly slip in here in almost an interregnum between state massive resistance schemes. The governor will be caught with a "little bit of pregnancy" in Arlington, almost between the rounds as it were--unless he can quick turn out all the lights by closing all state schools. That is a rather mixed metaphor but I suppose makes the point. Some have said they would not be surprised if he closed all schools.

The four Negro parents and their allies are all standing firm and the children are ready to go to school on February 2. They have been invited to meet with the principal of Stratford at a Negro elementary school near their home on Thursday, January 29. They were invited by Richardson, principal of their present school, who also will be present. We have sought to arrange to have the Stratford principal invite them to see that school on Saturday.

Saturday afternoon the parents of the four as well as of the 26 will meet with their attorneys at a church. The very able Washington junior high teacher who helped with the work shop last August will be invited also to meet with the children at that time and seek to reinforce some ofthe lessons learned in August. I met in an interesting session Friday night with a group of about two dozen, including parents of three of the four prospective pioneers, Jim Nabritt (the younger) one of their attorneys, parents of some of the 26, NAACP President Carl Ferguson and other leaders of the community. They discussed and planned strategy between now and February 2. I was able to give them a recent and I think more realistic view of the school board and department of education views than they otherwise would have had. They will be as ready as they can be and well organized. There have been and will be no economic pressures in Arlington that would serve to weaken their ranks.

The white churches have done a good job of orienting their young people to theirproper roles and the ministers have officially accepted designation of their association president as a member of the board of CPPS. Paul J. Harrell, president of the association, I found a rather colorless, quiet spoken man who shows the scars of travelling the narrow line of caution on this issue necessary for survival in most Southern Baptist churches. The churches will continue to play a quiet ministerial role with their members and not be in the lead, according to Harrel. They did collectively and publicly agree, however, not to permit their premises to be used for private jim crow schools. Their stance generally is to support public schools, compliance with the law and Christian brotherhood. As elsewhere in the white community noone is openly supporting integration or even desegregation.

Warren Cox and others told me that there are parents in the Stratford area standing ready to bring suit if Stratford is closed by any ruse. Cox also told me of his connection with the Virginia Committee for Public Schools, the statewide counterpart of the local CPPS in which some 17 or 18 communities have been represented. Francis Miller was said to be available for chairman of the state group but they want someone who is not so publicly known as a Byrd opponent.

I am convinced that for Virginia this CPPS device was a real discovery and has played a decisive role in marshalling the only numerically significant opposition to massive resistance that was possible. Their plaintive pleas simply to "keep open the schools" were weak to some liberal ears and offered no really fundamental solution or understanding of the long range problem, but it was highly effective for this time. The statewide group meets about every two weeks in Richmond and has growing support according to Cox. Other agencies of a more forward position will have to be counted on to define sharply and realistically the issues. There should be no quarrel about roles.

For identification reminder, Cox has been chairman of the legal committee of CPPS and was one of the group of lawyers I met with last Summer in ADL offices.. Quite incidentally, we discovered we used to live in the same neighborhood and in fact I went to school with his brother. His father was Harvey Cox, former president of Emory University. The South is just one big neighborhood.

I could not reach Edmund Campbell although I had written him I was coming. He was in Richmond on Friday and I pursued him in vain on Saturday morning. He is involved at many levels and is perhaps the backbone of both desegregation and CPPS support in the county. His wife has just been elected president of the local council of church women. She was also unavailable. She has recently been to Richmond with other church women to call on the governor.- a visit which was perhaps as futile as other visits to him.

David Krupsaw is now chairman of the county board--since I was here in August. I could not reach him either. He is a tough, courageous liberal according to all reports. A better person could not likely be found for his position, according to reliable informants. He is from a substantial and established local family and a graduate of Harvard Law School. Bill Korey of ADL knows him very well and sees him constantly. We have little to add to what Bill can do there. He is also a good friend of David Scull.

Korey gave me a broad fill in on the situation and convinced me again that we can with some confidence count on him to cover Arlington quite adequately for all the agencies involved in the CCD. My experience in North Carolina with AFSC and my work in Arlington and contacts with Bill Korey convince me that one very necessary function of CCD is to arrive at an effective division of labor and adequate spread of limited professional personnel resources. The agency personnel closest to various localities can be principally responsible for informing the others on developments and for pointing out areas of needed assistance.

I believe my visits to Arlington have been useful but I wonder if the total cost of this most recent visit was really warrented in view ofthe very close relationship Korey has maintained with the situation there. There must be more adequate interagency communication and perhaps a more formally defined and understood division of labor along the lines indicated above. Bill Korey should be sending a monthly report to other agencies on Arlington, Friedman and Rilling on Richmond and other communities within their reach, AFSC on North Carolina areas within their close reach, Harry Jones on Charolette, etc. Suggestions could be made in such reports for strategic assistance and reinforcement. They would serve as an effective way for the occasional visitor to an area to get quickly caught up with the situation in an area when he does visit it.

The above remarks are made with the full awareness that each agency defines its own particular role in a different way from the others. If some such division of labor and communication cannot be realized among so closely like minded groups, however, how can we ever do anything for group relations among more disparate sectors of society at large? CCD should not be simply a once a month in New York phenomenon.

I see little or nothing that SRC consultant services can do in Arlington at the present time. Arlington is blessed as no other southern community is to the same degree with many and well organized liberal resources. There is little or nothing I could tell the school board that they have not heard already from people who have a much greater call on than I on their attention and loyalty. As to the county board, at the moment at least, the political balance and contrl could not be any better if we arranged it. The school system is more favorably disposed toward desegregation than could be asked for in most other southern communities.

As stated above I could get no one in town with whom I talked to consider what would come next after the realization of the token desegregation ofthe first four children and even perhaps some of the other 26. They could understandably not focus beyond February 2. But just here is where some important thinking and planning has to take place, I pointed this out in my reports last Summer. This was the real problem in North Carolina and will continue to arise as stringently selective pupil placement plans are tried and approved. Just how do you get systems to move beyond the minimum token first steps? How do you possibly prodede to an in fact desegregated system? Perhaps SRC can help with this fundamental next step by working with its Virginia state affiliate and the newly established Arlington Council on Human Relations. I have some concern that the latter may not be fully supported in the way it should be because of loyalties of its potential supporters for the previously existing Committee for Social Progress, which operated outof the Unitarian church.

Major interviews and contacts in Arlington, January 23 and 24:

Howard R. Bovee, Assistant Superintendant of Education
James G. Stockard, member of school board
Philip M. Stern, Editor of Northern Virginia Sun
William Korey, ADL area representative
Paul J. Harrell, Memorial Baptist Church and President of Ministerial association
Helen Dewar, education reporter for the Northern Virginia Sun
Warren Cox, attorney for Federal Housing Authority and chairman of legal committee of the CPPS
About twenty leaders of the Negro community that I met at an informal gathering at the home of Robert Alexander, attorney. I had called him and asked him to get together a few strategic people and he turned up with a houseful.

School Board Asks Delay in Feb. 2 Order

ARLINGTON—School Board attorney Frank L. Ball said last night the School Board will ask the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals sometime next week for a postponement of its school desegregation order.

Mr. Ball, who is serving with attorney James H. Simmonds as counsel in the case, said they will ask that the court order admitting four Negro students to Stratford on Feb. 2 be delayed until the case is carried on appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Earlier this week the School Board voted to authorize its attorneys to ask for a stay of the desegregation order. However, the Board voted to admit the four Negroes to Stratford in the event that all legal resoruces are

Judges Hit 'Resistance' Twice in Day

RICHMOND (UPI)—Two Virginia localities — Arlington and Norfolk — stand today at the brink of token public school integration, as a result of two Federal court decisions yesterday.

The U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld an order directing Arlington County to admit four Negro students to all-white Stratford Junior High School Feb. 2.

A few minutes later, a special three-judge Federal constitutional panel sitting in the same courtroom killed the Norfolk City Council's plan to close its entire secondary school system to avoid integration.

THE DOUBLE-barreled decisions apparently doomed the last hopes of the two Virginia localities to circumvent integration. School boards in both places have pledged to open the schools, integrated if necessary, if given an opportunity.

The four Arlington Negro students, along with 26 others were turned down last summer by the county school board on the basis of a locally-administered assignment plan. Federal District Judge Albert Dryan of Alexandria, Va. ordered four of the students admitted, however.

"We are in accord with this finding, for it is clear that the transfers were denied on the basis of race," the circuit court said.

Norfolk's locally-adopted plan of "massive resistance" was killed in the same order which destroyed Virginia's school-closing law.

The three-judge constitutional court, the same one that knocked the heart out of the State "massive resistance" laws, prohibited Norfolk authorities from carrying out their plan to shut down Norfolk's entire secondary school system. The move would have left more than 17,000 children without public schooling.

THE DOUBLE-barreled decisions apparently doomed the last hopes of the two Virginia localities to circumvent integration. School boards in both places have pledged to open the schools, integrated if necessary, if given an opportunity.

The four Arlington Negro students, along with 26 others were turned down last summer by the county school board on the basis of a locally-administered assignment plan. Federal District Judge Albert Dryan of Alexandria, Va. ordered four of the students admitted, however.

THE COURT enjoined Norfolk from "engaging in any evasive schemes or devices looking to the cut-off of funds for schools or grades affected by the mixing of races or the closing or elimination of specific grades in such schools."

The order also permanently enjoined Gov. Almond and other state and local officials from ever again closings a school to avoid integration.

The injunctive order against Norfolk was tacked on to one which was expected to be merely a formal declaration of Monday's ruling.

The Appeals Court deferred ruling on Judge Bryan's refusal to order Arlington to admit 26 other Negroes to white schools. The court, in its brief opinion, said it had not had an opportunity in the two days since the case was argued to review the grounds on which the Arlington School Board rejected the students.

THE POSSIBILITY of integration at another Virginia city arose last night. Charlottesville city attorney John S. Battle, Jr. told the city's school it had now had the "authority and responsibility to operate all its public schools in accordance with law."

Gov. J. Lindsay Almond had closed Lane High School and Venable Elementary School in Charlottesville last fall to circumvent court-ordered integration. Almond's power to close the schools was stricken earlier this week by federal and state court rulings.

Battle—in response to the school board's request for a legal opinion on where the city stood —said the two schools should be reopened within a "reasonable time."

The school board will meet Monday night to make a final decision.

Bryan Integration Order Affirmed

Order to Maintained

The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals has now upheld Judge Bryan's order directing the admission of four Negro students to Stratford Junior High School a week from Monday.

Spokesmen for the Arlington School Board have said the case will be appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court and that the Board will ask that Judge Bryan's order be stayed pending that appeal. Whether the request for a stay will be granted, in view of the fact that a previous desegregation order for Arlington was delayed for a full year pending a similar appeal, remains to be seen.

Happily, the spectre of closed schools in Arlington vanished—hopefully forever—with the assurances of the School Board Thursday night that when Judge Bryan's desegregation order for Stratford Junior High School takes effect, the school will remain open. While the verdicts of the Virginia Supreme Court and the three-judge Federal court on Monday had made this a virtual certainty, the official assurance of the School Board on this score was welcome.

Equally welcome was the four-point "Code of Procedure" made public by the School Board, designed to assure that desegregation will take place in an orderly way. The Board has wisely put both the public and the students at Stratford on notice that no disturbances will be tolerated. Any students creating disturbances will automatically be suspended, and the Arlington Police Department has been directed to maintain order around school buildings and grounds.

This clear statement of intent not to tolerate any disturbances, which confirms similar statements during recent months by the County Board, is the best way of making sure that order will be maintained.

Dear Fred:

The second trip to Arlington was rather disappointing. Ralph Kaul, chairman of the County Board, with whom Phil Stern had made a lunch date left town unexpectedly and could not make it. I did not discover it, nor did Phil, until I arrived at the newspaper office and we called Kaul's Office. Stern and I were joined at lunch by Clayton Fritchey, the publisher of the paper, and we discussed the situation further and I conveyed to them some of the specific suggestions I would have given to Kaul. They also discussed their newspaper policy on the developing situation. They view their role distinctly as one of leadership.

Phil has not had a full report on the trip to Richmond by the CPPS people. He did learn that the Governor dominated the interview and lectured them for a half hour on the conventional southern conservative line. Stern has not yet seen the new superintendent of schools but will try to see him, though he is reluctant to push him until the school board has clarified its stand.

After lunching with Stern I went by to see David Scull. He expressed the view that we should tread warily (what, another gradualist?) in Arlington as so many visiting firemen of the liberal brigades have been through the place in recent months, with most of them calling on the key people. He fears we may wear out our welcome. He said that David Krupshaw, another member of the County Board is a friend of his and much on the right side as we view it. Katherine Stone, member of the House of Delegates is also an ally. He views the situation as basically favorable. He does not see very much that can be done now. He says that he believes some of the police force have been to the Michigan police academy at East Lansing. Stern says he thinks the police have been in touch with the FBI.

I saw Dr. J.B. Johnson, head of the department of medicine at Howard, and vice-president of the Arlington Committee for Social Progress, as recommended by Harry Walker. Johnson was not sure of the name of the organization which may or may not be an indication of its strength. He does not know much about the degree of readiness or cohesion of the Negro community but he will make some inquiries along these lines and find out who I should talk to when I return. Through him I can meet Negro leaders and the liberal organization leaders (some of whom are in or have close contact with the CPPS) when I return and try to find out how they define their roles and hopefully help them clarify their roles. He knows nothing of NAACP strength.

I talked to a fellow named Brody at ADL in Washington and learned that Bill Corey, who is in close touch with the Arlington situation, is on vacation but will return by August 4. I will see him then.

As I now see it what is needed in Arlington is the following: 1. A good fact finding job as Bonita Valien did in Charlottesville, even though many visits have been made in recent months by allies. In bringing the picture up to date in the light of the more pregnant situation I can also serve the more educative role, auxiliary to the consultant-fact finder role, as we discussed in Washington. 2. Help reexamine the roles of and communication between and among liberal allies outside of CPPS. From past experience this just cannot be assumed. 3. Get a clear evaluation of the organization and leadership of the Negro community and see if I can help in any way in clarifying their role and heightening preparations. 4. In doing these to discover if there are any specific consultative services we can provide from outside. I hope to be able to talk to John Hope in New York about the auspices and credentials with which I move further into the community. The start I have may be sufficient, but I want to be sure I can answer the inevitable question of: "what's your pitch?". I told them there that I would be back August 4.

Best regards,

Jack

Interim report on Arlington

Interviews with ADL representatives

According to what I learn from Bill Korey, area representative for ADL, his organization has been the key human relations agency keeping in continual touch with the situation. He has prepared a very good summary of Arlington to date and he has agreed to let us have a copy of it for SRC files. It is about 25 pages and will be submitted to Commentary. I took notes on it and will include here some of its viewpoints and information. I believe any work in Arlington by any other agencies should be coordinated closely with ADL personnel and their contacts and activities. They have much better contacts and information that State Council on Human Relations affiliates or members.

They have helped with specific identification of the known troublemakers and leaders among segregationist elements, including Seaboard White Citizens Council Leaders in Washington. Korey has had constructive interviews with County Manager A. T. Lundberg and Police Chief Major William G. Fawver. He has discussed tactics with them and has helped to provide lists and pictures of the troublemakers so that police may get to recognize them. Korey judges that the police and the County Manager are determined to to do a competent professional job of preserving law and order with the 172 160 man police force. They do not want either Federal or State help in doing their job though they do seem willing to get counsel from more experienced hands. They have arranged to call on neighboring Alexandria and Fairfax County for help if needed at school opening time (this I got from County Board Chairman Ralph Kaul). ADL attorneys are preparing a model ordinance for them, based on a study of other communities, to be used for checking adequacy of their ordinances for handling possible peace disturbances and interference with possible desegregation. Neither the police chief or the the town manager are pro-desegregation but Korey thinks they can be depended on to enforce the law and peace. In the event of incidents and arrests the lot of prosecution falls to the county attorney, in whom there is less confidence. NOTE: I must find out his lines of responsibility, and influence, if any, Kaul has over him through the County Board, and whether he takes orders through the State Attorney General. All leaves in the police force have been cancelled for the period of school opening, although Chief Fawver is at present on vacation.

Korey stated that Milton Ellerin, director of fact finding for ADL in New york has been advising them in their consulting with Arlington officials. He is a former FBI man.

ADL has also been working with the legal committee of CPPS, of which Warren Cox, a local attorney, is chairman. ADL attorneys have prepared the attached memorandum on legal moves that CPPS might employ to keep the schools open. Korey and Edelsberg are meeting on Wednesday, August 13 with this committtee at ADL offices in Washington to discuss the problem further. They invited me to observe the discssuion. I pointed out SRC limitations in this regard, but Korey said that if I wished simply to come in as a spectator I would be welcome. NOTE: Hope and Routh please advise.

Korey and Edelsberg have an luncheon appointment with Mrs. Stone, member of the Virginia House of Delegates from Arlington, on Monday, August 11. She wishes to discuss with them the preparation of a public statement she would like to make with another woman delegate, calling on the governor to move to a peace and order position and pointing out that all he has done so far has only encouraged troublemakers to do their worst. I have been invited to join them and will do so.

One issue I inquired about from Edelsberg, who is the Washinton "lobbyist" for ADL, was whether he knew of any moves being made to acquaint the President of his aides in the White House with the impending crisis. To my mind the major variable in the situation now is what is to be donne and spoken out of Richmond and the White House. Edelsberg agrees . No matter how effective local preparations may be, the ultimate resolution is dependent on forces totally outside the community. To my mind it is urgent that further efforts be made to acquaint the President with what is about to happen. Edelsberg said that the Department of Justice representative who was in Little Rock told him that Faubus did not have his ultimate action in mind until Griffin came to town and persuaded him. The Justice Dept. man implied that if Eisenhower had made his stand clear beforehand Faubus would not likely have followed Griffin. Frankly, I wonder just how significant our present efforts are in the face of this. There are serious efforts underway but Edelsberg is not hopeful for success. Late note: The President in a press conference today was asked if he planned to see Governor Almond. He replied that he had never heard of the suggestion but of course would be glad to see the Governor if the latter wished to see him--which hardly constitutes an invitation or much understanding of the situation.

Interview with Chairman of County Board of Supervisors and assessment of Board

Membership of the Board: Ralph Kaul, chairman, Dave Krupshaw(with Kaul the most liberal member, he is also a good friend of David Scull), Leona Bucholz, Herbert Brown and a fifth member who is said to be the most conservative, but who apparently is realistic and does not violate Board confidences. The Board is unified behind maintaining law and order and keeping the schools open. They have demanded that the County Manager and the chief of police be prepared and present to the Board an accounting of their preparations. Kaul confirmed much of what Korey told me about preparations. He responded favorably to my suggestion that they send a top person from the police force to visit another community. I gave him the names of the police chief in St. Louis and the Mayor in Nashville. Kaul will give the names to Lundberg and Fawver when they return from vacation, with the suggestion. I will try to see them when they return and follow upthe suggestion. Note to Hope: perhaps a letter to Fawver from Sam Priest might be in order.

The interview with Kaul was frank and constructive. He accepted me fully into his confidences. He is a very intelligent and sophisticated young man in his thirties who, I would judge, is a successful business man with political ambitions and the personal qualities to make it in polititcs. He has taken open and forthright public positions on the school issue, not as an integrationist but as a "realist" who wants law, order and public schools. I am unable to say what his real, personal views are on the issue as such. He is one of the campaign managers for a man who is running to unseat Leona Bucholz on the Council, with a stated stand supporting maintenance of public education, integrated if necessary. (The Northern Virginia Sun is giving his campaign a good play)

Kaul states that any specific preparations for integration will have to be made without working through the school board. Its membership is as follows: Barnard Joy and James Stockard, both liberals and both former chairman of the Board; a lawyer, ~~named~~ L. Lee Bean, who is the uncommitted member and a man of some standing in the community (I am having luchch with him and Phil Stern on Thursday); Robert Peck and Helen Lane are the segregationist members, the former is chairman and the latter is an open supporter of the Defenders. Kaul states that the Board can do nothing in confidence as everything gets reprted to the Defenders immediately. He says any preparation of school personnel will have to be done off-the-record via the new superintendent, Ray Reid. He sees no reason why we should not try this approach and indicated he might try to do what he can, but that the County Board does not have any jurisdiction over the schools. Stern feels our best approach is through Bean the swing man on the board, which is one reason he is helping us get together. Kaul indicated that he is fully behind and in close communication with the CPPS, as are other members of his board. He stated that they are all completely in the dark as to the governor's intentions, but I gather they expect to have their schools in operation this Fall, sooner or later, and integrated.

Assessment of the Committee to Preserve the Public Schools

After numerous tries I managed to get in a long phone conversation with O. Glenn Stahl, chairman of CPPS. He was leaving town the next day to be away for two weeks or more. He is head of a research bureau at the Civil Service Commission and has a full schedule--he was not avoiding me, he was just busy. His position was about that indicated earlier to me by Elizabeth Weihe, his vice-chairman. They will do all they can in a legal way to fight the governor but preparation for integration will have to be done by other agencies. He does not deny the need for such but simply says they have defined their role as carefully as possible for effective effort in the legal direction. The leaders of his committee certainly want to be kept informed on other developments. He urged me to keep in touch with Mrs. Weihe in his absence. I will see her after I have seen the superintendent next Monday. We can only respect their position. We should watch it develop carefully as it may be a significant approach, among others, to develop in other communities as things develop further South. Stahl stated they were aware of this aspect of their efforts and that they had already been visited by a delegation from Norfolk who wanted to learn how to do what they have done.

The School system

Phil Stern met with the superintendent of schools this week for lunch. He says the man is able and adroit. It is reported that he was in line to be State Superintendent of Instruction but that the powers did not consider him safe on this issue. Reid is willing to talk to me and I have an appointment on Monday, August 11. Stern has already suggested the possibility of visits to other communities by some of his key personnel, particularly principals of the to-be-integrated schools. He was, of course, noncommittal.

The school system has 44 white schools and 4 Negro schools; 22,677 pupils, 1,432 of them Negro. It is estimated that because of residential segregation only about 190 Negro children are potential candidates for integration. The contribution of the State to the local school budget has been variously estimated as from 15 to 20%. The state contributes $1.3 million to the school budget. The County paid $9 million in taxes to the state in 1957.

(the school board estimates 135)

The County PTA council, Richard L. Franz, President, has gone on record as opposed to closing schools even if integration is necessary. Council officers have been meeting this Summer and are in close touch with CPPS. I will try to see Franz and get a clearer picture of their role. He should be acquainted with the advantages of an integrated council, or steps in that direction. The County PTA Council has called on local PTAs to support for local office only those candidates opposed to closing the schools.

Requests for school reassignment.

August 1 was the deadline for applications. 26 were filed for the following schools: Gunston, 4; Wakefield, 4; Thomas Jefferson, 2; Stratford 11;

I was later told that the total count of applicants was found to be 27, plus 4 or 5 of the legal plaintiffs.

Kenmore, 1; and Washington-Lee, 4. ~~The bulk of~~ These are junior high schools, ~~perhaps all~~ except Washington-Lee, which is the fanny high school. Two white students have applied for two Negro schools, with the intention of having them closed if the white schools are closed, Langston elementary and Hoffman-Boston High School. One of the 26 was a plaintiff in the original case, the others did not submit applications, but three or four of them are still ~~considered~~ active candidates for desegregation, making the total about 30. Although the names of the original plaintiffs are well known in town the names of the 26 were ~~intentionally~~ intentionally withheld to protect them from harrassmment. If Kaul's report of leakage of information in the school board is as bad as claimed it may be presumed that the Defenders will know the names. What is ultimately hoped for is that the school board will join the County Board in requesting the governor to return the schools to local operation if they are closed.

The Negro community

I was asked by Bill Korey to sit in on a meeting at the home of Mrs. Hamm, who is chairman of a committee to plan a workshop for the 30 pioneer children. This took place this week and they were not very well organized for going ahead. About 12 people were present, two of us from outside, myself and Mrs. Josephine Kyles, education director for the Washington Council of Churches, ~~from Washington.~~ She has worked with Irene Osborne in Washington on desegregation matters. They seemed perhaps too ready to turn to us for advice, and even more, ~~in~~ organizing their workshop. It is planned for two succeeding week-ends, August 15-16 and 23-24. They plan to include only the 30 children and their parents. Irene Osborne will attend to work with the parents group. They asked me to get Paul Cook at Howard to recommend two teachers from Washington to work with the children. I suggested they have some children present who have experienced desegregation. They wish to avoid having imported professionals it possible. NOTE: we should discuss what advice and what degree of cooperation we can give them. J.B.

On Friday night, August 11, I am meeting at the home of Dr. Johnson with three leaders of the community, Mrs. Costly, Attorney Robert Alexander and Rev. Henry Sink. In addition ~~to~~ to getting their workshop organized I believe a major need is for them to designate one person to keep in close touch with the situation in the schools in the event of desegregation, so as to serve as a troubleshooter and to coordingte information and policy in the handling of indidents and to keep sensitively aware of the needs of the children--in short, someone to play the role of Mrs. Bates in Little Rock. Two white ladies, Mrs. Geraldine Davis and Mrs. Barbara Marx apparently see themselves in this role. I met the former, but the latter is away on vacation. Larson of FOR stayed with Mrs. Davis. Korey thinks Mrs. Marx is well equipped for the role and certainly will be in the forefront. Mrs. Kyles thinks the minister, Mr. Sink, is more suitable. The choice is theirs, but I believe a pattern of action should be agreed on beforehand. Personally, I lean toward Sink. I have already met Sink and Robert Alexander, the attorney. Davis and Marx have some of the virtues and difficulties of some of our good friends in Charlottesville.

I believe it would be a good idea to have Harry Walker go with me Friday night.

Segregation extremists

The local leader most vocal is Jack Rathbone, who tried to found a private "grammer school". Other local leaders are Charles W. Carter, outspoken anti-semite, Mrs. Vivian Garrell and Rev. Elmer Lucas. Korey and Kaul both told of threats to bomb the Jewish center and of plans to protect it. Kaul said one of his concerns, on which he would like counsel, is how to protect the families of the ~~pioneer~~ pioneer children, their homes, and the children going and coming from school. The above named three are active leaders of the Defenders who claim 6,000 local members. ADL states that reliable local sources suggest the figure 60 would be more accurate. In Washington the following Seaboard White Cizizens Council leaders are potential trouble makers: Eugen Collton, Floyd Fleming and T. David Horton, who has attended school board meetings and is reported to be an advisor to Mrs. Helen Lane of the school board.

The "Coordinating Committee to Maintain Efficient Education in Virgina" has been set up to help organize private schools. The term "efficient" is used in the legislation to describe a school that is not racially mixed. The legislationiwas designated "for the purpose of maintaining efficient Schools".

Jack Rathbone has publicly threatened economic reprisals. NOTE: I should find out from the Negro community what they have planned to combat economic reprisals and whether they have anticipated the direction from which they will come. Members of the'majority'community should also be alerted to roles to be played in such an event.The Negroes should also be alerted, if they are not already, to a reported intention of the Governor to visit the parents of the children involved in the event the schools are closed, with the intention of "persuading" them to withdraw.

Liberal white leadership outside of CPPS

Principally among the ministers, none of whom I have seen yet. Ross Weston the Unitarian has probably been so outspoken that he may not be of maximum strategic use. White ministers have indicated they intend to go with the Negro children when they go to the schools the first time.

versus Civil Action No.

J. Lindsay Almond, Jr.

Richmond, Virginia.

Defendant

Complaint for Interlocutory and Permanent Injunction

1. This is a suit for an interlocutory injunction and a permanent injunction to restrain the enforcement, operation and execution of a certain Act of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia which automatically divests local school officials who make an assignment of and enroll children of the Negro and white races either voluntarily or under compulsion of a court order.

2. (a) The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Title 28, United States Code, section 1331. This action arises under the due process of law clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of Three Thousand Dollars ($3,000), exclusive of interests and costs.

2. (b) The jurisdiction of this Court is also invoked under Title 28, United States Code, section 1343, which provides for the original jurisdiction of this Court in suits involving civil rights.

3. Plaintiffs are citizens of the United States and of the Commonwealth of Virginia and are of the Caucasian race. Minor plaintiff, _____, is a pupil enrolled at Stratford Junior High School, one of the public secondary schools of Arlington County, Virginia. Plaintiff _____ is an adult, father of _____, and a taxpayer of the Commonwealth of Virginia. Plaintiffs bring this action as a class suit on behalf of themselves and all other Caucasian pupils and parents similarly situated, such class constituting hundreds of persons, making it inconvenient to bring them all before the Court, but their interests are fairly and adequately represented in this proceeding.

4. Defendant J. Lindsay Almond, Jr. is the Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia, in whom is vested, by legislative enactment, authority, power and control over any school, elementary or secondary, in the Commonwealth, to which children of both races are assigned and enrolled by any school authorities acting voluntarily or under compulsion of any court order. Defendant is sued in his official capacity.

5. Under the color of authority of Acts of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia, the defendant has publicly expressed his intention to enforce said legislative enactment and has declared that his interpretation of the statutory provision makes enforcement procedures therein applicable to a school under a "final and unappealable order of a Federal court ordering the enrollment of a given child into a certain school."

6. On the 31st day of July, 1956, this Court issued an order, in the case of Thompson, et al., v. County School Board of Arlington County, et al., 144 F. Supp. 239 (1956), that provided as follows:

> "Therefore, it is further Adjudged, Ordered, and Decreed that effective at the time and subject to the conditions hereinafter stated, the defendants, their successors in office, agents, representatives, servants, and employees be, and each of them is hereby, restrained and enjoined from refusing on account of race or color, to admit to, or to enroll and educate in, any school under their operation, control, direction, or supervision any child otherwise qualified for admission to, and enrollment and education in, such a school."

7. Subsequently, this order was affirmed by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit on the 31st day of December, 1956, 240 F (2d) 830. The Supreme Court of the United States denied a writ of certiorari on the 25th day of March, 1957, 353 U.S. 911, 77 Sup. Ct. 667.

8. On the 14th day of September, 1957, seven Negro children were denied admission to four schools by the school authorities. This Court ordered the defendants to admit the seven named Negro plaintiffs to specific schools on the 23rd day of September, 1957, but granted a stay of execution pending appeal. One of the plaintiffs was E. Leslie Hamm, Jr., who was ordered admitted either to Stratford or to Swanson Junior High School.

9. This supplemental decree was upheld by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit on the 12th day of February, 1958, (2d) . The Supreme Court of the United States denied a writ of certiorari on the 19th day of May, 1958, U.S. ; Sup. Ct.

10. On a date before the 1st day of August, 1958, said E. Leslie Hamm, Jr. notified the school authorities of Arlington County that he intended to present himself on the first day of the 1958-59 school year, namely the 4th day of September, 1958, for admission to the Stratford Junior High School, in accordance with the decree of this Court, dated the 14th day of September, 1957.

11. On the 5th day of August, 1958, the defendant, in the course of a press conference, discussed questions relating to enforcement of Commonwealth statutes with respect to racial segregation of the public schools. While he made no specific commitment regarding operation of the schools of Arlington County or the effect thereon of the supplemental order of this Court, dated the 14th day of September, 1957, he did announce a policy for general application. He informed the press that he considered that a school was integrated when there was in effect a final order, not subject to appeal, which required the admission of specified Negro pupils to specified white schools. Defendant declared that such a school "will not open." This situation unquestionably exists at Startford Junior High School.

12. The relevant parts of Chapter 68 of the 1956 Extra Session of the Virginia General Assembly, under color of which the defendant proposes to act, are as follows:

a. "1.(1). The General Assembly declares that, as a consequence of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States affecting the public school system, school authorities of the various political subdivisions of the Commonwealth of Virginia will be faced with unprecedented obstacles if and when ordered to enroll white and colored children in the same public schools, and such enforced integration of the races by a county or city school board could destroy the efficiency of the school in which white and colored children were so enrolled, and would tend to disturb the peace and tranquility of the community in which such school is located.

"(2). The General Assembly declares that the welfare of all the citizens of the Commonwealth, the preservation of her public school system and a continuance of universal public education, make it necessary that there be uniformity of action throughout the State in all instances where school authorities acting voluntarily, or under compulsion, enroll a child in a public school, which enrollment would require a child of the white race to attend a public school with a child of the colored race, or which enrollment would require a child of the colored race to attend a public school with a child of the white race.

b. "(3). From and after the effective date of this act, and in conformity with the public policy of the Commonwealth of Virginia as herein established in (1) and (2), and specifically invoking the police powers of the Commonwealth and the constitutional powers of the General Assembly, the Commonwealth of Virginia assumes direct responsibility for the control of any school, elementary or secondary, in the Commonwealth, to which children of both races are assigned and enrolled by any school authorities acting voluntarily or under compulsion of any court order. The making of such an assignment, and the enrollment of such child, or children, shall automatically divest the school authorities making the assignment and enrollment of all further authority, power and control over such public school, its principal, teachers and other employees, and all pupils then enrolled or ordered to be enrolled therein; and such school is closed and is removed from the public school system, and such authority, power and control over such school, its principal, teachers, other employees and all pupils then enrolled or ordered to be enrolled, shall be and is hereby vested in the Commonwealth of Virginia to be exercised by the Governor of Virginia in whom reposes the chief executive power of the State.

"(4). Immediately upon such control, power and authority becoming vested in the Commonwealth of Virginia, by reason of the occurrences provided for in (3) aforesaid, such school is closed, and shall not be reopened, as a public school, until, in the opinion of the Governor, and after an investigation by him, he finds and issues an executive order that (1) the peace and tranquility of the community in which the school is located will not be disturbed by such school being reopened and operated, and (2) the assignment of pupils to such school could be accomplished without enforced or compulsory integration of the races therein contrary to the wishes of any child therein, or of his or her parent or parents, lawful guardian or other custodian.

"(5). If, after investigation, the Governor concludes that such school cannot be reopened, under the conditions provided for in (4) of this Act, he is given authority to reorganize the school, its personnel, curriculum and facilities, and make such other changes therein as in his discretion may be necessary and desirable and needed to effect a reopening of such school and, in such reorganization and in making assignment of pupils to such school, or in making reassignments to the school or schools in which they were formerly enrolled if he deems it necessary to preserve the peace and tranquility of the community or in making assignments of pupils to other available schools, he shall give due consideration to the laws of the Commonwealth relative to the assignment and enrollment of pupils and due consideration to the individual safety, needs and welfare of the child or children involved and the safety, welfare and best interest of other children attending the school and the welfare and safety of the community, the availability of facilities, the health and aptitude of such child, the availability of transportation, and all other relevant factors, and their effect on such child and other children attending said school and on the welfare and best interest of the administration of the school or schools involved, which assignment and enrollment shall remain in effect for the remainder of the current school session unless otherwise ordered or authorized by the Governor; provided, however, no school which has been closed, as aforesaid, shall be reopened, or reorganized and reopened, by the Governor, unless and until he finds and issues an executive order that such school can be reopened or reorganized and reopened in accordance with the provisions of (4) above.

"(6). If, after investigation, the Governor concludes that such school cannot be reopened, or cannot be reorganized and reopened, he is authorized to assign the children in such school to any available public schools where such assignment is practicable and to the best interest of the children involved, and to the public school system of the political subdivision concerned, taking into consideration the factors aforesaid; and the Governor is further authorized to make available other facilities for the instruction of such children, and to reassign the teachers in such closed school to other public schools in the political subdivision in which such closed school is located, or to other school or schools or other facilities made available for the instruction of such children as authorized herein."

c. Subsection (10) of Chapter 68 of the Acts of the 1956 Extra Session of the Virginia General Assembly was amended and re-enacted by Chapter 631 of the Acts of the 1958 Session of the Virginia General Assembly as follows:

"(10). Notwithstanding any other provision in this act, if after investigation the Governor concludes or, at any time, the school board and board of supervisors of the county or the council of the city in which the closed school is located certifies to the Governor by resolution that in their opinion such school cannot be reopened, or reorganized and reopened, in conformity with the provisions of this act, the Governor may so proclaim, in which event the said school shall again become a part of the public school system of the political subdivision in which it is located, and such school, elementary or secondary, shall, along with all other schools of its class in the political subdivision in which it is located, thereby become subject to the applicable provisions of the laws of this State."

13. In the enforcement, and in the execution of the Acts of the General Assembly specified in the foregoing sections of paragraph 12, and acting pursuant thereto and under color of these statutes, the defendant has expressed the intention of pursuing the policy, practice, custom and usage of excluding and denying admission of all Negro pupils to the public schools of the Commonwealth of Virginia, solely because of their race.

14. The enforcement of the Acts of the General Assembly specified in the foregoing sections of paragraph 12 by the defendant will deprive these plaintiffs of liberty and property without due process of law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

15. Plaintiffs, and others similarly situated, on whose behalf this suit is brought, are threatened with irreparable injury in the immediate future by reason of the expressed determination of the defendant, as set forth in paragraph 11 hereof, to enforce the provisions of the statutes specified in paragraph 12 hereof, unless the enforcement, operation or execution of the above-mentioned Acts of the General Assembly is enjoined for repugnance to the Constitution of the United States. They have no plain, adequate or complete remedy to redress the wrongs or illegal acts with which they are threatened other than this action for an injunction. Any other remedy to which plaintiffs, and other Caucasians similarly situated, could be remitted would be attended by such uncertainties and delays as to deny substantial relief, would involve a multiplicity of suits, and would cause further irreparable injury, damage, vexation and inconvenience to plaintiffs and other Caucasians similarly situated.

16. The defendant has expressed the determination to close any school to which, like Stratford Junior High School, a child of a different race is assigned under the terms of a court order, unless the enforcement, operation or execution of the aforementioned Acts of the General Assembly is enjoined for repugnance to the Constitution of the United States.

Wherefore, the plaintiffs respectfully pray that, upon the filing of this complaint:

1. This Court immediately convene a three-judge District Court, as required by Title 28, United States Code, sections 2281 and 2283.

2. As may appear proper and convenient to the Court, the three-judge District Court advance this action on the docket and order a speedy hearing of this action according to law, and upon such hearing —

That the three-judge District Court enter an interlocutory injunction restraining defendant, his successors in office, and his agents and employees, from enforcing or executing against plaintiffs, or other Caucasians similarly situated, the Acts of the General Assembly specified in paragraph 12 hereof, upon the ground that such Acts of the General Assembly are repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, as interpreted by the defendant, in closing a public school and denying access thereto by the minor plaintiff and other Caucasians similarly situated, solely for the purpose of denying enforcement to a lawful decree of this Court, thereby depriving them of liberty and property without due process of law in violation of the due process of law clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; and of the equal protection of the laws in violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

And plaintiffs respectfully pray further that upon a full hearing hereof—

3. That the three-judge District Court enter a permanent injunction restraining defendant, his successors in office, and his agents and employees, from enforcing or executing against plaintiffs, or other Caucasians similarly situated, the Acts of the General Assembly specified in paragraph 12 hereof, upon the ground that such Acts of the General Assembly are repugnant to the Constitution of the United States as interpreted by the defendant in closing a public school and denying access thereto by the minor plaintiff, and other Caucasians similarly situated, solely for the purpose of denying enforcement to a lawful decree of this Court, thereby denying them of liberty and property without due process of law in violation of the due process of law clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; and of the equal protection of the laws in violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

4. That the three-judge District Court allow plaintiffs for their costs herein, and grant them such further, other, additional or alternative relief as may appear to said Court to be equitable and just in the premises.

Motion for Interlocutory Injunction

The plaintiffs, by their attorneys, _____ _____, move this court for an order granting an interlocutory injunction against the defendant, his successors in office, his agents, employees and servants, attorneys, and all persons in active consort or participation with him, pending this suit, and until further order of this Court, in accordance with the prayer numbered as set forth in the complaint filed herein.

In support of this motion the plaintiffs attach their verified complaint, and in addition state:

1. Unless restrained, the defendant willclose Stratford Junior High School because of the provision of an order of this Court that E. Leslie Hamm, Jr., a Negro, be admitted to said Stratford Junior High School, a school designated for the instruction of, and occupied by, white pupils.

2. Irreparable injury, loss and damage will be caused the minor plaintiff by the defendant's act of closing the Stratford Junior High School and denying to him the educational instruction and opportunities to which he is constitutionally entitled during the ensuing school year, beginning the 4th of September 1958.

3. If the defendant, J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., closes the Stratford Junior High School, and the educational opportunities afforded therein are not available to the minor plaintiff, any judgment this court may later render on final determination of this action will be ineffective to repair the injury, damage and loss already suffered, and the final judgment of this Court will not, therefore, give the minor plaintiff the full and complete remedy to which he is entitled for a violation of his rights under the Constitution and laws of the United States and of the Commonwealth of Virginia.

4. If this interlocutory injunction be granted, the injury, if any, to the defendant, if final judgment be in his favor, will be inconsequential and may adequately be indemnified by bond.

Dear Fred:

Enclosed is a rough draft of my final report. I meant to type a finished copy but it would have taken me an interminable amount of time with my lousey typing. May I place myself on your mercy and request that you have it done in finished form, with a copy to John Hope and one to me. I did not make a copy as I hoped to send a finished one. It is late Friday night and I am leaving for a week in North Carolina tomorrow morning. I will be in North Carolina (C/O W. M. Alexander ~~Waverly Place~~ 202 Waverly Way, Greensboro, N.C.) until next Friday. I will thenpass through here again next week-end. Our welcome has sort of run out with the in-laws. We are a large family to have on hand for all summer. We will either go back to New York or go on upstate New York forazweek before Labor Day. The day after Labor Day I have to be at my desk at Columbia. I regret I cannot be here any longer, but I guess this finishes it. I have found it most interesting and I think it useful. But who really knows?

I will send from North Carolina the list of contacts or my card file on them if I can make it legible. I am hurrying the enclosed along in its present form as I know you ard eager to see it. Call me at my brothers if there are any questions, although we will likely be away fishing Monday and Tuesday.

I enclose my final expense account. If the check goes out by Wednesday it can be sent to North Carolina, and I would appreciate your sending it there so it wont be wandering loose at Greenbelt or in New York.

hastily, and apolitetically for the state of the enclosed,

John W. Alexander

Supplemental Report on Arlington, Virginia, Based on phone calls and visits, August 24-25

Approximately a week following my final report I returned to Arlington and was told by Edmund Campbell that he now considered Arlington an "occupied territory". He had just returned from Europe and had spoken to a number of key people in order to get himself informed on latest developments. I received the benefit of this by getting him to brief Phil Stern and me on what he had discovered.

In the week since I had been away the school board had reversed its position and was then reported to be prepared to submit fully to state pressure and reject all applicants for desegregation. They had agreed on various reasons, geography, test scores and interview impressions, for rejecting, and trying to make the decisions stick, all the applicants. In spite of Lee Bean's previous statement to me that they would likely accept, ultimately, about a dozen of the children, they were then ready to cooperate fully with the state. In later court testimony this report of Campbell was ironically validated by defense of the rejections given by Barnard Joy, reputedly the most liberal member of the board. I suggest it may be useful for the record to write to David Scull and ask him to get the full story from Joy. I understand he is well acquainted with Joy.

From Harry Mericam and Herman Edelsberg I learned that the Committee to Preserve the Public Schools had agreed to refrain from seeking any injunction in Federal court to refrain the governor from closing the schools and to compel the school board to keep open the schools. In a bitterly conducted meeting at the home of one of the CPPS leaders PTA council president Franz and district PTA leader William Lightsey led the way in persuading the executive committee and the legal committee to cancel plans for legal action. There remains the possibility that they may seek an injunction if schools are actually closed, but only after that event. I suggest that in the present climate this may even be unlikely. The result was a deep fissure in the organization and the threatened resignation of Warren Cox from CPPS. He wanted to file the injunction as planned. Campbell stated that he reluctantly came to the conclusion that in view of state threats the community could not afford to do so.

This whole picture indicated a deep change in Arlington viewpoints during the weeks I was away. Two events occurred during this period. The attorney general of the state spent several days in town after paying a visit to Norfolk. Following his visit the Norfolk school board presented a more intransigent front. The same happened in Arlington. Effects of his visit were suggested even in the changed stance of the CPPS and other community leaders. Campbell could not track down certain knowledge of specific threats but he did say that general allegations were made by the attorney general, as the agent of the governor, that broad retaliatiation by the legislature (and by inference, state officials) would follow any official or unofficial moves to promote or even accept desegregation in Arlington. One suggested kind of retaliation was the legislative elimination of the Arlington school district and the assigning of the schools there to a "safer" district.

Apparently the attorney general assured Arlington that schools would be closed only briefly, if at all, only long enough to eliminate desegregated grades and to reassign the children elsewhere on a segregated basis. The threats seem to have frightened key people to the point where Campbell was led to make his grave assertion of "occupation".

These threats were made more public on September 4, as reported in the New York Times of September 5, when Governor Almond sent a statement to school superintendents in the threatened areas that was an exhortation to hold firm and resist desegregation. Included was the following paragraph with undisguised meaning:

> "I am deeply concerned that no charge be justifiably made that any school board has thwarted the will of the overwhelming majority of the people of Virginia and thus brought us into disfavor with the chosen representatives of the people in the General Assembly."

The other event during this period of change in Arlington was President Eisenhower's first press conference blunder when he indicated that he could not speak out on a court decision when he might disagree with it. The status people seem to have been frightened by his weak position and continued evasion into a concern that they would get no federal support in their opposition to the state. The segregation leadership was apparently emboldened to feeling that federal power would be held in check from effectively opposing them. The state position from that point gained in boldness and intransigence.

Campbell reported that the Byrd machine was now asserting that the massive resistance stand would keep them in power for another 25 years; prior to that they were about to expire. The only note of caution Campbell could detect was a genuine expression of concern by the governor that there be no violence. He fears it and would not condone it.

From one authoritative source I gained the confidential information that Negro attorneys and NAACP leadership were relieved that the CPPS was not going into court. They felt they would just confuse the issues through their approach, which was not pro-integration, There was a high level conference of Negro leaders and attorneys in Washington on August 24 and I picked up this information on August 25. This may be an expression of basic distrust and a desire to go it alone or simply a tactical viewpoint of desiring to settle the issue on legal grounds of their own choosing. Whatever the case, I think it is unfortunate.

Irene Osborne and Robert Alexander reported that the desegregation workshop was successfully held. They both believe the Negro community is more unified and aware of roles to be played in change and crisis. June Shagaloff could not get there but they secured ample help through Irene and Paul Cook. Guests at the last session were the Negro girl who attended Greensboro High School and five of the Little Rock students. The holding of such a workshop, with the help of outside consultants, is a crucial need in any community facing such change. This I judge to be valid no matter how unified and well led the Negro community may seem beforehand. This, of course, seems distinctly an NAACP function, though other agencies can fill in where they are unavailablbe to help,

Information on School Desegregation Obtained in North Carolina
August 19-20, 1958

While on a trip to North Carolina I took the occasion to spend some time with the American Friends Service Committee staff working in the area of desegregation. We had one meeting at the home of Charles Davis in Greensboro with all of the AFSC program staff directors and assistants; the president of the Greensboro branch of NAACP, Ed Edmonds, was also present. On another day, I went to High Point to have lunch with the entire staff and afterwards met with Tartt Bell, Charles Davis and William Bagwell, who is the new co-director of the school desegregation program with Charles Davis.

The major concern of these people was that the increase in pressures for school reassignment that some of us there expected and hoped would follow the first year of token desegregation has not been realised. Negro parents are still reluctant to put forward themselves and their children as pioneers, even though the token moves of last year were peacefully realised. I found them all quite discouraged and convinced after a long second look that the State had contrived a cleger holding device of presently aparent legality.

Token moves toward compliance under the Pearsall plan have been followed by a quiet tightening of controls through local boards. These school boards seem less disposed to accept reassignment of Negro applicants than they did last year. In Greensboro the terms of the two most liberal board members expired—both were pro-desegregation—and the city council replaced them with "safer" members. The identity of the new people is not known by the AFSC staff, beyond their names. A new stiffening of resistance in North Carolina may be evidence of a plannedfollow-up of longer range policy under the Pearsall program. It may also be further evidence of the renewed strength given the course of resistance by Faubus and Almond successes and national political leadership default.

Whether in fact there is a net deterioration in the broader picture of desegregation—in schools and elsewhere—is not fully established to my satisfaction. I believe that the total number of applications for school reasignment presented by Negroes in North Carolina is greater this year than last, in spite of the lack of increase in the area of greatest change last year—Greensboro. Applications were presented again in all areas where they were last year and additionally in Durham, Carrboro(adjoining Chapel Hill) and New Bern, an historic coastal city. Two court cases that involve clear-cut and well founded complaints are now in process. In Raleigh the Holt family was recently denied access to the Federal district court and asked first to exhaust their state remedies. The Holts live near the white high school and accross the city from the Negro school. They have a good case and are determined to pursue it.

The first case which directly challenges the constitutionality of the Pearsall apparatus has appeared in Durham. SRC has no doubt been well briefed on this case as John Wheeler is one of the attorneys.

At the University of North Carolina this year there will be 23 Negro undergraduates according to AFSC people. It is particularly significant that there should be such an increase in this category. There will be additional Negroes at the Woman's College in Greensboro. Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary at Wake Forest will enroll its first Negro and be the final Southern Baptist seminary to achieve nominally desegregated status.

Further evidence of the influence of resistance elsewhere on North Carolina was the incidence of new acts of hostility toward Greensboro Negro children in desegregated situations, when trouble spots elsewhere were in the news. This was experienced by the children in Gillespie Park junior high. This fact emphasises the need for sympathetic and fair reporting by radio-TV and press. It also raises the question of what counter measures can be taken in areas subject to such influence when incidents are occuring elsewhere. School officials should be alerted to this problem. Local press and radio-TV news executives, where they can be talked to, should be advised of the sensitivity of their communities to the way reports from elsewhere are treated.

I learned of one development in Greensboro which Tartt Bell suggests may be looked for in other areas. A Negro bell hop at the King Cotton Hotel has announced the formation of a "Mutual Association for the Advancement of Negroes", which purports to speak for the "real" Negro leadership. The voice is pro-segregation. It received appreciable publicty and news attention in Greensboro. Many people whose names were released as being supporters of the organization denied any such connection and charged unauthorized use of their names. This organizationprobably has little or no numerical support; nevertheless, the bulk of status and economic leadership in the Negro community of Greensboro is not actively behind moves toward desegregation and NAACP organizational efforts. This is discouraging, but it is a fact of life with which, perhaps AFSC, but more appropriately NAACP, might come to grips.

In the face of the pessimism shown by the people I met I concluded with them that the longer range and broader picture is probably not as regressive as they have been assuming. Moves toward desegregation in other areas than public schools must be considered as part of the picture. Success in other areas might be quickened by token accomplishment—or perhaps even failures—in public school desegregation. North Carolina is still ahead of all other genuinely southern states because, token though action there may be, there is a specific acceptance of the fact that the Brown decision is law and must be reckoned with. This is a necessary first step to "good faith Complaince", though obviously some distance from it. I am convinced that learning and change are taking place to a larger degree than a short range look at events would reveal.

We discussed at length the next steps for human relations agencies in North Carolina. The AFSC merit employment program will stress heavily its trips to Negro high schools with "panels of pioneers", to get across the larger message of integration through the specific aspect of jobs. This is acceptable to the schools; if handled well it can ultimately influence Negro high school youth to seek school integration as well. The AFSC school desegregation program will likely continue to cooperate with NAACP and local Negro organizations and leadership to strengthen and widen Negro support for school desegregation moves. The Pearsall plan makes this necessary. Because of its small staff AFSC will limit its actions in this area principally to the near-by areas of Greensboro, Winston-Salem and High Point. Some attention will be given to strategic mountain communities comparable to Warren County, Virginia, where a few high school children are sent out of the country to school. Such areas appear logically to be ripe for desegregation, but the Negro communities are small, and frequently scattered, in mountain areas.

I urged them again to give special attention to Chapel Hill as the one area in the state where ultimately some school board initiative toward desegregation may be possible. Chapel Hill is faced with a special problem of major expansion which can be accomplished only with great awkwardness if complete segregation is retained. This is a more significant, and feasible, objective in Chapel Hill than helping to strengthen the Negro community to produce pioneers to apply under the Pearsall plan. AFSC staff can give significant assistance to the State Council affiliate in Chapel Hill in defining and working toward this objective. AFSC is closer to it than is Harry Jones.

I urge continuation of the interagency conferring and cooperation that has worked so well in North Carolina, as well as the occasional off-the-record conferences with silent but sympathetic status leaders.

Confidentially, I believe the AFSC merit employment program in North Carolina is in somewhat better hands than it has been in the past. Charles Davis of the school program has developed greatly in skill and articulateness. SRC should keep close watch on him. He would be a good person for SRC or other organizational efforts in the event AFSC school program funds are terminated, as they could be in a year or two. Davis' skills are too valuable to be lost to this type of work. The new man working with him (my belated replacement) is William Bagwell, formerly of Furman University. He had just reported to the job and I am unable to give an estimation of him.

FINAL REPORT ON SURVEY OF ARLINGTON, VIRGINIA BY

Southern Regional Council Consultant - July and August, 1958

The present report is a summary and concluding analysis, with a more detailed statement of significant activities and interviews since the previous report of August 7, 1958. This latter report, along with the two previous reports sent in July, with the present summary will cover all the investigation by this consultant in Arlington.

The School System

Attached to the original of this report sent to Atlanta is a table giving distribution of Arlington pupils, by schools and grades. This table does not give a racial breakdown but of the total of 22,812 pupils in attendance in March, 1958, about 1,450 were Negro. Of these Negro pupils, who comprise 6% of the total school population, from 135 to 190 are said to be living in locations that make them potentially subject to desegregation.

The lower figure was given me by Superintendent of Schools Ray Reid and the larger one appeared in an article prepared by William Korey of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith for an early September issue of Commentary. This means that little more than 10% of all Negro children are potential subjects for desegregation under present residential patterns and school locations.

Superintendent Reid was asked if the present operation of a segregated system makes any of his schools inefficient because of size or location. He stated that even if there were complete desegregation the school locations and distribution of students would not be changed or affected appreciably. No present units, he claims, are inefficient or poorly located. In spite of the small number of Negro children, the smallest school in the system, he states, is a white school. It should be noted that the one Negro high school, Hoffman-Boston, had 179 pupils as against 1,549 and 2,525 for the two white high schools. It simply does not have the facilities or richness of educational resources of the two white schools. An ultimate plan of local citizens should obviously be to transfer all high school students to the two larger schools and to eliminate Hoffman-Boston. Such a proposal should be part of a total study of the school system under assumptions of no segregation which likely would be undertaken only by a private citizens group, and not by school officials after the first court-ordered desegregation. Perhaps it could be done by the earlier effective organization that helped Arlington realize an elected school board, the Citizens Committe for School Improvement. Although the elected board was taken away by the State, the organization is still said to have some strength.

The personnel of the school board has already been given in a previous report. Since that time I have had a long chat with L. Lee Bean, a "middle of the road" member of the school board. I was told by several people before meeting him that his position was not known although they expected him to lean toward the position of the Committee to Preserve the Public Schools, but that he was cautiously conservative. He is about 40 years old, and an attorney. His father was a school principal. He is a very personable individual with a real sense of obligation to public service.He was born in Florida and grew up in southern Virginia and told me that until he was at the University of Virginia he had no doubt but that segregation had scriputral validation. He states now that he considers it wrong and the main problem is how to bring about orderly changes to desegregation of public facilities and to equal citizenship. He is, however, a cautious gradualist in what he may personally support as school board policy.

Bean's view is that the School Board will continue to follow the State defined procedures and place the responsibility of assignment on the State until the Federal court specifically relieves the Board of any obligation to follow the state by intervening and declaring the state apparatus and legislation unconstitutional. This position is a bit shaky because attorneys for the Negro children cite rather clear statements in Judge Bryan's decisions on Arlington in which the local school board is specifically told that the court does not recognize the right of the board to yield its responsibility for assignment to the state.

The picture given me by Bean and Mrs. Katherine Stone, local member of the Virginia House of Delegates, is that the board is genuinely paralysed with fear of the two contending powers, the state of Virginia and the Federal government. They are not just delaying for the sake of delay but are genuinely afraid. The last act of retaliation by the State was to withdraw the right to an elected school board. The board is now appointed by the County Board, which has now reached a relatively liberal majority. It is now feared that the State will assign a State judge to appoint the school board as is done elsewhere in the State. In the cradle of the states rights issue it is ironic that the state government can and does exercise so much power over local unites of government. Mrs. Stone reported that the two liberal members of the school board, Joy and Stockard, have played up the possibility of citation of individual board members for contempt of Federal court and that the two conservative members, particularly Mrs. Lane, are afraid of ending up in jail on a Federal charge. Bean emphasised that Joy was particularly fearful of such an eventuality.

My considered estimation of the school board, based on information from numerous informants, is that only when the Federal court has specifically taken the state off of their necks will they carry out the responsibility to reassign the Negro applicants on an equitable basis. Mrs. Stone and Bean believe that such reassignment will ultimately be on a unanimous basis, with even segregationists Peck and Lane going along in fear of Federal authority. Bean told me quite off the record that he expected that when the strange drama has played itself out, by an as yet unclear script, perhaps a dozen to fifteen of the Negro children will be in presently white schools. He surmised, in a manner that led me to believe he was actually reporting private board conclusions, that they would ultimately get down to a geographical basis for assignment and draw school district lines that would approximate geographical convenience of residents to schools while minimizing possible integration. He said he expected the State pupil assignment board to turn down all applications for transfer and when the Federal Court finally directed the school board to act or be held in contempt they will accept some of the children.

An interesting sidelight on the school board is that when Bean was appointed to the board, he is the newest member, it was expected that he would be elected chairman. He reportedly declined to vote for himself on the grounds of modesty and on the grounds that Peck was more experienced on the Board than he. Joy and Stockard voted for Bean but Peck and Lane of course voted for Peck. This made many local liberals question his reliability. He is perhaps a bit naive about the local politics of segregation.

The superintendent of schools took office on July 1. He is Ray E. Reid, a reserved and dignified man of over 50; formerly an assistant state superintendent. He was active with the state department of education in formulating and promoting the Gray plan for local option which was rejected by the legislature and the state political leaders. Several people told me that this action spoiled the real chance that he had to become state superintendent. In his conversation with me he was polite but reserved. He states that he is surprised and puzzled over Almond's actions. He has known the man well for some years and believes he understands the realities of the situation much better than his words and actions indicate. Almond is personally a convinced segregationist but Reid believes the intensity of his position on the school problem results from claculated political considerations.

Reid is for local option on school desegregation. He believes that the community, students and teaching staff are so cosmopolitan that it could easily be accomplished and supported in Arlington. He is thoroughly southern in his view to the extent that he believes the amount of integration would be small not only because of residential patterns but because most Negroes do not really want it. He is from southern Virginia, with a highly traditional background and professional career. Lee Bean told me that Reid was hired with the understanding that he would be prepared to operate the system, with some degree of integration if necessary. Like Bean, he believes that in the political climate they operate in they cannot risk undertaking any of the preparatory actions for desegregation that have proved desirable in other communities, either with the children or the teachers. Reid showed some familiarity with preparations elsewhere but said he thought that once the political and legal issues were resolved they would have no problems because of the nature of the community and the small amount of integration. He said he just had not thought about any kind of preparation because any hint of it would bring state retaliation. In this Bean concurred. Bean said he hoped that some of the supervisors or principals that will be involved would undertake some preparatory study and orientation to the problem, such as a visit to desegregated school systems to talk with personnel there, although unofficially and on their own. Reid said he had not thought about this yet and at first thought he doubted if it were really needed. He said he knows superintendent Fischer in Baltimore, and his assistant, on a first name basis. He also knows school people in Washington. In short, he views the problems as almost solely political. Once the legal and political maneuvers have been accomplished he believes that actual adjustment of the school system to the minimum desegregation he expects will be easy. If he then decided that any preparation is necessary he will undertake it.

It is my conclusion that no persuasion will move Reid to undertake any preparation of his staff or students for desegregation. It may well be that they will adjust to it with ease when it finally takes place. Arlington is probably more advanced and ready for desegregation than any community in which it has taken place since May, 1954.

Beyond the question of immediate desegregation I asked what he thought could be done in the longer run to realize a more fully integrated and unified school system in the face of some persistent de facto segregation because of residential patterns. He said that integrated teacher training sessions were the practice, and that in all respects the teachers were treated as belonging to one system. White supervisors work in the Negro schools but the few Negro supervisors work only in Negro schools. At the present time there is a two week training session in progress in which one of the supervisors giving instruction is a Negro.

The County PTA Council is integrated. Its leadership has given strong public support to the CPPS position. As stated in a previous report the Council urged local school PTA units to support for office only candidates who declare themselves in favor of keeping open the public schools. I attempted to present to Reid the view that real integration of the system involves much more than simply admission of a dribble of Negroes to presently white schools by court order. He seemed to respond with understanding as he is a professional school man with obvious skill and experience. I was unable to tell from his cautious approach whether he has the heart to understand the true meaning of real integration, but I am also unable to say that he does not understand it. At this point I do not believe that this is of much consequence because as a tried professional school man he will do a highly competent job with whateverchildren the board or the courts assign to his schools.

Within the hierarchy of the school system the one serious problem is to be found in the person of the attorney for the school board, James Simmons. According to Bean he has leaned over backwards in fear of the state in spite of frequent warnings from board members that they wish above all to avoid being placed in contempt of Federal court. Bean thought that the board could have, and perhaps should have, moved against the state wishes prior to this. It is apparently Simmons' counsel that has led the board to take its present course in relation to the state procedures.

It has not been possible for me to see Richard L. Franz, president of the Arlington County PTA Council. The stated position of his organization has already been given. Mr. Franz is employed by the Department of Commerce in Washington. Bill Korey of ADL and Harry Mericam, and interested attorney from Washington, had lunch with Franz this week but I was unable to make it because of a conflict. Korey and Mericam are convinced that the council will be a strong force for supporting desegregation when it is realized and beforehand be a strong public supporter of "keeping the schools open."

Status of legal maneuvers and requests for desegregation

Five of the original plaintiffs in the action brought against the school board by Negro children of Arlington to attend presently white schools are still applicants for such transfer. One of the original 7 has graduated from high school and another is attending private school in Washington. By August 1 of this year, which was the deadline, 27 additional children had presented formal applications or letters requesting reassignment from Negro to white schools. Applications were presented on behalf of two white children for Negro schools with the hope that they might be assigned to them and get the governor to then close them, too.

The Arlington school board, in recognition of the state legislation, passed these applications on to the State Pupil Assignment Board in Richmond with the request that they be acted on by August 15. The State Pupil Assignment Board asked the parents to present themselves, unaccompanied except by the children at specified hours at an Arlington office building address on August 12 and 13, for interview by the Pupil Assignment Board. On advice of legal counsel all parents declined the request on the grounds that Judge Bryan had already directed the local school board to make the decisions itself and not pass its responsibility to the State.

The local school board then announced that new appointments to appear would be given and local representatives would appear with the state representatives. It is expected that attorneys for the Negro applicants will advise them not to accept this second invitation. Counsel for the applicants has sought private consultation with the school board attorney in an effort to negotiate a reasonable basis for interviewing or otherwise determining the conditions for acting on the transfer requests. Even the attorneys will not conjecture at this time how the legal maneuvering will work out.

Another bit of legal and political maneuvering is going on in another direction. The legal committee of the CPPS has met to discuss a plea for an injunction against the governor, restraining him from closing the schools. The first draft of the proposed injunction, which was prepared by Harry Mericam, who has volunteered his services, is being sent with this report. I was invited to attend a conference on this first draft in the ADL offices. The following attorneys from Arlington were present: Warren Cox, Larry Latto and Jacob Wasserman. Also present, in addition to Mericam were myself and Bill Korey of ADL, and the following attorneys: Herman Edelsber of ADL, Joseph Rauh of ADA and Phineas Indritz of American Veterans Committee. The final draft will of course be changed considerably, but this gives a suggestion of the legal approach.

Judge Bryan is out of the country until September 2 so it may proved necessary to request another judge as the legal tactic is to enjoin the governor before school opens, but close to the date of September 4, so that it may be considered an immediate issue and not put off. They hope thereby to prevent school closing and to clear the way for the local board to assign the Negro applicants.

Attorney Edmund D. Campbell, who is expected back from Europe after August 24, is to be the attorney of record for the injunction request. The plaintif has not been decided yet. There are several possibilities. Campbell is an attorney of prestige and standing in the community.

One point of lengthy discussion in the legal conference was whether to take legal action to enjoin the local school board as well as the governor. The conclusion was that the board should be included as defendants, to be personally and collectively served. This will be done so as to put direvt pressure on the board, which the CPPS has so far refrained from doing, and so as to get the legal point established that they have the responsibility for running the schools and cannot yield to state pressure. This is so far highly confidential as those present surmised that the board would be surprised at such action. This, I believe, was one of the most constructive changes made in the draft. Even though it is such an early draft the copy is being attached as it may be of some interest. Harry Mericam is now working on the next draft. Note: as Harry Mericam has been prominently associated with many NAACP cases it should be considered confidential information that he is involved in this way with the CPPS legal maneuvers in Arlington.

The Governor has in the meantime been continuing to talk the line of massive resistance. He states that he will surely close the schools if they are integrated and that he will consider them integrated when a final court order has been given for a particular child to attend a specific school previously open only to children of the other race. Like all his other frequent statements this is a bit confusing because such an order has already been given by Judge Bryan in Arlington. He continues to emphasise that he will consider the Negro parents, the NAACP and the Federal courts as directly responsible for any school closings and suggests that the people of Virginia should hold them so accountable. In one sense this might be considered an instigation to local people to take retaliatory action against such parents in their communities. The only caution the governor has shown appeared in the newspapers of August 15 when he expressed concern at the suggestion of Jack Rathbone, Arlington Defenders' president, that he could provide a "600 member rifle and pistol team" to help keep order when schools open.

Local Government and Politics

There are two local political associations in lieu of the traditional parties for local elections. The Arlingtonians for a Better County (ABC) represent the more liberal wing of those who tend to be Democrats while the Arlington Independent Movement (AIM) represents Republicans and conservative Democrats. At present the County Board is ABC, 3-2. School Board members tend not to assume outright identification with these groups. In ABC there are active Negro workers and leadership. Edward Strother, a Negro and a blacksmith, is on the ABC executive committee. He is also on the executive committee of the local NAACP branch, as well as two integrated liberal organizations of local interest.

The Board of County Sepervisors, locally and in this report referred to as the county board, was described in an earlier report. Its three ABC leaders are Kaul, Krupsaw and Brown. Krupsaw has been out of town during my visit, but I infer that he is even more outspokenly liberal than Kaul. He is a good friend of David Scull and also close to Bill Korey of ADL. He accompanied Korey on a visit to Chief of Police Fawver, and is apparently Korey's best point of contact for the good work he has been doing there.

The County Mangger and the Police are responsible to the county board and their relationship has been described in an earlier report. It was announced publicly by Kaul that Fairfax County and Alexandria police would be available for assistance if needed at school opening time. All reports I have been able to gather are that the local police force is professionally loyal and efficient. Negro lawyers tell me that the police are particularly fair in their treatment of suspects and prisoners, exhibiting none of the conventional southern police brutality. I have seen several references in the local paper in recent weeks about the fairness, politeness and competence of the local police. It may be by design, to help build up their morale.

Ralph Kaul stated that in addition to covering the schools the police will see that no harm comes to the families of the children involved and also that the Jewish Community Center is protected from threatened bombing. I passed to Kaul the information about possible consultation in St. Louis and Louisville as given me by John Hope. Kaul seemed to resist having me take it up directly with the local police and also did not want SRC to serve in any way as an intermediary. He said he would pass the information on to the County Mangger and the chief, and they would, if they desired , get in touch directly with the out of town police. The implication was that it would have more weight coming from Kaul. Bill Korey will try to get the draft of the Hanson police manual from the New York ADL office and ask for permission to release it confidentially to Chief Fawver. He agrees that this would be a useful move and would also give him a chance to see Fawver again.

Several sources informed me that Chief Fawver and the Commonwealth Attorney were scheduled to attend some FBI classes the week school opens. That Fawver might be away was finally reported in the press. I called Kaul about this and he agreed that under the circumstances the chief should be on the scene. He said as the Commonwealth Attorney is an elected official his board has no power over him. I consulted Clayton Fritchey, publisher of the Northern Virginia Sun, on this question. I suggested that if these men were to be away at such a time it would be dereliction of duty. He agreed and said he would put a reporter to work investigatimg the situation. Bill Korey will bring it up with Krupsaw when the latter returns to town next week. Mrs. Stone originally gave this story to me. I believe enough people are working on it now that both men will likely be available for any emergency.

In the House of Delegates Arlington is represented by Mrs. Katherine Stone, a very capable woman of considerable courage. She is quite liberal. It is evidence of the cosmopolitan nature of the community that she comes from Iowa by way of New Orleans (where she taught the brother and sister of Phil Stern, by way of incidental information of minor relevance). I met with her and Bill Korey and Herman Edelsberg of ADL to consider the advisability and content of a possible public statement by her to the Governor. She proposed that it be released in her name and that of another woman member of the House of Delegates, a Republican of similar persuasion on this issue, from Southwest Virginia. The statement would specifically challenge the governor to answer why he would not allow residents of Arlington to run their schools how they chose and to challenge him on the confusion and urging to possible violence indicated by his recent public statements. The latter refers to his statements that Negro parents should be held accountable if schools are closed. Following our discussion Herman Edelsberg agreed to draft a proposed statement for her consideration. He consulted Bob Baker of the Washington Post who agreed that release of such a statement might be constructive. It will hopefully be released just before the governor's next press conference so that reporters can bring his attention to it and ask for his response.

The local representative in the U. S. Congress is a resident of Arlington, a Republican by the name of Broyhill. Local informants tell me that he has stayed as far away from the issue as possible except for his public claim that Eisenhower and Almond should confer on the problem. Although Broyhill claimed he had proposed the idea of a meeting to Eisenhower, the President and his staff denied having received such a request when the President was asked about it in a press conference. Broyhill is up for re-election this fall and has steered clear of any committment on the local issue.

Churches, Religious Organizations and Leadership

Numerous attempts were made to interview the leading ministers but they were virtually all on vacation. The new chairman of the Ministerial Association is Paul J. Harrell of Memorial Baptist Church. He was out of town. The only officer of the association that I could locate was Charles E. Book, minister for religious education at the Trinity Presbyterian Church, who is secretary. I had a long conversation with him on the phone but was unable to find him when I went by his church. He suggested some leading ministers to see but they were all out of town.

I get a poor impression of the strength of the Ministerial Association. With nearly 80 churches listed in the Church Directory of Arlington (copy enclosed with original of this report sent to Atlanta) only an average of 25 ministers show up at the monthly meetings of the Ministerial Association. Particularly disappointing is that frequently not more than one of the Negro ministers, and rearly more than two, attend the monthly meetings. There are ten Negro churches listed in the directory.

The Ministerial Association has supported the movement to keep the schools open and Mr. Harrell is reported to be active in CPPS and was in the delegation from that organization that called on the Governor. Bill Korey of ADL and several Negro leaders reported to me that the Ministerial Association had agreed to ask a minister to accompany each Negro child to school on the first day of attendance at previously all white schools. Mr. Book, secretary of the association, said he did not think they would do this, as the majority opinion among the ministers was that they could work more effectively by taking leadership roles with their own congregations. I am not convinced that accompanying the children is necessary or even advisable. It would serve to make it seem more of a crisis situation just as readily as being a pacifying influnece. It made more sense in helping the children in Clinton to face the known mob. My advice here would be to hold such a proposal in reserve, only to be followed in the event of crisis. I discussed this with Rev. Book.

The most outspoken minister on the school issue is Ross A. Weston of the Unitarian Church. He is in Maine for the month of August. His church membership is integrated and other Negroes who are not members of the church attend an adult group at the church. His church has also been a center of leadership for the Community Council for Social Progress. The general view I encountered is that Weston has been so outspoken and his church policy has been so liberal on racial matters that his leadership in the school problem would be somewhat discounted. On several occasions integrated groups of young people have been brought togehter at his church. I was told by Dr. J. B. Johnson, chairman of the Department of Medicine at Howard, and a member of Weston's church, that a workshop was planned for Negro youth going to white schools, and some white children, during the week before school opens. I was unable to confirm the validity of this claim.

A somewhat more religiously conservative center of leadership on this issue has been the Rock Springs Congregational Church, Sidney Lovett, minister. This church held, early in the summer, a get acquainted social for the Negro children who are applying for school reassignment. The parents were also included.

Charles Book told me that he is helping to organize a human relations workshop to be sponsored by NCCJ the week of August 25 for a select group of no more than three high school age youth group leaders from each of the churches in the county. It is to be held at the Westover Baptist Church, Barker Hardison, minister. It will be integrated and will deal specifically with the school problem. It is being organized for NCCJ by Russell Bradley from the Washington office of that organization. Book told me that the regional representative for NCCJ is a resident of Arlington and is supporting this workshop. Unfortunately I cannot find his name in my notes. I suspect that this is the workshop the Johnson spoke of. Book states that the Local Council of Churches is supporting the workshop with the view that a major contribution can be made by the churches if a selected group of their youth leaders attending the schools are trained to lead the way to constructive desegregation. This seems to make sense.

In addition to the above named ministers who were unavailable I was also given the name of William H. Foster, minister of Book's church, Trinity Presbyterian. Clayton Fritchey said he judged him to be one of the most respected and effective ministers in the county. He was also on vacation.

Two Negro ministers I met were Henry Sink of the Lomax A.M.E. Zion Church and N. R. Richardson of the Mt. Salvation Baptist church. Both of these men have worked actively with the school integration committees of their respective communities, South and North Arlington. I discussed with Richardson the possible roles of the ministers during desegregation and urged him to renew contact with leading white ministers and lay church leaders on their return from vacation. He has been the most active Negro minister in the Ministerial Association so is the proper one for such negotiations.

It is unfortunate that so many of the ministers are to be away until the eve of the opening of school. I doubt that they will be coordinated enough to be very effective so closely following their summer absences. I urged Richardson to get in touch with Edmund Campbell on his return from Europe about August 25. Campbell was described to me as being, with his wife, one of the most active lay leaders of inter-church activities. She is chairman of the Committee on Christian Social Relations of the Council of United Church Women.

Suggestions for action to be recommended by SRC: John Marion and Neil Tarpley should be urged to make brief visits to Arlington at the end of August to check on the roles being played by their respecitve constituencies. Mrs. Ennis should be encouraged to come to Arlington after the return of Mrs. Campbell (2912 Glebe Rd.; Kenmore 6-8651) on or about August 25, to see her as the best point of contact for checking on the readiness of the church women for their roles in the change. If any of the above or Paul Rilling could be in Arlington after September 1 they should check with Mrs. Josephine Kyles at the Washington Federation of Churches (1751 N. Street, N. W.; Decatur 2-3132). She told me that there is someone in their office who could help in bringing the churches in Arlington together for more effective service on the school problem. Arlington churches hold a closer affiliation to this Council than to the Virginia State Council of Churches. Mrs. Kyles is educational director for the Washington Federation of Churches and was of great assistance to the parent-children workshop held at the Mt. Salvation Baptist Church.

Community Organizations and Resources

It might be more meaningful to speak of Arlington resources in terms of leading and active individuals than in terms of organizations because there is a great deal of duplication of leaders in the various activities, religious and otherwise. The CPPS leaders, for example, are active people selected from a variety of interests and activities in Arlington. Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Campbell have been mentioned several times in my reports as active in a variety of ways, in fact they are the one couple that I found most frequently mentioned as key people for liberal leadership on this issue. Unfortunately I was able to see Mrs. Campbell only briefly on my very first visit to the community as she was leaving the next day for Europe. Rather than make an inventory of leaders, however, I will for simplicity list the effective organizations of a voluntary nature outside the religious sphere.

1. The Committee to Preserve the Public Schools has already been described in detail. Without this group and its method of approach I am sure the whole movement toward integration and keeping the schools open would not have been at all effective. This pattern will be a guide to other Virginia communities I believe. Mr. Warren Cox of CPPS told me that he had been called on by a Professor Stein of the Norfolk branch of William and Mary, who is interested in forming a similar organization down there. If our Norfolk contacts are not in touch with him they should be.

2. Although the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith is principally represented in Arlington by Bill Korey of Washington it has been of inestimable service. As mentioned in previous reports it has served to coordinate the various liberal forces and agencies working in the community. It has been the sole point of effective contact between the CPPS and more overtly pro-integration forces in the community. Any contact with the community should be coordinated with ADL. ADL Washington address is 1640 Rhode Island Avenue, N.W.; Executive 3-5284.

3. The Community Council for Social Progress grew out of activity at the Unitarian church. It may not include any membership that is not active in a variety of other organizations and churches already mentioned. They have not been directly effective as an organization in the school issue lately. I presume they include the people who would be most interested in the State Council on Human Relations, and may from time to time have been affiliated or in communication with it. My closest contact was with its vice-president, Dr. J. B. Johnson of Howard; home address, 2317 Second Street, South, Arlington - Jackson 2-4113. Paul Rilling should get to know this organization.

4. Citizens Committee for School Improvement was formed several years ago with general school improvement in view. Its most significant achievment was leadership in the establishment of an elected school board. E. D. Strother of South Arlington, 2819 18th St., Jackson 2-7093, was a leader of this organization in the Negro community. He believes that a Mrs. Jane or June Layman is now president. As suggested above I believe it should be urged on this group to undertake a post-desegregation study of the school system to find how a more efficient system can be realized from genuine and full integration. I think elimination of the small Negro high school would be a worthy objective, for example. The planting of the idea of such a future project for this organization might be done by Paul Rilling. I ventured it with Strother but could not get his attention beyond more pressing immediate problems.

5. NAACP is relatively well supported and will be covered below.

6. The Northern Virginia Sun is a strongly liberal paper which is widely appreciated and respected in the community. Local news has never been so well covered before. Clayton Fritchey is publisher and Philip Stern is editor. They were my major and continuing source of contact in the community. Unfortunately Stern was on vacation during my last week in Arlington. He will be in close touch with the school board and the county board. Representatives of these boards were asked to communicate with Stern in the event they later decide any SRC consultant services would be of use. This was done so they would view it as coming through a local source. Stern was asked to communicate, if need be, with Harold Fleming directly, as they are already acquainted. Stern should be kept informed of any future SRC contacts in the community and Paul Rilling would do well to make his acquaintance. The office is on Wilson Boulevard near 10th Street, Ja. 4-3000.

The Negro Community

Except for ministers, lawyers and doctors most Negro leaders are employed by the government in Washington, for obvious reasons. NAACP is relatively strong, although for strategic reasons it has not taken an overt lead as an organization in the school problem locally. The leaders in the school issue are also, however, leaders in NAACP. The Legal Defense Fund has supported the legal action to end segregation in Arlington and the state NAACP lawyers have helped with the case. I did not get to meet the present President of NAACP, Carl Ferguson, who works in Washington, although I met a number of people on the executive committee.

The organization to help the community work at the school desegregation problem has been divided into a North Arlington and a South Arlington School Committee. Rev. Henry Sink and Attorney Robert Alexander are co-chairmen of the South Arlington group.

Carl Deskin, a local fireman, is co-chairman of the North Arlington group. The latter individual was assured by the County Board that his job would in no way be in jeopardy because his child is an applicant for school reassignment.

As previously reported, I assisted these two groups in getting in touch with people they invited to help with a workshop to prepare the parents and children for school integration. Irene Osborne agreed to work with June Shagaloff in helping them to organize effectively to lend moral support and coordinated backing for the children and parents when school opens. They will have their workshop over two week-ends, August 15-16 and 23-24. Mrs. Kyles and two teachers from Washington will complete their well manned staff of consultants.

In addition to very able Negro leadership there are two white women who carry a strong burden of NAACP responsibility, Mrs. Barbara Marx, who many told me is their most tireless worker, was away on vacation. She is highly respected and admired and reported to be an excellent strategist.

Dr. J. B. Johnson, mentioned several times above, brought together a group of community leaders for me to meet in his home. There were about eight or ten people present. Harry Walker accompanied me and we learned a great deal and I got some good leads from them. Much of what we learned there has been included throughout the report. They stated that they had no fears for the realization of desegregation in Arlington. If any trouble comes it will be from the outside. They thought most of the local Defender leadership would be well taken care of by the police. They said no economic pressures have been experienced or expected.

E. D. Strother was one of the most interesting Negro leaders they referred me to. He is mentioned above. He is a self-employed blacksmith. On first appearanee one might mistakenly take him for the traditional "white man's Negro leader", but he is a man of great insight and clarity of principle, though formally without much education. He was referred to by both whites and Negroes as one of the most respected Negro leaders in the county. He is active in NAACP, integrated liberal organizations and in the dominant political group (ABC). He is a member of a Negro church but attends an adult group at the Unitarian church.

One of the most promising of the younger men I met is Robert Alexander, an attorney, Jackson 5-7367. He is a relative newcomer in the community but is very capable and energetically concerned with making a contribution. He has the advantage of practicing law privately right in Arlington, hence being on the scene at all times and getting to know people widely in the community.

Conclusions

Specific recommendations have been made above in the section on religious organizations and in mentioning the Citizens Committee for School Improvement. Suggestions for police consultation have been passed on through the chairman of the County Board. It was stated above that no overt preparation within the school system will be undertaken prior to desegregation.

Aside from specific suggestions and results from the visit of this consultant to Arlington I believe it was valuable to have one more concerned person speak with all key people he could find available at this time. Although for a relatively brief visit the contact was not wholly casual. I got to know quite a few people and engaged many of them in a frank exploration of the issues. It is hoped that this helped some of them to reassess and redefine their roles. The visit did serve in some instances to help bring some people of like mind together who were not previously in contact with each other. A few were brought to positions of concern, perhaps, more than they had been before.

The shorter range resolution of the Arlington problem, to the actual first steps of desegregation, I cannot predict. No one knows, even at this late date, what the outcome will be except the majority of informed opinion predicts some desegregation this fall. The outcome for the moment is in the legal and political area.

I still believe that some forceful statements from Washington are needed because the local Defenders are still acting with bravado, as if the law were on their side. I have made the suggestion that a new approach might be made through the new secretary of health, education and welfare, Fleming. Perhaps Bishop Oxnam could approach him, as a former president of a Methodist college.

I believe the liberal forces in Arlington will be more confident, more outspoken, more identified to each other and more unified, as a result of the fight over keeping the schools open and seeking integration. It should be a fertile field for some cultivation by the new executive secretary of the State Council on Human Relations.

Dear Fred:

Enclosed are a supplemental report on Arlington, a report on my conversations in North Carolina and a final expense account. The latter covers travel as we agreed in our conversation in New York, Greensboro to New York and some travel in Arlington. It includes a claim for ~~the~~ consultant fees for the agreed upon extra two days to cover the additional work in Arlington-Washington and the interviews in North Carolina. I received a check from Harold to cover the New York consultation. (The latter item was originally addressed to an incorrect address on Riverside--please note in your records that it should be 460)

pls correct records

The only item I still owe you is a clean copy of the set of cards I worked with, covering names, addresses and notes of people I spoke with in Arlington. I have been in a whirlwind of activity since I returned and have had no opportunity to copy them over--I want the originals. You will get them shortly.

Best regards to you and Harold. It was wonderful working with you this summer.

School Will Open if Stay Bid Denied

ARLINGTON — The County today is officially assured that whenever a court order directing the admission of four Negro students to Stratford Junior High takes effect, the school will remain open.

It received this assurance on an official basis last night at a joint meeting of the School and County Boards on the desegregation crisis.

Also made public at the meeting was a code of procedure designed to avoid disturbances and assure an orderly transition when desegregation takes effect.

BY A FOUR to one vote, with a fiery dissent from Board member James G. Stockard, the School Board approved its earlier statement requesting a postponement of the Feb. 2 court desegregation order, pending a possible appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court. Should the stay be denied and their appeal fail, the Board said, the Negroes would enter and the school remain open.

In a four-point code of procedure, the School Board ruled unanimously that—

Dabney Sees Some Mixing Inevitable

RICHMOND (UPI)—The Richmond Times-Dispatch said in an editorial today Virginians "may as well realize" that a certain amount of school integration seems inevitable.

Editor Virginius Dabney urged the state legislature and people of the state "to begin thinking positively and constructively about the future" and proposed a plan to minimize integration but allow localities to integrate schools rather than close them if so desired.

THE NEWSPAPER, a firm backer of Virginia's "massive resistance" laws which were stricken down Monday, said indications were that a pupil assignment plan not including race as a factor would be held constitutional.

"The time has come to face up to the realities of this situation," Dabney wrote. "While it is abundantly clear that Virginians don't want mixed schools, it is also clear that they aren't going to be able to avoid them entirely."

The code also provided that the desegregation of Stratford High would not "atomatically" be a valid reason for the transfer of a student within Stratford Junior High or from that school to another school. It is the policy of the School Board that any such requests for transfer would have to be approved by the Board itself.

Usually transfer requests are handled by the School Administration, and are not referred to the School Board unless the Administration's decision is protested.

THE SPECIAL joint meeting of the School Board and County Board, which attracted a crowd of nearly 500 that filled the Washington-Lee High School auditorium, was the scene of two sharply-worded attacks — one from Mr. Stockard and the other from Board Member Helen S. Lane.

Mr. Stockard branded as "phony" the criterion upon which the School Board last summer rejected the four Negro applicants to Stratford.

Mrs. Lane said there are some things "far worse than closed schools."

"All over the world, free governments are falling under Communism," she said. "It is far more important to guard our consitutional rights."

MR. STOCKARD dissented from the School Board's decision to appeal Judge Albert V. Bryan's order admitting the four because, he said, their only "problem" was they were "members of another race."

He said he went along with the Board until last September when it drew up and presented in court the five-point pupil assignment plan upon which it denied admittance of 30 Negro applicants to white schools. "This is where I got off . . .," he said.

Mr. Stockard's blast brought a sharp rejoinder from School Board Chairman Robert A. Peck. "If some of us had 'gotten off' as you did . . .," he said, "school would have closed for thousands of Arlington students, and I don't regret the stand I took."

He said he was also dissenting from the Board's request for a

How Stratford Will Be Run

This is the statement released last night by the Arlington School Board after a joint meeting with the County Board.

In the event of an effective order of the Federal Court directing the admission of Negro pupils into Stratford Junior High School, it is recommended that the following procedure be approved in order that the continued operation of Stratford Junior High School may be carried out with a minimum of disturbance.

A. Pupils:

1. The admission of Negro students to Stratford Junior High will not automatically constitute a valid reason for transfer of students to another junior high school or for transfer of students from one section to another within Stratford Junior High School.

2. Any students creating a disturbance will automatically be suspended and will be readmitted only after a conference between the student's parents and school officials.

B. News Personnel:

1. Reporters, photographers and other representatives of newspapers, magazines, radio and television will not be permitted to go into the school buildings or on school grounds.

C. Authorized Persons in Any School Area:

1. Only students, school personnel and parents with legitimate school business will be allowed in any school area.

2. The Arlington County Police Department will control the movement of persons within school areas.

D. Additional Police Protection:

1. The Arlington County Police Department will provide coverage of school buildings and grounds.

postponement of Stratford's Feb. 2 desegregation date because it "makes the Board look like a small band of guerilla warriors who, though stripped of all weapons except their peashooters, still fight on."

Until they were declared unconstitutional earlier this week by both State and Federal courts, the State's massive resistance laws would have closed any white school to which Negroes were admitted.

MRS. LANE told the Board, "I have no right to place even one student in Stratford or direct the Superintendent to do it," she said, for such action would be "illegal" under the State Pupil Placement Act.

She voted in support of the resolution to keep Stratford open, however, after assurances from Mr. Peck that it was the Federal courts, not the School Board, that was admitting the Negroes.

The joint public meeting followed a 90-minute closed door conference between the two boards in Supt. Ray E. Reid's office. While the two boards were conferring, about 500 members of the Stratford Parent-Teacher Association were meeting in the Stratford auditorium. By an overwhelming vote, the PTA adopted a resolution asking the School Board to "continue to operate Stratford without interruption" when the Negro children enter.

PTA President J. Bernard Bradshaw asked the group to do everything it could to prevent incidents from happening at Stratford. "We don't want another Little Rock," he said.

Referendum On Education Is Forecast

ARLINGTON — Public education, Attorney Edmund D. Campbell told a meeting of the 10th District Women's Democratic Club, "is in graver danger today than ever before."

"We in Northern Virginia are going to have to stand up and be counted . . . We're going to have to work the bushes to preserve public schools," he told the luncheon meeting in Hogate's Arlington House.

Mr. Campbell, attorney for the Norfolk parents who sued the Governor to reopen schools there, predicted that "within a few months" Virginians will be asked to vote on a referendum question that will decide the fate of public schools — whether to amend Section 123 of the Constitution. This section says that the General Assembly "shall" maintain a free public school system throughout the state. A simple amendment, changing the "shall" to "may" would make the section permissive rather than mandatory.

"IF PUBLIC education is abandoned, Virginia will become a second rate State," Mr. Campbell said. "There is no middle ground . . . In the tradition of Joe Freehill, we have passed beyond party here and are interested only in what's best for the 800,000 school children in Virginia."

Dr. J. L. Blair Buck of Richmond, executive secretary of the Virginia Committee for Public Schools, traced the history of public education in Virginia.

Our Schools Today

Tuition Grants May Yet Be Legal

By DEAN BRUNDAGE

Governor Almond's address to the Commonwealth on Tuesday evening was clearly designed to offset the powerful impact of Monday's State Supreme Court decision. So totally devastating was the court's edict, so resounding the blow at "massive resistance" legislation, that public opinion throughout the Old Dominion was unquestionably swayed, for the moment at least, toward a realistic appraisal of the legal situation which now prevails. Although the public respect for our Federal courts has been critically impaired during the past four years, the esteem of Virginians for their state tribunals remains high.

Dean Brundage

For this very reason the move, early last Fall, to submit resistance laws to judicial review by the Supreme Court of Appeals was a risky gamble by the administration. The gamble has now been lost. What then, is next?

OTHER THAN the use by the Governor of his inherent police powers to maintain segregation there are now two lines of resistance which ought to be recognized. The first of these will probably involve a mounting appeal during the next several weeks to the communities to resist to the utmost by doing at the local level that which the state government can no longer do. School closings and denial of local funds may thus continue in Norfolk and in Warren County. Charlottesville is cautiously weighing the issue of reopening her schools.

Arlington alone has declared an intention to comply with Federal decrees—if only as a last resort. And despite some evidence of growing antipathy toward desegregation, public opinion in the county seems clearly to endorse the School Board's position. In a cosmopolitan area such as Northern Virginia it is unlikely that the climate of opinion is likely to be appreciably altered even by references to the "livid stench" of the "mixed schools of the District of Columbia."

If the localities cannot or will not continue massive resistance then the Commonwealth will, I am sure, turn to a system of tuition grants. There is increasing speculation in Virginia's press concerning this development. The fact that the Supreme Court of Appeals declared against Virginia's initial tuition-grant law does not rule out another act which would draw the funds from a slightly different source.

THE FLAW in the initial act, the Court maintained, lay in the fact that tuition grants were to be paid from monies illegally withheld from closed schools. Funds which are appropriated from general revenues, the Court indicated, could properly be spent for tuition grants.

In addition to the establishment of a tuition grant system it is apparent now that Governor Almond believes that some system of tax exemption for parents whose children are enrolled in private schools should be adopted. This may be what he meant when he said some of the tax revenues of the state will be restored "to the control of the people."

To make constitutional this transition from pubilc to private education, Section 129 of the State's basic charter will have to be altered or abolished, since it requires the Assembly to maintain a public education system. Then some day, perhaps not too far distant, the Old Dominion is going to be challenged by those who argue that a state cannot do by private means what it is forbidden to do by public means. But that issue will not be faced for some time.

Norfolk Parents to Seek Order Opening Schools

By CHARLES E. MAHON
United Press International

RICHMOND—The first court action seeking to open six of Virginia's integration-closed schools was expected today.

A three-judge Federal court meets in Richmond to make final its decision striking down a law permitting the governor to close integrated schools.

ATTORNEYS Edmund D. Campbell of Arlington and Archie L. Boswell of Norfolk were expected to seek a Federal court order calling for the immediate re-opening of the six schools in Norfolk. The court Monday ruled the closing of the schools was an "evasive scheme" designed to thwart U. S. Supreme Court desegregation rulings.

Judges Simon E. Sobeloff, Clement F. Haynsworth and Walter E. Hoffman will meet today to receive proposed drafts of the decree making their decision final.

Campbell and Boswell represented 15 white parents in the Federal court suit against Gov. J. Lindsay Almond, State Atty. General Albertis S. Harrison and the Norfolk School Board over the closing of the Norfolk schools.

The Navy, meanwhile, disclosed its plans for providing schooling for children living on the Norfolk naval base. Plans for the schooling, affecting only those children living on the base, have government approval and will be "put into effect if the local schools are not re-opened within a reasonable time."

The Norfolk School Board approved a resolution yesterday to give credit for privately tutored students displaced from the closed schools. The resolution would permit the students to start the second semester of work if the closed schools are re-opened.

ALMOND, meanwhile, said in Richmond it would be early next week before he could announce the composition of a special leg lative committee which will p pose a replacement for stricken "massive resistan laws. It would be "impossible overnight the urgency" of need for new anti-integra laws, he said.

Washington School Sup tendent Dr. Carl F. Hansen another verbal swipe at Almond yesterday because o Governor's firey blast at W ing schools Tuesday night.

School Board Lawyers Quit In Norfolk

RICHMOND (AP) — Norfolk's school board must hunt for new legal counsel at this critical juncture in the school segregation crisis, apparently because of a conflict of interest with city council.

Among decisions to be made is whether the board will try to reopen six white secondary schools closed last September to avoid integration, now that the law under which they and three other white schools in Virginia were shut has been ruled unconstitutional by both the State Supreme Court and a special three-judge Federal court.

W. R. C. Cocke and Leigh D. Williams, members of the same law firm who represented the school board since the desegregation suit opened in 1956, have quit the capacity. Cocke said yesterday the reason was "our prior obligation to the city."

COCKE and Williams were retained by City Atty. Leonard H. Davis, who under the city charter is charged with representing both council and the school board. The two bodies are at odds over council's announced intention to cut off all funds for grades above the sixth, effective Feb. 1—an apparent anti-integration measure.

ADL on Arlington

If it were possible to do so, the most effective course to follow would be for the parents of white children in the Arlington County public schools to intervene in the Thompson case, since this would seem to offer an opportunity to secure an injunction at the earliest possible date against a closing of the schools by the Governor. However, it has been the experience of plaintiffs' attorneys that Judge Bryan is willing to issue any necessary and reasonable order against an action taken by defendants in order to secure compliance with his decrees, but that he is not receptive to petitions for injunctions against anticipated actions. Since the latter is all that the white citizens could recommend in a brief amicus curiae, such a brief would probably be unproductive.

It is likely, therefore, that the earliest time at which white parents could enjoin the closing of the public schools would be when the schools have been closed, either by the assignment and enrollment of children of both races in a building by local school authorities -- under a court order or voluntarily -- or by an executive order issued by the Governor. [Ch. 68 of the 1956 Extra Session of the Virginia General Assembly, 1 Race Rels. L. Rep. 1104.]

It is probable that the earliest and most effective relief that is likely to be available to the parents of white children in Arlington County's public schools is a temporary restraining order -- followed by a temporary injunction and, if necessary, a permanent injunction -- against state authorities, prohibiting them from continuing to keep the schools closed. It might be possible to file the suit during the last week of August if conditions at that time appear to give reasonable assurance that a closing would be attempted on September 4. Charlottesville, Newport News and Norfolk are all scheduled to open on September 2. If they adhere to current plans, suit can probably be filed by Arlington citizens at least by that date without danger of being considered premature. In fact, even if a court should hold that the complaint was filed too soon, action on the same complaint could be renewed when the schools actually had been closed.

The primary basis of a suit for injunctive relief would seem to be that the closing of any school -- or all schools -- in Arlington County, while all segregated schools in the State remained open, would deprive Arlington pupils of the equal protection of the laws, and that the only valid recourse open to the State against a court order to desegregate Arlington County public schools would be the discontinuance of public education throughout the State.

Another ground upon which the closing of the public schools in Arlington County could be attacked is that a court may properly take judicial notice of the fact that such an action is one step in the continuing process of "massive resistance" to the principle that Negro children may not lawfully be denied admission to a public school by State authorities solely on the basis of race or color, and that that is the sole motive of State action in this instance. There are sufficiently numerous statements by various officials of the State of Virginia and the legislators who passed the laws giving effect to "massive resistance," as well as the provisions of the laws themselves, to support such a contention.

There is, for instance, Chapter 59 of the Acts of the 1956 Extra Session of the Virginia General Assembly, which provides that "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no child shall be required to enroll in or attend any school wherein both white and colored children are enrolled." [1 Race Rels. L. Rep. 1096.] It is obvious on the face of this statute that its sole basis is one of race and color, an unreasonable classification on which a regulation may not properly be founded, and one that is denied to State legislatures in Brown v. School Board.

Chapter 58, § 3 of the Acts of the 1956 Extra Session of the Virginia General Assembly, provides that " . . . such payments shall be made to parents, guardians or other persons having custody of children who have been assigned to or are in attendance at public schools wherein both white and colored children are enrolled." [1 Race Rels. L Rep. 1094, 1095.] Here, again, the only condition governing the granting of tuition costs for enrollment in a private nonsectarian school is one regarding race or color, i.e., whether white and colored children are enrolled in the public schools.

The provision in § 10 of the same law that: "For so long as children are assigned to or attend schools where both white and colored children are enrolled, the State Board of Education shall authorize and direct the Superintendent of Public Instruction to provide for payment of grants" [1 Race Rels. L. Rep. 1094, 1095] is subject to the same infirmity.

The policy statements of par. 1, §§ 1 and 2 of Chapter 68 of the Acts of the 1956 Extra Session of the Virginia General Assembly likewise make clear the unlawful purpose of this legislation in that they state:

"1. § 1. The General Assembly declares that, as a consequence of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States affecting the public school system, school authorities of the various political subdivisions of the Commonwealth of Virginia will be faced with unprecedented obstacles if and when ordered to enroll white and colored children in the same public schools, and such enforced integration of the races by a county or city school board could destroy the efficiency of the school in which white and colored children were so enrolled, and would tend to disturb the peace and tranquility of the community in which such school is located.

"§ 2. The General Assembly declares that the welfare of all the citizens of the Commonwealth, the preservation of her public school system and a continuance of universal public education, make it necessary that there be uniformity of action throughout the State in all instances where school authorities acting voluntarily, or under compulsion, enroll a child in a public school, which enrollment (sic) would require a child of the white race to attend a public school with a child of the colored race, or which enrollment would require a child of the colored race to attend a public school with a child of the white race." [1 Race Rels. L. Rep. 1104.]

Just as clear evidence of the intent and the objective of the Virginia legislature is found in Chapter 69 of the Acts of the 1956 Extra Session of the Virginia General Assembly, §§ 1 and 2, which state:

"§ 1. Whenever in any school division an efficient system of elementary or secondary public schools as herein defined is not operated under local authority, an emergency is declared to exist. In such case the police powers of the Commonwealth and the Constitutional powers of the General Assembly hereby are invoked. . .

"§ 2. As used in this act an efficient system of elementary public schools, hereinafter referred to as elementary schools, means and shall be only that system within each county, city or town in which no elementary school consists of a student body in which white and colored children are taught." [1 Race Rels. L. Rep. 1107.]

Finally, there is Chapter 71 of the Acts of the 1956 Extra Session of the Virginia General Assembly which states: "The General Assembly declares, finds and establishes as a fact that the mixing of white and colored children in any elementary or secondary public school within any county, city or town of the Commonwealth constitutes a clear and present danger affecting and endangering the health and welfare of the children and citizens residing in such county, city or town, and that no efficient system of elementary and secondary public schools can be maintained in any county, city or town in which white and colored children are taught in any such school located therein. . . . .

"The General Assembly, for the purpose of protecting the health and welfare of the people and in order to preserve and maintain an efficient system of public elementary and secondary schools, hereby declares and establishes it to be the policy of the Commonwealth that no public elementary or secondary schools in which white and colored children are mixed and taught shall be entitled to or shall receive any funds from the State Treasury for their operation. . . . . ." [1 Race Rels. L. Rep. 1112.]

In addition to these statutory provisions indicating the policy and the program of the Government of Virginia, there is evidence furnished by officials. Typical of these is a letter written by Sen. Charles R. Fenwick to O. Glenn Stahl, Chairman of the Organizing Committee to Preserve Our Schools, dated May 14, 1958. The Senator concedes that under the Supreme Court rule in Brown v. Board of Education, 347 U. S. 483 (1954) a child may not be denied admission to a public school because of race or color. However, he conveniently ignores the statement that "All provisions of federal, state, or local law requiring or permitting such discrimination [racial segregation] must yield to this principle." Brown v. Board of Education, 349 U. S. 294 (1955). He advises Mr. Stahl that the greatest service the Committee to Preserve Our Schools could render the community would be to persuade plaintiffs in Thompson v. County School Board, 144 F. Supp. 239 (1956) not to present their children to a white public school on September 4, 1958 because schools will not be closed until they have been admitted. It may be that he assumes that no violation of the plaintiffs' rights occurs until the latter are actually excluded by reason of race or color, regardless of legislative policy refusing to give effect to the rights accorded them.

However, when one looks closely at the situation, certain elements become abundantly clear. What Senator Fenwick says, in effect, is, that Negro children are entitled to admission to public schools without regard to race or color, under the rule of Brown v. Board of Education. However, if a Negro child seeks admission to a school occupied by white children, then the State will give effect to laws contrary to the principle of Brown v. Board of Education, which the Supreme Court said must yield to the principle it had announced, close the school in which he is enrolled and withhold funds from the entire public school system to which the latter is entitled, thus violating the rights of both Negro and white children without due process of law, since laws invalid on their face are being enforced against them. As Judge Hoffman said in Adkins v. School Board of the City of Newport News and Beckett v. School Board of the City of Norfolk, 148 F. Supp. 430 (1957): " . . . . it is my firm conviction that Chapter 70, known as the Pupil Placement Plan is unconstitutional on its face. The legislature is directly in the teeth of the language in Brown v. Board of Education (1954 and 1955,) supra, where it is declared 'the fundamental principle that racial discrimination in public education is unconstitutional,' and 'all provisions of federal, state, or local law requiring or permitting such discrimination must yield to this principle.'" On appeal, the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals held, per curiam, that: "As pointed out by the judge below, however, this statute furnishes no adequate remedy to plaintiffs because of the fixed and definite policy of the school authorities with respect to segregation and because of the provisions of chapter 68 of the Acts of the Extra Session, which o provide for the closing of schools and withdrawal therefrom of state funds upon any departure from this policy in any school." 246 F. (2d) 325 (1957), cert. den., 355 U. S. 855 (1957).

A third ground on which application may be made for injunctive relief against the closing of public schools is that irreparable damage will be sustained by both white and Negro children, indirectly as well as directly, as a result of the threat to close any public school, much less the actual closing of the building. At the present time, the schools of Arlington County are generally regarded as among the best in the United States. See Northern Virginia Sun, May 19, 1958. Closing these schools for any appreciable time will result, from the very nature of the educative process, in an educational loss to children for which they can never be compensated. If the schools close, there will not only be a cessation of learning, there is a probability that idle children could be exploited, as they were at Little Rock, as instruments to achieve the objectives of demagogues and dissidents in preventing compliance with the law of the land. The longer the schools are closed, the greater the danger of acts of juvenile delinquency in areas not in any way related to school desegregation.

Furthermore, the uncertainties of the situation, even though provision is made to pay unemployed teachers under contract, will probably lead a number of teachers and administrators to leave the Arlington schools for systems where there is no threat of the closing of schools. It must be borne in mind that Arlington schools are continually short of fully qualified teachers. Under normal circumstances, turnover in teaching personnel is high because about 25% of these teachers leave every year because of a need to change residence or for purposes of raising a family. To add to these two factors the loss of teachers who do not want their work complicated by resistance to desegration, threatens to leave Arlington schools so short of personnel that the current high standing of the system cannot be maintained. It is fruitless to expect that replacements for these losses can be secured as things now stand. The same factors that influence teachers to leave Arlington County schools will operate to keep competent teachers from venturing from other posts to face uncertainties here. And even if the replacement problem did not exist, the pattern of progress in the development of Arlington's public schools would sufficiently injure the pupils to warrant injunctive relief. It is generally recognized that public school systems do not stand still. They either improve or they deteriorate. In at least one field -- mathematics -- in which the Arlington schools have recently done outstanding work, further development has been threatened because a teacher needed in this area would not risk the unsettled conditions that can be expected next year to accept an appointment she would otherwise have been glad to take.

The factors mentioned above affect the situation in Arlington schools directly. Even more serious for the pupils are the indirect effects of the struggle over desegregation. The Arlington County school system has, this year, been threatened with some severe losses because personnel have feared that schools might be closed for an appreciable length of time during the 1958-59 school year. But much more serious has been the loss of administrators, supervisors and teachers because of the harassment they have suffered during the past two years or so.

At first it might appear to be stretching a point too far to attribute the harassment to the threatened closing of the schools. The connection does exist, however. School administrators and teachers are being subjected to all sorts of attacks on a number of fronts by extremists -- chiefly the Defenders. Before the Thompson case was filed, this was a group of reactionary extremists who had no influence in the community and no great respect from the community. Now, however, because of the uncompromising stand and the amount of sound and fury they have generated, they have acquired influence, if not esteem. They have been able to go to Richmond and secure a statute depriving the county of its right to elect its school board, because the Board of Education dare to plan what it would do if a court ordered it to desegregate -- and plan in a very gingerly manner to try for minimum compliance to escape a contempt citation. The Defenders managed to persuade authorities in Richmond to tell the Board to withdraw its plan to offer a sex education film. They succeeded in securing passage of a bill that would have allowed a majority of freeholders to offset the expressed wishes of a majority of the total electorate in a referendum, had it been able to survive judicial review. They successfully worked to deprive Arlington of a convenient location for the Northern Virginia branch of the University.

With the prestige of these accomplishments, they have operated more and more in matters directly concerning the public schools and have caused several people -- including Superintendent Rutter -- to leave, and have given others cause to think of looking elsewhere. It is doubtful whether any of these things could have been accomplished had it not been for the development of the desegregation issue, with its threat to close the schools. If that issue is removed from the arena of controversy, it is most unlikely that this hard core of reaction will have the strength necessary to interfere materially with educational progress on a high level.

On the other hand, should the State be successful in keeping the schools closed, this pressure group can be expected to expand its activities beyond the areas mentioned above to fields in which it has so far failed in its efforts, such as the abandonment of the core curriculum, censorship of library books, return to letter grades at the elementary level, attacks upon cumulative record files and demonstrations against speakers to whom they object -- such as the Overstreet's. Some estimate of the damage that could be done to the Arlington school system under such circumstances can be obtained by looking at current conditions in Pasadena, where a similar group ofpeople, with the same objectives, dealt the public schools a blow from which they have not yet recovered entirely.

Another factor that must not escape attention is that the Arlington County School Board will be called upon to face a situation for which it cannot prepare itself, and in which it cannot keep possible damage to itself and its pupils to a minimum. Despite the fact that Judge Hoffman has held the Pupil Placement Act to be unconstitutional on its face, and other statutes could be attacked for the same reason, -- and probably with similar success -- the School Board will still be forced to act in accordance with their provisions until the acts are actually stricken down and attempts to comply with them are made punishable for contempt. Therefore, instead of being able to draw up plans for reorganization of its machinery for assignment; to attempt to condition its pupils and teachers for desegregation; to prepare the community and minimize the danger of use of coercion or violence against Negro children; and to combat any hostility that might arise, the Board must sit idly by, because any action on its part may be punished by the authorities at Richmond. It is unlikely that they will risk the consequences of failure to comply with existing statutes -- however invalid they may be -- until enforcement is enjoined.

It has been suggested that the Arlington County School Board might be able to appear before Judge Bryan when the order of the court is being considered -- now that certiorari has been denied by the Supreme Court -- and request that the statute providing for the closing of a school on the assignment and enrollment of a child who would mix the races of the pupils be declared invalid, and that the State authorities be enjoined from giving it effect. As desirable as this might be, it is quite probable that the considerations mentioned in the last previous paragraph might be just as applicable in this connection.

In addition to a suit for an injunction against the closing of the schools, another legal remedy exists which might be used by the citizens of Arlington. They could institute a taxpayers' suit to enjoin the application of Chapter 71 of the Acts of the 1956 Extra Session of the Virginia General Assembly, which provides that:

"The General Assembly . . . hereby declares and establishes it to be the policy of the Commonwealth that no public elementary or secondary schools in which white and colored children are mixed and taught shall be entitled to or receive any funds from the State Treasury for their operation . . ."

The grounds upon which this action could be based are: 1. That the Act is invalid because it withdraws funds from the Arlington County School Board for compliance with the rule of the Supreme Court in the Brown case; and 2. That the Act violates the 14th Amendment both with respect to the equal protection clause and the due process clause. It might well be argued that school boards choosing to violate the law of the land are entitled to funds allocated by the State, while those that comply with the principles announced by the Supreme Court are denied such funds. Judge Hoffman's remarks concerning the Pupil Placement Law, Chapter 70, in the Adkins and Beckett cases (quoted on p. 3 above) are equally applicable to Chapter 71.

There is one other legal remedy available to the citizens of Arlington County that can be used after the schools have been closed. The "Tenth District Fundamental Education Organization of the Commonwealth of Virginia" has been formed for the purpose of operating a standby system of private schools if Arlington schools are closed. See Washington Post and Times-Herald, April 22, 1958. Governor Almond is of the opinion that: "The local authorities have a right to dispose of public buildings and facilities when they are no longer needed for the purposes for which they were erected." See Washington Post and Times-Herald. It is possible that the Governor is under a misapprehension if he thinks that disposition may be made without a restriction against its use in a discriminatory manner.

In Tate v. Department of Conservation and Development, U. S. Dist. Ct., E. D., Va. .., 133 F. Supp. 53 (1955), Judge Hoffman he held: "In short, the power to sell or lease [recreational facilities in a State park] must not include the power to discriminate against any members of any race."

On appeal in this case, Department of Conservation and Development v. Tate, U. S. Court of Appeals, 4th Circuit, 1 Race Rels. Rep. 530 (1956), cert. den., 352 U. S. 838 (1956), the Court declared, per curiam: "We think that the decree appealed from is correct for reasons adequately stated in the opinion of the District Judge, and that little need be added thereto. . . . It is perfectly clear under recent decisions that citizens have the right to the use of the public parks of the state without discrimination on account of race . . . .And we think it equally clear that this right may not be abridged by the leasing of the parks with ownership retained in the state."

There appears to be no reason why these statements are not just as applicable to school buildings as to recreational facilities. There would seem to be adequate grounds in the quoted statements to support a taxpayers' suit to enjoin any attempted sale or leasing of school buildings to the Tenth District Organization. It might well be argued, in addition, that this is a dissipation of the resources of the State, since it is most unlikely that any private school organization can afford to purchase or lease the buildings of a school system at their fair market value. There is, further, a possibility that the State may be confiscating Arlington County property without due process of law by refusing to permit its officers to operate schools the county owns.

There seems to be some question about exactly what the State will do when it is faced with an order requiring it to admit, in September 1958, Negro children to schools now restricted to the use of white pupils in Arlington. But the general indications are plain enough. Governor Almond stated that Washington-Lee High School, Swanson and Stratford Junior High Schools and Fillmore Elementary School might be closed and funds cut off "if the Negroes insist on attending them." See Washington Post and Times-Herald, May 20, 1958. He had previously declared that, in his opinion, this could not be done until a Negro student had entered a white classroom. See Washington Post and Times-Herald, May 9, 1958. In this event, no closing is likely to take place before September 4, 1958, since Attorney Oliver W. Hill, for the plaintiffs, has indicated that he would seek a court order fixing that date for compliance with the Thompson decision. See Washington Post and Times-Herald, May 20, 1958. Governor Almond stated, in addition, that "he saw no reason to rush into a special session of the General Assembly." Ibid.

Nevertheless, one of the few means of avoiding a head-on collision of the State and Federal authorities appears to be the repeal of much of the legislation passed in the 1956 Extra Session and in February 1958. The ideal procedure would embrace an early call of a special session of the General Assembly, at which a statute would be passed authorizing local option regarding desegregation of the schools, and any legislation inconsistent therewith repealed. There is a fairly general apprehension, however, that if a special session should be called, the only result will be another series of acts intended to implement "massive resistance" and to provide the occasion for additional delays while court tests are undertaken to determine the validity of the statutes. These fears are not groundless. Unless it is intended to pass a bona fide local option law, an extra session of the legislature might be disastrous.

One other approach offers a possibility of successfully avoiding a clash between State and Federal powers. It is perfectly clear that the United States cannot afford the damage done to its international prestige that will result either from a repetition of the Little Rock incident or from a knuckling under by the Federal Government to the intransigence of the Virginia Government. Therefore, every effort must be made to stress the fact that the fundamental issue here is one of law and order. The general Constitutional principle has been established by the Supreme Court, in the Brown case, that a pupil may not be excluded by a State from a public school because of considerations of race or color. It has now been determined that this principle applies, in the Thompson case, to the State of Virginia. In order to make this fact abundantly clear to all concerned, the President should announce unequivocally that he intends to use every means at his disposal to secure compliance with the order of the Federal District Court. At the same time, he should instruct the Attorney General to take such action as he deems necessary to enforce the order of the Court, including intervention as amicus curiae in legal proceedings brought by other parties, the filing of such law suits against State authorities as would effectuate the purpose of maintaining law and order. A statement by the Attorney General outlining his probable course of action in carrying out the instruction of the President should then follow immediately -- or appear simultaneously.

Dear Fred:

I passed a relatively fruitful day in Arlington. Had a brief visit with Mrs. Edmund D. Campbell, 2912 Glebe Road (Kenmore 6-8651). She is former member of school board, husband is attorney and member of Committee to Preserve Public Schools (CPPS). He lost out by few hundred votes in last congressional election. They were leaving for Europe next day so she tried to get me an appointment with the chairman of CPPS, Glenn Stahl, who works for the Civil Service Commission (St. 3-5200, Ext. 5403). He was tied up for the day, but she gave me an introduction over the phone. Phil Stern later reached him by phone and said he hoped we could meet next time I come down.

I spent quite a while with Phil Stern editor of the Northern Virginia Sun. He apparently owns it with Clayton Fritchie, who is listed as publisher and whom I also met briefly. (3409 Wilson Boulevard) Phil expressed much uncertainty over what to do next or rather what if anything positive could be done to help the situation in any way. He had been thinking along the lines of preparing school people and law enforcement authorities but he did not know in what way or how to approach it. I tried to show the positive things that have been done elsewhere. We agreed that another approach that the CPPS should be working on should be towards preparing the community for desegregation, even though they are not officially "for" it, because it is a logical concomitant and next step to "keeping open the public schools". The approach to this would be to explain to the CPPS off the record just what kind of preparation is needed, where necessary help can be obtained and how they might best approach the County Board and School Board who have the proper responsibility for such preparation.. He generally warmed to the idea that there are positive suggestions to be made, action to be taken and help to be found. He feels the paper has a responsibility in this issue and he personally wants to help beyond what the paper can do publicly.

He called up the vice-chairman and publicity chairman of CPPS, Mrs. Elizabeth Weihe (pronounced "y") and she came down to the newspaper office to talk with me. She was going to Richmond to see the Governor the next day and I feel it was a strategic interview. She was not very familiar with integration experience elsewhere and did not fullty realize there is useful experience to go by. I seemed to make headway in explaining that although their organization was not "for" integration, they must take the responsibility for it and its consequences if it is a concomitant of their main objective of keeping open the schools, but that of course in the final analysis this is the responsibility of the officials to carry out. They can, however, pressure the authorities and acquaint them with what is needed. I got a different picture of the CPPS than I did from the two ladies in Richmond. Their leadership is strong and effective, well equiped politically and legally, but I believe poorly prepared for the final consequences of their action. They are smart enough to grasp the need, but they have been so cautious to set as wide a range of concensus as possible (to reach over 1,500 publicly proclaimed members) that they have had to steer clear of any talk of integration. Many of their followers would consider preparatory and precautionary steps for integration as favoring integration. They have been very careful not to include "people like David Scull and other public supporters of the State Council on Human Relations" in their early membership. I was careful in my talk with Mrs. Weihe to separate my concern from the political and legal maneuvers they are involved with and to focus on the technical community matters. This she understood.

She and Phil will pursue all this further with key people in CPPS and Phil will do so with the chairman of the County Board and a key member of the School Board, an attorney named Bean who is a middle ground conservative but a decent and realistic man according to Stern. There are people to the left and right of him on the board, two each way to be exact, but he is respected and intelligent. A more conservative man is chairman, but Bean is the swing vote. Phil will approach him xxxxxxx cautiously but directly on the necessity for accepting the full consequeces and undertaking preparations, will point out experience elsewhere and tell him help can be obtained of a technical nature. He and Mrs. Weihe will try to open the way for some key people to ask to see me for technical consultations. I said I could probably get down if called for the week-end of July 18. I suggested I could be there Saturday and Monday of that week-end and perhaps by Friday evening. She spoke of the possibility of my meeting with some people from CPPS inluding the chairman. Phil will let me know of developments. Ok One thing more, a new superintendent of schools has just been appoined, Ray Reed, formenly with the State Dept of Education. Phil will see him to get acquainted as soon as possible and explore the issue with him. The police chief and commonwealth attorney are bad eggs, described even as bigots.

I hope I have not transgressed your principle of technical consultation. I tried to operate with an SRC and not an AFSC hat on. Any return will now be only at invitation of local people. Because of the distance involved xxx I do not see that I could very well get to Charlottesville next week-end (as well.) Also I think Arlington may prove fruitful and need an early follow-up. If I am called do you concur with a visit to Arlington as suggested above?

I also had a usful talk with Mrs. Helen Miller, wife of Francis P., who unfortunately is going to Europe shortly with xxx her husband and will not return until October. From her I get the impression that more is going on among the "forces of moderation" than our friends in Charlottesville know about or will be let in on. And she would scarcely let me in on it, either, apparently because her husband is involved in it and not she. She confirmed the impression we already have that the more enlightened "moderates" will continue to keep our friends at arms length. The new mayor she thinks is to be relied on and has probably already consulted with key people on the issue. He is Tom Michie, who won in each ward although he said in the campaign that some integration is inevitable. She states that Dean Ribble of the Law School, who is a possible successor to Darden who has resigned, is likely to be openly on the right side when the chips are down--who is to say they are not down now--and probably has been doing some quiet conferring already. She says Hardy Dillard of the Law School is in the same category. Chester Babcock, the editor of the paper (this she says is confidential) is OK although the owner is a segregationist and controls editorials. She told me more in confidence, although not much we can work with, which I can tell but not put in writing. She gave me a good contact in Arlington who is higly placed but who has not been publicly associated with CPPS. Frankly I see little we can do in Charlottesville working through the local Council unless it would be to work very closely with coaching and advising their executive committee to some different approaches. I do not have any new ideas there at all.

Best regards,

SPIT IN THE DEVIL'S EYE

A Southern Heretic Speaks . . by SARAH PATTON BOYLE

About the author of this article:
One of the most ardent workers for desegregation in Charlottesville is a University of Virginia faculty wife named Sarah Patton Boyle. . . . The Yankee visitor was sitting in his hotel room when the telephone rang and a pleasant voice said: "This is Mrs. Boyle. I just thought you'd want to know, there was a big cross burning out in the yard here tonight. Son took some pictures of it . . ."
—Dan Wakefield in The Nation, September 15.

Charlottesville, Va.

I AM A WHITE Southerner who crusades for acceptance of colored citizens. Living in one of the five states sworn to resist integration at any cost, I'm roundly hated by some people, solidly disapproved of by many and supported by very few. I would have been a fool not to expect this when I resolved to brandish my banner — and I did. Beyond that, I was prepared for almost nothing that happened to me.

In the light of the experience of others, I expected to receive many threats. My psychological factory probably could convert these into stimulation, I thought. Timidity being unpopular in my family, I was raised to feel that even looming danger isn't the least imminent, and I characteristically trip with gay stupidity to the dentist's chair — to meet each onslaught of his buzzer with incredulity. Therefore, I concluded, a deluge of threats probably would challenge rather than terrify me. I felt disgustingly secure.

But with superhuman cunning, evil refrained from attacking me in a form which I was qualified to use constructively. Unless one interprets as a threat (which I didn't) the six-foot cross which was burned a slipper's toss from my bedroom window, in half-a-dozen years of crusading I've only once been threatened with bodily harm — when a locally postmarked letter warned that if I didn't shut up, my house might be bombed. (I didn't shut up, and here sits the house.)

The deluge which actually descended was one for which I was not psychologically prepared. It consisted of contemptuous jeers and obscene insults. Raised in a country home, the daughter and granddaughter of Episcopal ministers, my gutter vocabulary has been so neglected that much that's said to me by letter and on the telephone I can grasp only through its context. To say I was aghast is to use insipid language.

Moreover, it hadn't occurred to me that my motivation might be misinterpreted. I expected to be called a sentimentalist, an impractical idealist and even a crackpot. But I wasn't prepared for accusations that I am a paid agent of Communists, that I am bribed by the NAACP to tell lies, that I oppose the status quo because of a perverted passion for publicity, and — hardly least — that I long for integration because of a psychopathic yearning for the special pornographic skills of black men. As I've firmly turned the corner of my first half century, the latter bit of biological warfare on me is the more amazing.

Once I fondly imagined that the long residence of my forebears in Virginia would move fellow Southerners to the admission that I had some right to speak in favor of changing customs. "Nobody on earth can call me a Yankee," I told myself smugly.

I was soon wishing that they could. Not only is it more comfortable to be resented as a meddling outsider than to be despised as a traitor, but also if segregationists can disqualify you merely by calling you a Yankee, they need go no further, and — their own estimation to the contrary — this is not universally regarded as a disgrace. But a dyed-in-the-wool Southerner can be disqualified only through defamation of character.

Another early illusion, soon to be dispelled, was that quarter would be given for maintaining a gentle, reasonable approach. I assumed (Jesus' own experience to the contrary) that when you turn the other cheek, nobody actually hauls off and slugs it. I have approximately two splintered jaw bones to show for this conviction.

I ENTERED the struggle with not one ray of malice toward, or contempt for, any one. I still have none. I understand well that the segregation pattern is taken firmly for granted by many white and some colored Southerners who sincerely believe that no good can come to any one through integration. I therefore seek to help them to understand the need for integration, rather than to attack them for opposing it. Yet they could not feel toward me much more bitterly if my public utterances were vindictive condemnations. Discovery of the explanation of this was one of the greatest of my many shocks.

It's simply that so fixed is their conviction that integration can bring only degradation that they find it impossible to believe that any one who defends it is not either utterly ignorant of conditions or completely evil. The native Southerner is not adjudged to be ignorant. Looking into the eyes of staunch segregationists, I usually see not respectful hostility, but incredulous contempt. The names they call me are not merely empty insults, but are rather accurate descriptions of what they really think of me. Dressed for this contest in the highest principles I know, I wasn't prepared for eyes which could see me garbed only in filthy rags.

Nor did my surprises end with those outlined above.

A year and a half ago the Saturday Evening Post featured one of my articles on integration. It was an attempt to show through statistics and little publicized facts that Southerners are readier for integration than they think — a contention which I still maintain. Because the background of the article was Charlottesville, I expected a wide local reading. But I didn't expect that twenty-four hours after it appeared, nearly every retail dealer, delivery boy, store and postal clerk, taxi driver and shoe repair man I knew would regard me with hardened and disillusioned eyes. Overnight my little daily contacts became chill.

Did I have a similar experience in my own social group? Not at first. For two days I received a stream of telephone calls telling me how true my statements were, and how much they needed stating. Acquaintances stopped me on the street with similar comments. Surrounded by this warmth, I could be philosophical about the few who looked straight through me — taking care that I should know their action was deliberate.

But the wave of approbation, I soon learned with a sickening thud, was individual reaction. It reflected merely how each person felt as he read the article in his own home. Group reaction, however, like mob psychology, is not merely the sum of individual reaction. As attacks on the article started in the newspapers, as enthusiastic supporters were wet-blanketed by those who claimed the facts I reported were half tommy-rot and half lies, the warm social pond in which I bathed suddenly froze. Some of the same people who had clapped loudly at first now let me know from behind stiffened faces that, after all, they did disagree with me sharply on some points.

Woodcut by David Shapiro

SILENCE began to obtrude itself into all my social contacts except my closest friendships. The topic of integration was taboo if I was near. Though I was violently attacked almost daily in the press, no one referred to it. This was probably thought tactful, but I felt cut off. I never knew whether the person I was talking to agreed with me or with my attackers. The reticence was like a soundproof wall. Real communication ended. I began to welcome unpleasant telephone calls — pleasant ones had ceased — as at least a genuine form of human contact.

Yet, curiously, it isn't heartache which brings you closest to internal defeat as Southern tensions heighten. It's fatigue. You feel as if you've run too hard and long to catch a bus, or that it's four o'clock on a day when you forgot to eat lunch. It's almost as though, without knowing it, you had been invisibly connected with other people, drawing from them nourishment, comfort and strength. Now the unseen connections are severed. And a puny thing you are when separated from the rest.

YOUR isolation is not so much the direct result of enemy action as of the fact that when you travel this road your experiences are shared by fewer and fewer people, until at last there's no one to whom you can make yourself understood. For words communicate only so far as they serve to remind friends of experiences and sensations of their own that resemble those which you recount. No more than you can share through description a sunset with a man blind from birth, can you share with another an experience which doesn't resemble any he has known.

And those who would like to give you moral support are quite helpless with no rules to guide them. If you lost a member of your family, anybody with a desire to help would know what he should do. Where his own experience failed, established custom would guide him. But books of etiquette lack rules for comforting those attacked for their principles.

Where can one learn that if a cross is burned for you, and it is "tactfully" ignored, you feel as if you have some unmentionable disease? Where can one learn that if you're publicly attacked and friends are silent, there builds up in your subconscious mind the conviction that you are utterly alone — even though you positively know better?

Because the Southern press blazes away in headlines and editorials which proclaim the successes and opinions of segregationists, with only parenthetical or derisive mention of those who disagree; because your side is cautious and silent while the opposition is stridently vocal; because your attackers hammer away; for all these reasons, if your friends are silent, you hear only evil.

Something similar to Russian brain-washing of prisoners takes place inevitably in your consciousness. Day after day, week after week, month after month, you are told that you're a fool, a blackguard, a worker of evil. In the press, on the telephone, in your mail box, the same refrain beats on, like water dripping on the granite of your convictions: You're wrong, you're wrong, you're wrong, YOU'RE WRONG!

Friends tell you that they wanted to call you but knew you were busy and didn't like to interrupt; others that they meant to write but didn't get to it. But Mrs. Opposition didn't mind interrupting, and Mr. Opposition got to it. And the drip-drip-drip goes on and on. Slowly, like creeping paralysis, you find yourself losing confidence.

You find yourself developing a brand of schizophrenia. There is an ever-increasing cleavage between what you think and what you feel. You know that much progress has been made, yet you feel that there's just no use carrying the banner any more. You know that justice moves irresistibly to eventual triumph, yet you feel that only evil and ugliness have stout roots. You know you are right, yet building up in you is an enormous sense of guilt. This is your final, sickening surprise.

FROM BIRTH, good Americans are assured that if they are well-behaved, are kind, honest and industrious, they will inevitably be rewarded by social approval. Naturally, when you are publicly attacked, they — including you — are filled with the unformulated suspicion that you got what you somehow deserved.

Is a Southern crusader for the rights of man doomed to eventual breakdown? Many seem to think so, for the rate of retirement in this field of activity must approach the record. Watching, Southern Negroes have grown cynical about the short-lived efforts of the white liberal — thus adding the minority's mistrust to his other pressures.

But I think I've rediscovered a way for you to keep your sanity and still crusade. It's simply meekly to accept "out-moded theology." With its able aid your psychological factory can convert pressure, pain and disillusionment into power to persist. Our modern view of the world, I now think, is the outgrowth of soft lives. In hand-to-hand combat with raw evil this sensible view seems less realistic.

When the smell, taste, sound and touch of evil are a nightmare against which you constantly struggle, the personification of evil is an intelligent device. In facing evil squarely and calling it the Devil, some of your horrid helplessness before its magnitude departs. Then, too, you find yourself more able to be dazzled into spontaneous worship by the glory of evil's opposite, the shining purity of love.

Years ago, on seeing the title of an article, "Humanitarianism Is Not Enough," I recall thinking, "How could that be?" I wouldn't ask myself that question now. When evils swarm you like a mob of maniacs you know that you must have both Something and Someone to worship, or perish.

Against a background of accusing enemies and silent friends, I hungrily reclaim the "morbid" doctrine that unearned suffering is redemptive, and that only the patient pain of the innocent can dissolve some human sins. It's the futility of pain which drains the heart, I find. Believe that pain has purpose, and new power stiffens your weary spine. The early Christians went singing to ugly deaths. The Southern crusader, too, has need of forgotten virile Christian truths.

So I shan't break down, and I shan't retire. For I shall refresh myself by looking at a sparkling, ethereal King, and I shall know an easier yoke and a lighter burden, and I shall learn to say, "Forgive them, Father," and — after taking practiced, careful aim — I shall spit in the Devil's eye.

Dear Mr. Tarplee:

We resort to the mails after trying to reach you by phone in Lynchburg, New York, and Chicago!

A situation has arisen in Charlottesville, from the recent federal court decision on integration, which would seem to call for the first of our joint agency meetings, as discussed at Atlanta University, January 23-24. We have been in touch with Mrs. Boyle and others of Charlottesville who inform us that a meeting of agency representatives - and their actions - might be of considerable help.

Thus, we are anxious to speak with you as soon as possible. In this regard, could you call us here on receipt of this letter?

Best regards,

Paul Anthony

Dear Paul:

I was very much distressed to receive your letter of February 8 when I returned from Texas yesterday, and to realize that I have probably pretty largely missed out on the Charlottesville situation. I shall be returning home to Lynchburg sometime between the 21st and 25th of February and can be reached there. If I can be of any help please let me know.

My absence FROM Charlottesvile does not really hurt things much. Mrs. Boyle is a very active Episcopalian who knows the Church situation there very intimately and is in touch with the Episcopal Church, the University of Virginia faculty, and the Council of Human Relations.

If you should be in Charlottesville, I would suggest that you call Mr. Samuel Schroetter, or call on him at 138 Madison Lane, Apr. 8 . You probably would meet him anyway. through Sarah Boyle who is a very good friend of the Schroetters.

Hoping to see you soon.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Hy:

This is to bring you up to date on the progress of our first attempt to implement the cooperative agency team idea developed at the Atlanta University meeting in January. We have decided on Charlottesville, Virginia, as an "opportunity" community in which we can wet our feet and give some real assistance to our local constituencies. The meeting will be March 4th and 5th.

We plan this as a two day meet. Our proposed procedure is: (1) staff people come together with local "coordinator" Mrs. Sara Patton Boyle to get briefed in the situation; (2) staff people go out into the community to get own picture of the situation and to contact members of their local constituency; (3) staff people meet together (second morning, for progress report and to plan afternoon meeting); (4) each staff person brings in one key person from own constituency to meet with others in closed session to determine: (a) what more can be done, (b) what part of task each local group can best perform, and (c) how they can best cooperate and coordinate their efforts.

First meeting takes place at 10:30, Monday, March 4th, at Mrs. Boyle's home, 171 Mimosa Drive (on Route 29, South, near University).

Hope this sounds as promising to you as it does to those whom we've contacted to come (because they have a local constituency). Among the agencies which have accepted are ADL, AFSC, Baptists, Episcopalians, NAACP, NCCJ, National Council of Churches, Presbyterians, SRC, and the two "Y's."

Best regards.

Dear Mr. Banks:

A group of agencies having professional staff working in the South recently met at Atlanta University. I am enclosing for your information minutes of the meeting. Among the agencies represented was the N.A.A.C.P. by Mr. Roy Wilkins.

The agencies agreed, as you will see in the minutes, to a cooperative effort in the South. It was felt that a sort of "pilot" attempt at cooperative effort would be helpful. We also felt that our first effort should be in an "opportunity" community rather than a "crisis" community. Charlottesville was chosen as the best possibility. The meeting will take place on March 4th and 5th.

Mr. Wilkins felt that it would be better to have you represent the N.A.A.C.P., rather than have him come down from New York. I hope it will be possible for you to make the meeting.

Sincerely,

Frederick B. Routh

Dear Grace:

I have tried to reach you by phone but have found you out; I know how busy you are. The first attempt to implement the cooperative agency team idea we concocted at Atlanta University in January will be held March 4th and 5th, in Charlottesville, Virginia. A number of agencies have already agreed to participate.

We plan this as a two day meet. First meeting takes place at 10:30, Monday, March 4th, at Mrs. Boyle's home, 171 Mimosa Drive (on Route 29, South, near University).

This exploratory effort has exciting possibilities, for Charlottesville is an "opportunity" community. I look forward to seeing you there.

March 4,5 are days when I am scheduled to be with our executives of city organizations. My commitment is too long standing to change.

I have checked with others of our staff and find no one who can be there.

Charlottesville, Va. has one major Disciple church. It is of the non-cooperative variety so that persons from our staff would have little "constituency" to work with.

But even so I regret that my schedule will not permit my being with you for what I could learn of the situation and the process we have in mind.

Enclosed you will find a copy of Fred Routh's letter to me with regard the meeting in Charlottesville, Va., March 4 and 5.

Although we have no church and therefore no constituency in Charlottesville, Clifford and I both think it is important for the sake of our future participation in similar situations that you go to Charlottesville as an observer to see how the thing works and to contribute whatever objective judgment you may have. I am sure that Fred Routh would concurr in the value of this. We will, of course, want a report.

I agree with you that it is imperative that a similar thing be done in Knoxville after Judge Taylor renders his decision, and it would seem to me that your experience in Charlottesville would be invaluable as a preparation for our Church's participation in (hopefully) Knoxville situation.

Somewhere in our travel budget we will find money for your expenses. An expense voucher is enclosed.

Dear Fred:

I deeply regret my absence from Nashville which caused you to miss me by phone. I was not present at the Atlanta meeting of agencies working in the South, and therefore did not know the exact dates and plans for the Charlottesville project. It seems to me an excellent one, and it would provide a test example for what might be attempted in other places.

Unfortunately, at least for me, I have an engagement here on Monday, the 4th of March, which will prevent my being in Charlottesville. At the same time, my absence will not affect the operation to any substantial degree, inasmuch as we do not have any constituency in Charlottesville. Our only possible constituency would be members, ministers and board members of Congregational Churches; and there is no Congregational Church in Charlottesbille. Miss Dorothy Hampton and another young lady are working in Virginia under Galen Weaver of out staff and the Council for Social Action. I believe that Miss Hampton will be present. She was at the Atlanta meeting.

The big loss is my own; for I know I would have learned a great deal. Please accept my sincere apologies for not being able to lend a hand.

Best of wishes.

After considerable thought and discussion we have decided not to participate in the combined team effort of agency personnel in Charlottesville on March 4th and 5th. We have no local YMCA Association in Charlottesville, and only slight contact with the association at the University of Virginia. We feel that we would not have enough contacts in Charlottesville to be of any assistance.

We are in strong accord with the work being done in this direction, and are most anxious to be included in future team efforts in communities where we have more talent and contacts.

Dear Dr. Routh:

This is to inform you that the Division of Christian Relations will not have a representative at the Charlottesville meeting. It may be that we can have a part in later such meetings, but for the time being we are having some internal problems which will have to be cleared up first, I am afraid.

I assure you of our personal concern for the meeting and wish to express the hope that it will be most successful.

With all good wishes, I remain

Dear Neal:

Just a brief note to say how much I appreciated your participation in Charlottesville. I will send you a summary of my notes on the meeting later on, but enclosed here are two items:

(1) Additional information on Koinonia

(2) A list of key people in Miami.

Best personal regards.

Dear Fred:

Following our visit to Charlottesville I have thought it advisable to convey to you as secretary for the consultant team what conclusions I have, substantively on the Charlottesville situation and for the refinement of this method of operating. Some of what I say we already discussed but this is for the record. Any transmittal of these thoughts to Charlottesville will be via you.

Possible Ways in Which AFSC Might be Related to Charlottesville

1. I will report the Negro employment situation to Tartt Bell and Mayes Behrman. In order to help them consider whether it would be a valid AFSC contribution to the joint effort in this crisis-opportunity area for our Merit Employment Program to spend some time there, it would be appreciated if some of the people there could send Mayes a report on plants in town. It would help to know names of major employers, number of employees, whether government contract holder and brief indication of Negro employment experience.

2. We will notify Ed Randall of the AFSC special radio program that WINA, Charlottesville would be a strategic and possibly favorable outlet for some of his taped programs. His tapes, consisting of lively interviews on group relations and peace themes, might also be useful as lead-off material for conducting discussion groups. Some person there would have to be interested enough to follow through and organize this effort.

Specific Suggestions for Charlottesville Efforts

1. It would be of great value for a consultant to spend a week or more in Charlottesville to work with the Council on Human Relations, particularly with its board and working committees. Such a person cannot only work with them on their specific methods and undertakings but also help them extend their communicating relations to like minded agencies and individuals not directly associated with them. A consultative experience of an extended nature by an experienced professional would be much more suited to their present needs than would a one day workshop visit in the more conventional SRC manner.

2. They would find it advantageous to develop continuing, communicating and off-the-record contacts with key officials and community leaders on the school problem. Repeated follow-up visits by Council members, especially selected for the various contacts, can build up confidence and a meaningful exchange of information and view points - leading ultimately to constructively influencing policy.

3. I would strongly reaffirm our recommendation in Charlottesville that they need some kind of an informal committee to bring together diverse individuals, on their own behalf and as channels of contact with various organizations, who are committed to peace, communication and compliance in the face of the impending court order to desegregate. This would be a means of seeking out and relating to each other, while clarifying roles, varied liberal elements as well as conservative church people who would, in the end, prefer compliance to defiance. This means more than, but does not exclude as a useful approach, the reach of other organizations through other affiliations of present council members.

4. From several sources I obtained the names of the following people who were reported as conscientious Christian lay people who might be enlisted quietly in the cause of peace and communication if properly approached: Mrs. Keith B. Wiley (Friend), Ford Haviland (Friend), Laurance A. Brunton (First Presbyterian Church), President of Lions International, Buddy Glover (Buddy's Restaurant), E. F. Cooley (University Cafeteria), Mrs. James B. Dillard (Sister-in-law of Hardy Dillard, Unitarian), Ray Fisher (G.E.Dealer), Dr. Dan Via (Dentist, Baptist) and Guy Via (Insurance business, Baptist).

5. Hardy Dillard, Francis Miller and Neil Spicer, or the likes of them, might be somehow put in touch with each other on the basis of keeping track of developments at the very top level in the town, University and state. Perhaps these may not be the ones but I use them principally as examples of people who are in touch with and aware of the powers that be at the local and state level. They could perform a real service and not necessarily even relate themselves to the off-the-record "peace and communications" committee. Hardy Dillard, by the way, is a son of James Hardy Dillard, former president of the Jeans Fund and the Slater Fund, a pioneer worker for democracy in southern race relations, for whom Dillard University is named.

6.Mrs. Tucker should be communicated with and apologized to for our failure to hear the results of her worthy efforts. She should be encouraged to pass on what she learned to the local Council on Human Relations for their information and action.

Remarks Relative to Methods of the Team Approach

1. In addition to ideas we discussed about all parties concerned doing their homework better, we need a more explicit and effective method of conveying our impressions and conclusions to local people. If the final meeting could be truly more representative we could send thoughts into more channels while making the very coming together a major result of our efforts. In Charlottesville we simply did not get much beyond the local Council.

Mr. Frederick B. Routh March 12, 1957

There is a need, however, for a way of conveying considered conclusions and recorded matter to some people in town. Certain of the consultants may wish to correspond later with their constituents, or with others they have met during the visit. We may collectively wish to send specific written suggestions or conclusions to one or the other of agencies spoken with or to the host-coordinator. There is, of course, even the question of whether it is politic to designate arbitrarily and/or openly one agency as coordinator.

It seems clear to me, however, that the objective of this work should not be an extensive written report on "Community X in Crisis or Promise". We should just be concerned with the minimum necessary communication and recording for optimum local effect of the visit.

2. A complete list of agencies cooperating with the CCD and the January Atlanta meeting would be useful in local areas and to the various agencies. It should contain national and regional addresses, top personnel and brief descriptions of services and functions. This seems to me an SRC function.

It was a real pleasure to be with you in Charlottesville.

Sincerely yours,

John

March 22, 1957

On March 4th and 5th, I took part in a meeting of agency personnel in Charlottesville, an outgrowth of the conference of agencies working in the South held in Atlanta in January.

The purpose of this meeting was to plan together how the respective agencies could cooperate in concentrating their energies and talents on either opportunity or crisis situations. Charlottesville represents both since it is under order to desegregate, there have been four cross burnings since summer, and a unit of the Seaboard White Citizens Council exists. The procedure we employed was as follows: Agency personnel assembled the morning of March 4th at the home of Mrs. Sara Patton Boyle to be briefed on the local situation and ask questions. Thereafter, we scattered to our respective constituencies to obtain their impressions of the situation. The following day the agency personnel met in the morning to plan the afternoon program which was to climax the two-day meetings. That afternoon, we brought representatives of our constituencies to meet with the agency personnel and plan a program for the community.

Agency personnel who took part in the two-day meetings included Fred Routh of the Southern Regional Council (Routh and the SRC were responsible for bringing the group together), Will Campbell of the National Council of Churches, Reverend John Marion of the Virginia Council of Churches, Reverend Neil Tarpley representing Episcopal leadership, John Alexander of the American Friends Service Committee, Professor Carriere, an instructor representing the NCCJ, Lester Banks (briefly), state director of the NAACP, and Rabbi BernardHonan of the Hillel Foundation at the University of Virginia.

With all this talent on hand, it would be nice to report that we accomplished something. Actually, the results were disappointing. On the positive side, we all learned a great deal about the Charlottesville situation. There is a strong and active chapter of the NAACP and a dedicated, able and active chapter of the Virginia Council on Human Relations here. The University of Virginia is a leavening effect and its hospital facilities are integrated.

Recommendations emanating from the broad meeting with lay people on March 5th included 1) continuation of meetings with across the board groups on a regular basis locally, 2) an inventory on the part of these groups of resources available both in terms of friendly individuals in the community and groups willing to lend a hand, 3) need to interest key people like President Colgate Darden of the University of Virginia, a former governor of the state in the importance ~~of~~ preserving law and order and communication between the races, 4) recognizing that the local Council on Human Relations is limited in the job it can do it was felt other groups locally must be encouraged to function in this situation.

In and by themselves, these recommendations were fine.

The real weakness of the two-day meeting was the failure to involve significant lay constituency in sitting down with the agency personnel. This was due primarily to an unwillingness on the part of people in Charlottesville to work with the Virginia

Council on Human Relations and, despite all efforts to broaden the base of the meeting, it seems to have been tabbed as such by outsiders and even the group itself. Also, the results of the meeting were too nebulous insofar as the recommendations were concerned. I had hoped and pushed for a kind of allocation of responsibilities so that each group could function in its respective sphere of interest and ability. For example, the NCCJ and we could put on a joint Youth Seminar as we do in Richmond, the local Council on Human Relations might examine how much desegregation would actually take place if Charlottesville moved ahead, etc. No dice. We just "discussed." I wouldn't mind this as a preliminary but I doubt that there will be any follow through.

I was heartened to learn at this meeting of the impact our study on Clinton has made on public officials in Charlottesville as a result of the work of Professor Lambert Molyneaux. City Councilman Sol Weinberg had read it the night before I visited him and said it was excellent. Weinberg is a convert to Episcopalianism. He said the situation in Charlottesville is serious and felt that the community needs preparation. I discussed several approaches to this including sending educators to our Conference on Human Relations Education in Maryland, and a Youth Seminar but while he promised all kinds of help on this, he hasn't responded since then. Our B'nai B'rith is very worried about the situation but refused to have any representation at the two-day conference outside of the Rabbi. I am afraid this was the feeling of most of the lay constituencies.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 85th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. CHARLES O. PORTER

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, April 18, 1957

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, the following article from the April 20, 1957, issue of "America" was written by a friend and classmate of mine who has been working for the Fund for the Republic and writes with authority on this important subject:

RACE RELATIONS IMPROVE

(By Joseph P. Lyford)

In an outspoken attack on race prejudice, Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle, of Washington, D. C., warned some months ago that America cannot "win the bitter war for men's minds in the world struggle if the Communists can tell the hundreds of millions in Asia and Africa that they, rather than Christians, practice the doctrine that all men are equal."

The reaction abroad to the conflict over desegregation in the South justifies an even more ominous observation. Without prompting from the Communists, a large segment of the foreign press normally friendly to the United States has been printing a daily ration of such stories as the Emmett Till murder in Mississippi, the Autherine Lucy case at the University of Alabama, the bombings of Negro churches, the activities of White Citizens Councils—the same type of stories, in a word, that United States newspapers are headlining.

Almost as serious, the little events in the segregation story leave a deep impression abroad. An example: Indian Opinion, the Natal (South Africa) newspaper edited by Mahatma Gandhi's grandson, recently front-paged half a dozen articles from different nations. The item from the United States told about the white Florida public-health physician who was fired because she lunched with a Negro nurse. A steady flow of such information can understandably create an unhealthy suspicion of America and of Christianity.

Recently, however, the foreign press has been getting a different picture of the situation in America, one which may help balance the stories of crime and strife. Asian, African, and European editors have received copies of a study, published toward the end of 1956, which tells in detail how, quietly and without publicity, racial barriers have been falling in States all over the Union. The report, by Harold Fleming and David Loth, is entitled "Integration, North and South" (Meridian Books, 17 Union Square West, New York 3, 110 pages, 40 cents). It lists more than 1,100 examples of how the Negro is gaining equality of opportunity in the school, in public and private employment, in religious worship, in health facilities, in public accommodations, and in social organizations.

Page after page of the report carries a story within a story: the account of how Catholic institutions have responded to the crisis over race relations in the South. Without depreciating the courageous and effective contributions of other denominational groups which have worked on behalf of desegregation and whose work is outlined in its pages, the report makes it clear that the Catholic Church has set an example that has heartened all supporters of the Christian principle of racial equality. The church's activities have been especially noticeable in such Black Belt States as South Carolina, Alabama, and Louisiana, where the Negro population is densest, where segregationist sentiment is highest and where the flammatory activity of the white supremacy groups are most intense.

THE CHURCH AND INTEGRATION

One of the forces for enlightenment in a strongly prosegregation State is the Rock Hill School in South Carolina, which integrated under Father Maurice V. Shean, C. O. Another, of course, is Archbishop Joseph F. Rummel, of New Orleans, who is educating his people to accept desegregation and who has supported the merging of Negro and white classes in catechism at Erath, La. But besides these comparatively well-known examples of progress in integration, there are previously unreported cases in dozens of communities and cities in States everywhere in the South.

What is most important, not only have many Catholic schools, churches, and lay groups achieved integration quietly, but in many cases the community has been deeply influenced by their action. Deep-seated prejudices have been quieted and have begun to evaporate as citizens watch, often in real amazement, the way in which Negro and white Americans have shared spiritual guidance and educational benefits on an equal plane. It might almost be said that the initial success in breaking down segregation practices was really overshadowed by the subsequent effect that the sight of equality being practiced daily has had upon southern communities.

Integration, North and South contains dozens of citations of Catholic schools and organizations, mainly in the South, which have taken steps toward integration. The report says, in summary (p. 57):

"In six southern and border States, Negroes were enrolled with whites in Catholic and elementary schools before May, 1954 [the date of the United States Supreme Court decision outlawing school segregation by race and the 'separate but equal' doctrine].

"During the 1954–55 school year and in the following term, Negro children began attending formerly all-white Catholic grammar and high schools in 21 southern cities, as well as in many smaller communities. States in which Catholic school integration occurred in whole or in part are Arkansas, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia."

In the field of higher education, the survey recounts the progress of Catholic colleges and universities. All-white Catholic institutions desegregating since the Supreme Court decisions include Spring Hill College, Mobile, Ala.; Barry College, Miami, Fla.; Belmont Abbey College and Sacred Heart Junior College, Belmont, N. C.; and St. Gregory's College, Shawnee, Okla. An all-Negro college, Xavier University, New Orleans, admitted white students for the first time. As noted before, many of these colleges were located in the areas where desegregation moves could be expected to encounter the bitterest opposition.

In many Southern States, hospitals have been centers of progress for the Negro in his quest for equal treatment. Here, too, Catholic institutions have figured prominently. In the border State of Missouri, the 90-bed Queen of the World Hospital opened 2 years ago as the first nonsegregated hospital in Kansas City, with an integrated hospital staff as well. In Charlotte, N. C., Mercy Hospital began admitting Negro patients in September 1954, after Bishop Vincent S. Waters of the diocese of Raleigh requested superintendents of hospitals to make their facilities available to Catholic Negroes and to allow qualified Negro surgeons and doctors to take care of their patients. St. Francis Hospital in Charleston, W. Va., admitted Negro nurses for training and service on an integrated basis which included housing. St. Mary's Hospital of Knoxville, Tenn., enrolled nine Negroes for training as practical nurses.

The Catholic Church also moved "vigorously" in several southern areas to implement its prointegration position in various church-affiliated lay organizations, reports Integration, North and South. Paradoxically, one of the most forthright demonstrations occurred in Alabama, a most difficult State. In Mobile, Bishop Thomas J. Toolen conferred one of the Church's highest honors, that of Knight of St. Gregory, upon a Negro layman. The recipient was the first Negro in the South to be inducted into the papal honorary society and one of only a few of either race in the entire country.

The Knights of Columbus in Tulsa, Okla., accepted its first Negro member in 1955; and in the State of Delaware the same year, the Bishop Monaghan Council accepted the first Negro applicants for membership since the Knights of Columbus was organized in Delaware 50 years ago.

South Carolina, where integration progress has been almost entirely lacking, was the scene of important Catholic activity. The Catholic Youth Organization was integrated on the diocesan (in this case statewide) level, and as a result, both meetings and conventions have been biracial. The Diocesan Council of Catholic Women of Charleston and the newly formed South Carolina Confraternity of Christian Doctrine (a Catholic lay catechetical group) have also been integrated.

In the context of the whole integration report, the part played by the Catholic institutions was impressive, but even this did not tell the whole story. The report did not claim to include every example of integration. Much progress remains hidden in communities where the work of reducing racial tensions and creating equal opportunities has taken the form of education and discussion rather than of overt action.

It is important to emphasize that the report lists only examples of integration occurring since the 1954 Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation.

This point is unfortunately not made clear in Integration, North and South. The section of the report which deals with integration in the non-Southern States makes almost no mention of the work of Catholic groups. This omission arises from the setting of an arbitrary time zone to be covered by the report. By the date of the Supreme Court ruling, the Catholic Church and its affiliated organizations in the North had integrated almost completely. Thus, paradoxically, the church was a victim of its own forehandedness insofar as the report was concerned.

The author of the nonsouthern section of the report, David Loth, has acknowledged the validity of criticism directed at his report on this point. To clarify the record he explained, after publication, that in taking his "inventory" of integration since 1954, he had found that "Catholic churches and religious orders provided some of the outstanding examples of institutions which had desegregated almost entirely in the North before the period covered in our survey." Further, he declared, "The examples of successful integration by religious groups, therefore, would have been vastly increased by the remarkable record of the Catholic Church and a few others if the report had been extended to the last 10 years instead of the last 2."

CHURCH LEADERS SPEAK OUT

An historical review of the Catholic Church's position on race-relations matters demonstrates its unequivocal doctrine on the subject. As far back as 1891, Catholic prelates like Archbishop John Ireland of St. Paul, Minn., were taking a clear stand. "What do I claim for the black man?" asked the archbishop. "That which I claim for the white man, neither more nor less. I would blot out the color line. White men have their estrangements. They separate on lines of wealth, of intelligence, of culture and ancestry. But let there be no barrier against mere color."

Since Archbishop Ireland's day, Catholic Church leaders have repeated the substance of his views, and in recent years such men as Samuel Cardinal Stritch of Chicago, Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York, Archbishop Rummel of New Orleans, Archbishop Robert E. Lucey of San Antonio, Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston, Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter of St. Louis, Bishop Russell J. McVinney of Providence, Bishop Waters of Raleigh, and Bishop Toolen of Mobile have spoken out repeatedly on the subject. Their call for interracial justice is strengthened by papal encyclicals issued in recent years—that is, Quadragesimo Anno (Pius XI, 1931), Mit Brennender Sorge (Pius XI, 1937), Sertum Laetitae (Pius XII, 1939) and Mystici Corporis (Pius XII, 1950)—as well as by editorials in Osservator Romano.

LAYMEN TAKE ACTION

Helping to put principle into practice have been lay groups like the Catholic Interracial Councils, which now exercise great influence in 28 cities and cooperate with such organizations as the NAACP, the Southern Regional Council, and the Urban League. The National Council of Catholic Women, the National Council of Catholic Men, the National Federaiton of Catholic College Students, the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, the National Catholic Educational Association, and the Catholic Press Association have done their part, too, to advance integration.

The effectiveness of the church and its lay affiliated groups prior to 1954 can be measured by the fact that in Washington, D. C., and Maryland, parochial schools have been integrated since 1949, and that in St. Louis school integration was completed in 1947. Other States where parochial school desegregation was begun or completed in advance of the Supreme Court decision include Delaware, Kansas, Kentucky, Texas, and West Virginia. In higher education, 25 Catholic colleges, universities and seminaries in the District of Columbia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri, Texas, and Mississippi had desegregated before 1954.

This record has been an outstanding part of the total movement of all United States educational institutions toward equal treatment of all races. Despite outbreaks of violence in the South, successes like those described above are slowly strengthening the public belief that the days of segregation are numbered—and the people of other nations are beginning to comprehend this, too. Commenting on the events described in Integration, North and South, the Jerusalem Post said recently that the United States appears "determined to follow the difficult road toward full civic equality for her colored citizens."

Read by itself, of course, Integration, North and South presents a completely optimistic picture, and the authors are careful to caution their readers that the report is frankly one sided because it concerns itself only with the forward progress of integration of the Negro into American life. The publicizing of backward steps, reasoned the authors, has more than adequately been taken care of by the newspapers. Chronicles of quiet progress have rated few headlines, but, as a foreword by Morris L. Ernest declares, the report is "news of a high order," and an "inventory of hope." It makes unmistakably clear the fact that Catholics, Protestants, and Jews, Negros and whites, doctors, priests, ministers, lawyers, businessmen, unionists and housewives can share credit for deepening the meaning of freedom to all citizens of this Republic, and for bringing a message about Christianity and democracy at work to the peoples of Africa, Asia, and Europe.

This is in regard to your memo of March 22nd, and Alex' memo of March 28th, concerning the meeting of southern agencies personnel in Charlottesville, which grew out of the conference of agencies working in the South held in Atlanta in January.

I had intended to reply to you concerning your experience before this, but I first wanted to talk with Harold Fleming and Fred Routh, and also as you know a broken leg intervened.

In conceiving the plan of how the respective agencies could cooperate in concentrating their energies in a particular community, there was no intention of doing certain things which did occur in Charlottesville, although of course the exigencies of any particular situation will in the final analysis determine what can and cannot be done. Charlottesville was in fact a pilot project to determine how the plan can work in practice, and the pitfalls to avoid. I believe your experience indicates a number of such pitfalls.

First, I think we can now see that it is a mistake for the professionals to be gathered together in any community under the aegis of any one particular organization. It is even a worse mistake if laymen are drawn in under these circumstances. The professionals (and laymen) then become representatives and arms of that particular agency , taking on all of its coloration, status, etc. This amounts to merely providing additional professional personnel for that particular organization, involves additional laymen who were not previously affiliated, and in general would tend to limit the accomplishments in the given community to what that particular organization can do, or can be extended to do with additional help. This was not the original plan, and your experience with the Virginia Council of Churches, particularly with regard to lay participation, indicates that this generally is not a good plan, and specifically in Charlottesville. Our original plan had envisioned a gathering of professional workers informally and under no auspices to merely sit together, counsel, plan, and then go out and operate separately with whatever contacts each agency has.

Secondly, we had not planned to draw in lay people to sit and counsel with the professionals in one group meeting together. Some lay people do not wish to have contact ~~with~~ and affiliations with representatives of certain agencies and are scared off by having to meet with them. Also, drawing in lay people imposes certain inhibitions on what any group can accomplish, which is entirely unnecessary. Also, a large group meeting consisting of professionals and lay people tends to give a certain formality to the gathering which militates against the flexible type of cooperation and coordination possible among professionals only. Our original plan had envisioned only the professionals meeting together, and then each going out to meet with and counsel with his own contacts in the community to accomplish whatever was possible through this separate action.

Thirdly, the idea of division of responsibilities among the agencies represented was exactly the kind of thing which we wanted to avoid in our plan. The whole idea was that the professionals could meet together in the selected community, be briefed on the situation under consideration, and then each one go out and do whatever he was capable of accomplishing in the community through whatever lay contacts he had. In fact, the strength of our plan was based on a concentrated effort by the representatives of each agency to attempt to achieve the objectives decided by the professionals meeting together through whatever channels were available to these representatives in the community. This means that everybody would be trying to achieve the same thing, which is exactly the opposite of a division of responsibility. The plan was not meant to inhibit or limit the potentialities of any agency represented to accomplish whatever it could, but rather to put on the scene the representatives of those agencies which had contacts in the community so that all of the representatives could work on their contacts at the same time. Whenever there were developments which required the professionals meeting again to pâân further steps, then the professionals could gather together again for such ~~pmx~~ planning. Involvement of lay people was considered the function of each professional, working separately with his own lay contacts, without trying to draw these lay contacts together in one meeting.

Actually, what we had in mind was that each professional would go into the community and do what he could and would ordinarily do if he visited there alone. However, since previous experience has shown that there is a great advantage in having professionals of other agencies available for counsel and planning. We conceived this plan to gather together in the given community a number of professionals who, while they could counsel together, would still operate independently.

The Southern Regional Council is planning to convene another meeting of agencies working in the South in June, at which we probably will discuss the Charlottesville experience in terms of its strengths and weaknesses. Perhaps the original plan needs to be modified, or perhaps the representatives of the agencies involved in Charlottesville did not quite understand the intent of the plan or were forced by circumstances to "play it by ear" as the situation demanded. In any event, I think we all learned something from this experience and we know what to avoid when we go into another community to do this job. So your efforts were far from being wasted, even though you felt pessimistic at the time. To coin a phrase, "live and learn".

Best regards.

A BRIEF FIELD REPORT, CHARLOTTESVILLE, VIRGINIA
July 14-19, 1958

This survey covers an intensive five-day study of the Charlottesville, Virginia community. Interviewed were: key public officials, chief law enforcement official, the superintendent of schools, ministers, teachers, "leaders", the "ordinary citizen," and youth in both the Negro and white community, members of the Virginia Council on Human Relations, and the executive editor of Charlottesville's only daily newspaper, The Daily Progress. Each person discussed the community as he or she saw it with reference to the impending desegregation of the public schools.

THE COMMUNITY:

Charlottesville, Virginia, aptly described as "18th Century England," is a community characterized by isolationism, extreme conservatism, paternalism, and an almost pathological pride in its heritage. Said one of its residents, "We never forget Thomas Jefferson here; his ideas, and the things for which he stood. It is our responsibility to see that the ideas and works of that noble Virginian will never die; it is like a religion with us." While expressed differently by various levels of the population, one senses throughout the community this reluctance to change, and a strong resistance to ideas that are new or different. The community is divided between "uptown" and "downtown" -- "town" and "gown", as it were. The university group "uptown" is set aside as something separate and apart. Each group relates and talks to itself; neither has any influence on the other.

The Supreme Court decision is viewed as a serious infringement on State's rights, and something which "Virginians will never accept." If change comes, it will come only and when Virginians want it; outside pressures for change "would be resisted to the last man."

The white community sees the school desegregation issue purely in legal terms, as something being imposed from the outside, and something which neither the white nor Negro groups wants. Few whites believe that there would have been any pressure from local Negroes to enter schools nearest their homes without the outside agitation of the NAACP, and the support and encouragement from the Virginia Council on Human Relations. The majority of whites interviewed believe Negroes to have been satisfied with "their place"; they view the "relations between the races" as good up until the Supreme Court decision. The Negro is thought of as a child-like, happy-go-lucky group who "have been cared for well, perhaps too well, by the white people of the community." There is rather widespread belief, even among public officials, that Negro applicants to enter white schools are being paid by the NAACP. This, they believe, is the only way Negroes could have been induced to apply to enter white schools. To some, it is unthinkable that Negro children would be allowed to go to school with white children; they say Negro children would not feel comfortable. Said the city manager, "I cannot understand a Negro parent; I will never again believe they love their children when I see how they can sacrifice them to certain hostility just to have them sit in a classroom with white children. I love my child, and I would never permit my child to go through such." And so it goes, there is no understanding at any level just what desegregation of the public schools and what the interest of Negro parents and children really is all about.

Negroes comprise almost 20 per cent of Charlottesville's population. For the most part, Negroes are employed in domestic and unskilled capacities around the university center. The remainder of the Negro population includes 4 doctors — 2 medical and 2 dentists; school teachers, 3 undertakers, and 4 ministers. There is no Negro lawyer.

The Negro community is unorganized and apathetic. The four Negro ministers, all Baptists, have little or no influence in the community. Two of the ministers are elderly and should be retired from their duties. The remaining two younger ministers, Reverend Bunn and Reverend Green, though considered capable men are not considered leaders. The Reverend Bunn is described as an individualist and does not work well with people. Within the past few months both he and Mrs. Bunn have withdrawn somewhat from community activities. This they decided to do after (they confided confidentially) a remark, "Don't the Bunns think anyone can do anything but the Bunns; there are other people capable of doing things." The Reverend Green, a capable man, and pastor of the largest church, is described as an introvert. He is not a leader; considers Charlottesville a "dead" and "hopeless" place, and admits (privately and confidentially) that he hopes to leave when the first opportunity presents itself. The Reverend Green has, however, assumed responsibility for working with the NAACP committee on its law enforcement project, with the Reverend Monroe on the non-violent student program, and with the Reverend Owen (following the Bridgewater conference proposal) to hold informal discussions with small groups of church people to establish lines of communication. The Reverend Green is described as a person who will accept responsibility for doing a job, but does not always follow through.

There seems to be a tendency for people in the Negro community to work at cross purposes and as soon as a person looks as if he is getting "too powerful" everything is done to "cut him down." There seems to be much jealousy exhibited, and there is no one in the community whom the Negroes recognize as a "leader."

The person who is working hardest in the community at the present time, described as a good organizer but not a leader, is the president of the NAACP, George Ferguson. He seems to be carrying the major responsibility of organizing the Negro community and working with the students and parents who have asked for transfer to white schools.

Although apathetic, the Negro community seemed completely unified around the school issue. I could not find a single person who did not support the Negro applicants in their desire to enter the school nearest their homes. Though it was rumored that parents were being pressured to withdraw their children, only one family, Dr. Garrett, has removed his name from the list. Dr. Garrett says he removed his name in the interest of his child's health — that his child is extremely nervous and too much conflict would be upsetting. The remainder of the families seem to be determined.

STATUS OF THE SCHOOL ISSUE:

On July 16, the School Board made public its elementary school districts. There are 6 obviously gerrymandered districts. Fifteen of the Negro applicants for transfer to white schools live in the New Jefferson School district (Negro). The remaining 5 Negro applicants will presumably be distributed among the 5 white schools. No districts have been drawn for the city's two high schools, but a residence test presumably will be applied to the 11 Negro applicants to white (Lane) high school.

Tests and interviews for the 31 Negroes seeking admission to white schools have been scheduled during the last two weeks of July. The applicants have been notified by letter from the Charlottesville School Board. Superintendent Ellis says achievement tests will be given to applicants for elementary schools on July 21-22 at Jefferson School. The eleven high school applicants will take the test at (Negro) Burley school on the same day. A five-member committee, composed of Supt Ellis, John E. Reitz, science teacher at Lane; Miss Lillian Butt, history teacher at Lane; D. Mott Robertson, principal at Venable; and Miss Edity Smith, visiting teacher for city schools, will interview all Negro applicants by appointment on July 28-29. Applicants must pass a residence test as well as the achievement examinations and the interviews. The latter are designed to determine "the educational effect" of ~~xx~~ transfer and the wishes of the parents in regard to the possible transfer." Action on the assignments will be taken by the School Board at a meeting early in August, and applicants will learn of their assignments after the meeting.

Local NAACP officials have raised the question of its attorney as to whether the Negro children should present themselves for the examination. He was studying the question and had not rendered an opinion when I left the field.

THE PRIVATE SCHOOL ISSUE:

A charter has been granted, and the private school plan is well underway. The private school plan is being taken very seriously by many citizens as an answer to the continuation of segregated schools. The most serious blow to the private school plan has come from ministers who are in opposition to the use of churches as classrooms.

On July 16, the Ministerial Association made the following statement: "At the regular meeting of the Charlottesville and Albermarle Ministerial Association, among the ministers present there was no knowledge of any survey having been made regarding either the adequacy or the availability of Charlottesville church property for use by private schools. No one indicated any likelihood that his church property would be so used." The Reverend Jan W Owen of the Westminister Presbyterian church ~~xxxxx~~ said that "he was strenuously opposed" to such use of his church and that he "wouldn't consider it under any circumstances."

While there is some difference of opinion among the ministers regarding the use of church property for private schools, there is a solid block of opposition among the clergy of most of the large churches. A survey of churches revealed that 11 churches in Charlottesville indicated strong opposition to the use of their facilities for private educational purposes. Ministers lining up in favor of using their facilities for private segregared schooling included the Church of God, the Christian Science Church, the Greek Orthodox Church, the Christian Church (First and Market) and the Monticello Pilgrim Church.

The clergy in opposing the use of churches for private schools ~~xxxxx~~ uses most often the argument of separation of church and state.

State Senator Edward McCue, Jr., continues to call upon the churches for their facilities. Said the Senator, "As I see it, the personal opinion of the minister is not the determining factor." To him, "it is the congregations that must decide."

WHAT IS BEING DONE IN THE COMMUNITY TO EASE THE TRANSITION?

1. The NAACP has conducted a workshop which it considers successful. It is now in the process of conducting another workshop for parents and children who will enter desegregated schools. June Shagaloff is on hand to assist in setting up plans and help prepare the Negro community.

2. The Ministerial Association has voted to remain in session throughout the summer rather than take the usual vacation.

3. The Fellowship of Reconciliation, through James Lawson and Reverend Monroe (local) is attempting to work with student groups. James Lawson met with white students and Negro students (separately) and explained the principle of non-violence. The groups expressed an interest in continuing to meet, and extending the group throughout the summer. James Lawson also taped two non-violence messages which will appear on the local radio station.

4. Col Francis Pickins Miller, as head of the Virginia Council of Churches has asked each minister to preach a sermon on love and non-violence the last Sunday in August. He is asking that this be done each year just before the opening of school.

5. The NAACP is in the process of organizing the Negro community into zones for the purpose of keeping up the general morale of those who will enter white schools.

Law Enforcement:

At the present time, Charlottesville has its largest police department -- 48 men. Six of these policemen are within their first year of employment. Turnover is rapid in the police department because of the low pay. Since 1950, police officers have been going to the officers training school in Richmond. Four officers are sent each year. Beginning in 1950, this means that a total of 32 men have received training. One officer has been to FBI school. None of the policemen have had training in riot control. The chief of police, however, showed me material he had just received from Richmond which deals with such training. He plans to study it, and start a school for his officers. This he plans to get underway within the next week. He also hopes to give some sort of instruction to his 32 auxiliary police group.

The Chief of Police admits that this is an area in which he has had no experience, and he is interested in getting all the information he can which deals with riot control. He believes he can handle the local people, but he confided, "I sure hope Kasper doesn't come around." The Charlottesville-Albemarle Council's president took to the Chief of Police issues of New South which deals with law enforcement. He appeared genuinely grateful for the material, and expressed interest in securing anything that would be useful.

PUBLIC OFFICIALS AGREE:

1. The public schools will close if Negroes present themselves, and everyone believes they will. There is no alternative; it is a state law that the schools will close, if desegregated.

2. The Negro children will suffer; most white children will be taken care of by private schools.

3. There will be no violence. Those schools in which Negroes will be enrolled simply will not open on the first day of school.

4. As to how long the schools will remain closed range from the most pessimistic "forever", that's anybody's guess, to an optimistic "day", a "week" or a "month" at the most.

FRANCIS PICKENS MILLER TELLS ME CONFIDENTALLY AND SAYS UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES MUST HE BE QUOTED.

Last week a dinner was held in which all the high ranking officials, including the next mayor, Michtie, and it was agreed that integration was inevitable. Closing of the public schools and the private school plans are not being taken seriously. In Michtie we have a strong man. He did not come out on a segregation platform and won over his opponent 2 to 1.

They have assigned men to work with Oglesby, the rabid segregationist at the University, to keep him from stirring up violence at the opening of school.

That the school board is actually studying a plan of desegregation. He confided that Don Shoemaker had sent to him, at his request, the Nashville plan, and it is likely that Charlottesville will adopt this plan. It is interesting to point out that Superintendent Ellis asked me the relative merits and demerits of various school plans. He also asked about the Nashville plan. I got the impression that he has some reservations ~~at~~ about the Nashville plan, but did not commit himself.

Pickens Miller doesn't believe there will be any violence unless it is created by the ~~xxx~~ stupidity of the police force itself. He believes there is a ~~likelyhx~~ likelihood that they, in their attempt to do the right thing would do everything wrong.

Pickens Miller sees real hope for Charlottesville with the new mayor Michtie. He is considered a very fine man and will deal "straight" on this issue. (Unfortunately, I did not have a chance to meet him; he was on vacation until July 28)

THE HUMAN RELATIONS COUNCIL

In Charlottesville, the Virginia Human Relations Council is equated with the WCC as an extreme organization. Here, one hears for the first time, not the WCC on the one hand and the NAACP, but the WCC and the Virginia Council. Said one official, "I don't like the NAACP worth a damn, but you know it has to do what it is doing, but for these loonies to set themselves up as an extreme organization -- local white people asking for integration -- it's just the worse possible thing." The Council is hated on the one hand, and is also ridiculed on the other. Most people feel that it is composed of a group of maladjusted "crackpots." Some call them "do-gooders" with a sneer. They are not taken seriously, and are without any influence. Said Col Pickens Miller regarding the Council. "I never did joing, and I know this disappointed John Marion very much, but I simply could not. The leadership of the Council has been most unfortunate. It is composed of people who carry absolutely NO influence in the community. The worst possible thing for the Council was to have people like Mrs. Patton Boyle and Mildred Brown associated with it. Mrs. Boyle has the community down on her 100 per cent; she has gloried in the publicity from The Evening Saturday Post. When she gets the newspaper men out to take pictures of cross burnings on her lawn, people just laugh. They know Patty Boyle wants to be a martyr. As for Mildred Brown, she has had a most unfortunate background, and, of course, nobody listens to her. Dr. Wilson is in my church, and it is generally agreed that he is "off." And So it goes.

Col ~~Pickins~~ Miller did mention that he thought the Council had performed a community service when it brought in Supt Carmichael to speak, but the Council's interest in publicity, "going on record" and its "unfortunate leadership" makes him believe that the Council can have little, if any, positive influence in the community.

In checking with the leadership of the United Council of Church Women, I found a very strong attitude against the Council. A friend of the President of the League of Women Voters quoted Mrs. Evans as saying she could not under any circumstances join such a group. The League has been forthright on the issue, and Mrs. Evans is a particularly strong person herself.

Slow to change Charlottesville looks upon the Human Relations Council as an "outside" organization and influence. It is an organization that has been identified with the "race" issue. In the opinion of Col. Miller, and an opinion which I share, whatever is doing in a positive way in Charlottesville will be done best by working through already existing groups. Because people cannot conceive of a society different from the one in which they now live, their "conversion" so to speak will not come through an organization which it appears is dedicated to destroy that society. And so, Col. Miller subscribes to the principle of working through the church people, and the individual approach. He feels he has done much to bring Darden around. He has worked "on" key persons in the community. He has done it quietly. He feels it has done some good, and he also feels there will be limited desegregation, and there will be no violence. While he thinks statements are good, he thinks they do little, if any good. He believes in the "individual" approach. He has issued statements, and will continue to do so, but he thinks they are of limited value.

WHAT CAN BE DONE?

Public officials will tell you that there is nothing that any group can do; that this is a legal situation and the community has to obey the law ~~and~~ yet not have a desegregated school. In their opinion, the less said by community groups the better. They feel that publicity has been bad, and that the Council has done as much harm as the White citizens' group in stirring people up. They wish to be left alone to work out the problem. Not a person said they saw anything community groups could do to help. Said one, at this point, "silence would help more than anything."

White organized groups, with the exception of The League of Women Voters have not discussed the issue in their groups. They feel that the issue is too explosive, there is too much opposition, and such a discussion would destroy the organization. The United Council of Church Women attributes the fact that they have not discussed this or any other controversial issue to their interest in keeping up lines of communication. In their opinion, this is the one issue that makes communication impossible. The Council's outgoing president has said, however, that she believes the group will be willing to issue a statement on law and order. However, the Virginia Council has issued a statement and asked the City Council for a hearing. This may cause groups of United Church Women's to go underground. A good and safe issue has now become "unsafe" by the Council's endorsement.

Dear Fred:

Since I have received many cautions from you and others concerning the need for frequent reporting and staying in touch, I am sending along some of my initial impressions and activities since coming to the state Council here in Virginia.

The State office is now set up and functioning. In case you did not have it, our address is Room 216-C, Broad-Grace Arcade, 3rd & Grace Sts., Richmond. Our office telephone is MIlton 9-0872. We have been fortunate in obtaining the services of Mrs. Martha Sharp as half-time office secretary. Mrs. Sharp is Jack Marion's daughter and is well-oriented to the general work of the Council.

My contact with the Virginia Council so far has been somewhat disappointing, although not surprising considering the time of the year. Our state president has been out of the state and our vice-president, Dean Henderson, has been involved in college activities at Virginia Union. There has thus been no guidance or assistance to my activities from any officer or committee of the organization. So far as the current school crisis is concerned, we have a fairly strong chapter in Charlottesville, no chapters in Arlington or Norfolk. We do have considerable individual memberships in Norfolk. I have done very little so far except to rent an apartment, find an office, and settle in. I have made two trips to Charlottesville and one to Norfolk and have visited with some of our people in Richmond. My purpose so far has been pretty much to make contact with my constitutency and to inform myself of the details of the situation. I will be making another trip to Norfolk today or tomorrow to contact additional persons and try to be of service in the present situation.

The Virginia Council is not in sound financial shape, and despite many well-intentioned words, Wilson Brown as state finance chairman, has actually made no plans or arrangements whatsoever concerning support for the coming year.

In Charlottesville both the chairman and the vice-chairman of our chapter have been on vacation during the past week, but I have met with virtually all of the prominent Council members in Charlottesville, including Dr. Daniel, the vice-chairman prior to his vacation. I attended a workshop session organized to prepare Negro adults for the coming situation and found the spirit in the Negro community to be sober, realistic, and solid. The general attitude in the white community seems to be that nothing can be done until the final decisions are in. The Ministerial Association has drafted and prepared a statement concerning law and order but does not intend to release it until and unless some sort of riot or disorder occurs. The Charlottesville Council is fairly demoralized, more by the reports of the SRC consultants than by the present situation. Council members seem to feel that they have been told by outside experts that their activities to date have been more harmful than helpful and that they should pretty much shut up. They are therefore confused and uncertain about their role and about the future direction of the Council. They seem to be split concerning their emphasis in future weeks. One group favors a continued strong role while the majority faction seems to believe in pretty much going under ground at the moment until after the present crisis.

JH²

On my one trip to Norfolk I spent considerable time with the CBS representative so was unable to make adequate contact with liberal leadership there. I did talk with our two state board members, Mrs. Green and Tom Young, and with several members of the Women's Interracial Council. The Women's Interracial Council evidently feels that any stronger role at the present time or in the near future would threaten its present prestige as an interracial agency providing communication and constructive consultation. Robert Stern, with the Norfolk division of William & Mary, who is coordinating the "Save our Schools" effort in Norfolk, has the confidence of liberal elements but seems to be extremely slow in getting his movement off the ground. He or they seem to be quite hesitant as to timing and as to the exact nature of their effort. I hope to talk with Stern this afternoon or tomorrow when I visit Norfolk.

We have a state board meeting scheduled for September 12 in Richmond, and I hope to meet with Beckwith as soon as he returns from Vermont which will be by now or any day now.

I attended the inter-agency meeting under the auspices of the National Civil Liberties Clearing House as scheduled. I did not find it particularly inspiring. The only conclusion reached was that representatives of the three main faiths should visit the President in an effort to move him to more effective support.

Sincerely,

Dear Paul:

Thanks for your report-letter on your first month in the Old Dominion. In spite of the many vacationing key persons, it sounds as if you are digging-in in a significant way.

Your trips to Charlottesville and Norfolk were wise. I trust you got to see Phil Stern on your trip through Arlington enroute to the meeting of the National Civil Liberties Clearing House. He is an able guy in a key slot who is on our side.

As you will see from the enclosed copy of my letter to John Hope II, I am disturbed by what you report about the morale of the Charlottesville-Albemarle Chapter. I trust John will take steps to let them know we still love them. — see ltr. to John Hope 9/4/58

If you want me to come to Virginia for school opening let me know. I am not sure I could be of any real use but would be willing to come. If there is particular need for me to attend the State Board meeting, I could make it - however, it might be better for you to handle this one solo. The decision is yours.

We'll keep in touch. Feel free to call us collect if anything breaks.

All good regards.

Dear John:

Enclosed is a copy of a report-letter from Paul Rilling on his first month in Virginia. It is a good report about a none too happy situation.] See ltr. from Rilling: 9/2/58 to FBR

Of immediate concern to us is the situation in Charlottesville. I know the difficulties of communicating in a meaningful way with the group; I am aware that agreements become elusive things; I am conscious that confirmation is sought for pre-determined activities. In spite of all this, I am concerned that the Charlottesville-Albemarle Chapter feels demoralized, divided, and frustrated and sees but two alternatives open to it: to continue past approaches at the same degree of intensity or to go "underground".

It had been my hope, after the visit you and Harry Walker made to Charlottesville, that they could see useful things to do in the current situation. I believe it would be helpful if you would summarize your suggestions to the group and send them to Paul Rilling.

Also, if you think it appropriate, a letter to Mrs. Makielski encouraging effective next steps--based on your suggestions--would be helpful in building morale. Since you and Harry interpreted to them what might be done, a follow-up letter would come naturally. Obviously no reference should be made to Paul's report.

Recent reports from the Old Dominion tend to confirm our statement that the constitutional issue of Federal Rights vs State Authority will be joined in this month.

All good regards.

Cordially,

MEMORANDUM

To: Harold Fleming

From: Fred Routh

Re: Virginia Situation - Report of telephone conversation with Paul Rilling

ARLINGTON

There is no basic change in the situation in Arlington from that reported in the papers last week. The Federal District Judge has not yet (as he said he would) ordered the admission of specific Negro children to specific white schools. This action is still expected since the judge was awaiting the decision of the Supreme Court in the Little Rock case.

CHARLOTTESVILLE

In Charlottesville the public schools have opened except for those affected by court order. The school board has asked the Circut Court of Appeals to delay the District Court's desegregation order. Judge Sobeloff who heads the Court of Appeals recently refused delay as requested by the Front Royal, Warren County school board. A strong Save Our Schools Committee has come out into the open since Monday, September 15th. Over two hundred people are already involved - they include conservative to moderate leadership, led by Dr. J. A. Rolston of the University of Virginia School of Engineering. This committee is patterned after the Arlington committee to preserve the public schools. It includes among others, Dr. Cherry, Dean of the school of education; Mr. Mott, principal of the Venable school; amd Mr. Welch who represents McGraw-Hill. There are several additional groups in Charlottesville. One of them, favoring private school plan, is also well organized.

FRONT ROYAL

The ministers of Front Royal have issued a good statement urging compliance with the law of the land; Paul Rilling assisted in its preparation; it has appeared in the Washington Post among other newspapers. School officials are actively seeking ways of re-opening the schools, even on a desegregated basis. They are waiting for citizenry reaction to build up and demand re-opening of the schools on a desegregated basis. Among those actively working for re-opening of the schools are: the president of the PTA's; the editor of the local paper (weekly); and the Baptist minister, Paul Stagg, who is, Rilling reports, probably the most effective guy on our side. Richmond reporters on the scene feel that community sentiment is shifting in favor of compliance.

NORFOLK

The Unitarian Church has spoken out strongly in Norfolk asking for compliance. A large group of protestant ministers is about to do the same. The Norfolk school board has been in touch with the Governor and the Attorney General. Schools open September 22 with seventeen Negro students assigned to specific white schools. City officials and the school board are watching the situation in Charlottesville and Front Royal closely. The private school group has had almost no success. The committee to preserve the public schools is rapidly gaining strength.

GENERAL

The Virginia Council has released to the press a statement aimed at maintaining and increasing community pride in the public school system and saying that the welfare of the children - both Negro and white - must come before all other considerations. It goes on to say that the governor has fulfilled his pledge to resist with all legal and honorable means; that there are none left; and the time has come to comply with the court decision. They also raised the question of the academic ability and the constitutionality of any "private" school system hastily set up.

The letters to the editor column in the Richmond, Norfolk, and Charlottesville papers are beginning to mushroom with demands that the public school system be saved.

Paul Rilling reports that there is increasing evidence of public dissatisfaction with the state program of massive resistance.

Rev. Hubert S. Beckwith
Box 186
Annandale, Virginia

Dear Beck:

I had a useful and pleasant trip to Charlottesville yesterday. I met with the Board for a supper meeting and then addressed a public meeting at the courthouse. Some fifty to sixty-five persons were on hand and there was a spirited question and discussion period. Although the meeting was announced in the paper there seemed to be no outsiders present and the local club apparently controls their own publicity. Their publicity chairman is a person trained in news writing and the paper evidently does not send its own man but prints whatever he sends. I think they plan no followup publicity on the meeting. The only sign of any tension in connection with the meeting was a string of cars which circled the courthouse square honking loudly in the middle of the meeting. This may or may not have been in connection with the meeting itself.

The situation in Charlottesville seems to be a much more constructive one both from the standpoint of the total situation and from the point of view of the Charlottesville Council since the election of the new mayor, Mr. Michie. Some of the leaders of the Charlottesville Council confer frequently with Mr. Michie, trust him, and feel that they have established a good rapport. The mayor has told them that he is working in the same direction and urged that there be no open or public effort by the Council. Our local people are inclined to go along with this since they feel they can work more effectively quietly now that they have a friend in this important position. A number of our people are also involved as individuals in the new Charlottesville committee to preserve public education for which they have great hopes. See you soon.

Sincerely,

Paul M. Rilling
Executive Director

The Road We Must Take

The effect of yesterday's decision by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals is to wipe the slate clean, thus clearing the way for a new approach to the problem created by the U.S. Supreme Court's desegregation decision.

We regard this as a gain, at least potentially, not a loss. The so-called "massive resistance" laws were no cure for our troubles. They were in even more evident conflict with the Constitution of the United States, as interpreted by the court of last resort, than with the Constitution of Virginia. The fate that befell them yesterday was foredoomed.

Their elimination gives us the opportunity to apply ourselves to the urgent business of providing a legal and workable solution to our problem, consistent with our unquestioned need for universal educational opportunity, with our place in the American union, and with the principle of individual liberty.

The obligation of the Virginia General Assembly under Section 129 of the State Constitution to "maintain an efficient system of public free schools throughout the state" has just been reaffirmed by our highest state court. Even in the absence of such a constitutional obligation, the practical need to maintain such a system would remain. We cannot maintain our place in today's world without it.

It appears equally true, however, that in most Virginia localities enforced racial integration of the public schools would greatly impair their efficiency and in a great many it would destroy it. The constitutional and practical necessity of maintaining a system of free schools is therefore matched by the necessity of avoiding enforced racial integration.

The way is open to do this. The Supreme Court's desegregation decision does not require integration. All it does is forbid racial discrimination in respect to admissions to public schools. It is up to us to prevent the non-discrimination which is required of us from producing the enforced integration which would gravely hurt and in many cases destroy our schools.

The way by which educational opportunity for all of Virginia's boys and girls can be provided, in conformity with the Supreme Court's decision and without enforced racial integration, has been repeatedly set forth in the columns of this newspaper, in editorials and in letters and articles by Leon Dure, who has devoted most of his time in the past year to its study and its advocacy.

There is nothing complicated about it. It calls simply for the making available of grants of public funds for education so that each child, or his parents, may have freedom of choice between public and private schools. It balances the right, established by decree of the Supreme Court, of every child to access on equal terms to the public schools with a right of every child to stay out of the public schools without prejudice to his right to an education.

Yesterday's decision by the Virginia Supreme Court raised no obstacle to the adoption of such a plan. To the contrary, while the court found the present tuition payments law invalid in the context of the "massive resistance" program, it went out of its way to note that "we find no constitutional objection to the prescribed procedure for making tuition grants out of funds properly available for the purpose."

Simple as it is, it is not to be expected that this road of escape from our schools problems can be taken without encountering serious difficulties. Obviously the readjustment would not be easy where situations arose in which large numbers of parents elected private in preference to public schooling for their children. However, Charlottesville's experience with emergency private schools this year testifies that these difficulties are by no means insurmountable.

In any case, no good alternative is available. In the light of the decisions already rendered by state and federal courts, it is nonsense to talk of new attempts to maintain segregation by law. It cannot be done. Attempts to do it will inevitably fall in the courts. In the end we must turn to a way by which segregation can be maintained by the voluntary choice of all who want it. The sooner we provide such freedom of choice, the better it will be for education in Virginia, for good race relations and, surely not least, for the resolving of the potentially dangerous conflict between federal and state authority.

Text of Governor's Reply to Court Blows at School Laws

The text of Governor Almond's address last night on the Virginia school crisis:

My fellow Virginians:

I am grateful for the privilege of this brief appearance to discuss with you some aspects of the constitutional crisis shackled upon us by a judicial oligarchy and its shocking and terrible impact on our public school system.

Throughout this struggle Virginia has fought to preserve and defend her rights vouchsafed to her under and within the framework of the Constitution of the United States. On the highest plane of honor, inherent conviction and loftiness of ideals and principle she has sought only to maintain those rights reserved by her and her sister states, and which have never been delegated, forfeited or surrendered to the federal government. Her loyalty to our federated system of government as ordained by the Constitution is woven with indestructible thread into the heart and fiber of her people. A combination of forces motivated by political expediency, armed with arrogated power and inimical to our constitutional system, has advanced with ruthless thread to strike down and destroy the right of the people of this state to have a voice in the education of their children. This is lamentably true, notwithstanding the indisputable fact that the fundamental law of the land embraced and protected the use and enjoyment of this right for nearly a century. The right is now denied through the process of judical legislation amendatory of the Constitution in contravention thereof, and in violation of the oath to uphold and defend it.

STATE WILL NOT WEAKEN

Without reference to the people as the Constitution requires, it is demanded of Virginia by the executive and judicial departments of the federal government that she forsake honor, abandon principle and eschew her loyalty to the Constitution by slavish acceptance of this travesty upon the Constitution, and grace the violated oath with a modicum of decency.

Virginia will not weaken in her allegiance to the compact which forms the basic structure of this "indissoluble Union of indestructible states"; she will not dilute and desecrate her concept of honor; she will not abandon or compromise with principle to have it lost never to be regained.

To those of faint heart; to those whose purpose and design is to blend and amalgamate the white and Negro race and destroy the integrity of both races; to those who disclaim that they are integrationists but are working day and night to integrate our schools; to those who don't care what happens to the children of Virginia; to those false prophets of a "little or token integration"; to those in high places and elsewhere who advocate integration for your children and send their own to private or public segregated schools; to those who defend or close their eyes to the livid stench of sadism, sex, immorality and juvenile pregnancy infesting the mixed schools of the District of Columbia and elsewhere; to those who would overthrow the customs, morals and traditions of a way of life which has endured in honor and decency for centuries and embrace a new moral code prepared by nine men in Washington whose moral concepts they know nothing about; to those who would substitute strife, bitterness, turmoil and choas for the tranquility and happiness of an orderly society; to those who would destroy our way of life because of their pretended concern over what Soviet Russia may think of us—to all of these and their confederates, comrades and allies let me make it abundantly clear for the record now and hereafter, as Governor of this state, I will not yield to that which I know to be wrong and will destroy every rational semblance of education for thousands of the children of Virginia.

CALLS ON VIRGINIANS

I call upon the people of Virginia to stand firmly with me in this struggle. Be not dismayed by recent judicial deliverances. I propose to restore the tax revenues of this Commonwealth to the control of the people. They and they alone will decide these issues. United in the common purpose of defending constitutional government and advancing the welfare of our children—with determination more relentless than ever before—we have just begun to fight.

'NO PRICE TOO HIGH TO PAY'

No price is too high to pay; no burden too heavy to bear; no consequence too grave to endure in defense of the right and duty of this Commonwealth to protect the people of Virginia in the proper enjoyment of their right and obligation to mold the character and promote the welfare of their children through the exercise of their voice and judgment in their education and development.

The grave constitutional crisis which has been thrust upon us makes it imperative that our energy, resources and efforts be launched and applied on a statewide basis. Abandonment of the principles involved anywhere is to forsake them everywhere. The inevitable result will be total engulfment with the progress of dissolution and chaos measured by the combination of forces confederated and arrayed to divide, conquer, rule and ruin.

The people of Virginia through their elected representatives and by registering their convictions in the exercise of their franchise have repeatedly made it crystal clear that they cannot and will not support a system of public education on a racially integrated basis. I make it equally clear that I cannot and that I will not break faith with them.

No parent or guardian is under any legal compulsion from any source to send a child to a racially mixed school. In certain areas affected by adverse federal decrees the people have responded magnificently to the emergency created through the closing of schools. Thousands of our children have adjusted to the situation. The processes of education are being admirably and effectively administered. The hardships and sacrifices have constituted a challenge to overcome obstacles with the result that fundamentally sound educational progress is being made without chaos or undue confusion.

Amid the agony of these trying days I have been heartened and inspired by the profound spirit of dedication and determination of these citizens and their children, as well as the teachers, who have comported themselves so as to reflect immeasurable credit on the highest qualities of patriotic citizenship.

It is my purpose to appoint and convene with all practical expedition a commission composed of members of the General Assembly for the purpose of assessing and evaluating the entire situation in the light of existing conditions. It is my earnest hope and desire that we may be able to formulate a sound and constructive program for submission to a special session of the General Assembly. The problem is not one lending itself to an easy solution. It is most grave and difficult. It will require hard work, patience and a deep sense of dedication.

KEEP PRIVATE SCHOOLING

To prevent the pyramiding of chaos, confusion and disruption, I urgently request that private instruction now obtaining, and wherever it may become necessary, continue and go forward without interruption. I urge the wholehearted co-operation of all concerned to this end. It is my firm belief that to break the chain of continuity in the administering of private instruction and the consequent confusion of a transition which may invoke conditions justifying its termination would be productive of incalculable harm.

I shall not hesitate to use every available and proper means at my command to keep the peace and good order of this Commonwealth. I call upon our people to comport themselves with dignity and restraint to the end that the honor and name of Virginia be not defamed.

I have implicit faith and confidence in the genius of the people to cope with any emergency, and their loyalty and dedication to the preservation of their inherent and inalienable rights. Our cause is sound, right and just. With your unwavering loyalty under the guidance of Almighty God we shall go forward to higher and greater accomplishments.

ANN LANDERS SAYS

Shut Out Student Now Values School

Dear Ann Landers: I had to write to you after reading that letter from the girl who wanted to quit high school.

I realize more than ever what a high school education means, because I'm one of thousands of students who suddenly found my high school doors bolted and padlocked. I live in Virginia.

Oh yes—I attend private tutoring classes, but my parents must pay $5 a week for this privilege (as well as taxes which should be providing me with a public school education).

I take four subjects and no one is certain the credits will be accepted by a college or university. Even at that I'm one of the lucky ones. Many students can not afford $5 a week for four subjects. And in some cases, those who COULD pay can't get into tutored classes because there are no vacancies.

The top students in my class who were hoping for appointments to Annapolis and West Point are stranded. Students who were depending on scholarships, now find their chances slim. These are only a few problems we are faced with.

I could name many more—the most serious one being boredom and idleness that is plaguing us all. The lack of planned activity is getting on our nerves. Some kids have already gotten into trouble with the law.

When I read about high school students who want to quit I'd like to shake some sense into their heads. Too bad these foolish ones can't let us take their places in a classroom. I'd consider it a privilege, and here are thousands like me.—CHILD OF DIXIE

REPORT OF A VISIT TO CHARLOTTESVILLE, VIRGINIA

by Bonita H. Valien

Four months of closed public schools have had considerable impact on the Charlottesville community. A community which bragged a few months earlier that Virginia will not have violence is now saying rather hopelessly, "We could have another Little Rock." The Governor's speech following the court's (January 19) ruling was considered by most officials and community leaders as "an invitation to violence." Said one of the community's respected leaders, "Let's face it, the people of Virginia haven't owned their souls for a long time. With the Byrd machine, totalitarianism is as complete in Virginia as it could operate under any totalitarian government, and if John Battle, Jr. comes out in support of the recent court ruling, you can say that is the most courageous act that has taken place in Virginia in the last fifty years." This was Col. Francis Pickens Miller speaking, but not for publication. His optimism of last summer had been replaced with a cautiousness bordering on pessimism, except that he was beginning to "see a breakthrough" -- a significant one -- being led by the leading business men of the city.

There is no question that Charlottesville's economic structure is being seriously impaired as a result of the public school situation. Business men say that business is at the "lowest possible ebb." The loss of human resources is also being lamented. It is generally agreed that the more promising students from the better educated families have been sent out of the community in order that they may continue their schooling. It is believed that these youth will never return to the community. One woman, a prominent Virginian said, tearfully, "It hurts you when you love a place; all my family was born here, our roots are in Virginia, and yet our children whom we have had to send away so that they could complete their education tell us that they are ashamed to let any of their classmates know they are from Virginia. This is awful; I hate to think what the future of Virginia will be like if this continues."

In September, 1958, because Negro students were assigned to them, 2 white schools -- Venable Elementary and Lane High did not open and have remained closed. Students go to class in private homes with the exception of those attending the Charlottesville Education Foundation's Robert E. Lee School. The emergency school program in Charlottesville for white children is under the sponsorship of the Parent's Committee for Emergency Schooling (conducting schools for Venable pupils), the Joint High School Committee (which is conducting the high school program), Charlottesville Education Foundation (for "displaced Venable pupils who can't get education acceptable to them from the public schools"). The 12 Negro children are being tutored. (A detailed summary of the program as it is presenting operating is given at the end of this report).

REACTIONS TO THE COURT'S RULING OF JANUARY 19

The School Board and City Council:

Mayor Thomas J. Michie confided and said under no circumstances must he be quoted, that the City Council and School Board had anticipated the decision, and further that both had secretly decided that the schools would open without fanfare. As a matter of fact, it was the opinion of some of the members that the schools would simply open the very next day after the ruling. This, however, seemed impracticable in view of some of the administrative details that would have to be worked out. But this much was clear, the Board was expecting to follow the court's decision and open the schools. However, after the Governor's speech, the Board and council members became a bit more cautious. The City Council and School Board refused to move or even comment on the decision until after they have received an interpretation of the decision by City Attorney John S. Battle, Jr. The School Board authorized him to prepare a formal opinion for its information that would "encompass in general the effect of the decision on the Charlottesville School Board." Battle has said the court's decision in the case did not surprise him, but he was surprised at the language of the opinion. He said he needs time to study it thoroughly, and that he will confer with Gov. Almond before giving the School Board his opinion. He said the Board should have his written opinion by the end of the week. Battle explained that his job is to provide the board with his interpretation of the law and the court's decision. He makes it clear that school policy decisions are up to the School Board. He has said the court's decision raises many questions which need further study. He has pointed out significantly that the Board has no time limit for the discussion of the problem and determining its future action. He says he does not yet know what course of action he will recommend to the board and that he is attempting to "envision all the practical problems" facing the Board.

In favor of compliance:-

The Charlottesville Committee for Public Education met and voted to notify the school Board formally that the two closed schools (Lane and Venable) should be reopened immediately. The uhit's executive committee visited each member of the school board to convey this sentiment. Said its president, J.A. Rolston, "We emphasize the necessity for a rapid return to normal in our school situation. The Committee for Public Education will not be satisfied with anything less than the reopening of Venable and Lane. In commenting on the Governor's speech, Rolston said, "the Governor appears to have lost all sense of objectivity about the future of Virginia. In his emotional speech packed with inuendo, he seems to have set a course toward educational and economic suicide. Will 1965 in Virginia be a return to the 1865 economic chaos?"

The Joint High School Committee and the Parents Committee for Emergency Schooling announced that parents, pupils and teachers were ready to return to Venable School "if the court decision means that the School Board will reopen the schools."

League of Women Voters: Asks School Board to open schools "as soon as practicable." Mrs. T. H. Evans, president, reports the following resolutions of the League: (1) called for the reopening of Lane High School and Venable Elementary School as soon as practicable; (2) declared the League supports public education and (3) declared the League opposed Virginia's massive resistance policy.

A group of Business men (composed of the leading business executives of the city. These business men have drafted a statement in the expectation that the City School Board will decide to reopen the two schools in the light of the January 19 ruling. The statement is designed to appear as a newspaper advertisement. Col. Miller who has been meeting with the group in their secret sessions since December 22, says that the business men in groups of twos have secretly visited each member of the school board asking them to reopen the schools and pledging their support in such a decision. The business men have asked members of the Committee for Public Education, the League of Women Voters, Parents Committee for Emergency Schooling, Joint High School Committee, to sign and circulate the statement among their membership and friends. The petition is being circulated only among white citizens.

IN OPPOSITION TO THE OPENING OF THE SCHOOLS

Immediately following the ruling, petitions signed by 831 Lane High and Venable school parents were presented to City Council asking that the two schools not be reopened during the current school year. Mrs. Cropp, the spokesman for the group said the parents don't want the emergency school programs to be abandoned. If the public schools were reopened and later closed as the result of state legislative action, the students would be left with no school again as they were this fall before the emergency schools were organized.

The Charlottesville Educational Foundation (CEF) is opposed. Its president, D. B. Mitchell says he believes there is a clear need for preservation of the city's emergency school program, at least until we know what legislation will be adopted." He issued the following statement to the press:

> "I gathered from the governor's address last night that the state authorities do not propose at this time to accede willingly to the decision of the federal courts regarding school integration. I believe that one thing is clear, and that is the necessity of attempting to preserve for the sake of our children the emergency school programs now operating in Charlottesville, at least until we know what legislation will be adopted.
> "It is certainly apparent that the need for increased private schooling here in Virginia has not been eliminated and will probably continue for some time. The Charlottesville Educational Foundation was established to fill that need and it will continue to do so as long as the need exists."

THE PRESS:

The Richmond Dispatch which is read in Charlottesville as its morning newspaper is defiant and inflammatory and supports the Governor and Senator Byrd in their strong attitude of resistance. The local paper, The Daily Progress, Charlottesville's own afternoon paper calls for a new approach to the problem created by the ruling. Conceding that the so-called "massive resistance" laws were no cure for Virginia's problems, calls for tuition grants out of funds properly available for the purpose. Says segregation can be maintained by the voluntary choice of all who want it. In general, it concedes there will be some integration.

COMMUNITY MORALE

By and large, it seems that most people in the community expected the court's ruling to strike down the "massive resistance laws", but there seems to be a large part of the population that still believes that something can be done to maintain segregation. Tuition grants seems to them the answer. Since the emergency schooling has operated satisfactorily there is the feeling that these can continue. The mayor, in commenting on this says that these people have not stopped to think that these emergency schools are being run by the teachers and being paid by the city, and that once they are withdrawn (as most assuredly they will be when the public schools are opened) the emergency schools won't be so easy. But there is still hope.

Among the white high school students, most agree that the emergency schooling is better than no schooling at all, but they are finding it most inadequate. The students find four hours of concentration on one subject very difficult. Both the students and teacher of chemistry confided that they found four-hours of chemistry without interruption both dull and difficult. Even the teacher admitted he found it difficult to stay awake, and he wask doing the teaching!

White teachers are indicating dissatisfaction and frustration. The mayor confided that he had just had a visit from the head of the teachers group who said that unless something was done soon there was grave fear that there would be no teachers available for the teaching of schools under any conditions or at any level next year. She said teachers are "finding the situation unbearable."

Morale in the Negro community continues to be high. However, the two high school students are showing signs of dissatisfaction and boredom. The one student who is in the eleventh grade and was to be graduated this year is the daughter of the NAACP president (Ferguson). Considerable pressure from the white community has been put on her and her parents to send her to the Negro school in the belief that the other Negro students would follow. This the parents have refused to do, and this decision is shared by the daughter. There have been many rumors in circulation, the most persistent being that this girl, as a result of the tension under which she has been living, has had a mental breakdown and has been committed to an institution. The girl reports a few unpleasant experience with members of her own high school classmates at the Negro school when she has attempted to attend some of the social functions at the school. Some of the students have called her names, and said, "so you want to be white; the Negro school wasn't good enough, etc." Her parents are supplementing her education with a planned reading program.

STRATEGY:

Mayor Michie confided that there was considerable concern on the part of some officials in Charlottesville about "sticking out their necks first in opening the schools". Thus, they are secretly exploring the possibility of all three areas presently affected -- Arlington, Norfolk and Charlottesville -- to see if the schools could not open at the same time. Since Arlington is under court order to open on February 2, it is believed it would be good strategy for Charlottesville and Norfolk to open at that time also. This would keep any one area from getting the full impact of the "Defenders." Since Charlottesville doesn't have semesters, they could open their schools at any time during the year.

MINISTERS - Since the ministers could not agree on what, if any kind of statement they should make in support of the recent ruling, they have decided to circulate the petition drawn up by the business men. The inability of the ministers to go on record as a group at this time has come under severe criticism and attack by Rev. Evans who stands almost alone as a minister in the community in his open attack on the segregation issue.

WHAT ARE THE NEEDS AS SEEN BY MEMBERS OF THE COMMUNITY:

Because the climate has been so negative and explosive, concerned community leaders see the need for workshops for students and teachers. Mrs. Evans says that she has concern about what will happen in the high school since all the students whom she knew that had a positive attitude and could have exerted some leadership have withdrawn from the school and gone elsewhere. It is felt that by and large the attitude of teachers is very unhealthy and that they are very much in need of some help.

The mayor is not at all sure what he can expect from his law enforcement group. They have secretly undergone some training, and he feels that he had the support of the state police, but he says now that he is not certain that the Governor may not call them in, as did Faubus, to support his point of view. He thinks this is an area in which some work needs to be done.

It is felt that someone needs to give the ministers of the community a "shot in the arm." They are providing practically no leadership and have almost "surrendered to the mob."

MY OWN IMPRESSION:

There is no question in my mind that the schools in Charlottesville will open, and I believe soon. This opinion is based in large part on the great amount of activity being engendered by the business group. The "economic pinch" is on, and when Senator Byrd's banker, a member of the businessmen's group supporting the opening of the schools says, "Let's face it, Byrd once was an asset, but he is now a liability," something is beginning to happen. And it is this statement said at one of the secret meetings which Pickens Miller attended that gives him the hope that a breakthrough even more significant than the opening of the schools is beginning. But there are clearly other positives. The mayor is solidly behind the court's decision, and he carries considerable weight with both the school board and the city council. There are status groups supporting the mayor and are calling for the reopening of the schools. There is the general recognition (even with Almond) that some integration is inevitable. I believe the opening of the schools is eminent. It seems to me if all three communities are able to open their schools at the same time, the psychological affect on the whole Virginia community will be good and the possibility of violence will be minimized.

The Virginia Council has offered its help in preparing for the transition. The mayor doesn't seem to be freightened of the group and speaks of them with respect. The Council has continued to try to do an educational job in the community. Their meeting with Mr. Dabbs, following the ~~xxxxxxx~~ ruling, was well attended and received good newspaper coverage.

Copies of editorials and other interesting newspaper items are attached.

A SUMMARY OF THE EMERGENCY SCHOOLING PROGRAM IN CHARLOTTESVILLE

WHITE STUDENTS

VENABLE

Approximately 600-610 students were expected at Venable last fall. About 540 of these pupils are enrolled in three programs: 335 attend the classes under the sponsorship of the Parents' Committee for Emergency Schooling; 180 attend the school set up by the Charlottesville Education Foundation; 25 are members of an independent 1st grade class, for which there is no tuition charge. Sixty-seventy former Venable students have made other arrangements to continue their schooling. As far as is known, no child has dropped out of school. The 60-70 students are attending private schools, paying tuition to go to county schools (not McIntire), or are going to school in other communities where they live with relatives.

Students go to class in private homes with the exception of those attending the CEF's, Robert E. Lee School. Classes meet from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. Class size is 15-32.

All of the former Venable Teachers are involved in the three programs, and are still under contract to the School Board. One teaches the independent first grade. Seven teach at the CEF school, which also employs one more teacher from another source. The Parents' Committee uses 15 of these teachers, including the former Venable Librarian who is now teaching the third grade.

The Band instructor meets his pupils at Venable twice a week in the afternoon. This is the regular amount of time devoted to band in the public schools. All city elementary band pupils go to the weekly night practice. The rotating art instructor for the city schools gives no time to any of the three substitute programs. The physical education instructor spends about 1-1½ hours at the Robert E. Lee School where he acts in the capacity somewhat similar to that of a school secretary. Following that, he tests eyes and ears of pupils in the elementary schools that are open until 2:30 p.m. when he starts the two-hour after-school recreation program for sixth and seventh graders. This program is the same recreation program that was carried on in other years but starts earlier since the children are not in school as long.

The Principal and school secretary cooperate with the teachers in the field. Materials such as books, maps, films and record players, must be checked in and out. Duplicating is done for the teachers. Venable is still the record center for all of these displaced pupils.

The maid is employed as usual. The two janitors are doing work, e.g, painting, that ordinarily would have been done by other workers. Since the Cafeteria is an independent, self-sufficient operation and is not supported by tax funds, cafeteria workers were not retained.

LANE

About 1,083 students were expected at Lane last September. 862 were enrolled in December in the Emergency Schooling run by the Joint High School Committee, composed of representatives from the Parents' Committee for Emergency Schooling and from the Charlottesville Education Foundation. 179 students have indicated attendance at other schools. Former county residents who attended Lane as tuition students are now attending Albemarle High Schools. Other students are attending nearby public high schools on a tuition basis. Some students are attending private schools while others are attending public schools in other communities where they are living with relatives. Schooling arrangements for 42 students are not known. In a normal school year there is a number of drop-outs among students who go to work, are married or move away.

The Emergency Schooling is held six days a week from 8 P.M. to 1 PM with no lunch hour. However, breaks are given at various times. All the former Lane faculty is being used and paid as usual and no other teachers are employed. Students with an ordinary schedule spend one complete day at home as the equivalent of the regular study periods. Pupils study one subject each day; therefore, the equivalent of a week's work is studied during one day. Pupils who are absent are expected to attend another section of the course, if such a section meets on the student's study day.

The Emergency Schooling is carried on in these churshes: First Baptist (Youth Building), First Methodist, First Presbyterian, Greek Orthodox and University Baptist. Also being used are the Elks Lodge, Fry's Spring Beach Club, Medical Arts Building and the Laboratory facilities of the Institute of Textile Technology.

The Students' Assessment for November and December 2as $2 for each month. This fee may be adjusted to cover expenses. Fees help to cover extra janitorial services, the school's share for utilities in the buildings housing classes, liability and property damage insurance, supplies, equipment and maintenance.

All courses but machine shop and physical education for boys in certain years are offered. Boys in the Tenth Grade receive driver training and safety, while those in the Eleventh grade study first aid. Football and basketball practice have been held. Most of the extra-curricular activities are proceeding about as usual. No dances have been held in the school, but there have been concerts in the auditorium and basketball gamein the gymnasium.

At Lane the maintenance staff of three maids and two janitors is employed in a manner similar to that at Venable. Likewise the cafeteria staff was not retained. The school secretaries are working. The Principal is chairman of the faculty of the Emergency High School Program.

Regular steps for accreditation with the state are to be taken.

THE NEGRO STUDENTS

The twelve Negro students -- 10 elementary and 2 high school are being tutored free of charge by an unemployed teacher, a high school teacher currently employed and an Episcopal minister. Tutoring at the elementary school is considered satisfactory; at the high school level less satisfactory. As a matter of fact, the two high school students (one 9th grade; the other 11th grade) are receiving instruction in English and mathematics only. The principal of Venable school has shown a sympathetic attitude toward the group of elementary school children. He has checked with the Negro group to find out what is being taught. He has been concerned and is cooperative. The principal of Lane High school has not acquired regarding the work of the two Negro students. He is described as a person totally out of sympathy with an integrated school system. His attitude has been of concern to both Negro parents and the more positive, concerned white parents.

CONFIDENTIAL

Informal Report on EFV's Field Trip to Columbia, S. C.; Rock Hill, S. C.; Charlotte, High Point, Greensboro, Richmond, Washington, D.C.; Charlottesville, Virginia.

Columbia - Talked with Alice Spearman. She has possible candidate for Fisk Institute. A member of the ACWA. The woman's name is Lucretia Neal, and she is located in Silverstreet, S. C. She is a staff person with responsibility for four locals in the state; Alice feels that she is a good person. Alice has also talked by phone with Mary Cameron, of the ILGWU staff, but found little personal interest in Fisk Institute; however, Mary indicated that she would talk with Semway Young, IBEW, about the Institute. Young is an officer in the South Carolina merged labor body.

A TWUA local in Columbia is headed by Max Wood; he is the business agent and the reports on him are that he is bad as far as racial issues are concerned. Another B.E. in TWUA is a man by the name of McConnel, in Newbury, S.C.; however, this man has a brother known to be milder and more rational in facing the race issue. Alice felt that McConnel exercises strong and dictatorial powers over his membership.

EV also talked with Irving Via, of the Inspections Division, Labor Department of South Carolina. Irving seems to have the respect of the labor people in this area; his past experience has been with the Federal Wage and Hour Division but he has been with the State Labor Department for some years. The Director of this department (Ponder) had previous service with the Federal Mediation Service.

The following local unions of interest are listed in the July, '56, phone book: TWUA No. 253, M. L. Wood, BA. 437 Center W. Coler. Phone: 2-9205.

TWUA No. 254. E. T. Kirkland, B.A. 119 S. Parker. Phone: 2-7013.

CWA State Office. 1420 Lady Street. Phone: 3-5014.

CWA No. 3706. Old Carolina Life Building. Phone: 4-7337.

Rock Hill, S. C.: Stopped by the office of Ray Berthiume. TWUA. Later contact with Ray through Payton, uncovered real interest by Ray in Fisk Institute. He now plans to attend.

Charlotte, N. C.: Lunch with Harry Jones. Discussed his contacts with labor; TWUA has contributed $100.00 to the NCHR. We discussed further contributions from TWUA and whether a larger sum should be requested, but include either more state organizations or the SRC. Balance this against the fact that TWUA has contributed $500.00 through Ben Segal to the labor program. At the time of EV's first visit to Charlotte (6/13) ten Negro parents had agreed to appeal the assignment of their children to previously all-Negro schools and to request assignment to previously all-white schools. Harry thought that the number making such appeals would run to about 30. Since that time, some 41 appeals have been filed. There is a "Parents Committee" in Charlotte which has been responsible for securing the Negro applicants. Harry is in contact with this group but was a bit vague as to its exact name and ties. Harry reports that there is a local Chapel Hill group called The Fellowship for School Integration which has ties with NCHR. Some 200 persons are on its mailing list and about 60 attend meetings.

High Point: Long talk with Tartt Bell. He felt Greensboro school integration was in fairly good shape. He was pleased with the six applicants challenging assignment as representative of good test cases. Each case is different. He feels that the school board is generally receptive, although there was one recent set-back. Chapel Hill has a problem in that there are no applications. Tartt says that about half of the state school boards don't realize that it takes "enabling legislation" by the school board to get school assignments made. A number of school boards, of course, have not as yet made any assignments. The Durham situation was described by Tartt as being muddled. In most of the situations there is the attempt, which is successful, to put the onus of any desegregation move onto the Negro parents.

Talked with Henry Catchings and later, in Charlotte, with Mayes Behrman. They and Tartt Bell agree that it might be a good idea to get them, Via, and Herb Hill together to discuss mutual help in handling job opportunities problems. This is especially as related to the Government Contracts Provisions.

Talked with Floyd Butler, Vice-President of the Furniture Workers International Union, 509½ South Main Street, High Point, North Carolina. Kenneth Friedman may also be reached at this address. He is an international rep. Butler gave the name of Walter Case, Representative for Furniture Workers, 923½ Garrison Avenue, Fort Smith, Arkansas. Butler recommends. Is this the man that Nat Griswold was in touch with?

Check Sumter strike report by Jim McCain of SCHR. Butler reports that Jack Elliott, in charge of that strike, was "looney." Evidently this was an unapproved strike action.

Butler services a local in Bryson City, which unlike most Furniture locals is all white. This is a fairly bad group on the race issue. However, Butler feels that he and other staff men would have sufficient influence in this organization to keep the group neutralized in the event of community moves for school integration.

Washington, D.C.: Saw Ben Segal; talked at length, primarily about Fisk Institute problems and about some future programming and financing of the labor operation. Jim Wolfe of the Brewery Workers indicated to Ben by phone that he was responding to Via's letter by recommending that the Southern staff of the Brewery Workers affiliate with the appropriate state organization affiliated with SRC and that he was preparing to recommend a contribution to SRC and that he and possibly two others would attend the Fisk Institute.

Via attended some sessions of the IUD conference, where he got to see the following persons to discuss some aspects of SRC's labor program: Ray Warrick, USA; John Addleman, Wes Cook, Ben Wilde (legal), all of TWUA; Butch Hathaway, UPWA; Jules Pagano, Bill Smallwood of the CWA.

Suggestions were made to the TWUA guys to write up an incident in the Fieldcrest Mills involving the use of preachers to pray for the union to lose an election and to see that this write-up was available to the participants in the Methodist labor-religion-management conference at Lake Junaluska.

EV also talked with Vic Reuther, Jack Barbash, Henry Wilson, Ken Peterson.

Charlottesville, Virginia: General economic conditions in Charlottesville seem to be quite good. Employment is high. New industry is coming into the area. This is "new type" industry and generally offers a higher pay scale. Also, some of the surrounding area has had an influx of new industry. In Charlottesville itself there is a United States instrument plant and a Sperry-Rand plant; both of these are relatively new. In Waynesboro, there is a G.E. plant employing some 1,000 persons and in Stanton a Westinghouse plant employing about 1,000 persons. The Charlottesville wollen mill continues to ~~op~~ operate; there is a union in this plant. The ~~A~~ Ix Mills is evidently operating on more than 1 shift. This is a textile plant and has no union. There is a small ILGWU shop in Charlottesville also. In all probability the Sperry-Piedmont (Sperry-Rand), U.S. Instruments, and even the Textile mills would be subject to government contracts provisions on hiring. There is no indication that any of these places are now hiring Negroes in other than service capacities. However, a store listed by Patty B. as a "Jewish store of second-class standing" has had a Negro clerk for some years. Either Levy or the Style Shop has had a Negro clerk for a while but she is called a maid and is not given a title of respect. The University Cafeteria has Negro and white employees and also accepts Negro diners. The University Hospital is integrated for nurses; there is one Negro doctor and though patients are kept in separate wards, Negroes may get private rooms anywhere in the hospital. Mayes Behrman made a trip into Charlottesville following the inter-agency meeting there. His chief contact was Eugene Williams (phone: 2-2271). He is a Negro business man and knows the situation re business and employment. He was most ~~[illegible]~~ enthusiastic to have had Mayes' visit and information on how to proceed in terms of government contracts. Mayes and Patty B. feel that a follow-up can be made and that it would be helpful to take steps in getting employment on merit in some of the plants and shops in Charlottesville. There is a feeling that such moves perhaps should not be made by the NAACP, since they are so strongly identified with the current moves in school desegregation and the Charlottesville court case.

Churches: The more liberal churches and ministers are in the University end of the town. The Charlottesville Minister's Association did "endorse" the Richmond Ministers statement; a small note to this effect appeared in the local paper, the Herald Progress. Jack Taylor was pastor of the Hinton Avenue Methodist Church. He has the reputation of being the most liberal Methodist minister in town and his church has been the scene for some inter-racial meetings and meals. This church is much more of a "worker's church" than any of the other Methodist churches. Taylor worked quietly but soundly and has built church membership from 700 to 1100 in the time that he has been there; he is evidentally well respected by his own membership and in the community. It may be that he will be transferred to another church in town in June of 1957 following the Virginia Methodist Annual Conference.

John Hendricks is pastor of the First Church, Methodist, one of Charlottesville's largest churches. He is rated as the most conservative of the Methodist ministers and his own church has severe splits in it over racial issues. Warner Crumm, minister of the Wesley Memorial Methodist Church, is a past school-mate of EV's. Patty thinks that he is the most conservative ~~in~~ minister in the University end of town. But he is rated as the "middle man" of the three Methodist ministers in town. Crumm is well liked but may not carry a great deal of weight in the community. His is the smallest and youngest church and he is the youngest of the ministers.

One Baptist minister in Bellmont who has taken a good stand on racial issues has since backed off, according to Patty. Patty referred to Louise Eggleston as being used as a special speaker by Hinton Avenue Methodist Church. EV should check this name with Mrs. Tilly and others.

Since the inter-agency meeting in Charlottesville, the local rabbi has not only become friendly to the Charlottesville Council, but has also joined it.

Patty feels that the church women are a little more conservative; they are an inter-racial group, however. This is one group to which "moderates" who do not feel comfortable in the Charlottesville Council belong and from which they get some feeling of participating in the cause of decency. Patty felt that it would be an excellent idea for Mrs. Tilly to visit the Charlottesville churchwomen's group; interviews and conferences with them would be most helpful. A vice-president of this group is a strong advocate of integration.

Pro-segregation Groups: The KKK is not active and is practically unknown in Charlottesville to the persons to whom Via talked. KKK-type activities such as cross burnings are attributed to the local WCC group. The WCC is thought not to be too strong nor to have much influence. In the past it has been visited some three times by Kasper and also visited by Seymore Gravvits. Their meetings have usually not attracted too many persons; a large portion of each meeting has been made up of observers.

The following names were given to EV as members of either of the WCC or of the decenders: Robert Harmon, President of the Southern Welding Company which employs some two to three hundred people and who is the Republican Chairman; J. Taylus Mickie (this is not the person on the school board); E. J. Oglesby (defender); T. K. Mahon from Southern Welding Company; Fred Liadie (?), engineer at Southern Welding. A number of these persons and others interested in pro-segregation groups live in Meadowbrooks Heights. Some of them represent the near "lunatic fringe" and have in the past supported McCarthy and fought flouridation. They were politicly strong enough to get the proposals for water flouridation defeated.

Oglesby is Chairman of the Math department at the Engineering School at the University of Virginia. He has become politicly active in the last five years or so. He is influential and gets a good press. He's a member of the county school board and seems to be the controlling factor there. He was a delegate to the special constitutional convention following the Gray referendum. He works behind the scenes with state legislators and has a close working relation with Senator E. O. McCue. He is given a great deal of credit for securing for the University an atomic reactor; this was no small achievement and important to the University and general community. Two other names mentioned in connection with pro-segregation groups: Dave Turner of the Central Electric Company; he is one of the owners. Horace Daniel who may also be employed at Southern Welding.

Wilson ~~Gee~~ Gee, an older man now sick, a rural sociologist and director of the Sociological Research Committee (?) at the University of Virginia is a rabid segregationist. He is a member of Warner Crumm's church and was important in the formation of that church.

There is a rumor, presumably direct word from a teacher who had been talking with an un-named official in the school system, that there were plans afoot to resist any move toward integration. Seemingly this meant that there would still be resistance even if school assignment fails. This last year all of the school children were given an IQ ~~test~~ test; this was an unusual move since only certain grades are usually tested. It is thought that this data may be used in the segregation fight.

The Southern Welding Company, besides sponsoring Fulton Lewis, Jr., has had its foreman passing out pro-segregation petitions to workers and sponsors several spot advertisements each day on the wrong side of racial issues.

Pro-integration groups and other sources of help. The outstanding group favoring integration, of course, is the Charlottesville Council on Human Relations. But from several sources, and this seems to include Patty herself, the Council is rated as being a little too much in a box - they are known as the far out group, and seemingly have little appeal to a great number of persons in the middle who would still like to behave decently. Patty feels that the membership of the Council could be increased to about 600 but does not think that this would serve any useful purpose; however, a new person in town with organizing skills is about ready to begin work as membership chairman.

In the main, the staff at the University would accept integration and a number of them would work for it - this is in terms of public school integration.

The Herald-Progress, the community newspaper, is actively seeking a solution to the problem; it is not pro-integration per se, but does give objective reporting and the editorial writer, Babcock, though a moderate, is looking for a long-run solution (this judgment is from Ginniny).

The ministers, if they acted as a group, are judged to be fairly effective in the Charlottesville community on this issue.

Gianniny also indicated that some of the people coming in to town to take jobs with the Sperry Corporation have an active community interest, judged from their participation in the PTA and churches. He feels that these people also will go along with and maybe work for integration in the community. EV takes it that these are primarily professionals.

Stanley Goodman, Chairman of the School Board, is rated as a pretty good guy even though his stand on integration is not known. John G. Wall, also on the school board, is the lay leader of the Wesley Memorial Methodist Church. Gianniny thinks he is a good guy and has talked with him on several occasions about problems of school integration. At least one other member of the school board is known as a liberal and who favors integration of the schools.

The League of Women Voters is inter-racial and at the time that they adopted an inter-racial policy they went out and actively sought Negro members; its leadership is active and urges the support of the Supreme Court decision and have had programs along these lines.

Jean Brunch (?), wife of the newspaper's City Editor, is a strong pro-integrationist and her husband shares at least some of her views.

Gianniny was impressed with William Faulkner's stay at the University as a visiting lecturer. He feels that many people really were reached by him. It is Gianniny's understanding that Faulkner has been invited back for another stint.

The University of Virginia: the University now has undergraduate Negro students. There have been no incidents. One Negro did try unsuccessfully for the football team, but presumably was legitimately disqualified on the basis of his academic record. Gianniny reports that the first group of Negro students did have a tough time academically, but as far as he had been able to determine, got fair academic treatment. The University turned down an invitation from Life to be the center of a big feature article on how a Southern university handled integration.

There are Negro students in the Engineering School. Two men connected with this school are judged by Gianniny as solid and persons who could act as consultants to other schools or departments which were interested in integrating. These men are Lawrence R. Quarrels, the Dean of the Engineering School; he is also a strong Baptist churchman. He's open and willing to talk about the kinds of plans and problems that they have had. Joe Vaughan, of the Engineering School, is also Provost for the University itself. He is a strong Presbyterian lay-man. Gianniny feels that Vaughan often is a spokesman for Darden himself.

An added note on the pro-segregation groups. The PTA at McIntyre Public School has been "captured" by the WCC (possibly Defenders) group. This PTA has now withdrawn from the national organization; the withdrawal was secured by a one-vote margin. There was a conscious move on this group which included utilizing loose membership rules to sign up a number of new members for the one crucial meeting. Since that time the by-laws have been changed, but by the pro-segregation group which got into power. Gianniny has a son in this school and has been an active participant in PTA affairs. There is a vice-president of this PTA group who is accepted by the leadership because her views are not known. She is reportedly a decent sort who is not a rabid segregationist at all and has been reporting some of the things that have transpired to persons interested in finding a solution to the school problems.

The general reaction that EV got from Warner Crumm, Gianniny, Patty Boyle, was that things were at a stalemate, that the schools and the community were caught in the cross-fire between a Federal Court ruling to integrate and the State Government's legislation which forbids integration. There is little hope on any side that any movement will take place this fall. Patty feels that her group is somewhat neutralized. All feel that the middle of the road group in the community has not yet been reached. On the whole, the situation seems to be quiet with the bulk of the community being quite apathetic.

Continuation of Report of Via's Trip to South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, and Washington.

In Richmond, Virginia, EV saw Jack Marion and talked with him about labor contacts in the state of Virginia, about some possibilities of fund raising with union groups there, and about the situation in Charlottesville. Marion and Via went over to the headquarters of the merged state labor body. They met and talked with Harold Boyd, President of the state AFL-CIO, Julian Carper, Vice-President of the merged body, and with T. D. du Cuennois, who is on the regional staff of the AFL-CIO. We also met and talked with Brewster Snow, who is the newly elected Secretary-Treasurer of the merged body. He is from Lynchburg and formerly was a business agent of the IBEW.

Carper commented on the fact that the AFL Meatcutters had merged a white and Negro local, and that on the whole better relations have ensued. The Virginia state labor body as recently as November, 1956, held a mixed banquet as part of their convention at the Roanoke Hotel. The Tobacco locals are still separate, although there is some job integration.

There was some concern over the CWA, both in terms of race relations and in terms of their participation in the state labor body. Although the leadership and staff seems to hold up pretty well, there is little cooperation from the locals; in fact, there is no CWA local affiliated with the state AFL-CIO. Some of the IBEW seems to be pretty good, except there is a kind of BE bloc in the utilities and phone companies.

Marion asked about the situation in UAW in Norfolk; the off-hand report was that there was little racial difficulty there with an explanation that the president of the Norfolk Industrial Union Council was a UAW man and that there were many Negro members participating actively in that body. However, Marion has had different reports from Earl Henderson and from a Negro organizer assigned to that area. Evidently there are no Negroes in the UAW plant but the state AFL-CIO officers seem to accept that this was because of management policy.

The state officers seem to feel, though reluctant to comment on organizing activities, that almost every organizing campaign had some leaflet or other mode for raising racial issues by management. However, du Cuennois did not agree with this statement and felt that they had almost no effect from ~~the~~ racial issues on organizing campaigns.

Du Cuennois, in talking about Charlottesville, indicated that the Sperry Plant had an organizing drive by the UAW which was not making much progress. The bus lines there are evidently organized by the IBEW. There is a small shirt factory employing about 60 people organized by the ILGWU; this local may pull out of the state council and it has come out with a resolution or petition against school integration. This local is under the Baltimore regional office of the ILGWU. The Woodworkers will soon have an election at the American Pencil Plant in Charlottesville. And the UTWA has the Charlottesville Wollen Mills organized; this unit evidently is handled through the Danville Joint Board.

An officer, possibly President, of the Negro Tobacco Workers in Richmond is George Benjamin, who lives at 1520 North 30th Street, and his phone is 8-61395. His office address is 1212 North 26th Street and the phone there is 2-0553. Jack Marion has seen and talked with Benjamin and once in the past has approached the prospects of a contribution to the Virginia Council.

Greensboro, N. C.: Talked with Wayne Gray, International Rep for the CWA. He is primarily in charge of the various Western Electric operations in this area. He reports that the process of job integration is continuing at a good pace. He indicates that the employment of Negroes at this point amounts to about 10%. This is as contrasted to a 5% report given EV in November of 1956. On the whole, whites are accepting Negroes in all jobs where they have been placed. There have now been cases, at least one, where a Negro has bumped a white from his job. The local president did spend a good bit of time helping the white guy understand the seniority provisions in this regard; the man affected did tell Gray about the incident and seemed to indicate that he was reconciled. In another case, one of the CWA Beauty Queens for one of their annual contests bumped a Negro; now she wants (the Queen) a different job - the local president feels the reason for wanting another job is her feeling that she is now doing a Negro's work.

Gray indicates that he is keeping a lively contact with the seniority provisions enforcement and especially with an eye to possible discrimination because of race. Certainly he was familiar with the different departments and classifications involved and seemed to have a familiarity with many of the specific situations; it seems that he is keeping close tabs on this situation. He feels that perhaps the company has not given Negroes an opportunity to move in all job classifications and he now says that he is keeping a close look at the placement list and job bid list.

One of the chief superintendents whom Gray feels is fair and honest, though strongly anti-union, has made some approach to the union attempting to secure help for hiring white people. He indicates there is no problem in terms of up-grading or transferring of Negroes but that he or the company has some concern that it not become an all Negro operation. However, the company still has not supplied the union with all the data on hiring which it has requested which would aid it in making some evaluation of the situation.

An interesting side-light is that the Winston-Salem plant has now hired some white janitors. There has been some discrimination by supervisors in disqualifying Negroes; top management has indicated that it is aware of this situation and is taking steps to prevent it. Gray feels that the union stewards are now really going to bat on handling discrimination grievances.

Gray did report on the incident picked up by Via earlier about an all-Negro picket line on the strike last fall (early). He says that this did happen but as far as he can tell, it was a matter of choice and resulted from the situation in which a steward was responsible for manning the gate and in this case it was a Negro steward's responsibility to man the gate and he soon had secured all Negro pickets.

Negroes have recently been added to the clerical force at Western Electric but these people are not included in the bargaining unit. The personnel manager has pointed out these Negroes employees, evidently with some pride, to Gray.

Talked with Jackson Curry, of the Hosiery Workers. Curry reports that the race issue arises only in organizing campaigns, but in his locals he has only about a half dozen Negroes. He feels that the Greensboro situation will be fairly quiet in the event of school desegregation. In Durham, he would feel that there would be some agitation in the event of school integration moves. He has two locals there and his observations of the labor movement in Durham is that the splits and bitterness caused at the time that the racial issue led to a political break and the formation of DUPEC, has continued and still provides a basis for further trouble. Although there are white leaders who are concerned about this situation, it is difficult for them to keep their members in line. He reported that in the Gainesville, Georgia, organizing situation the race issue was not being raised. In Shannadoa, Virginia, there is an increased workload problem and and a Gainesville plant did strike for a while in support of the Shannadoa group. Curry said to look up Adolph "Ace" Benett in Chattanooga. The address is 611 Palmetto Street. He has recently been elected First Vice-President of the Hosiery Workers and will take over not only his current district but the one which Curry now has. Curry will, in a matter of a few weeks, return to the Pennsylvania area.

Talked with Julius Fry and Scott Hoyman in Greensboro. They suggested Dave Terry, from Old Hickory, Tennessee, as a person to be interested in the Fisk Institute. These two men do not expect much upset from potential school desegregation, unless the "mill" schools themselves were to be affected. There was no stir from the move to bus integration. They do feel, however, that Textile Workers and other rank and file workers would supply the bulk of the reaction to any move for desegregation.

They indicated that in the Leakesville Tri-County Joint Board, TWUA, there was some racial bitterness.

It was interesting that these two suggested a regional staff meeting at which race relations problems were discussed. This represents a shift from a position of each man follow his own light to one where the more positive thinking men are ready to sit down and to discuss, if not convince, with their colleagues about race relations problems.

One of the leaders of the pro-segregation groups is Stark Dillard, of the Dillard Paper Company. There is no union at this plant; Fry thinks that he also served on the state Right-to-Work Committee. A man by the name of Gwynn is an auditor from Leakesville; he dabbled with the TWUA membership there. Dillard himself is notoriously anti-union.

In Durham, N.C., Fry and Hoyman report that in the elections there ~~of~~ the three TWUA locals voted against the labor candidate; however, the labor-backed candidate was not necessarily a too strong one. The locals there are not even affiliated with the state council.

Interview with Mayes Behrman: Mayes is interested in an interagency informal meeting on job opportunities. EV should check Behrman's report to SRC on his trip to Charlottesville. This report has not been acknowledged as received by SRC.

Interview with Boyd Payton/ at Textile Workers Union Office. Met Ed Stone who has done publicity work for TWUA. Met and talked with Bruce Davis, a staff rep.

Boyd called "Red" Lisk, ~~[illegible]~~ Doug Bartchfield (?), Dave Terry, Wayne Durningcourt, Ray Berthiaume, regarding the Fisk Institute. Presumably "Red" and Ray will attend for the full week; Boyd and Wayne Durningcourt may attend the last half of the week, with some possibility that Doug Bartchfield and Dave Terry will also be able to attend.

On the suggestion of a regional staff conference just for TWUA, Boyd made this counter-proposal - that we pull together the some 15 people working on the Cannon drive and take two days to discuss the problems of race relations in an organizing drive. This program could be set up at any time that Via wants. Boyd would prefer separating this kind of effort from a meeting with the local union administrators. EV agreed that he would begin work on the Cannon project sometime after the Fisk Institute. His proposal was that he come into the area, ~~xxxxxxxxx~~ talk with the organizers, and get a general feel of the situation before setting up a conference program.

Some of the men on this organizing drive are the following: Paul Fossett from Gaffney, S. C., who seems to think that desegregation is inevitable but is worried about it; Wade Lynch, from Fort Mill, S.C., who is characterized as saying that he doesn't know much about "niggers" but that perhaps they ought to have equal rights; Jimmy Renthro, from Columbus, Georgia, has had "broadening" experiences in the service, was married to a Maine girl, now divorced - has participated in numerous education institutes and is an admirer of Scott Hoyman; Ed Stone, ex-CIO, sophisticated on race, publishes the "Cannon ~~United~~ Uniter"; Robert McVeigh (?), Ex-regional Director for CIO in Louisiana (?) - do not know stand on race.

Talked with Bob Graham in Carey Haigler's office, also with Carey Haigler. Graham would like to see for preview purposes a copy of the GSM film. Bob has an active interest in border Southern problems, in race relations, and as to how these problems interact with the labor movement.

Graham is ~~o~~ somewhat concerned about Charlotte in the eventuality of school integration - he feels that the situation could explode there. He feels that the Sons of American~~s~~ Patriots have gotten some new support; some from the teachers and from the building trades. However, he does feel that Henderson, with the local IBEW, is a steady person in the building trades set-up. The Charlotte Council on Human Relations was characterized as a good influence but not really out-front. He felt that the NAACP, through Kelly Alexander, tends to go to extremes and that it hurts the situation there. Carey Haigler recalled the time when he had been forced to go along with the endorsement of Bull Conners in Birmingham. Although in an earlier period ~~[illegible]~~ Conners had been helpful in organizing situations, he later gave them serious trouble. Carey Haigler reported that there was some resentment on bus desegregation because Negroes occupied seats singly. There was no particular stir over integration of ~~[illegible]~~ library facilities, but few Negroes now take advantage of the previously all-white facilities. He does not feel that the school board will fight very hard to preserve segregation. Most of the resentment to desegregation will be from union members or other workers; however, he does not feel that the locals themselves will be agitated very much, just some individuals.

Haigler feels that the Charlotte police chief does a good job of keeping up with the hate groups and keeping them in line; however, this same chief has a bad reputation regarding unions. Haigler does feel that the KKK is growing, although the Patriots and WCC are going slowly. Some of his own kin who have been affiliated with the WCC are not only close-mouthed but losing interest.

The attempt to organize union organizers into a group called the FRF (EV assumes this is Field Representatives Federation) has had a good bit of its impetus in the South. This move has met with strong opposition from the national AFL-CIO. Both Boyd Payton and Carey Haigler feel as if the methods used by the national have been poor and contributed to an even greater desire for organization. Haigler cites the case that all but two of his staffers were participating in this move when a visit was made by Franz Daniels into the area; after Franz departed the other two members joined in with FRF. Haigler and Payton both completely poo-pooed the idea that there was any race angle whatsoever in this organizational attempt.

Bob Graham is interested in getting any information on County and Municipal licensing for union organizers. Whatever experience that ~~[illegible]~~ Kehrer has on this point would be of interest to him.

Carey Haigler recommends Henry White, on Paul Christopher's staff, as a Negro organizer of some real competence.

Some Economic Aspects of Virginia's Current Educational Crisis

Lorin A. Thompson
Charlottesville, Virginia

There is increasing concern in Virginia about the future of its public school system. This stems from the controversies centering around the federal court orders to Charlottesville, Norfolk, and Warren County to desegregate their schools. As of today the six white junior and senior public high schools in the city of Norfolk, Lane High and Venable Elementary schools in Charlottesville, and Warren County High School have been closed by the Governor under the massive resistance legislation. Tempers are running short and the attention of people is being focused on the question of whether public education in Virginia should be abandoned or continued. This discussion is not concerned with the merits of desegregation or segregation, but rather with some of the economic consequences of abandoning and liquidating the present system of public education in Virginia.

A few facts taken from the annual reports of the Superintendent of Public Instruction and other state reports show the magnitude of the problem in quantitative terms. First of all, the total value of all school property in Virginia in 1957 was reported to be $576 million. Of this amount, $524 million represented sites and buildings, $42 million represented furniture and equipment, and just under $10 million represented school buses. These values do not represent replacement value but book value. The total net debt owed by the city and county school boards of Virginia is in excess of $200 million and total expenditures for public education in Virginia from state, federal, and local sources for the fiscal year 1956-57 amounted to $197,451,000. This in truth is big business representing a very substantial investment in buildings and properties, a sizeable indebtedness, and current annual expenditures of more than $200 million.

The public school system of Virginia has been a joint financial venture between the state and the locality. In the main the responsibility for furnishing sites, buildings, equipment and supplies has been that of the local government. Funds for operation and maintenance--the largest item of which is instructional cost--has been shared by the state and the locality. The state's participation in this sharing has been directed toward establishing a minimum educational program throughout the state which communities could expand or improve with their own resources. The amount of state aid is related to the financial ability of the community to finance education. Most Virginia counties could not finance their educational programs on the current basis without state aid. For the counties as a group in 1956-57 about 47 per cent of the maintenance and operating funds are in the form of state grants. Among individual counties the corresponding extremes were from 16 per cent in Arlington to 73 per cent in Buchanan.

In the year 1956-57 the total average daily attendance in the public schools of Virginia was 692,978. In 1950 the corresponding figure was 536,831

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

The average daily attendance in 1957 was approximately 25,000 larger than in 1956 and the prospects are that the total number of children wishing to attend elementary and high schools in Virginia will increase by about 22,000 per year so that by 1964 and 1965 the average daily attendance will be in the neighborhood of 850,000. Total school enrollment will be about 935,000. One of the unfortunate aspects of the present controversy over public education is that the number of children of school age keeps increasing while the facilities to accommodate such an increase are becoming more difficult to provide.

Proposals to abandon the system of public schools in Virginia need to be examined most carefully. As just pointed out, the number of children of elementary and high school age will continue to increase each year for many years to come. Before public schools could be abandoned as a state policy, Section 129 of the State Constitution which says that the state will operate and maintain an efficient system of public free schools, would need to be amended to read somewhat as follows: "the state and each of its political subdivisions acknowledge no responsibility for providing any funds for the education of children in Virginia and are hereby prohibited from appropriating any public funds for such a purpose." If this were done the full responsibility of educating children would fall on the parents and private schools.

Such an amendment would further require the liquidation of all properties and equipment now used for public education. It is sheer speculation as to what proportion of the value each community might recover from the sale of its surplus school building sites, furniture, and equipment. One thing is certain, the bond holders would have in excess of $200 million owed them and would require immediate settlement. Whether any proceeds would be left after the bond holders were paid off would be uncertain. In the event the proceeds from the sale were less than the outstanding indebtedness, the local governments would have to increase taxes to make up any deficit. School bonds are full faith and credit obligations of the locality. If school buildings were sold to private school groups the financial underwriting necessary for the acquisition of property now valued at approximately $600 million would be a most substantial undertaking. Long established private schools have not found it easy to borrow money for new facilities. The liquidation of the public school system would result in the public giving away a substantial part of the investment it has made over many years for public school facilities.

If the public school system were abandoned and liquidated, teachers and administrators dedicated to the tasks of teaching and training our children and youth would be confronted with a most serious dilemma. Some would accept positions in private schools and others would seek employment in the public school systems of other states or change their occupation. The comparatively rapid population growth in the United States and the general shortage of trained and qualified teachers would soon syphon off a substantial portion of the public school teachers in Virginia. The results of such a blow to public education would take many years to repair. The alternative of substituting private for public education may have a heroic appeal, but upon sober reflection scarcely seems prudent.

The abandonment of public education and the consequent liquidation of public school properties would decrease the need for state and local taxation. The resulting decreases in taxes for families with children in most instances would not be substantial enough to permit the great majority of families to send their children to private schools. The taxes paid by individuals during the period which the children are in school rarely cover the cost of education. However, people pay taxes throughout their working life so that over a lifetime most families will pay the full cost of the education of their children. Single individuals and businesses likewise pay taxes which provide support to public schools both at the state and local level.

When one contemplates the consequences of abandoning public education it is quite clear that a complete revision and revamping of state and local tax policies and revenue structures would be required. At the present time even minor adjustments to tax and revenue policies are painful. Such a revolutionary change might be destructive of local government in Virginia as we now know it because such a course of action would require prompt and extensive changes in the respective functions of state and local government as well as the ways and means of financing the activities of each level of government. Underlying these proposals for the abandonment of public education is a philosophy that education primarily benefits the person receiving it and it is therefore appropriate for the parents of the children being educated to bear the full cost of providing this education during the time the children are in school. Such a theory, however, does not recognize the fact that the investment made in children by parents, the community, and other social agencies contributes immediately to the benefit of those who employ them and to the locality as a whole in all of its activities. If children have been poorly trained, the employer is obliged to provide facilities to remedy educational deficiencies along with the indispensable training required in breaking in workers for various jobs and positions. The benefits or the deficiencies of education thus become widely diffused throughout the entire social fabric.

What would the long term effects of such a policy be on the Commonwealth of Virginia? First of all, it would find itself in a very unique position in that it would assume no obligation for the education of its children where other states in the nation have systems of public free education, most of which over the years have been better and more adequately financed than the public school system of Virginia. The higher cost of private schooling would unquestionably have the effect of encouraging families who now work in manufacturing plants, business concerns, and professional services in Virginia to move to other states which offer attractive facilities for the public education of their children. All business and industry, if it wished to retain present employees would find it necessary to increase wages and salaries to a point high enough to cover a substantial part of the costs of families sending their children to private schools. While it is quite probable that if public education were abandoned, business taxes would be decreased, it is unlikely that they would be decreased enough to offset the increased wage and salary costs of their employees for the support of private education. Even if such a venture were ultimately successful, there is little doubt that for a decade or more efforts to promote and stimulate economic development would be relatively ineffective.

Another matter is the accreditation of schools. If the present public school system were abandoned each new private school would need to be accredited. For full accreditation the new private schools would need to meet the standards prescribed by such organizations as the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and the American Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. At best such a procedure would be long and involved and students graduating from such schools and who plan to go on to college would find themselves at a very distinct disadvantage. This group has been about one-fourth of the youth attaining age 18. A further aspect of this problem is that about three-fourths of all children in Virginia attaining age 18 do not go on to college. Would the private schools over the next decade or so be able to provide the type of secondary education which would prepare these students to assume a proper place in our society? Such developments have been very difficult undertakings for the public schools and they would be no less so for the private schools.

If we consider the relationship of education to the society in which we live we find that few people are independent in the sense that they can provide all of the food, fiber, and facilities for their own convenience and comfort. Life in the latter half of the 20th century is highly interdependent The increase in specialized manufacturing and distribution makes it increasingly so. Moreover, people do not grow up and remain in the places in which they were born. One of the freedoms in America is the freedom to seek opportunity wherever it may be found. The growth and expansion of government, business, and industry in Virginia since 1940 has been accompanied by a cessation of net migration from the state; in place of exporting people there has been a net import. This pattern of development has been associated with the expansion of business and commerce and a general improvement in the economic fortunes of the Commonwealth. Progress and development in the future will be arrested if the social, economic and political policies of the state are such as to discourage people from remaining and/or settling in Virginia. If public education were abandoned there is little doubt that many people would be discouraged from remaining in or emigrating into Virginia and the economic progress of the past two decades would be arrested.

Finally, life today calls for a departure from provincialism. All peoples everywhere find that their fortunes are affected by developments in remote parts of the world. Rapid transportation and communication and the increasing exchange of goods and services throughout the nation and the world call for understanding and good will among people. Internal strife and dissension impairs the ability of people to take full advantage of their opportunities.

The foregoing discussion points out some of the major developments that would likely occur if public education were completely abandoned. The readjustments would be very extensive and would require a great deal of painstaking investigation to determine their full effect. In a real sense abandoning public education in the 20th century is a revolutionary idea. The alternatives to public education no doubt could be worked out in time but it would be a long and tortuous road fraught with difficulty and uncertainty. This apparently is not fully realized. During the present crisis occasioned by the desegregation orders of the federal courts and by other criticisms of our school system confusion and uncertainty abound. Proposals to abandon public schools because of operating difficulties is clearly confusing means (administrative procedures involved in operating public schools) with ends (public education).

It would appear that the foremost question before the people of Virginia today is whether or not they believe in public education and will support it. Abandonment or weakening of public education over a period of five to ten years would undermine the present economic strength of the state. The effects of this weakening process would be cumulative. The damaging effects of the present dislocation will be more apparent one, two, or five years hence. Reference has already been made to the fact that Virginia's economic growth during the past two decades has reversed the former pattern of net out-migration of people from Virginia to one of net in-migration. Such migrants have built plants and facilities, established businesses, and brought in skilled workers who were not available among the native population. This has been the basis of the relative prosperity and growth during the past two decades.

An increasing number of the new industries in Virginia are having difficulties in bringing into their plants the highly trained personnel needed to guide production and distribution programs. Some skilled workers in these new plants and industries have already left because they regarded the education of their children to be of paramount importance. They have returned to places where the situation is more dependable and stable than in Virginia. As more schools become subject to federal court orders to desegregate, more and more communities in Virginia will be affected by this kind of situation. If one is inclined to doubt this fact he might ask himself this question: If I were interested in establishing a new business or a branch plant would I consider locating such a plant in an area in which the provision for educating children of workers is in a state of confusion and turmoil, or which did not provide advantages for young people comparable to those of other areas? Of the many new plants which have established themselves in Virginia within the last ten years, how many would give serious thought to closing their operations in this state if these difficulties increased? Any environment which is unstable and in which public education is threatened is not conducive to business development or expansion.

REPORT OF A VISIT TO CHARLOTTESVILLE, VIRGINIA

by Bonita H. Valien

Four months of closed public schools have had considerable impact on the Charlottesville community. A community which bragged a few months earlier that Virginia will not have violence is now saying rather hopelessly, "We could have another Little Rock." The Governor's speech following the court's (January 19) ruling was considered by most officials and community leaders as "an invitation to violence." Said one of the community's respected leaders, "Let's face it, the people of Virginia haven't owned their souls for a long time. With the Byrd machine, totalitarianism is as complete in Virginia as it could operate under any totalitarian government, and if John Battle, Jr. comes out in support of the recent court ruling, you can say that is the most courageous act that has taken place in Virginia in the last fifty years." This was Col. Francis Pickens Miller speaking, but not for publication. His optimism of last summer had been replaced with a cautiousness bordering on pessimism, except that he was beginning to "see a breakthrough" -- a significant one -- being led by the leading business men of the city.

There is no question that Charlottesville's economic structure is being seriously impaired as a result of the public school situation. Business men say that business is at the "lowest possible ebb." The loss of human resources is also being lamented. It is generally agreed that the more promising students from the better educated families have been sent out of the community in order that they may continue their schooling. It is believed that these youth will never return to the community. One woman, a prominent Virginian said, tearfully, "It hurts you when you love a place; all my family was born here, our roots are in Virginia, and yet our children whom we have had to send away so that they could complete their education tell us that they are ashamed to let any of their classmates know they are from Virginia. This is awful; I hate to think what the future of Virginia will be like if this continues."

In September, 1958, bevause Negro students were assigned to them, 2 white schools -- Venable Elementary and Lane High did not open and have remained closed. Students go to class in private homes with the exception of those attending the Charlottesville Education Foundation's Robert E. Lee School. The emergency school program in Charlottesville for white children is under the sponsorship of the Parent's Committee for Emergency Schooling (conducting schools for Venable pupils), the Joint High School Committee (which is conducting the high school program), Charlottesville Education Foundation (for "displaced Venable pupils who can't get education acceptable to them from the public schools"). The 12 Negro children are being tutored. (A detailed summary of the program as it is presenting operating is given at the end of this report).

REACTIONS TO THE COURT'S RULING OF JANUARY 19

The School Board and City Council:

Mayor Thomas J. Michie confided and said under no circumstances must he be quoted, that the City Council and School Board had anticipated the decision, and further that both had secretly decided that the schools would open without fanfare. As a matter of fact, it was the opinion of some of the members that the schools would simply open the very next day after the ruling. This, however, seemed impracticable in view of some of the administrative details that would have to be worked out. But this much was clear, the Board was expecting to follow the court's decision and open the schools. However, after the Governor's speech, the Board and council members became a bit more cautious. The City Council and School Board refused to move or even comment on the decision until after they have received an interpretation of the decision by City Attorney John S. Battle, Jr. The School Board authorized him to prepare a formal opinion for its information that would "encompass in general the effect of the decision on the Charlottesville School Board." Battle has said the court's decision in the case did not surprise him, but he was surprised at the language of the opinion. He said he needs time to study it thoroughly, and that he will confer with Gov. Almond before giving the School Board his opinion. He said the Board should have his written opinion by the end of the week. Battle explained that his job is to provide the board with his interpretation of the law and the court's decision. He makes it clear that school policy decisions are up to the School Board. He has said the court's decision raises many questions which need further study. He has pointed out significantly that the Board has no time limit for the discussion of the problem and determining its future action. He says he does not yet know what course of action he will recommend to the board and that he is attempting to "envision all the practical problems" facing the Board.

In favor of compliance:-

The Charlottesville Committee for Public Education met and voted to notify the school Board formally that the two closed schools (Lane and Venable) should be reopened immediately. The uhit's executive committee visited each member of the school board to convey this sentiment. Said its president, J.A. Rolston, "We emphasize the necessity for a rapid return to normal in our school situation. The Committee for Public Education will not be satisfied with anything less than the reopening of Venable and Lane. In commenting on the Governor's speech, Rolston said, "the Governor appears to have lost all sense of objectivity about the future of Virginia. In his emotional speech packed with inuendo, he seems to have set a course toward educational and economic suicide. Will 1965 in Virginia be a return to the 1865 economic chaos?"

The Joint High School Committee and the Parents Committee for Emergency Schooling announced that parents, pupils and teachers were ready to return to Venable School "if the court decision means that the School Board will reopen the schools."

League of Women Voters: Asks School Board to open schools "as soon as practicable." Mrs. T. H. Evans, president, reports the following resolutions of the League: (1) called for the reopening of Lane High School and Venable Elementary School as soon as practicable; (2) declared the League supports public education and (3) declared the League opposed Virginia's massive resistance policy.

A group of Business men (composed of the leading business executives of the city. These business men have drafted a statement in the expectation that the City School Board will decide to reopen the two schools in the light of the January 19 ruling. The statement is designed to appear as a newspaper advertisement. Col. Miller who has been meeting with the group in their secret sessions since December 22, says that the business men in groups of twos have secretly visited each member of the school board asking them to reopen the schools and pledging their support in such a decision. The business men have asked members of the Committee for Public Education, the League of Women Voters, Parents Committee for Emergency Schooling, Joint High School Committee, to sign and circulate the statement among their membership and friends. The petition is being circulated only among white citizens.

IN OPPOSITION TO THE OPENING OF THE SCHOOLS

Immediately following the ruling, petitions signed by 831 Lane High and Venable school parents were presented to City Council asking that the two schools not be reopened during the current school year. Mrs. Cropp, the spokesman for the group said the parents don't want the emergency school programs to be abandoned. If the public schools were reopened and later closed as the result of state legislative action, the students would be left with no school again as they were this fall before the emergency schools were organized.

The Charlottesville Educational Foundation (CEF) is opposed. Its president, D. B. Mitchell says he believes there is a clear need for preservation of the city's emergency school program, at least until we know what legislation will be adopted." He issued the following statement to the press:

> "I gathered from the governor's address last night that the state authorities do not propose at this time to accede willingly to the decision of the federal courts regarding school integration. I believe that one thing is clear, and that is the necessity of attempting to preserve for the sake of our children the emergency school programs now operating in Charlottesville, at least until we know what legislation will be adopted.
> "It is certainly apparent that the need for increased private schooling here in Virginia has not been eliminated and will probably continue for some time. The Charlottesville Educational Foundation was established to fill that need and it will continue to do so as long as the need exists."

THE PRESS:

The Richmond Dispatch which is read in Charlottesville as its morning newspaper is defiant and inflammatory and supports the Governor and Senator Byrd in their strong attitude of resistance. The local paper, The Daily Progress, Charlottesville's own afternoon paper calls for a new approach to the problem created by the ruling. Conceding that the so-called "massive resistance" laws were no cure for Virginia's problems, calls for tuition grants out of funds properly available for the purpose. Says segregation can be maintained by the voluntary choice of all who want it. In general, it concedes there will be some integration.

COMMUNITY MORALE

By and large, it seems that most people in the community expected the court's ruling to strike down the "massive resistance laws", but there seems to be a large part of the population that still believes that something can be done to maintain segregation. Tuition grants seems to them the answer. Since the emergency schooling has operated satisfactorily there is the feeling that these can continue. The mayor, in commenting on this says that these people have not stopped to think that these emergency schools are being run by the teachers and being paid by the city, and that once they are withdrawn (as most assuredly they will be when the public schools are opened) the emergency schools won't be so easy. But there is still hope.

Among the white high school students, most agree that the emergency schooling is better than no schooling at all, but they are finding it most inadequate. The students find four hours of concentration on one subject very difficult. Both the students and teacher of chemistry confided that they found four-hours of chemistry without interruption both dull and difficult. Even the teacher admitted he found it difficult to stay awake, and he wask doing the teaching!

White teachers are indicating dissatisfaction and frustration. The major confided that he had just had a visit from the head of the teachers group who said that unless something was done soon there was grave fear that there would be no teachers available for the teaching of schools under any conditions or at any level next year. She said teachers are "finding the situation unbearable."

Morale in the Negro community continues to be high. However, the two high school students are showing signs of disaatisfaction and boredom. The one student who is in the eleventh grade and was to be graduated this year is the daughter of the NAACP president (Ferguson). Considerable pressure from the white community has been put on her and her parents to send her to the Negro school in the belief that the other Negro students would follow. This the parents have refused to do, and this decision is shared by the daughter. There have been many rumors in circulation, the most persistent being that this girl, as a result of the tension under which she has been living, has had a mental breakdown and has been committed to an institution. The girl reports a few unpleasant experience with members of her own high school classmates at the Negro school when she has attempted to attend some of the social functions at the school. Some of the students have called her names, and said, "so you want to be white; the Negro school wasn't good enough, etc." Her parents are supplementing her education with a planned reading program.

STRATEGY:

Mayor Michie confided that there was considerable concern on the part of some officials in Charlottesville about "sticking out their necks first in opening the schools". Thus, they are secretly exploring the possibility of all three areas presently affected -- Arlington, Norfolk and Charlottesville -- to see if the schools could not open at the same time. Since Arlington is under court order to open on February 2, it is believed it would be good strategy for Charlottesville and Norfolk to open at that time also. This would keep any one area from getting the full impact of the "Defenders." Since Charlottesville doesn't have semesters, they could open their schools at any time during the year.

MINISTERS - Since the ministers could not agree on what, if any kind of statement they should make in support of the recent ruling, they have decided to circulate the petition drawn up by the business men. The inability of the ministers to go on record as a group at this time has come under severe criticism and attack by Rev. Evans who stands almost alone as a minister in the community in his open attack on the segregation issue.

WHAT ARE THE NEEDS AS SEEN BY MEMBERS OF THE COMMUNITY:

Because the climate has been so negative and explosive, concerned community leaders see the need for workshops for students and teachers. Mrs. Evans says that she has concern about what will happen in the high school since all the students whom she knew that had a positive attitude and could have exerted some leadership have withdrawn from the school and gone elsewhere. It is felt that by and large the attitude of teachers is very unhealthy and that they are very much in need of some help.

The mayor is not at all sure what he can expect from his law enforcement group. They have secretly undergone some training, and he feels that he had the support of the state police, but he says now that he is not certain that the Governor may not call them in, as did Faubus, to support his point of view. He thinks this is an area in which some work needs to be done.

It is felt that someone needs to give the ministers of the community a "shot in the arm." They are providing practically no leadership and have almost "surrendered to the mob."

MY OWN IMPRESSION:

There is no question in my mind that the schools in Charlottesville will open, and I believe soon. This opinion is based in large part on the great amount of activity being engendered by the business group. The "economic pinch" is on, and when Senator Byrd's banker, a member of the businessmen's group supporting the opening of the schools says, "Let's face it, Byrd once was an asset, but he is now a liability," something is beginning to happen. And it is this statement said at one of the secret meetings which Pickens Miller attended that gives him the hope that a breakthrough even more significant than the opening of the schools is beginning. But there are clearly other positives. The mayor is solidly behind the court's decision, and he carries considerable weight with both the school board and the city council. There are status groups supporting the mayor and are calling for the reopening of the schools. There is the general recognition (even with Almond) that some integration is inevitable. I believe the opening of the schools is imminent. It seems to me if all three communities are able to open their schools at the same time, the psychological affect on the whole Virginia community will be good and the possibility of violence will be minimized.

The Virginia Council has offered its help in preparing for the transition. The mayor doesn't seem to be freightened of the group and speaks of them with respect. The Council has continued to try to do an educational job in the community. Their meeting with Mr. Dabbs, following the ~~xxxxxxx~~ ruling, was well attended and received good newspaper coverage.

Copies of editorials and other interesting newspaper items are attached.

A SUMMARY OF THE EMERGENCY SCHOOLING PROGRAM IN CHARLOTTESVILLE

WHITE STUDENTS

VENABLE

Approximately 600-610 students were expected at Venable last fall. About 540 of these pupils are enrolled in three programs: 335 attend the classes under the sponsorship of the Parents' Committee for Emergency Schooling; 180 attend the school set up by the Charlottesville Education Foundation; 25 are members of an independent 1st grade class, for which there is no tuition charge. Sixty-seventy former Venable students have made other arrangements to continue their schooling. As far as is known, no child has dropped out of school. The 60-70 students are attending private schools, paying tuition to go to county schools (not McIntire), or are going to school in other communities where they live with relatives.

Students go to class in private homes with the exception of those attending the CEF's, Robert E. Lee School. Classes meet from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. Class size is 15-32.

All of the form r Venable Teachers are involved in the three programs, and are still under contract to the School Board. One teaches the independent first grade. Seven teach at the CEF school, which also employs one more teacher from another source. The Parents' Committee uses 15 of these teachers, including the former Venable Librarian who is now teaching the third grade.

The Band instructor meets his pupils at Venable twice a week in the afternoon. This is the regular amount of time devoted to band in the public schools. All city elementary band pupils go to the weekly night practice. The rotating art instructor for the city schools gives no time to any of the three substitute programs. The physical education instructor spends about 1-1½ hours at the Robert E. Lee School where he acts in the capacity somewhat similar to that of a school secretary. Following that, he tests eyes and ears of pupils in the elementary schools that are open until 2:30 p.m. when he starts the two-hour after-school recreation program for sixth and seventh graders. This program is the same recreation program that was carried on in other years but starts earlier since the children are not in school as long.

The Principal and school secretary cooperate with the teachers in the field. Materials such as books, mape, films and record players, must be checked in and out. Duplicating is done for the teachers. Venable is still the record center for all of these displaced pupils.

The maid is employed as usual. The two janitors are doing work, e.g, painting, that ordinarily would have been done by other workers. Since the Cafeteria is an independent, self-sufficient operation and is not supported by tax funds, cafeteria workers were not retained.

LANE

About 1,083 students were expected at Lane last September. 862 were enrolled in December in the Emergency Schooling run by the Joint High School Committee, composed of representatives from the Parents' Committee for Emergency Schooling and from the Charlottesville Education Foundation. 179 students have indicated attendance at other schools. Former county residents who attended Lane as tuition students are now attending Albemarle High Schools. Other students are attending nearby public high schools on a tuition basis. Some students are attending private schools while othere are attending public schools in other communities where they are living with relatives. Schooling arrangements for 42 students are not known. In a normal school year there is a number of drop-outs among students who go to work, are married or move away.

The Emergency Schooling is held six days a week from 8 P.M. to 1 PM with no lunch hour. However, breaks are given at various times. All the former Lane faculty is being used and paid as usual and no other teachers are employed. Students with an ordinary schedule spend one complete day at home as the equivalent of the regular study periods. Pupils study one subject each day; therefore, the equivalent of a week's work is studied during one day. Pupils who are absent are expected to attend another section of the course, if such a section meets on the student's study day.

The Emergency Schooling is carried on in these churshes: First Baptist (Youth Building), First Methodist, First Presbyterian, Greek Orthodox and University Baptist. Also being used are the Elks Lodge, Fry's Spring Beach Club, Medical Arts Building and the Laboratory facilities of the Institute of Textile Technology.

The Students' Assessment for November and December 2as $2 for each month. This fee may be adjusted to cover expenses. Fees help to cover extra janitorial services, the school's share for utilities in the buildings housing classes, liability and property damage insurance, supplies, equipment and maintenance.

All courses but machine shop and physical education for boys in certain years are offered. Boys in the Tenth Grade receive driver training and safety, while those in the Eleventh grade study first aid. Football and basketball practice have been held. Most of the extra-curricular activities are proceeding about as usual. No dances have been held in the school, but there have been concerts in the auditorium and basketball gamein the gymnasium.

At Lane the maintenance staff of three maids and two janitors is employed in a manner similar to that at Venable. Likewise the cafeteria staff was not retained. The school secretaries are working. The Principal is chairman of the faculty of the Emergency High School Program.

Regular steps for accreditation with the state are to be taken.

THE NEGRO STUDENTS

The twelve Negro students -- 10 elementary and 2 high school are being tutored free of charge by an unemployed teacher, a high school teacher currently employed and an Episcopal minister. Tutoring at the elementary school is considered satisfactory; at the high school level less satisfactory. As a matter of fact, the two high school students (one 9th grade; the other 11th grade) are receiving instruction in English and mathematics only. The principal of Venable school has shown a sympathetic attitude toward the group of elementary school children. He has checked with the Negro group to find out what is being taught. He has been concerned and is cooperative. The principal of Lane High school has not acquired regarding the work of the two Negro students. He is described as a person totally out of sympathy with an integrated school system. His attitude has been of concern to both Negro parents and the more positive, concerned white parents.

Dabbs Says Southern Politicos Unrealistic

The president of the Southern Regional Council criticized Southern politicians last night as "unrealistic" in believing that they can fight successfully against civil rights.

James McBride Dabbs told members of the Human Relations Council that "the Southern fight against equal treatment of Negroes in whatever field is the same kind of out-moded, hopeless fight."

To the modern mind, Dabbs said, "civil rights is a good, not an evil, and to be against it is by definition to be against goodness."

Dabbs is the author of "The Southern Heritage," in which he defends the view that acceptance of racial desegregation is consistant with Southern tradition. The Southern Regional Council is the parent organization of the Virginia Council on Human Relations.

"The Negroes of the South today are demanding," Dabbs said, "what unquestionably they have a legal right to, the simple rights of the American citizen.

He said that Southern white people "would do exactly what the Negroes have done" if "your state either ignored you or insisted you were outsiders."

The Southerner's argument of states rights, he said, is also invalid. "Any man who attempts to build today on the original federal union of Madison and Jefferson" he said, is attempting to build upon a long-vanished dream, and will have only trouble for his efforts."

He said that states' rights became outmoded with the adoption of the 14th and 15th Amendments to the United States Constitution.

He said that if the South wanted to fight centralization of government, "we should hove taken up arms again in '67. Of course, it was too late then; it's 90 years too late now."

In his opinion, Dabbs said, "the segregationist part is a poor one" for Virginia to play. "I see little chance of Virginians so acting and speaking in that part as to command the attention of the future."

The Governor's Oratory

Daily Progress

It is regrettable that Governor Almond, in his address to the people of Virginia last night, saw fit to indulge his penchant for emotion-charged oratory rather than to present a sober analysis of our problem and of ways for solving it.

Heat enough already has been engendered. Indeed, the trouble we are in is attributable in considerable part to the fact that we have been applying heat rather than reason to the task of overcoming the difficulties created by the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision. The lamentable consequence is that we now find that almost everything we have done has been in contravention of our own State Constitution as well as of the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Fourteenth Amendment.

It is time to quit blindly butting our heads against legal walls, state or federal. We cannot afford that kind of self-punishment. Instead we must seek, calmly and with open eyes, the solutions that are available within the framework of the legal system under which we have no practical choice but to live. And let it be added, with emphasis, that we must do so with full regard for the necessity of preserving educational opportunity for our children.

Following 2nd Speech

Your Right to Say It

Calls for Reopening Of Closed Schools

(To the editor:)

The demise of the massive resistance enactments signals a unique opportunity for the City of Charlottesville. I wonder if we are fully aware of our position.

We have in being a private school foundation whose announced determination is the continued operation of segregated classes, even if the schools open on a desegregated basis. So long as it exists, no parent who has violent objections to desegregation need send his child to a desegregated school.

We have a large group of citizens who are demanding that Lane and Venable Schools be reopened and who, presumably, are fully aware that this can only be done if the Negro applicants are admitted.

We have an extremely select group of Negro students prepared to enroll when these schools are opened—a group which successfully met every objective test we could devise and which would be a credit to any school.

We have a mayor who has expressed his determination to keep the peace. Surely he could cope with the few fanatics whose violent objections to desegregation extends to their neighbors' children as well as their own.

In short, we have all the ingredients for a successful beginning of desegregation. If we act now we can "break the chain" and present those state officials who have led us down a blind alley of defiance (and are apparently preparing to do so again) with the thing accomplished.

Let us appeal to our School Board to open these schools immediately, to invite those who are prepared to accept desegregation to attend, and to instruct their attorney to appeal to the federal courts, if that should become necessary, to restrain any further attempts to seize our schools or deny us our rightful share of state school funds.

What Now?

Editors Scan the Future After Monday's Decisions

Here are excerpts from editorials published by a number of Virginia (and one North Carolina) newspapers following Monday's state and federal court decisions invalidating this state's "massive resistance" laws. Others will appear on this page tomorrow.

As this newspaper has frequently said, it would be a tragedy of the worst sort if Virginia abandoned education of its children. It is evident now in the light of the State Supreme Court's decision that the state cannot be divorced from schools as long as Section 129 of the Constitution stands. That cannot be changed except by the will of the people expressed through a referendum or a constitutional convention.

We believe it is in Virginia's interest to keep public schools open where they can be operated and to formulate some other plan of aid for private schooling with restrictions that would meet the requirements of the court. The State tribunal's language seems to indicate that the latter can be done within the limitations of the Constitution. As far as possible, parents should have a choice of whether to send their children to mixed public schools or to private segregated schools. — Roanoke Times.

Where do we go from here? Is nothing left but unconditional surrender to the race-mixers?

As a beginning, let us abandon any talk of surrender. This war is not over!

What the courts held yesterday, and all that they really held, was that so long as Virginia operates a system of public free schools, appropriations for such schools cannot be predicated in any way upon the deliberate preservation of racial segregation.

All right. We have known such opinions were bound to come. The object now must be to minimize the consequences of these rulings and to delay their impact until new defensive steps can be taken. Virginia is not helpless.

This newspaper will take its stand right now on the subject of Section 129: Let it go! (Section 129 is the part of the Constitution of Virginia which makes it mandatory for the General Assembly to "maintain an efficient system of public free schools throughout the State.") — Richmond News Leader.

This is a time for the too-cautious moderates to speak up, not in an I-told-you-so way but in forthright reference to the flimsy laws that have been tossed aside, and to the fact that there has been a better approach from the beginning, one clearly outlined by the Federal courts — and by careful reading of what was involved, and common sense.

The extremist-emotionalists will have a difficult time now, perhaps leading to understanding the realities involved and arriving at a moderation which will bring better, legally acceptable procedures. For, now, everything must be thought through, not demagogically pressured through. —The News, Lynchburg.

Undoubtedly many will greet these decisions by a federal and a native Southern court with renewed resentment. Nobody in the South, however, any longer can confront the situation under any delusions that massive defiance is a legal possibility. This is a situation in law under which we must live if our schools are to be preserved and our children are to have a chance. New anger may serve old emotions. Only a purpose to preserve our schools in the best possible manner under the law will serve the South. — News and Observer, Raleigh, N.C.

Realistically, our present situation seems to be this. As already noted, there may be some token integration in a few public schools in a few localities, perhaps as early as the semester beginning in February. If so, it is a minimum evil which simply must be accepted as such.

Our real problem goes beyond this. Some localities may be willing to accept this token integration. In other localities, however, there will be no such acceptance, and the vast majority of citizens will prefer to abandon their public schools. They should have the right of choice in the matter.

If segregation is not required, the state doubtless has the right to make tuition grants available to families without access to any public schools, or families that prefer to withdraw their children from mixed schools. In each case, such grants will make possible the financial support necessary for an adequate system of private schools.

These are the hard lines along which we now must proceed. It will be the task of the commission to be appointed by the Governor to recommend precise details, and supporting laws, to carry out some program of this type.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

As Virginia Editors See It—

A Place for Darden Urged In Study of School Problem

Virginia's next move will probably be the appointment of a study commission by Governor Almond to recommend new legislative proposals. If a study group is needed, we hope the governor will not limit it to members of the General Assembly. The best brains the state can muster should be brought to bear on the school problem. Men of wisdom and judgment are needed, whether they are legislators or not.

One name that immediately comes to mind in thinking of a study group is that of President Colgate W. Darden Jr. of the University of Virginia. Here is a distinguished Virginian with experience in the executive and legislative branches of government and, more recently, in the field of education. There are others — Virginians who will not let the passions of the moment distort their judgment — whose advice is needed on any study group.

And — lest we shut off communication between the races at a critical time — a study group should provide for representation of Virginia's Negro citizens.

Virginia needs a fair and workable plan of adjustment to court orders for desegregation. To reach a just solution to the problems facing us will require the utmost in wisdom and tolerance—Free Lance-Star, Fredericksburg.

Assuming the attitude of massive resistance, if not the massive resistance laws, is still intact, there is the question of what new approach Virginia can take. To that one there is no ready answer. Presumably the governor in the near future will name the legislative study commission of which he has spoken. There is no further reason for delay, and the sooner such a body can begin its deliberations the better.

In the meantime there is no assurance the problem will assume a dormant shape until new legislation is enacted. Localities in Virginia other than those in which suits have originated may find themselves in the position of being parties rather than spectators.

Yet the right of a locality to close schools or to withdraw funds has not been denied by either state or federal decisions. Moreover, even in the discouraging legal situation which now exists, it is difficult to see how any plausible challenges to the segregation policy could be made in the midst of a school year. But if Virginia is going to erect new defenses for September, 1959, it does not have much time to lose, especially if constitutional amendment must be undertaken.—Progress-Index, Petersburg.

The two decisions in Virginia yesterday—one by the state Supreme Court of Appeals, the other by the three-judge federal court—together form a powerful one-two punch that knocks out of legal existence the legislative devices of the massive resistance program.

The first punch is the decision of the state's highest court, intimately familiar with Virginia's constitutional law and quite aware of all surrounding circumstances. In a special sense this is Virginians speaking to Virginians.

The second punch comes straight out of the United States Supreme Court decisions of 1954, 1955, and 1958. It hits hard, and the sweep of its impact extends far. It has a special significance, for it emerges out of the tragedy and travail of Norfolk's closed schools and their 10,000 punished pupils.

Together the two decisions not only knock down—that is now the first necessity. They also clear away the rubbish. For the rest, a historic opportunity now opens for Virginians. The great of heart and mind will rise to it. — The Pilot, Norfolk.

Gov. Almond in his radio-television speech last night (Tuesday) did little to calm the concern of Virginians over the two-part threat of integrated schools and no schools at all. Mr. Almond, we fear, sounded more like a battle leader than a pathfinder.

On the positive side, the Governor did reconfirm his previously-announced intention of appointing a legislative commission to draw up a new school program and made a veiled reference to restoring the tax revenues "of this Commonwealth to the control of the people." It had been our impression this was where control has always resided.

Mr. Almond, to his credit, also promised to use every means at his disposal to keep the peace and called on Virginians to comport themselves with "dignity and restraint." We wish he had made an even stronger statement on this point.

Some time will elapse before a new school program can be formulated by the Legislature. That calls for utmost vigilance on the part of local and State law enforcement agencies to see that tensions do not erupt into public disorders. Virginians, we believe, should be made unmistakably aware of the Governor's determination to prevent violence and preserve peace and order. He should have the full support of all citizens in that determination. Violence is madness. Virginia wants no Little Rock.—Roanoke Times.

Desegregation in Norfolk
(Confidential Report)

Harry J. Walker

Background of the Community

In 1950, Norfolk had a total population of 213,513 of which 63,448, or 29.6 per cent, were reported as nonwhite. ~~Estimates of the~~ Estimates of the population for 1957 placed the total population at 219,896. The estimated nonwhite population was 73,787 for 1957, or 24.9 per cent of the total.

Over the last several decades there has been a steady movement of the white population to suburban areas. A large portion of this population will again be included within the corporate limits of the city with the anticipated annexation of a large area adjacent to the city.

The current school population is estimated to be in excess of 42,000 including the Negro population which is estimated to be about 15,000. According to one of the assistant superintendents of the public schools, the annexation of adjacent territory will result in an increase in the white school enrollment which has been declining somewhat over the past few years.

Norfolk differs from other Virginia cities in that it is the site of a number of federal government enterprises, the largest of which is the naval installation. These afford employment for a large proportion of the working population including the Negro labor force. The existence of the naval base and federal governmental operations together with the fact that the city is a seaport creates a transient population and brings into the city many persons from the outside. This gives to the city a cosmopolitan character not found in other large Virginia cities.

Several officials of the city government point to the cosmopolitan character of the city as an influential factor in the "progress we have made in race relations." A former chairman of the Board of Education recounted with pride that Norfolk was among the first southern cities to equalize salaries for Negro teachers. He pointed to the fact that for several years joint meetings of Negro and white teachers have been held and that Negro and white supervisory personnel in the school system meet regularly to consider common problems. In addition, twelve Negroes are members of the police force. There also has been some participation of Negro recreational personnel in staff meetings of the recreation department although with a few exceptions such as track meets all recreational programs and activities have been conducted on a segregated basis.

Norfolk is unusual among Virginia communities facing court orders to desegregate in September. By contrast Norfolk has 151 Negro pupils who have applied for admission to nine white schools while other communities have only a few Negro applicants. The School Board upon advice of the city attorney has instituted a pupil-assignment plan. Under this plan all Negro pupils applying for admission to a white school are required to submit themselves for a placement test and to be interviewed for assignment to white schools. Negro leaders view the pupil-assignment plan as a device for preventing the enrollment of Negro pupils in white schools.

Climate of Opinion

With the city under a federal court order to desegregate at least some of the public schools, the people of Norfolk on the surface are calm. This is true of both the white and Negro communities. The only organized opposition of citizens to desegregation comes from the Defenders of State Sovereignty. Public officials of the City do not take the Defenders seriously. It is recognized, however, that this group encouraged by the state program of massive resistance could be a source of racial tension and conflict if the schools are desegregated.

Most leaders of both the white and Negro community do not anticipate racial violence when schools open in September, largely because of the Governor's decision to close a school upon knowledge of the enrollment of a Negro pupil rather than upon the actual attendance of a Negro pupil at such school.

The president of the local P.T.A. Council, William I. McKendree, has been appointed by the Tidewater Educational Foundation, a private organization, "to lead efforts to organize private schools for emergency use" if public schools are closed. According to the Virginia's Pilot (July 30, 1958) the leaders of the foundation "have been in sympathy with the state's massive resistance program."

McKendree has been reported by liberal white citizens to be active with the Defenders. Robert Stern, who is a member of the faculty at William and Marys College, states that McKendree has addressed meetings of the Defenders and regularly meets with some of their committees. McKendree is described by liberal whites as a "neurotic, rabble rouser who has engaged in the most vicious verbal attacks on white liberals."

In general, city officials expect any public schools which enroll Negro pupils to be closed. Therefore, a "wait and see" attitude has developed. The fact that they do not anticipate attendance of Negro pupils at white schools leads to the belief that there will not be any violence.

The Position of Community Leaders on Desegregation

Mayor W. Fred Duckworth is considered even by his subordinates to be a person of limited ability. He has studiously avoided making statements regarding the problem of desegregation in the Norfolk community. In fact, it is the official opinion that the problem is primarily a legal one involving the Federal Government and the State of Virginia. For example, when twenty-two white citizens, residents of the west side of Norfolk, where no white schools would ~~be~~ currently be involved in desegregation, petitioned the City Council to keep schools open regardless of "race issues," the Mayor stated: "we have no authority in this matter and we don't propose to get into a dog fight with any agency involved in it." The City Council issued instructions to forward the petition to the School Board.[1]

Actually all city officials on advice of the City Attorney have placed responsibility for handling all issues relative to desegregation in the hands of the School Board. The School Board in turn is relying upon its pupil placement test devised by the City Attorney to meet the situation. As indicated previously Negro leaders view this as a means of eliminating all Negro applicants for enrollment in white schools.

The Negro community is divided on the question as to whether Negro pupils should submit themselves to the testing program. A group of Negro ministers with the support of the local branch of the N.A.A.C.P. have succeeded in influencing some Negro parents to have their children take the placement test. Meanwhile, Victor Ashe, attorney for the N.A.A.C.P., in opposition to the leaders of this organization is representing twenty-one Negro children who are refusing to submit to the placement test. Suit has been filed before Judge Hoffman of the federal District Court contending that the placement test is discriminatory. Argument on this suit is scheduled for August 18, 1958.

On July 29, the first day scheduled for the placement tests, sixteen Negro pupils presented themselves for the test to comply with the School Board's assignment plan. The following day the daily papers announced that sixteen additional Negro students were scheduled to take the test.

According to Edwin L. Lamberth, Assistant Superintendent of Schools in Charge of Administration, the School Board expected that a few of the Negro pupils who submitted to the test would qualify for admission to white schools.[2] Upon admission to these schools it was anticipated that the schools would be closed, thus precipitating a showdown with the State. He was non-comittal on the plans of the Board following the closing of these schools. He believed that, however, white students in these schools would be assigned to other schools and that Negro pupils would return to segregated schools. This view is shared by Dr. Coppage, a Negro dentist who is one of the staunch supporters of the N.A.A.C.P. and who believes that Negro pupils should take the placement tests.

Robert Stern, who is a white liberal and who has a close relationship with the Superintendent of Schools and some of the members of the School Board, reports that the Board is reluctantly willing to desegregate some of the elementary schools. According to Stern the Board fears that great hostility and possibly violence will result from desegregation at the junior high and high school level. They recognize, however, that any plan of desegregation cannot hope to succeed in the face of the Governor's massive resistance program.

[2] Interview with Edwin L. Lamberth.

Assistant Superintendent Lamberth argues that the pupil-placement plan does not "differ essentially from the plan used in North Carolina." The situation in Norfolk, he contends is different in two respects:

> (1) most communities in the South had only a few -- not more than ten -- Negro applicants for white schools, we have one hundred and fifty-one; (2) Negroes here cannot be intimidated. Not that I think they should be. In this we are fortunate. Many of them have civil service jobs with the federal government because of the naval installations here. Others are self-employed. Now in some other communities you know what would happen if Negroes applied to get in white schools. All kinds of pressures would be applied and some of them would lose their jobs.

Some evidence which tends to corroborate the statement of Robert Stern appears in the comment of Lamberth, whom Stern regards as less enthusiastic about the prospects of desegregation than Superintendent of Schools Brewbaker. Stated Lamberth:

> I think this thing has to be worked out gradually. I think there would be real violence if we admitted all one hundred and fifty-one Negro applicants. I have not looked at their records yet. They are right here on my desk. We want to select the best Negro pupils. I know that three of those who have applied have a record as trouble makers. When I called a principal at one of the Negro schools and asked for the record of this student, he said: oh! not that boy. He wanted to get rid of him but he thought that he would be a bad risk for this experience. I'm sure that there are some excellent students in the Negro schools and these would be the ones we would want.
> ...I believe if this plan (testing and interviewing Negro applicants) were given a chance we would enroll some Negro pupils in white schools.

In regard to the suit to test the legality of the pupil-placement plan Lamberth remarked:

> If the court eliminates this plan, I'm sure ~~one~~ our lawyer will come up with something else. Of course the time is short. I don't believe the court will kick out our entire plan. I think some features may be eliminated.

One cannot help gain a clear impression that official Norfolk regards its plan as a delaying action. If the plan is disapproved by the federal Court, time will be given to introduce a new plan. If any Negro pupils are admitted to a few white schools, which at best is the intent of the plan, and they are closed provisions can be made to reassign white students and to return Negro students to Negro schools. Most thoughtful Negro leaders, while convinced that ultimately schools will be desegregated, also seem to feel that there is a likelihood that no schools will be actually desegregated in September. It is for this reason that whatever racial tensions are buried beneath political and administrative maneuvers the surface remains calm.

Racial Tensions and Prospects of Violence

No one, including the man on the street, in Norfolk anticipates racial conflict in September -- and this because they do not expect the schools to be desegregated. When the question is posed on a hypothetical basis that the State does not close the schools and permits desegregation some of the more sober leaders among Negroes recognize the possibility of racial disturbance. It seems hard, however, for white leaders to think seriously of this possibility. Members of the School Board believe that some token integration could take place in the elementary schools, but not peacefully ~~ably~~ in the high schools. But then they find it easy to focus attention on the conflict between the massive resistance program of the State and the Federal Court order.

The pupil placement program of Norfolk is a bastard child of this conflict. It represents the School Board's effort upon advice of legal counsel to escape being held in contempt by the Federal Court in not complying with its decree and at the same time to not come in conflict with State laws.[3]

With regard to the prospects of racial violence in September the Assistant to the City Manager observed:

> Right now the school situation is out of the city's hands. I'm sure if there is any trouble we can take care of it. The chief of police is aware of the problem and has plans to act if necessary.
> I have lived in Norfolk all of my life and you'll find people here are different from the rest of Virginia. I guess being a seaport town has something to wo with it, or may be its because we have a shifting population. I don't know. As far as I can see there doesn't seem to be any tension here. Norfolk is not like Little Rock. In Little Rock there were all kinds of signs of violence before it took place. I don't think we'll have anything here like Little Rock.
> I think it is a good thing that the test of the state's position on the schools should come in Norfolk - a populous area. In some smaller places I think we would have trouble. In time, Norfolk will work this problem out.[4]

Most of the fear of violence which appears not to be uppermost in the minds of white and Negro community leaders stems from the recognition that a group like the Defenders of State Sovereignty could incite some people to violence. This, it is generally believed, would occur only if Negroes actually attended white schools.

Some of the Negro leaders (Dr. Coppage, Attorney Ashe) and whites believe that Negroes would strike back hard if there were any attacks on Negroes by whites. They also regard the presence of naval forces as a deterent to wholesale rioting.

Chief Anderson of the Norfolk Police Department states that he is aware of the possibilities of racial disturbances, but like other city officials does not anticipate trouble because of the simple belief that no schools will be desegregated. Chief Anderson is an auslander in Norfolk, being a native of Indiana. He came to Norfolk from Kansas City where he had been Chief of police. Prior to that he had served on the police force in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He is well educated for a policeman — even a police chief. As an outsider he is not entirely accepted by Old Virginians. He recounted his experiences with segregationists resulting from his deliberate failure to enforce segregation on City buses.

> I'm from Indiana and being an outsider here doesn't make my job easier. I have had white people come in here and say some pretty rough things to me. They asked me if I came down here to let the dirty niggers sit anywhere on the bus. They used to get after me for not enforcing segregation. I have been here for two years. It is hard to understand the mentality of these people. My son has had a hard time in high school because he does not accept the southerners point of view, especially with regard to the history of the South...

With regard to preparation for handling racial violence, Chief Anderson explained that he knew Joe Lohman (Sheriff of Cook County) and was familiar with his work.[5] He especially commented on the work with minority groups of a police officer in Milwaukee whom he said had "developed techniques from the standpoint of a police officer and not an academic man." With regard to his plans for Norfolk, he stated:

> I have requested all of my commanding officers not to take leave until after the month of September. I don't believe anything will happen that we can't handle. But if something did happen and my men were on vacation lying around on some beach, the first thing they would do is criticize me for not being on the job.
> I have also given instructions to my men on the way to handle incidents. I have taken this up at the meetings of my commanding officers. I have instructed them to bring in anyone who is involved in any racial dispute. I think I have succeeded in impressing upon them that this is good police practice and that their job is to make arrests and not decide who is responsible. This is the job for the courts. The officers are expected to bring in those who are involved, including the Defenders, and the courts will decide what to do with them.
> I have thought of asking for additional men to be added to the regular force. We need them anyway, but I wouldn't get anywhere because this would cost the city money.
> Some people have asked that we form a citizens auxiliary police force. Such an untrained group can cause more trouble than they prevent.
> n I don't think we are going to have any trouble in September because as soon as it is announced that a Negro child is enrolled in a white school, the school will be closed.

Chief Anderson is also of the opinion that the "Defenders" could be a source of racial disturbance.

> Now, if Negro children were permitted to go to a white school, I think the Defenders would make trouble. I believe > if we could get a few in at a time we could handle the situation. Right now the attitude on the part of the city is to wait and see what will happen at the state level if a Negro child is admitted to a white school. A group of white citizens appeared before the City Council with a petition to keep the school open with or without segregation. The Council told them that it was out of their hands.

An appraisal of the prospects for racial conflict of a violent nature in the near future is not easy to make. At the present time there exists a rather easy calm. Many people reflect a sense of uncertainty regarding the future, largely because of the unresolved legal conflict posed by the massive resistance program of the State and the fact that the City is under a Federal Court order to desegregate. In the center of this conflict is the Norfolk School Board attempting to devise a self-defeating program of desegregation which will enable it to escape Federal Court censure and at the same time steer a course around the legal obstacles imposed by the State government. Any deflection of this program, which would lead to the closing of white schools or the actual attendance of Negro pupils of white schools, could alter the racial situation over night. Thus, severe racial tension and violence while not imminent could develop with a sudden change in the balance of interests and forces. Conflict must be regarded as a latent component of the Norfolk situation. Thus far, the possibilities of racial disturbance is recognized, but only in an academic sort of way. Future developments may force a more realistic understanding of this possibility and there is the probability that this may come to late. One can say with confidence that at least at the present time there exists no great fear of violence. Lacking in this situation is no realistic and certainly no comprehensive program on the part of citizens' organizations to deal with occurrence of violent racial strife.

Programs of Civic Groups

Norfolk Women's Council. This group appears to enjoy a high degree of respectability in the Norfolk Community. Its membership, which now numbers about four hundred, is comprised largely of the wives of white and Negro professional and business men. Some of these women are also employed in professional and high status clerical pursuits.

The respectability of this organization is in part owing to the social position of its member, but largely to its program. Although the Council has a professed interest in the improvement of race relations and has openly supported and worked for desegregation of the schools, it has also focussed its program in its public meetings on community-wide problems which are not obviously racial in character. For example, one of its recent public meetings was devoted to a consideration of the nature of the housing code. For this meeting the City Manager was the chief speaker. For another meeting the Chief of the detective bureau was invited to discuss problems of law enforcement.

With regard to the problem of desegregation plans are being laid to have white members of the Council escort Negro children to white schools when they are desegregated.

It is of interest that the present president of the Council is Mrs. Ashe, wife of the Negro attorney who is one of the attorney's for the NAACP in the current desegregation litigation.

Committee to Preserve the Public Schools. This committee is headed by Robert Stern who is a faculty member of William and Mary College. Mr. Stern has formed a legal committee to consider legal action to keep open white schools which are desegregated. He states that he has worked and continues to work with interracial groups, but for strategic reasons has limited the membership of his Committee to white people. With some of the members of his Committee he recently held a conference in Arlington with that City's Committee to preserve the public schools. He reports that at the conference it was decided that each ~~committee~~ community should tackle its own problems.

The Norfolk Committee favors court action at the State level. It is believed that a favorable decision by the State Court of Appeals would prevent charges of the invasion of state's rights. On the other hand there is some doubt that judges in this Court would be free from bias stemming from the political situation. There is also some fear that to seek an injunction in a Federal Court would result in a decision that the plaintiffs had not exhausted all remedies by instituting suit in the state court. This group is anxious to have an opinion from lawyers experienced in this area of law with regard to strategy as indicated by these questions. Members of the legal sub-com point out that the case will have to be brought by parents of white pupils whose school is closed. The superintendent of the public schools has made it clear that the Board of Education could not institute such a legal action because technically it is a part of the state administrative machinery.

The Committee, while having no difficulty in assembling a legal sub-committee, has experienced difficulty in finding a lawyer who would take such a case.

ATLANTA CONSTITUTION 8/19/58

151 Negroes Refused Admission to Schools in Norfolk

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—The Norfolk school board Monday night denied the application of 151 Negro pupils seeking admission to the city's white public schools.

In announcing its action, the board said that although it "is aware that the petitioners are all of one race asking to be assigned to schools of the opposite race, it has attempted to approach the problem from the standpoint of sound education."

The school board announcement was made several hours after Federal District Judge Walter E. Hoffman had directed the board to advise him by Wednesday of its action on the applications of 87 Negro pupils seeking admission to white schools.

These 87 had taken tests and been interviewed under the school board's local pupil assignment plan. The remainder of the 151 had either boycotted the tests and interviews or had failed to complete them.

The board's announcement came shortly after two justices of the state Supreme Court of Appeals had granted an injunction until Oct. 15 restraining the board from executing its assignment plan. The injunction was granted on petition of Mr. and Mrs. Coleman H. Coley, white parents of Norfolk, who contended the board's plan violated state law which vests sole authroity for assignments in the state pupil placement board.

The school board's action in denying the 151 applications was taken prior to receiving official notification of the Supreme Court injunction. A school board attorney said, however, "We're not assigning anybody, so we don't feel we're violating any injunction."

Dear Mrs. Tilley,

It is rather singular that this morning I addressed an envelope to you to send you a copy of my letter to Governor Almond and in today's mail your letter to me arrived.

I am enclosing the copy of my letter and also clippings from Norfolk paper that show the latest about the school situation. Things do not look good.

Would it be possible for you to prepare for me a list of the persons in my area that attended the meeting in Washington which I missed? I believe it would give me courage if I knew someone close home whom I could contact in case of necessity to make quick decisions.

I expect to be in Atlanta by Friday night on my way to Eagle Rock Camp below Madison. I am driving and will allow time to contact your office and get the list if convenient to you. When flying on schedule through Atlanta twice this summer I have not had time to find a telephone not in use!

Do please pray for us in Norfolk during these next critical days.

By all means count me in for the October meeting of the Fellowship of the Concerned. I plan to attend.

Most sincerely,

The Honorable J. Lindsay Almond,
Governor of Virginia
State Office Building
Richmond, Virginia

Honorable Sir:

As I have, during these recent weeks, watched our Norfolk papers in a distant village I have become alarmed and sincerely concerned about the school situation in our City.

I am proud to be a Virginian and I am proud of the history of our great State but I fear that Virginia's historic record is being brought low in 1958 with threats of closing schools and in future years there will be Democrats other than myself who will be ashamed of the 1958 record of this State.

It seems to me, you, as the leader, have a great opportunity to direct destiny in a Christian, honest, fair and statesmanlike way. Right now people are emotionally frustrated and they are waiting for a leader unafraid to do the right thing. I hope you are such a leader. With a firm, right attitude to follow I do believe there would be no trouble and no bloodshed in Virginia over integration.

Enough crack-pot laws have been tried and found wanting to convince some of us that the [illegible] to meet the situation is to obey the law of the land and in order to do that to create a climate of acceptance on the part of the people. But, instead of that these years have been wasted in creating a climate of frustration and misunderstanding. Why prolong the agony and the tension?

My prayers will be that you will rise to the occasion and be a ready Christian Governor of the State of Virginia because you are the Governor of the Black as well as the White. May God give you courage to be fair to the Federal Law and to all the citizens of our Sovereign State.

Respectfully yours,

Special Delivery

ATTENTION: Mrs. M. E. Tilley

Dear Mrs. Tilley:

Under separate cover I am mailing clippings that will bring you up to date on the school situation in Norfolk.

There are two groups working for re-opening of schools. All these who are specifically for integration and another group that is for a middle-of-the-road attitude just for opening schools for the benefit of education itself. For the latter group I have a copy of the circulation which must be signed by individuals. The list should be published within the next two days. I am very glad that I got back in time to help work on these two projects. The other group is circulating a petition that reads very much like the following:

> "We, the undersigned, believe that public school education is vital for the preservation of civil and religious liberty in the United States of America.
> We are prepared to commit ourselves to non-violent means to insure a peaceable transition to de-segregated education."

This has been circulating for about ten days ans should have about 1500 names by now. The officers are very high-type persons:

Rev. James Brewer, Unitarian Mininster
503 Massachusetts Avenue

Mr. Irving Truitt, Jr., (Epworth Methodist) 1st Vice.

Miss Mary Kidd (PTA Officer) 2nd Vice

I would also suggest Mrs. Forrest White as a tireless worker in getting signatures for the school project and in all phases of inter-racial understanding. She is an active member of the Woman's Council for Interracial Cooperation in Norfolk. Also her mother-in-law is most active, Mrs. Luther W. White, 1049 Lexan Crescent, Norfolk. Mrs. White is sister-in-law to Mrs. R. M. White in Richmond who is constantly fighting racial understanding--whose father was a Methodist Bishop.

In Portsmouth I would like to list the name of Mrs. Raymond Musser, 1801 Rodman Avenue, Portsmouth. Her daughter taught at Allen High in Asheville after graduation at Scarritt College.

In Hampton, I would like to list Mrs. J. A. Ferguson, 267 Newport News Avenue, Hampton, Virginia

I hope this list will help you somewhat to feel you have a corps of workers in this area who are now at work!

I will keep you informed.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Alex Miller

FROM: Bill Korey

DATE: February 4, 1959

SUBJECT:

I had lunch today with Frank Reeves, the attorney handling the NAACP cases in Northern Virginia. It was something in the nature of a victory celebration since Frank had just won the case to compel Alexandria to admit 9 Negro students next week.

I asked Frank what in his judgment made for the difference between Arlington and Norfolk on the one hand and Little Rock on the other. Frank said that the difference lay in the fact that some of the leaders in the white communities of Arlington and Norfolk were willing to stick their necks out for law and order and the public school system. And the same leaders were able to compel a posture on the part of law enforcement authorities to that end.

He noted particularly the work that we had done in Arlington and he recapitulated the story which I believe I once told you about Ed Campbell in a Norfolk case. You may recall that Ed Campbell, with whom I have worked here in Arlington, was the lawyer handling the case of 12 white parents who were asking for an injunction to force the opening of the closed public schools. When Ed learned that the NAACP was going to ask for a similar injunction in behalf of the Negro parents, he called us long distance to ask us if we could prevail upon the NAACP not to pursue this course because his plaintiffs would feel that they might be construed as working in collusion with the NAACP and therefore would pull out of the case; that the best posture in terms of public school openings is for the white community to fight for same. We called Frank who was in New York at the time. Frank told me confidentially that a hot debate took place within the leadership of the NAACP as to whether to forego their own planned injunction and to let the whites in terms of Campbell take the leadership. Frank won out in the fight and of course he had taken the position which we had suggested. He feels his opinion has now been vindicated as indicated in my opening remarks.

I have suggested strongly to Frank that he prepare a memorandum on his viewpoint and send it to Roy Wilkins. He said he would.

To: Participants in meeting at Willard Hotel, Sept. 18, 1956

Enclosed is a summary of the discussion at our recent meeting in Washington.

In accordance with the decision at the meeting, Dr. Blake, Rabbi Feldman and Father Shean have appointed subcommittees to formulate recommendations and procedures to facilitate cooperative planning and action in a number of areas, including:

The organization of local citizens groups and the coordination of field activities;

the exchange, preparation, and dissemination of audio-visual materials;

the investigation and reporting of information regarding the composition, tactics and programs of White Citizens Councils and other similar groups;

the organization and promotion of interreligious activities on the national, regional and local levels;

the counteraction of pressures exerted through or by Community Chests on agencies favoring integration;

the development of programs whereby educational, business, veterans, legal and other community groups which are not committed to support of the Supreme Court decision, could be involved in activities in line with their own special interests, which might indirectly facilitate compliance with the Court's rulings.

Every effort will be made to have the subcommittee reports available in writing for distribution to you in advance of the next meeting on November 20. You will be advised regarding the locale of the meeting as soon as the necessary arrangements have been made. I sincerely hope that you have reserved this date on your calendar and that you will be able to attend.

Cordially yours,

Arnold Aronson

Morning session - Mr. Ralph Arkush presiding. The invocation was given by Dr. A. C. Miller.

Mr. Arkush opened the meeting by pointing out that it had been called jointly by leaders of the major religious faiths. This, he said, was as it should be, for the issue involved - the issue of desegregation - was essentially a moral issue involving the fundamental religious principle that all men are created equal. There was no need, he continued, to argue the case for the elimination of segregation, since each of the organizations represented was already on record in support of decision of the Supreme Court and was actively engaged in seeking to facilitate its implementation. Quoting from the letter of invitation from Dr. Blake, Rabbi Feldman and Father Shean, he said that the meeting had been called to exchange experiences and views "in the conviction that greater mutual knowledge of plans and greater mutual understanding of methods will contribute toward the achievement of our common purpose; and that a free informal exchange may lead to some concert of effort that will enlarge the effectiveness of all our programs."

Mr. Arkush explained that the meeting might be said to have had its origin in two separate conferences, one held by the National Council of Churches last February and another at approximately the same time under the auspices of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights. At both of these conferences, recommendations were adopted calling for the organization of a Joint Committee on Strategy, which might serve as a vehicle for coordinated planning around the whole issue of desegregation. In order to avoid unnecessary duplication, he continued, a Subcommittee on Strategy was named, drawn from the groups participating in both conferences. It was the feeling of this subcommittee, Mr. Arkush reported, that while an exchange of views and information had been taking place among the organizations on the staff level, the principal officers of these same organizations had at no time had an opportunity to come together for similar interconsultation. It was the view of the subcommittee that the importance and complexity of the issue was such that effective coordination was not likely to be achieved until the responsible heads of the organizations concerned reviewed the problems jointly, formulated a common program, and indicated the roles and responsibilities each was prepared to assume. The present meeting, he concluded, was designed to serve that purpose.

Mr. Arkush suggested that in accordance with the agenda which had been submitted previously, the morning session would be devoted to reports from the participating organizations regarding the programs and activities to facilitate integration carried on by their respective organizations, the problems encountered both within their own constituencies and in the general community, and an assessment of priority needs. In order to maximize the opportunity for full and frank discussion, he said, no publicity concerning the meeting had been issued and no reports would be released to the press unless the participants themselves so ordered. He then called on Dr. Oscar Lee to report on the program being carried on through the National Council of Churches.

Dr. Lee reviewed briefly the activities of the National Council in facilitating loans to families in need, in providing direct assistance to families seeking relief and relocation, and in replacing ministers who had lost their pulpits because of their stand against segregation. He reported that as of the first of October the National Council of Churches expected to have a full time field person operating out of Nashville, who would seek to maintain contact with the different churches and denominations in the area and to serve as a liaison for work with other interested groups. In Dr. Lee's view, the need for more adequate communication among the organizations, both on the national and local levels, was a major challenge. He felt that effective assistance by national organizations was made difficult because of the resentment, so prevalent among many Southerners, of outside interference and the accompanying feeling that segregation was a Southern problem with which they were most qualified to cope. He suggested further that the tendency of the press and other media of information to focus on problem situations, resulted in a distorted picture of the overall situation. Accordingly, he recommended that greater attention and publicity be given to the positive gains that had been achieved and to the many situations in which integration had taken place successfully.

Miss Stamats, Dr. Miller, Dr. Pritchett and Mr. Catchings supplemented Dr. Lee's report.

Miss Stamats advised that the United Church Women had prepared and disseminated appropriate materials to assist its affiliated Councils in dealing with the desegregation issue. These Councils, she reported, were all interracial in character and were working closely with Catholic and Jewish women's groups. A number of workshops had been conducted in various communities on how to deal with controversy and additional such workshops were being planned.

Dr. Miller reported that the Southern Baptist Convention had distributed a considerable quantity of literature dealing with the desegregation issue and planned monthly mailings of educational materials to all pastors and to a number of lay leaders in the region. Plans were already under way, he said, for a series of regional planning meetings and it was hoped that these would be followed by meetings on a state-by-state basis.

Dr. Pritchett reported that the Presbyterian Church had likewise distributed considerable literature and had initiated a number of workshops. Particular attention, he said, had been directed to the dissemination of resolutions which had been adopted in support of the Supreme Court decisions and for an inclusive church membership on the basis of faith in Christianity, without regard to race.

Mr. Catchings reported on the college program of the YMCA. This, he said, involved the dissemination of materials regarding successful integration at the college level, as a guide to colleges and universities which had not yet integrated their student bodies, work with students on Southern campuses, in an effort to develop an informed and enlightened new leadership, and programs on campuses in other sections of the country, designed to combat the stereotype of the South, either as completely bigoted or as solely qualified to deal with the problem.

The chairman then called upon Rabbi Eisendrath to report on the experiences of the Jewish religious organizations.

All of the Jewish religious bodies, Rabbi Eisendrath said, had taken unequivocal positions in support of the Supreme Court decision. The problem, he continued, was to convert the rank and file to those positions. This problem, he suggested, was common to all organizations. He referred to a study by Will Herberg which showed that 50% of the church members interviewed were of the opinion that the church should not become involved in social issues and that its stand on such issues need not be followed. Accordingly, he said, the focus of the program of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations was on the organization of social action committees in each temple and on the study of such issues as desegregation, based upon the resolutions and positions adopted by the national organization. He reported in addition that institutes and workshops on this subject were being conducted and that it was planned to employ a field man in the South. Dr. Eisendrath suggested that resistance by Southern constituents to the positions taken by their national organizations stemmed from the tendency to regard any action that was not indigenous to the South as outside interference. He was in agreement with Dr. Lee's evaluation regarding the need for increased communication among the various religious groups and between religious, labor and civic bodies. He said that many Southern Jews who supported the principle of desegregation were nevertheless hesitant about taking any action, for fear that leadership by Jews would intensify latent anti-Semitism. This feeling of isolation and insecurity, he observed, appeared to be common among other groups as well, and gave added emphasis to the need for cooperative efforts, particularly under interreligious auspices.

Father Shean was then called upon to report on the activities and problems encountered by the Catholic community in the South.

Father Shean indicated that programs under Catholic auspices differed from community to community, depending largely upon the attitude of the Bishop in the area. These attitudes, he said, varied considerably. Moreoever, he said, forthright action taken by some Bishops had met with strong opposition by the parishioners. In his view, the lack of communication among the various groups in the community and the resulting feeling of isolation constituted a major problem. While the sense of isolation among Catholics, he said, was perhaps in part self-imposed, through concentration on provlems within the group itself, it was aggravated in many instances because those Catholics who had moved forward were labelled as radicals and were thenceforth avoided by others in the community. The problem encountered by Archbishop Rummel in New Orleans, he suggested, was not only that of appearing to stand alone among his own people, but of standing alone in the total community. In his opinion, Catholic institutions in Alabama, South Carolina, and Georgia would in all probability already have been integrated had it not been for the feeling that such action would be resisted by the total community, leaving Catholics in complete isolation. Father Shean ventured the opinion that the tendency to couple an expression of personal support for desegregation with a statement that it would not be acceptable to the rest of the community was, in part at least, a rationalization. "We avoid facing the problem," he said, "by saying that it would not be acceptable, without determining whether jointly we might not be able to make it acceptable." Each pastor, he concluded, could be persuaded to move ahead faster if he were made to feel that others would be with him.

Mr. Seidman, reporting for the AFL-CIO, stated that the labor movement was committed by action of its convention to intensify its civil rights program and was determined to carry out this commitment. He said that intense pressure had been exerted on the leadership of the labor movement to desist from its forthright pronouncements in respect to desegregation but that such pressures had been resisted. Attempts to split the labor movement in the South, and to organize a Southern labor movement, he continued, had thus far proved most unsuccessful. He advised that a number of summer institutes had been held on how to work with other groups in the community on the desegregation issue and that it was planned to continue such institutes throughout the year. The AFL-CIO Civil Rights Committee had published a manual on integration, citing examples of successful integration in industry and emphasizing the costs and consequences of economic discrimination. He said that advances were being made in breaking down discrimination in employment within the deep South and he expressed the opinion that these advances would help facilitate integration in other areas.

Mr. Carey supplemented the report of Mr. Seidman and emphasized the need for political action. The election of a liberal Congress, he asserted, was essential in order to overcome the dominant position of the Dixiecrats. Moreover, he cautioned against too great a reliance on the Supreme Court for leadership in this area. He pointed out that the health and age of many members of the Court was such that its composition and views might be changed sharply in the near future. He emphasized the need for leadership by the President, for the enactment of federal civil rights legislation, and for joint planning and action among the voluntary organizations.

Mr. Reuther, reporting for the UAW, said that in many respects the experiences of his organization paralleled those of other groups, in that the policy declarations adopted on the national and state levels were not always accepted and followed locally. It was his impression that when resistance to national policy was met with firmness, good results were achieved; contrarywise, where there was vacilation, the difficulties appear to have been increased. He advised that one cent per month from the dues of every UAW member was being allocated to anti-discrimination work. The staff of the Fair Practices Committee, he said, had recently been increased to provide for a total of eight full time field workers and a determined effort was being made to establish a Fair Practices Committee in every local of the union. He recalled that during the Detroit riots of the early 1940s, no incidents had occurred in the vicinity of those plants in which integration had taken place and where white and Negro workers had come to know one another. He concluded from this that integration on the job was a significant factor in fostering greater receptivity to integration in the schools and other areas. In his view, the paramount need was for effective coordination on the national level, leading toward coordinated action on the local level through the constituencies of the cooperating national organizations. The combined strength of the affiliated memberships, he declared, was sufficient to solve the problem. He urged that there be further unpublicized meetings for coordinated planning and action and the formulation of procedures that would facilitate the interchange of information regarding agency programs, publications, memberships, etc. He recommended that efforts be concentrated on the fringe and border areas in order to isolate the hard core resistors.

Mrs. Simons stated that the YWCA was seeking to implement its long standing national policy against discrimination. She pointed out however, that since each of the local affiliates was an autonomous organization, there was necessarily a wide variation in practice. As evidence of the progress being made, she reported that the Houston YWCA had fully integrated both its eating and its residence facilities. She said that the National Board of the YWCA had voted that efforts to further integration be given the highest priority during this year. Accordingly, three additional field workers had recently been employed and workshops under the direction of the staff of the national office were being conducted in Southern communities in an effort to strengthen and develop new local leadership. She observed that a South African was being used in many of these workshops in order to give a world perspective to the issue. She advised that the YWCA and many other organizations receiving funds from Community Chests were being threatened with the loss of such funds in many Southern communities because of their pro-integration position. Closer cooperation and coordination among all the organizations, she suggested, would make it easier for each to stand up and be counted.

Mr. Jackson corroberated the report of Mrs. Simons. In many communities, he said, strong pressure was being exerted upon the Community Chests to drop the Urban League from among the beneficiary agencies. He contrasted the experiences in Miami and in Jacksonville to illustrate that where the problem had been anticipated and efforts made to enlist the support of other groups it had been possible to persuade the Community Chest to resist such pressures, whereas in situations in which there had been no coordinated effort, the Community Chest had yielded. He reported that much of the pressure was being spearheaded by the Citizens Protective Association out of St.Louis, and he recommended that procedures be developed for exchanging information about the composition, personnel and activities of this and other similar groups. He commended a statement adopted by the AFL-CIO Community Services Department in opposition to any restriction by Community Chests based upon race or other such factors. The problem, he asserted, should be of concern to all organizations, for unless it was met head on in a concerted manner, all liberal social agencies were likely to be subjected to similar pressures.

Mrs. Mason stated that the experiences and the problems encountered by the National Council of Negro Women were similar to those of the other reporting organizations. She cautioned against permitting situations involving extreme resistance to becloud the significant progress that had been made and she advocated greater emphasis in our own publicity on the many situations in which integration had been achieved smoothly and successfully. The paramount need, she said, was for a greater exchange of information and experiences and for common planning among the many organizations which were working separately on the problem. She reported, that the National Council of Negro Women was convening a conference of eighteen womens' organizations to be held in Washington November 16-17. She felt that united action among various womens groups could be instrumental in bringing about a more favorable climate of opinion in the community. Accordingly, the November conference will focus on means of bridging communications among womens' groups on the local level. She extended an invitation to all those present to attend. She stated that the National Council of Negro Women had undertaken a campaign aimed at increased registration and voting and recommended that similar programs be undertaken by other organizations.

Mrs. Moise Cahn reported that the National Council of Jewish Women had a long standing policy in support of integration in all areas. This policy, she said, had been accepted by most Southern sections of the Council and only one request had been made for a change in the national policy. In her opinion the lack of coordination on the local level and the resulting isolation of liberal individuals and organizations, together with the fear of reprisals and social ostracism, served as major barriers to effective local action. Accordingly, she felt that it was essential that there be coordinated planning at the national level in order to stimulate and reinforce local efforts. The National Council of Jewish Women, she said, had voted to join with other like-minded groups in joint planning and action and looked toward this meeting as the beginning of such a cooperative undertaking.

Luncheon session - Dr. Maurice Eisendrath presiding. The invocation was given by Rabbi David Panitz.

Dr. Eisendrath praised the NAACP for its leadership in the struggle for full equality and declared that it was the responsibility of all liberal organizations to associate themselves with the NAACP, in order to counter the libels and labels which are currently being levelled against it. He then called upon Mr. Wilkins to discuss what government can do to contribute toward the rapid and harmonious transition to an integrated public school system.

Mr. Wilkins constrasted recent developments in Clinton, Tenn., and in Clay, Ky. Clinton, he said, provided a blueprint of what can be accomplished in a community which, while believing in segregation, was determined to maintain law and order. The attitude in Clay, on the other hand, was personified by the statement of a 14 year old girl who had asserted that she would prefer to grow up to be an idiot rather than go to school with Negroes. This attitude, he said, showed that integration is as necessary for white children as for Negroes and demonstrated that the segregated system has failed to develop the kind of personalities necessary to function effectively as citizens in a democracy.

The basic duty of any government in a democracy, he said, is to maintain the law as established through democratic processes and to establish a climate for cooperation. The government and informed leadership in the South, he said, knew on the basis of earlier Court decisions, and from the fact that the five cases had been joined, that the Court was likely to rule as it did. Under these circumstances, he asserted, it was the responsibility of government and of the leadership to prepare the citizenry of the South for the decision. This was not done. Moreover, he continued, the government had failed in its responsibility to clarify the terms of the decision, to interpret the role and function of the Court in our system of government, and to make clear the responsibilities of citizenship. Following the decision, the government could and should have called a conference to consider methods of facilitating integration. The failure of the government to do so, or to take any other action, he asserted, dissipated the goodwill which existed at that time and created a vacuum into which the White Citizens Councils moved. He suggested further that the Department of Education could have been and should still be called upon to conduct studies of successful integration and to provide basic data to offset the stereotypes regarding Negro learning capacity, etc. Government could have and still should call a conference of industrial leaders, he said, to consider the role that they could play in maintaining economic stability. The neutralizing of this group, he said, without necessarily converting them to integration, would in itself be most helpful, since many industrial leaders were exerting their influence in support of the White Citizens Council. He recommended that a conference be called under government auspices of representatives of communities where successful integration had occurred in order to evaluate the differing approaches, experiences and results. The emphasis of government action, he said, should be on educational techniques, with coercion reserved for those situations where open defiance was proclaimed. He referred to Mansfield, Texas, as one such situation and asserted that what the government does or does not do in the face of the open defiance in Mansfield will go a long way toward determining the pattern in future situations. The government, he concluded, had a fundamental stake in the peaceful and speedy resolution of this problem - a stake that was reflected in the need for trained military, scientific, and technical manpower, in the need for an informed and unified citizenry, in the need for bolstering our international position as the examplar of democracy, and in the need for safeguarding the processes of democratic government itself.

Dr. Eisendrath then called upon Mr. George Mitchell to discuss the role of voluntary organizations in facilitating the rapid and harmonious implementation of the Supreme Court decisions.

Mr. Mitchell emphasized that there is no solid South. He said that there was a tremendous variation in attitudes and practices, not only among the different states in the South but within each state as well. He observed that while the law is uniform, its application must be varied in terms of these local differences. This, he thought, could be done only through voluntary agreement. Observing that the law does not operate on the basis of opinion polls, he said that an overwhelming majority was not necessary to secure its implementation.

In his opinion, a few people who were in a position to evolve a concrete plan could accomplish this result, since in all probability such a plan would be accepted and supported by the Court.

He proposed the following formula as a guide to the organization of local citizens groups --"getting people of similar cultural backgrounds and interest to work together on common problems." In this instance, he suggested, the common problem was that of better education and the major contribution which the national organizations could make would be to induce their local constituents to get together in accordance with his suggested formula, to study the conditions of the schools in their community, the adequacy of the teaching personnel, school boundaries, numbers and the proportions of white and Negro children and other similar factors. Such a study, he was convinced, would lead to a workable plan. He said that at the present time no Southern state was regarded as the leader in the region and he predicted that leadership would devolve upon that state which progressed most rapidly toward integration.

Afternoon Session - Father Maurice Shean presiding.

In opening the session, Father Shean observed that there appeared to have been unanimous agreement regarding the need for closer cooperation and more effective working relationships among all the organizations represented. Attention would be focused during the afternoon, he said, on suggested programs, approaches and techniques and on the roles which different groups and organizations might play and the facilities which they might provide in bringing about this result.

Mr. Graham suggested that it was essential that each national organization which was on record in support of the Court's decision seek to stimulate its constituents in Southern communities to organize and to participate in local citizens councils as a counterforce to the White Citizens Councils. The organization of such local citizens groups, he felt, could most readily be built around the twin concepts of law and order and support of the public school system. Both of these concepts, he said, enjoy majority support, and taken together, would inevitably lead to integration.

Mr. Long expressed the opinion that resolutions in support of the public school system or in support of law and order were too general in character. The successful organization of a national coordinating body and of counterparts in the community, he said, would have to derive from specific commitments to support the Supreme Court decisions in the desegregation cases and not from generalized principles.

In response to Mr. Long, it was pointed out that the purpose of the meeting as stated in the letter of invitation from Dr. Blake, Rabbi Feldman and Father Shean was "to consider how best to pursue our shared democratic objective of facilitating the rapid and harmonious transition to an integrated public school system, in accordance with the rulings of the United States Supreme Court." It was agreed that this statement of purpose be regarded as a continuing objective of the group in whatever future activities might be undertaken.

Mr. George Mitchell recommended that within the context of this overall objective each of the organizations represented undertake to communicate promptly with its constituents "in as many segregated communities as possible, to encourage small groups of representative citizens, white and Negro, to meet frequently and work out a plan for compliance with the Supreme Court decisions on public education." In answer to a question regarding the geographical areas which merited top priority, Mr. Mitchell suggested that efforts be concentrated initially in the states of Arkansas, North Carolina, Tennessee and Texas.

Dr. Lee said that he shared Mr. Mitchell's view regarding the importance of local community organization. He expressed doubts, however, that local citizens councils could be organized effectively by directives from national organizations. The process, he said, would have to be begun by bringing local people together as individuals.

Father Shean expressed agreement with Dr. Lee on this point. It was his opinion that the organization of representative local groups required a personal contact approach and could not be accomplished by correspondence. He suggested that an effort be made to formulate concrete procedures for facilitating cooperation on the local level in advance of the next meeting. In the interim, he recommended that each organization undertake to persuade its members to join the state Human Relations Councils affiliated with the Southern Regional Council.

Mr. Lukas observed that the field personnel of the various organizations were in an excellent position, on the basis of their own experiences, to offer constructive suggestions for facilitating cooperative planning and action on the local level. Accordingly, he recommended that a meeting of the Southern field staffs be convened as soon as possible, in order that their views and recommendations might be made available for consideration at the next meeting. This recommendation was adopted.

Mr. Arkush commented that there seemed to be no difference of opinion regarding the need and value of common planning and action. He therefore proposed that the groups represented establish an organization which could serve as an instrumentality for the furtherance of such cooperation on a continuing basis. He suggested the "U.S. Conference in Support of the Supreme Court Decisions" as a possible name for the proposed organization.

Mr. Lukas said that the essential problem was that of facilitating inter-organizational communication. He suggested that this could be achieved on a wholly informal basis, without the need of a formalized structure.

Mr. Vorspan agreed that it was not necessary to develop an elaborate and intricate structure. On the other hand, he said, reliance on a loose and purely informal exchange was not likely to bring about the kind of effective working together which everyone present deemed so important and desirable. He suggested that subcommittees be appointed to report back at the next meeting with concrete proposals regarding program and methods of cooperation.

Mr. Hollander suggested that the Civil Liberties Clearing House represented a pattern of organization and operation which he believed could be followed to good advantage with respect to the desegregation issue.

Miss Barnes stated that she lacked authority to commit the YWCA at this time to affiliation with any new organization. The representatives of many of the other organizations, she said, were undoubtedly in a similar position.

Dr. Lee observed that if the group were to proceed beyond the discussion stage, it was essential that someone take responsibility for doing the "legwork." He said that considerable time and effort had gone into the organization and arrangements for this meeting. Implementation of the many recommendations that had been advanced, he concluded, required that someone be given responsibility for the necessary follow-up.

Mr. Stern commended those responsible for arranging the meeting. He recommended that the convenors and the secretary be asked to continue in the same capacities and that the secretary's office be made the centre for future communications. This recommendation was unanimously adopted.

After further discussion, the following additional decisions were unanimously agreed upon.

1. That the convenors of the meeting, Dr. Blake, Rabbi Feldman and Father Shean, be asked to reassemble the group for a second meeting on November 20.

2. That Dr. Blake, Rabbi Feldman and Father Shean be authorized to appoint such subcommittees as they deemed advisable, drawn from the staffs of the participating organizations, to formulate concrete proposals regarding program and structure, and that an effort be made to have such proposals distributed in writing in advance of the November meeting.

3. That suggestions regarding program or structure, in addition to those presented at the meeting, be forwarded to the secretary within the next two weeks, in order that they might be considered by an appropriate subcommittee.

4. That no publicity be issued regarding the meeting.

Respectfully submitted,

Arnold Aronson

Dear Mrs. Cahn:

You will, I hope, have heard from Arnie Aronson as from Nine East Thirty-Eighth Street, Room 801, New York 16, New York, that the continuing committee keeping on from the Willard Hotel meeting in October, (which continuing committee was Dr. Blake, Rabbi Feldman, and Father Shean), set up some subcommittees. One of them they called a subcommittee on local community organization. The continuing committee asked me to be Chairman of that subcommittee and they put the following people on the subcommittee: Gloster Current of the NAACP, Mrs. Vivian Mason of the National Council of Negro Women, Alex Miller of the Anti-Defamation League, Mrs. Savilla M. Simons of the YWCA, Boris Shishkin of the AFL-CIO, Miss Esther Stamats of the United Council of Church Women, Rabbi Marc Tannenbaum of the Synagogue Council of America, and you.

What Arnie said about the purpose of the subcommittee is this: "The task of this subcommittee is to formulate recommendations to facilitate the organization of small groups of representative citizens in Southern communities concerned with developing plans for compliance with the Supreme Court decision. This would involve the development of procedures for exchanging names among the participating organizations of interested constituents, for improving communication, for coordinating the work of the Southern field representatives, for selecting the communities which merit priority attention, etc."

Arnie said I, Mitchell, should convene a meeting of this subcommittee so that it could report to a new meeting of the whole show coming off in Washington November 20th. I think you are all too busy to come to a special subcommittee meeting. Anyhow, at a meeting which occurred adventitiously at Tuskegee Institute, October 24-25, there were together for another but related purpose most of the Southern agencies busy in this field. Out of that meeting with them I think I can put together for your scrutiny a proposed report to the November 20th meeting.

Attached is a roughest draft of a report. It awaits anxiously your scrutiny. Please put scrutiny upon it, and send it back to me altered scratched up, or what you will. I will take your return of it to me as permission to put together what all of you say and produce a new report and make it available for the November 20th meeting.

Incidentally, it happens that I cannot be myself at the November 20th meeting, but Harold C. Fleming of the Southern Regional Council will be present and will do all things needful.

If anybody says this won't work and a committee ought to meet ahead of time, name the time and place and I will try to get to the meeting, But my motto will be "scrutiny gives consent."

Dear George:

Thank you for sending me for my "scrutiny" the plan which our sub-committee on local community organization is presenting to the meeting on November 20.

I think the plan is an excellent one and carries the definite impress of your own original thinking and wise knowledge about the Southern area. As I read the report, however, I could not help but think of the old maxim, "Many roads lead to Rome." I am wondering if our sub-committee is completely fulfilling its responsibility by merely outlining the one method of procedure — excellent as it is — which you recommend. I am wondering if it would not be possible to make several additional suggestions.

It is my feeling that the problem of desegregation in any Southern community can be parsed into several categories. For example, the need to get the good people involved and working together. This need is well taken care of by your memorandum. It seems to me there is also a definite need to carry on concurrent activities on several different levels. I think that our committee might spell out these levels and the activities which are encompassed, even though the overall committee you envision might carry on these specific activities.

Take the daily press. There needs to be several earnest talks with the editor and his aid needs to be enlisted both in educating the community to the problem of desegregation and the role which the community needs to play. Earnest talks with the editor might come from a member of your "good folks committee" or even a single important individual in a community such as an advertiser or a clergyman or even from some outsider whose opinion he cherishes.

If we have learned anything from the experiences in Clinton, Sturgis, and Clay and other communities, it is that organizations like the White Citizens Council and the Ku Klux Klan and individual bigots can play an important role in impeding the desegregation process by acting as catalytic agents to stir up mob violence. Local individuals need to be alerted to the dangers of groups and individuals who fall into this category. The police force and the city officials informed that the community wants no violence. From the little knowledge I have of Southern cities, I am certain that there are a lot of people who might not be advanced enough in their thinking to be useful on your 'good folks committee' but who so abhor mob violence and the Klan mentality that if properly oriented they would insist that police officials take proper action. These good people can be activated frequently by outsiders like Mrs. Tilly, or your good self, or even an Arthur Levin. Many of them might respond to such direction more quickly than if asked by some local person. We must not overlook the fact that fighting the Klan or the White Citizens Council or mob violence requires a good deal of knowledge, experience and skill. There also ought to be a rather solid push to supplement the work of your 'good folks committee' by various individual groups. These groups could vary from a women's church group to a League of Women Voters unit to a B'nai B'rith Lodge. Frequently, individuals belonging to these groups may not want to meet jointly with representatives of other groups, races or faiths. Yet, they can be very helpful in their own quiet way in helping others in a time of crisis or in the long tough pull of integration per se.

Incidentally, if I have laid too much stress on mobs and violence and Klan-like organizations, it is because I feel that in many parts of the South these represent the first important obstacle to the desegregation process. Removing the threat of violence and intimidation I feel will speed up the desegregation process immeasurably.

I do hope You find these thoughts of some help. I look forward to seeing you. With all best wishes.

Cordially yours,

Alex

MEMORANDUM

December 11, 1956

To: Agencies Participating in the Consultative Conference on Desegregation.

From: The Southern Regional Council

Participants in the New York meeting on November 20, 1956 expressed the desire for a conference of Southern field representatives. The objective is to enable Southern staff persons of the several agencies to discuss their respective programs, develop ideas for inter-agency cooperation, and advise their national offices of ways in which the newly formed CCD might facilitate field coordination. Such a meeting has been arranged for January 23-24, 1957 at Atlanta University in Atlanta, Georgia.

This notice is being sent to all the agencies participating in CCD with the request that those which have staff members working in the Southern region notify us as follows:

(a) Whether you will be represented at the January 23-24 meeting.

(b) The name or names of the Southern staff personnel that will attend. (In order to hold the conference to a manageable size we are asking that each agency send no more than two representatives.)

(c) Any suggestions you may wish to offer for the agenda of the conference.

We will send the persons designated a further notice of the meeting, including details of time and place.

MEMORANDUM August 6, 1958

TO: Members of the Interreligious Committee, CCD

FROM: Roy McCorkel

Dear Friends:

Since my return from the Soviet Union on July 18, I have been exploring the possibility of proceeding with the conference across faith lines on desegregation, which we had planned to hold in Virginia early in September, to bear common witness on the racial conflict. I am extremely sorry to report that after consultation with Will Campbell, and after carefully considering all possibilities, it does not appear feasible to hold this conference in September, as anticipated. One important factor leading to this decision is that the Catholics are holding an interracial conference late in August in Chicago and it seems that they would not be able to give full support to the Virginia conference, since it would follow so closely after their own. Will Campbell and I deeply regret the postponement of this conference, as we know you do, especially since several attempts have been made to get such a conference underway without success. However, we will keep trying.

Best wishes for the holiday period.

Ever sincerely,

RMcC:r

Roy McCorkel.

PURPOSE OF CONFERENCE:

To have ten to fifteen important but relatively unpublicized Southern editors and civic leaders meet with the same number of leaders of important national and Northern publications to consider how both groups might more effectively develop a climate of opinion in which respect for law and order and a smoother path to desegregation will prevail.

The conference might consider a survey of the treatment of the desegregation problem in both Southern and Northern mass media.

Minutes

Meeting of Strategy Committee, May 18, 1956, New York, N.Y.

Present were:

Dr. Oscar Lee, National Council of Churches, presiding
Irving Ferman) American Civil Liberties Union Allan Reitman)
Edward Hollander, Americans for Democratic Action
Bert Seidman, AFL-CIO
Will Maslow, American Jewish Congress
Sol Rabkin, Anti-Defamation League
Emanuel Muravchik, Jewish Labor Committee
Dr. John Morsell) NAACP
Roy Wilkins)
Arnold Aronson, National Community Relations Advisory Council
Fay Bennett, National Sharecroppers Fund
Vera Rony, Workers Defense League
Odile Sweeney, YWCA

Dr. Lee recalled that the conference which had been convened by the National Council of Churches in February had authorized the formation of a "strategy committee" which could serve as a vehicle for coordinated planning on a continuous basis in relation to various problems arising out of the desegregation issue, other than the problems of relief and relocation for which a separate committee had been established. Many of these problems, he pointed out, were already being considered jointly through the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, in which a number of the same organizations attending the February conference are cooperating. Accordingly, he said, in order to avoid unnecessary duplication, a subcommittee on strategy, drawn from both groups, had been designated, and invitations to the present meeting had been sent to organizations represented on the Executive Committee of the Leadership Conference and to others represented at the February meeting. He then called on Dr. Morsell to report on the deliberation of the subcommittee.

Dr. Morsell observed that an exchange of views and information regarding desegregation had been taking place among the organizations. He pointed out, however, that such exchanges were on a staff level only, and that the principal officers of these same organizations had at no time had an opportunity to come together for similar interconsultation. It was the view of the subcommittee, he said, that the importance and complexity of the issues were such that effective coordination was not likely to be achieved until the responsible heads of the organizations concerned reviewed the problems jointly, formulated a common program, and indicated the roles and responsibilities each was prepared to assume. Accordingly, he reported, the subcommittee recommended that a meeting, involving the leaders of a number of religious, labor, civil rights and social welfare organizations be convened for these purposes. Dr. Morsell then presented a suggested outline for such a meeting which had been prepared by himself, Mr. Muravchik and Mr. Aronson upon instruction of the subcommittee.

Following extended discussion, it was agreed that:

I. An all day unpublicized meeting as recommended by the subcommittee be arranged for early September, either in Washington or New York.

(1) The meeting should not be called in the name of any organization. It was recommended that the call be issued over the joint signatures of the heads of the National Council of Churches, the National Catholic Welfare Conference and the Synagogue Council of America. Should this prove impracticable, the invitations should be signed by two or three other prominent individuals.

(2) In order to facilitate a maximum of informal discussion, attendance at the meeting should be limited to approximately forty persons, including both organizational heads and necessary staff personnel, drawn from the organizations most actively concerned with desegregation.

(3) In addition to the organizational representatives, individual Southerners, such as Drs. Frank Graham, Benjamin Mays and George Mitchell, should be invited in their personal capacities.

A committee consisting of Arnold Aronson, chairman, Oscar Lee, Alex Miller and Miss Odile Sweeney, was designated to draw up a list of invitees in accordance with the above recommendations.

II. The following topics recommended by Dr. Morsell's subcommittee were tentatively approved for inclusion on the agenda of the proposed meeting.

1. An overall review of the trends and developments in the Southern civil rights picture, including the problems which merit most immediate attention and the areas in which joint action could most usefully be sought.

2. Economic and industrial: Known or reported instances in which plans for industrial expansion in the South have been delayed or canceled because of the troubled racial situation and exploration of the best ways of exploiting such developments for propaganda purposes. Also consideration of the possible use of economic pressures to counteract the pressures now being exerted.

3. Voting: A comprehensive and up-to-date review and evaluation of the whole voting picture -- who votes, where and of what kind are the obstacles to voting, and what are the varying strategies that seem to be called for.

4. Education: The ideas to be discussed in connection with this point would have to do mainly with the chances and methods of involving such comparatively neutral organizations as the NEA and the PTA's in activities directed solely at preservation of the public school system. In other words, desegregation would not be offered as the focus of activity of such groups; the idea would be that if public sentiment is strongly enough set against tampering with the public school system, such tampering will have less chance of being urged as an alternative to desegregation.

5. Institutional influences: Discussion regarding the role of the various religious denominations, labor unions, and other organizations. Of chief importance would be the public position which they declare on the issue and the facilities which they may be able to furnish for the establishment and maintenance of communication with accessible Southern elements.

6. Political other than voting: This would be concerned with possible joint efforts to be pursued with respect to legislative and administrative activities in the field of civil rights.

7. The Citizens Councils: Attention here would center on the value and chances of an "intelligence" operation on the Councils --make up, personalities, methods and acts -- and of the most effective uses to which the resulting information could be put.

Cutting across all seven discussion items above are three areas of common interest around which joint discussions might be particularly useful. These are:

a. Communications within the South and among Southern moderates; and between Northern liberals and Southern moderates.

b. Information and intelligence: What might be done in the way of setting up some kind of information exchange or clearing house by which information relating to each of the seven topics might be gathered and through which it could be channeled. The existing information sources would receive full utilization.

c. The mass media: Here again is an area which can be discussed in connection with each of the seven topics.

A committee, consisting of Dr.Morsell, chairman, John Gunther, Emanuel Muravchik, Boris Shishkin, and Albert Vorspan, was given responsibility for drafting a definitive agenda within the broad framework outlined above.

Respectfully submitted,

AA:RB

Dear Arnie:

This is in reply to your memo of December 5th. Following the numbered paragraphs:

1. Our executive committee will probably meet sometime in January, at which time approval will be sought for Southern Regional Council's participation in CCD.

2. We have circularized CCD agencies re the January 23-24 conference of Southern field representatives. A copy of the memo has been mailed to you separately.

3. For the time being, continue to designate me for mass media and fact-finding.

4. The only other subcommittee on which SRC needs representation is "local community organizations." Fred Routh should be the man.

Sincerely,

Harold C. Fleming
Assistant Director

Re. this new memo from Arnie Aronson, CCD:

1. Do you wish SRC to join it?

2. They notice our Jan-23-24 mtg.

3. Arnie wants to know who is your mass media guy

4. Who's your fact-finder?

5. I hardly see that you need appoint representatives to any other of Arnie's committees than mass media and fact-finding; but see Arnie's number paragraph 4

The constitution, herewith, seems to me unexceptionable.

Suggest you write Arnie.

To: Participants in September 18 and/or November 20 Meeting

In order that we may proceed as soon as possible to carry out some of the decisions of the November 20 meeting, I would very much appreciate your cooperation on the following items:

(1) The enclosed report of the Subcommittee on Structure includes the text of the Constitution as approved. Please let me know at your earliest convenience whether your organization desires to participate in the Consultative Conference on Desegregation as set forth in the Constitution.

(2) A meeting of southern field representatives of the participating organizations will be held at Atlanta University in Atlanta on January 23-24 under the leadership of the Southern Regional Council. If your organization has a field representative working in the south whom you would like to have attend, please write to George Mitchell, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Ave., N.E., Atlanta, Ga., giving the name and address of the field representative to be invited. I would appreciate receiving a copy of such communication.

(3) Please send me the name and address of the person or persons in your agency responsible for work with the mass media. In accordance with the recommendation of the Subcommittee on Mass Media, we will compile and send you a master list of such persons to facilitate the distribution among the participating organizations of appropriate materials on desegregation.

The same procedure will be followed with respect to the dissemination of information of a fact-finding or investigatory nature. Please indicate whether the individuals responsible for the mass media in your agency also have responsibility for this area of activity. Where different personnel is involved, give the name and address of the person to whome fact-finding reports should be sent.

(4) The Executive Committee was charged with responsibility for the appointment of standing committees in the areas of mass media, fact-finding, community chests, interreligious activities, relief and relocation, local community organizations and liaison with uncommitted groups. Please advise on which of such committees your organization would like to be represented, giving the name of the appropriate person in each instance.

Your cooperation in furnishing the information requested at the earliest possible date will be most appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

Arnold Aronson

REPORT OF THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON STRUCTURE

There was unanimous agreement at the meeting of September 18 regarding the desirability of closer cooperation and inter-consultation among the many organizations committed to "the rapid and harmonious implementation of the Supreme Court decisions on desegregation." The Subcommittee on Structure took this unanimous expression as its point of departure in its search for an appropriate means of making such cooperation effective.

The Subcommittee was guided throughout its deliberations by its desire to avoid any structure suggestive of, or conducive to, a new super or supra organization. The sentiment of the September 18 meeting appeared equally clear on this. At the same time the Subcommittee is strongly of the opinion that the desired measure of cooperation cannot be achieved without some formal structure, however skeletal, to provide channels for orderly inter-communication as well as fixed responsibility for continuing inter-consultation.

The structure which the Subcommittee is proposing as outlined in the draft of By-laws which follows, is a minimal instrument designed to assure on the one hand, the complete freedom of action of the cooperating organizations, and, on the other, a continuing exchange of information, opinion, experiences and plans among the organizations.

It is assumed that the proposed Consultative Conference on Desegregation (C.C.D.) will conduct its operations for the most part through the existing resources of the participants. It seems probable that its work cannot proceed indefinitely and with the enlargement to be anticipated without the eventual employment of a paid secretary but it is not proposed that this step be taken initially.

It is also assumed that the cooperation among the participating organizations at the natioanl level will be complemented by similar inter-consultation among local units of the same organizations.

A copy of the proposed constitution follows.

I Name

The name of this association shall be The Consultative Conference on Desegregation.

II Purpose and Function

The purpose of the Conference shall be to facilitate cooperation among the participating organizations in relation to problems of desegregation. The Conference shall serve as a clearing house for the exchange of information, views, experiences, and plans, and for inter-consultation among the participating organizations. The Conference shall not engage in legislative or political action.

The Conference shall take no public action nor issue any public statement in its own name. Its offices may be used, however, to facilitate the issuance of joint statements by such of the participating organizations as desire to join in such a statement. Deliberations of the Conference, or of its committees, shall be advisory only, and shall not be binding upon the participating organizations. No organization or group of organizations shall be designated as representing or speaking for the Conference.

III Participation

The Conference shall be a voluntary association of organizations which are committed to support of desegregation and which seek to facilitate the rapid and harmonious implementation of the Supreme Court decisions thereon. Participation shall be open to any organization subscribing to these purposes, upon recommendation of the Executive Committee and approval of a majority of the participating organizations. Each organization shall be entitled to one vote. Participation in the Conference shall not in any way restrict the autonomy of the participating organizations.

IV Officers

The officers shall consist of three co-chairmen, a secretary and a treasurer, who shall be elected annually by the participating organizations.

The officers, together with 12 other members, also elected annually by the participating organizations, shall constitute an Executive Committee, which shall be responsible for the administration of the Conference, and for calling meetings of the Conference.

The Co-chairmen, with the approval of the Executive Committee, may appoint such standing or ad hoc committees as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of the Conference. Individuals who, by virtue of their interest, competence and experience, can make a constructive contribution to the work of the Conference or of its committees, may be appointed to such committees and invited to participate in the deliberations of the Conference, without reference to membership in any of the participating organizations.

V Finances

The Conference shall be financed by voluntary contributions and payments for materials and services by the participating organizations. Contributions from other organizations and individuals may be received on the approval of the Executive Committee.

VI Amendments

This constitution may be amended by a 2/3 vote of the participating organizations present and voting at a meeting called for that purpose.

Dear Harold:

As you can see from the enclosed, I have gone ahead with plans for a meeting on the 18th.

The response from the other members of the committee made this most advisable and while I know that it is not a convenient date for you I do hope that you will be able to attend. I believe that this first meeting will set the direction for much of our future activity and your participation will be invaluable. Incidentally, It would be helpful if we could have a report of the Atlanta meeting.

Please try to come.

Dear Harold:

I believe that the enclosed minutes of our Executive Committee meeting are self-explanatory. I assume that you have already received the minutes of the Mass Media Committee meeting together with the master mailing list which we are in the process of enlarging.

I have had a few requests for the summary of the Atlanta meeting and would appreciate receiving at least 10 additional copies if they can be made available. Can I assume that you have already send copies to everyone on the list circulated by Harry Fleishman?

Despite the dates listed in the enclosed minutes, we have not finally set any time for another Executive Committee meeting. I would very much appreciate your letting me know whether and when you plan to be in New York again so that we can take full advantage of your presence.

	Alex Miller	- Anti-Defamation League
	John Morsell	- NAACP
	Barbara Moffett	- American Friends Service Committe

Participation

Mr. Aronson reported that 26 organizations had formally voted to become participants in the CCD. He said that a few others were still awaiting action by their appropriate executive bodies. One organization, the AFL-CIO, had written expressing its desire to cooperate but stating that it could not "take organizational membership." Upon the suggestion of Mr. Oliver, it was agreed that a follow-up approach be undertaken in an effort to interpret the nature of the CCD to the AFL-CIO.

It was pointed out that invitations to the meetings that had given rise to the CCD had been extended to a limited number of organizations only. This limitation had been imposed in order to facilitate a maximum of informal discussion without, however, intending that future participation in the CCD be limited to the original invitees. It was suggested that members of the Executive Committee come to the next meeting prepared to suggest the names of additional organizations to which invitations to participate should be extended. Specifically, Miss Stamats and Dr. Weaver were asked to recommend the names of additional Protestant organizations, Father Shean and Mr. Hunton the names of Catholic organizations, and Mr. Oliver and Mr. Aronson the names of labor organizations.

Executive Committee

Mr. Aronson reported that two of the twelve members elected to the Executive Committee were from organizations that had not become participants in the CCD. These included the AFL-CIO, which had declined participation, and the National Council of Negro Women, which had failed to respond to the invitation. It was agreed that the matter of replacements on the Executive Committee be postponed until the next meeting. In order to assure maximum attendance at Executive Committee meetings, it was agreed that each officer and Executive Committee member be asked to designate an official alternate. It was suggested that the Executive Committee meet at approximately monthly intervals with the next meeting to be held in New York either on March 22 or 26 and the following meeting April 22 or 23.

Finances

Mr. Aronson reported that a check for $50 had been received from the National Council of Jewish Women and a pledge of $50 from the Commission on Christian Social Action of the Evangelical and Reformed Church. It was agreed that the Treasurer be authorized to open an account in the name of the CCD and to sign checks for necessary expenditures without any co-signator. It was further agreed that the Co-Chairmen also be authorized to sign checks. It was suggested that the Treasurer write to the participating organizations advising them of the funds already received and pledged, and calling their attention to the section in the Constitution providing that the CCD "shall be financed by voluntary contributions and payments for materials and services by the participating organizations."

Attention was called to the decision of the preceeding meeting authorizing the Executive Committee in its discretion to issue an appropriate release announcing the formation and purposes of the CCD. It was agreed to proceed with the printing of a letterhead but to withhold other public announcements until a later date.

Committees

The following standing committees and committee chairman were approved:

Interreligious Activities	- Father Maurice Shean
Mass Media	- Alfred Bernheim
Social Welfare Agencies	- Nelson Jackson
Fact Finding	- Arnold Forster
Local Community Organization	- Harold Fleming
Liaison With Non-Participating Groups	- NCCJ

The secretary was instructed to communicate with the committee chairman and to request that they proceed with the implementation of the programs as set forth in the previos meeting. It was recommended that to the extent possible a member of the Executive Committee serve on each of the standing committees and that minutes of standing committee meetings be sent to Executive Committee members and to each of the participating organizations.

Dr. Hager reported on the conference of the southern field staffs of the participating organizations that had been convened in Atlanta by the Southern Regional Council in accordance with the recommendations of the Committee on Local Community Organization at the last meeting. (A summary report of the conference has been sent under separate cover.) It was agreed that the conference had served a constructive purpose and that the organizations participating in the CCD should encourage their Southern field personnel to attend future meetings and to cooperate fully in the coordinated program that had been recommended.

While there was complete agreement that major attention at the present time should be focussed in the south, it was suggested that the cooperative program that had been initiated for the southern region might be followed to good advantage in other regions. Accordingly, it was suggested that the Committee on Local Community Organization consider the advisability of convening other regional conferences of the field staffs of the participating organizations, similar to the Atlanta conference.

There was a discussion of the threat to freedom of association and other constitutional liberties inherent in the current attacks on the NAACP. It was suggested that support on this issue might be enlisted from groups and individuals who were not necessarily sympathetic either to desegregation or the NAACP. It was recommended that the Committee on Liaison with Non-Participating Groups undertake to formulate a program in this regard. It was further recommended that the Committee consider ways and means of impressing business and industry leaders with the adverse effects of racial tension on the economic stability and growth of the south and of enlisting their support in programs of counteraction. Both of these subjects were also referred to the Committee on Mass Media for its consideration.

National Administration

There was a discussion of the pilgrimage to Washington proposed by Dr. Martin Luther King as a result of the announced inability of President Eisenhower to schedule an address in the south to encourage the maintenance of law and order. It was reported that several of the organizations in the CCD had been in communication with the White House on this issue but that efforts to secure an appointment with the President had been unsuccessful. It was pointed out that on several occasions the President had referred to the special role and responsibility of religious leaders in relation to the problems of desegregation and it was suggested that he might, therefore, be more receptive to a request from the Cochairmen of a representive body such as the CCD for a meeting than to a similar request from any one organization. Accordingly, it was recommended that the Cochairmen seek an appointment with the President. Upon a motion by Mrs. Simons, the secretary was directed to consult with the Cochairmen regarding ways and means of effecting more affirmative action by the National Administration and of giving effective support to Dr. King. In accordance with a suggestion by Mr. Miller, it was agreed that a special subcommittee undertake to draft proposed recommendations for action by the National Administration.

Dear Arnie:

Thanks for the minutes of the CCD Executive Committee meeting. I also received a copy of the Media Committee's minutes from Harry Fleischman.

I am going to be in New York next week from Tuesday afternoon probably 'til Friday. I have already written Harry that I hope to make the scheduled meeting of the Media Committee, and if there should be a meeting of the Executive Committee, I will try to make that too. I doubt, however, that you will want to try to arrange it this quickly.

In any case, I trust I will be seeing you.

FROM: Arnold Aronson, Secretary

Enclosed are minutes of the last meeting of the Executive Committee.

The next meeting will take place on June 6 at 1:45 p.m. in the offices of the National Council of Churches, 257 Fourth Avenue, New York City in the Conference Room on the 4th floor. As you will note from the minutes, organizations not holding membership on the Executive Committee will henceforth be invited to attend and participate in all future meetings. Please advise me the name of the person in your organization to whom such meeting notices should be addressed.

You have doubtlessly been receiving a number of materials on desegregation as part of the clearance process initiated by the Mass Media Committee. In the hope of facilitating the process, the Executive Committee has recommended that a more centralized method of distribution be undertaken.

Accordingly, may I ask that you send me for redistribution 100 copies of any material dealing with desegregation which you believe will be of interest to the other participating organizations. Notices of materials or programs being planned should also be included. It would be helpful if you would also include suggestions as to how the materials might best be used, as well as information regarding the availability and cost of quantity orders.

May I call your attention to the recommendation of the Executiv Committee, that participating organizations cooperate in the Prayer Pilgrimage to be held in Washington on May 17.

MINUTES OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING
APRIL 12, 1957

PRESENT WERE:

Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, Chairman
Frances Cahn, National Council of Jewish Women
Alex Miller, Anti-Defamation League
John Morsell, NAACP
Savilla Simons, YWCA
Esther Stamats, United Church Women
Galen Weaver, National Council of Churches
Roy Wilkins, NAACP
Clarence Yarrow, American Friends Service Committee
Arnold Aronson, NCRAC, Secretary

The minutes of the preceding meeting were approved as submitted.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the treasurer to open an account in the Provident Trust Company of Philadelphia. Dr. Blake volunteered to join with the other Co-chairmen in sending a letter to all participating organizations urging them to make a financial contribution as set forth in the Constitution, to help cover the costs of stationery, postage and other operating expenses.

Participation

It was reported that two additional organizations had voted to become participants in the CCD, bringing the total to thirty. A few other organizations were reported as still awaiting approval by their appropriate executive bodies. It was recommended that the National Council of Catholic Women, the Southern Leaders Conference and the United Steel Workers of America be invited to become participants.

It was reported that four organizations, which were unable to become formal participants, had written expressing their desire to cooperate with the CCD and to be kept informed of activities and developments. In this connection, it was pointed out that the Constitution provides that "Individuals who, by virtue of their interest, competence and experience, can make a constructive contribution to the work of the Conference or of its committees, may be appointed to such committees and invited to participate in the deliberations of the Conference, without reference to membership in any of the participating organizations." Accordingly, the secretary was authorized to establish liaison with interested organizations and individuals and to add their names to the mailing list for the receipt of appropriate information and materials.

Committee Reports

Mass Media

The Mass Media Committee is currently preparing a comprehensive bibliography of available printed materials, films and kinescopes on desegregation. It is expected that the bibliography will be completed and available for distribution shortly.

A list of persons in each of the participating organizations concerned with the mass media has been prepared and distributed. Participating organizations have been urged to send copies of relevant materials to all persons on the list.

It was the consensus of the Executive Committee that the clearance procedure would be accelerated and improved if the materials were to be distributed from a central source. It was suggested that some organizations find it difficult to send materials to the entire mailing list and that changes in the list itself add to this difficulty. It was pointed out, moreover that under the existing procedure organizations have no way of knowing that materials they have recently been receiving are being made available to them as part of the CCD clearance process. Accordingly, it was recommended that the secretary write to the participating organizations urging them, as a matter of routine, to send him a bulk quantity of whatever mass media materials they produce and that he, in turn, undertake to redistribute these among the participating organizations.

Relief and Relocation

A report was received of the meeting of the Committee on Relief and Relocation that had been held the preceding day. Copies of the minutes will be made available shortly.

The Committee is undertaking to survey requests for relief coming to the attention of the participating organizations and available resources for meeting these requests. It has suggested that consideration be given to a pooling of resources and the establishment of a central fund for relief grants.

Although the Executive Committee approved the proposed survey of needs and resources, it was of the opinion that the administration of a central fund represented a functional activity requiring professional staff. It recommended that the Relief Committee limit its function to that of clearance and coordination, with referral of relief requests to appropriate agencies.

The Relief Committee is also preparing a report of recent developments in Koinonia Farm. A branch of the Farm has been established in New Jersey and a committee organized to solicit financial support. The report and recommendations for action will be distributed shortly to all of the participating organizations.

National Administration

There was a discussion of ways and means of effecting more affirmative action by the National Administration.

Mr. Miller reported on recent conversations with officials in the Justice Department. He indicated that these officials had expressed a sense of frustration and of futility at their failure to secure indictments in situations in which the Department had intervened and at their inability to enter into other situations.

There appeared to be complete agreement that the seemingly neutral attitude of the Administration with respect to intimidations and violence tended to lend encouragement to resistance forces. It was also agreed that affirmative leadership by the President could have a significant effect in changing the climate of opinion. Doubt was expressed, however, that the President was likely to make any major address on the subject or to issue the kind of statement that was to be desired. It was noted, in this connection, that during his past several press conferences, the President had failed to recognize the reporter of any Negro newspaper for a question.

Dr. Blake suggested that an appeal for Presidential action to curb lawlessness and violence was likely to be more productive than an appeal for assistance in accelerating desegregation. He said that it was his opinion that an appointment with the President could be secured and he indicated his willingness to request such an appointment, provided that a comprehensive report of instances of bombings and violence and a detailed set of recommendations for Presidential action were prepared in advance.

Mr. Miller volunteered to develop a report embodying the information suggested by Dr. Blake.

May 17 Pilgrimage

Mr. Wilkins reported on plans for a prayer pilgrimage to be held at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington on May 17. It is hoped that a minimum of 50,000 persons will be in attendance. The pilgrimage is not intended as a rebuke to the Administration but as an out pouring of public expression, with the following objectives in view, (1) commemoration of the 3rd anniversary of the Supreme Court decision on school desegregation (2) protest against lawlessness and violence (3) protest against legislative and administrative actions designed to curb the NAACP and other organizations supporting desegregation (4) support for pending federal civil rights legislation. It is planned that the program will begin at noon, to coincide with the convening of the Supreme Court, and will include prayers, scripture readings, speeches and appropriate music. No direct demands for Presidential action will be made. The entire program is expected to last for about three hours. The call to the pilgrimage is being issued over the signatures of Rev. Martin Luther King, A. Philip Randolph and Mr. Wilkins and invitations will be extended to all groups and organizations.

The Executive Committee recommended that organizations participating in the CCD cooperate with the pilgrimage and undertake to be represented by a top official and to encourage attendance by their constituents.

Attacks on the NAACP

Mr. Wilkins reported that the NAACP is challenging the recently enacted laws in Virginia and that hearings in the federal courts are scheduled to take place in June. Similar action is contemplated in Tennessee and other states. He emphasized the importance of obtaining statements in opposition to these restrictive laws from local affiliates of the participating organizations. Referring to recent efforts in the South to discredit the NAACP as "Communist", Mr. Wilkins reported receipt of a recent communication from the Attorney General refuting such charges.

It was recommended that copies of the Attorney General's letter be distributed among the participating organizations and that efforts be made to give it as wide a circulation as possible (see copy attached).

Meeting Dates

The next meeting of the Executive Committee was scheduled for the afternoon of June 6 in the offices of the National Council of Churches. It was further agreed to hold a Plenary Session in Washington on September 17. At the suggestion of the Secretary, it was recommended that henceforth all organizations participating in the CCD be invited to attend and to participate in Executive Committee meetings.

Respectfully submitted,

To Organizations Participating in the Consultative Conference on Desegregation

Dear Brethren:

As you may remember, the Constitution of the Consultative Conference provides "the Conference shall be financed by voluntary contributions and payments for materials and service by the participating organizations." So far, our Conference has been carried largely by donated services and even donated postage. There is need, however, for a small fund to take care of stationery, secretarial work, postage, etc. The Treasurer received from one of the participating organizations a check for fifty dollars some little time ago and there is promise at least of another fifty dollar check coming from another organization.

At the request of the Executive Committee, we the undersigned Co-Chairmen are writing you to ask if it is possible for you to make a check to the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, Lewis M. Hoskins, Treasurer, and send it to the Secretary, Mr. Arnold Aronson, 9 East 38th Street, New York 16, New York. This small fund, so subscribed by the participating organizations, will care for the necessary expenses unless and until at the next general meeting it is decided to implement some larger program. We should say, however, that there is no present recommendation to that effect contemplated.

Ever cordially yours,

Dear Harold:

This will acknowledge with grateful appreciation your check for $25. Considering the south's traditional low per capita, to say nothing of the SRC's own need for funds, this is indeed a most generous and tangible evidence of support for the CCD. We are truly grateful.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Harold:

Your memo of August 22 re Anticipated Public School Desegregation in Southern and Border States, which arrived this morning, would, I am certain, be of interest to all of the organizations in the CCD. Our present mailing list is about 100, including your southern group. Could you send me a sufficient number of copies for redistribution to those organizations which did not receive the memo directly from you?

TO: All Participating Organizations

FROM: Arnold Aronson, Secretary

Recent developments in Little Rock, Sturgis, and elsewhere give particular timeliness to our Plenary Session, scheduled for September 16-17 at the Willard Hotel, Washington, D.C., and reinforce the need for us to take counsel together.

Responses thus far received to my original announcement of the Session indicate that it will be well attended, with participation broadly representative of our affiliated organizations. Plans for the program are sufficiently in hand at this writing to assure an interesting and stimulating Conference.

The current situation in Arkansas will be much in our minds when we address ourselves on Monday evening to the problems of organizing local communities behind school desegregation processes.

At luncheon that same day, a spokesman for the Justice Department will outline the Department's plans for proceeding under the new civil rights law and we shall have full opportunity to discuss with him, and among ourselves, how voluntary organizations can aid Negroes in exercising their voting rights.

At the opening Session on Monday morning, the Rev. Clarence Jordan, of the Koinonia Communities, will make a presentation of Koinonia's experience since our last meeting; and we shall consider how interorganizational cooperation in behalf of this venture in interracial living can further help to sustain it in the face of continuing attack.

The program for Tuesday contemplates two or three concurrent workshops, in which small groups can focus their attention upon practical problems, such as those involved in the utilization of media of communication, the furtherance of cooperation among the religious bodies, ways and means of involving industry and unions more effectively in the desegregation process.

There will be a luncheon speaker on Tuesday and the afternoon will be devoted to a business meeting.

If you have not already done so, please designate your representatives to the Plenary Session without further delay, so that we may be sure of completing all the necessary arrangements in ample time.

TO: All Participating Organizations

FROM: Arnold Aronson, Secretary

The CCD will meet in plenary session on September 16-17 at the Willard Hotel, Washington, D.C. In accordance with the recommendation of the Executive Committee, southern field personnel of the participating organizations will be in attendance so as to maximize the opportunity for interconsultation and joint planning at the national and local levels.

In order to cover the many urgent problems of common concern in the time available, it will be necessary to schedule some sessions concurrently. We are certain that each organization will wish to be represented at all sessions and we suggest, therefore, that you plan to have three or more delegates attend the meeting.

The sessions will begin at 10:30 A.M. on Monday, September 16 and will adjourn no later than 5:00 P.M. on Tuesday, the 17th. A group luncheon will be served on both days. A detailed agenda is in preparation and will be sent to you in advance of the meeting.

The Willard Hotel is reserving a number of single rooms for us beginning at $8.50 and twin-bedded rooms beginning at $13.00. Please fill out the enclosed form and return it to me at your earliest convenience indicating the names of your delegates and the type of accommodations desired.

Dear Arnie:

This may find you still on vacation, but at least it will be waiting for you on your return.

First, as to the voting panel, I can now suggest a labor participant. Emory Via, our labor consultant advises that the guy most likely to have an overall grasp of Negro suffrage from the unions' point of view is Henry Zon, research director of COPE, in Washington.

I was able to arrange with Philip Hammer to be present Tuesday the 16th for the economics workshop. SRC will cover his expenses. Hammer, you remember, is the president of Hammer & Company of Atlanta, planning consultants to business and industry. He was the research director for the Ashmore Project, former executive officer of the NPA's Committee for the South, and former director of the Atlanta Metropolitan Planning Commission. He is an SRC board member and conducted for us a detailed study of post-war industrialization in the South.

With apologies for dealing with so many different matters, here is another. Wilton S. Dillon, Executive Secretary of the Phelps-Stokes Fund, was just here. He is developing program for the Fund in this field and is very much interested in the September 16-17 meeting. I think he would be a useful addition and hope you will feel it proper to send him a reservation form at the Phelps-Stokes Fund, 101 Park Avenue, New York 17.

Interorganizational Cooperation in Behalf of Koinonia Farm

Discussion Leader: Dr. J. Oscar Lee, National Council of the Churches of Christ, Co-Chairman CCD Committee on Relief and Relocation.

Consultant: Rev. Clarence Jordan, Co-founder Koinonia Farms

Rapporteur: Fay Bennett, National Sharecroppers Fund, Co-Chairman CCD Committee.

Miss Bennett reported that four meetings of the Committee had been held and a number of specific requests for economic aid handled. She pointed out that the overall problem of direct relief was not great but that the real need is for low-cost credit. She observed that this has always been a problem in the South and accounts for the fact that sharecroppers and tenant farmers have been tied to the land and unable to strike out for themselves. The chronic lack of low-cost credit has been aggravated in certain situations because of the stand taken for civil rights. In these latter cases, a number of organizations cooperating through the Committee on Relief have given direct help. Among these are American Friends Service Committee - Rights of Conscience Program, National Council of Churches, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and National Sharecroppers Fund. Miss Bennett reported that there had been no defaults on any of these loans. In addition, a number of the denominations have set aside certain funds which have been drawn upon for such cases by the denomination itself. Further, several organizations have been of help by having funds deposited with several of the banks where loans to sharecroppers and others have been carried through.

Miss Bennett emphasized that in several cases of urgent need involving fairly large sums, the amount of work entailed in raising the necessary sum has been very great and the funds have been raised with much difficulty. It was suggested that if an overall fund could be set up to be drawn upon in such cases it would be of immense value. An alternative would be for the various interested organizations to set aside funds which could be drawn upon immediately in cases of proven need.

Rev. Jordan spoke on the past and present problems facing the Koinonia communities. There are now two Koinonia farms, the second one having been recently established in New Jersey.

He described the recent events which have caused great hardship to the Koinonia community. First came legal pressure against their summer camp, the economic pressure, the refusal to buy their products, or to sell their goods, and finally, physical violence -- fire, gunshot and dynamite -- 18 attacks in all.

Rev. Jordan indicated that the physical violence seems to have been stopped but that the economic pressure has been increased. He said that no action had been taken to prevent violence until the bombing of a feed store which sold to Koinonia resulted in shattering the windows of the local courthouse and bank. Because of the increasing economic pressure, which made it impossible to purchase supplies or services within a 100 mile radius. Koinonia has had to give up its poultry and its farming operation, which depended on irrigation, and has decided to concentrate on the pecan shelling business, which can function without need of local services. To carry on an efficient pecan shelling business, $50,000 in new capital is needed by Koinonia. To raise this sum they are asking 2,000 people who wish to participate in this effort to invest $25 each at 4% interest. Funds are coming in for this purpose and Koinonia is proceeding with installing the necessary machinery in order to be prepared for the fall pecan crop.

Rev. Jordan reported that the campaign to raise $100,000 in voluntary insurance pledges had brought in $115,000. He expressed appreciation for the assistance received from CCD organizations in this effort and declared that without such assistance Koinonia could have been unable to survive.

In response to a question, he estimated that perhaps 20% of the financial help was comingfrom individuals in Southern states. He said that a basic need of the community was for persons dedicated to its principles to join the community as permanent members. Of the original 60 members, 35 remain in Americus and 20, including all the negro children, are in the newly established New Jersey farm.

As a result of the discussion following Rev. Jordan's presentation, the following recommendations were referred to the Committee for its consideration.

1. That information regarding relief needs and recommendations for action in specific situations be distributed more widely among the organizations participating in the CCD.

2. That the Committee undertake to develop procedures for more effective clearance of information regarding pressures on or by community chests against beneficiary agencies because of positions taken by such agencies in support of desegregation.

3. That CCD organizations assume responsibility for notifying the Committee of situations arising out of the desegregation issue in which there is a need for economic assistance.

4. That the Committee seek to compile information regarding the policies and practices of CCD organizations with respect to such relief problems.

How Voluntary Organizations Can Help Effectuate the Purposes of the New Civil Rights Law

Discussion Leader: Joseph L. Rauh, Jr., Americans for Democratic Action

Consultants: Patrick Murphy Malin, American Civil Liberties Union
W. C. Patton, Alabama Coordinating Council for Registration and Voting
Fred Routh, Southern Regional Council

Rapporteur: Dr. John Morsell, NAACP

Mr. Rauh outlined the provisions of the recently enacted federal civil rights law and the steps leading to its enactment. He expressed the opinion that the close vote at the opening of the Congress on the effort to adopt new Senate rules assumed the passage of some civil rights measure, while leaving the kind of bill undetermined. Although the bill as finally enacted fell short of what civil rights advocates had urged, it was, he said, better than might have been expected and represented a significant forward step. Credit for this result, he added, was due in large measure to effective cooperation among the many organizations associated in the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights. He expressed the opinion that that material improvement in the ability of Negroes to vote in the South could be expected if the law is intelligently and earnestly applied. The development of an alert, informed and sizeable Negro electorate, he concluded, would compel Southern political leadership at the state and community level to become responsive to Negro demands and could thus be of major significance in helping to resolve current problems.

Mr. Malin said that he was less sanguine about the bill than Mr. Rauh. While agreeing that it was "better than no bill at all," he voiced doubt that it would result in any significant improvement in voting opportunities for southern Negroes. Nevertheless, he joined with Mr. Rauh in urging concerted pressure on the Administration and the Justice Department for prompt and vigorous enforcement in order to realize the maximum potential from the new law.

Mr. Fred Routh described the survey of Negro registration and voting undertaken by the Southern Regional Council. He felt there was no reason to mistrust the data even in cases where there were no official figures and they had to rely on estimates.

The studies have shown a slow but steady rise in the number of Negro voters in the South over the last ten years. At the same time, however, there is some indication that the rate of increase has decreased. So far as generalizations are concerned the figures suggest that the percentage of Negroes registered and voting varies in proportion to (a) their degree of urbanization, and (b) the extent to which they are economically independent of whites.

Routh feels that the term "apathy" is all too frequently misused when it is applied to the apparent indifference to voting exhibited by many southern Negroes. He noted, for example, that the Negro voter is generally faced with an almost total lack of choices when he does go to the polls, since opposing candidates are generally vying with each other in the expression of extreme white supremacy sentiments. This, of course, points to the need for organization within the Negro community for the purpose of making careful evaluations and setting forth some kind of choice which the Negro voter can make.

It was also pointed out in the discussion that initially, under the circumstances, it is not too important which candidate Negro voters choose; the important thing is that they do vote and that they thus demonstrate the potential strength which they possess. Politics being what it is, it is unlikely that this potential will long remain neglected by vote-seekers.

Mr. W. C. Patton of the Alabama Coordinating Counil for Registration and Voting discussed in some detail the varied kinds of informal and official pressure employed against Negroes in Alabama in the effort, largely successful thus far, to hold their voting to a mimimum. He also discussed the efforts which have been made to organize the Negro community and to campaign for increased qualification of Negro voters. Some indication of the success of these efforts was given in the fact that a 1951 survey showed between fifteen and twenty-five thousand qualified Negro voters in Alabama, whereas the figure last year is believed to have been between fifty and seventy-five thousand.

Particularly in urban areas such methods as block organization, door-to-door canvassing, public meetings, widespread distribution of posters, stickers and leaflets have been very effective. Effective also have been the voter clinics which the Council has held. According to Patton, at least ninety percent of the "graduates" of these clinics have qualified at their first registration attempt.

Following extensive discussion, the following recommendations were advanced:

1. That the President be called upon to proceed promptly to appoint the members of the Civil Rights Commission and to designate unqualified supporters of civil rights to these positions. Similar action was recommended with respect to the Director of the Commission and the new Assistant Attorney General.

It was emphasized that the Commission expires two years from the date the law was signed and that each day's delay in the appointment of the Commission represents a corresponding cut in the time available for its work. It was further pointed out that whereas recess appointments would enable the Commission to begin its work at once, appointees named after Congress reconvenes will be unable to take office until they have been confirmed by the Senate, thus resulting in an additional delay of several months.

2. That the Commission be urged to interpret its mandate as broadly as possible. It was pointed out that the powers and duties of the Commission are not too clearly defined. A liberal interpretation of the provision calling for "study of legal developments affecting equal protection of the laws", for example, would enable the Commission to investigate a wide variety of situations and issues over and beyond problems of voting.

3. That CCD organizations undertake to accumulate data regarding voting and other civil rights violations and be prepared to present testimony at hearings of the Commission.

4. That appropriate materials be prepared and disseminated designed to create greater public understanding of the purposes and provisions of the law. It was suggested that knowledge of the broad powers given to the federal courts under the law might have a salutary effect.

5. That a comprehensive educational campaign be undertaken aimed at increasing Negro registration and voting in the South.

It was pointed out that in some areas prospective Negro registrants must be vouched for and accompanied by a white voter. It was suggested that CCD organizations might be helpful in enabling Negroes to meet this requirement.

Organizing the Local Community for School Desegregation

Discussion Leader: Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council, Chairman, CCD Committee on Local Community Organization

Consultants: Tartt Bell, American Friends Service Committee
Dr. Will Campbell, National Council of Churches
John Hope, American Missionary Association

Rapporteur: Frederick B. Routh, Southern Regional Council

Tartt Bell reported on school desegregation in North Carolina. He said that although consultations looking toward integration had taken place among the school boards of six communities, only three, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Charlotte, had moved forward and then on a token basis only involving a total of twelve children.

Under the State's plan the burden and initiative is placed fully on the shoulders of the Negro parent. One of the problems in North Carolina is that the public - white and Negro - does not seem to understand the concept of public schools. The white community thinks of the white schools as "our schools" and the Negro community of the Negro schools as "our schools", but the white people see the Negro children as attending "their school" rather than a public school.

Among the positive factors in the North Carolina situation was the willingness of the state to permit local school boards to proceed with their own plans, firm statements against violence by the governor, and his pledge to maintain law and order.

Mr. Bell emphasized the importance of effective police action. He reported a genuine fear on the part of a number of North Carolinians that local police protection would be inadequate in some of the remoter rural areas. This fear is one of the potent deterrents to the consideration of wider desegregation in North Carolina.

On the employment side the experience in North Carolina has been that the new Northern-owned plants, rather than following policies of their Northern counterparts, are accepting the discriminatory patterns of the South.

Dr. Campbell observed that in his opinion Little Rock is potentially more dangerous than even Birmingham, Alabama. The reason is that in the latter attitudes are so stringent and the disparity in strength so overwhelming that non-violence is the only feasible strategy for the minority. In Little Rock, on the other hand, the situation admits of more than this single alternative.

At the same time the consensus of the opinion which he had encountered in Little Rock during his stay was that there was no evidence that the governor's alleged fears were well-founded. No one shared his apprehensions, and there were, as a matter of fact, so many positive elements in the situation that it was believed that a simple and clear show of firmness would have sufficed to stem any attempts at violence. Most of the people to whom he talked were completely at a loss to account for the governor's action and felt that there was no rational explanation for it.

Dr. Campbell reported that several ministers in Little Rock had been ready to go down to the school area and to assist the Negro children in entering the school. He observed that the willingness of the clergy to act publicly was an encouraging sign that had not been manifested in other communities.

John Hope reviewed the activities of the voluntary groups and community organizations in Nashville, Tennessee, where they made consistent and resonably effective efforts through consultation and publicity to develop a sound community atmosphere for the impending desegregation.

The Nashville Conference on Community Relations was started in September of 1956. It is headed by an industrialist, and it took over the official contacts with public officials in the community. The Conference had 300 members by September 1, 1957. The Conference's first act was to get a petition signed by key prestige people of the community calling for law and order. However, the Conference rebuffed all offers of cooperation, help or assistance from local University human relations experts. In spite of their obvious good intentions and their recognition of the need for advance planning, he felt that their actual operation lacked the necessary speed and flexibility.

According to Dr. Hope, city officials did and said the right things, but their lack of knowledge and understanding of human relations conflict made for bad timing. The local police attitude was, "You can't get rough until the situation is bad enough to carry public opinion with you." Thus, the mobs were permitted to gather and the rabble rousers to run free until they blew up the Hatte Cotton Schools. Only then did the local police really crack down. Dr. Hope emphasized the dangers in attempting to delay vigorous police action until violence occurs.

Mr. Fleming reported that the Committee on Local Community Organization had held four meetings, involving southern staff members of the participating organizations, and had made considerable progress toward effective interagency cooperation. He reported that the southern staff members had held a separate session that morning and had formulated a number of recommendations for presentation to the total group. He read the following eight recommendations:

1. All CCD meetings, including Executive Committee meetings, should be scheduled at least three months in advance so that Southern members might plan to attend.

2. Each national agency should try to bring one Southern staff member to at least one CCD meeting per year.

3. That some national agency with a high degree of legal skill should attempt to organize a chain of sympathetic and well qualified lawyers across the South to assist intergroup agencies who are beset with legal problems growing out of legislative action or executive order by State Governments.

4. There is need for an inter-agency cooperative effort in fact finding. This should not be research for the sake of research, but fact finding which is action oriented. For example: there is a crying need to document discrimination in registration practices to present to the new Commission on Civil Rights.

5. There is a need for inter-agency cooperative effort to strengthen and improve law enforcement practices in the South. This would have particular reference to mob control and the prevention of violence.

6. Southern representatives of national agencies should pool their insights and experiences for use by communities which face desegregation.

7. Thechurches and church groups have a special responsibility to reinforce the children and the parents who are going through desegregation experiences.

8. It is recommended that CCD's structure and constitution be reconsidered now that we have completed one year's effort. There is need to reexamine the various committees to see whether or not they are functioning as now defined.

During the discussion which followed several points were brought out:

Pat Malin of the ACLU described the growth of cooperating attorneys in the nine southeastern states from only twelve a year ago to more than one hundred at the present time.

Isaac Toubin of the American Jewish Congress stated that he would present the request for legal assistance before the governing body of his organization. He expressed the opinion that the request would receive favorable consideration and that the Congress might be able to make a staff person available for this purpose.

A member of the fact finding committee reported that it had not been operative and that there was a need to reactivate it immediately. It was pointed out that there was need to document discrimination in a) the area of voting rights, b) the area of equal employment opportunities, and c) the area of school desegregation. It was also pointed out that there was a need for a coordinated plan to develop what type of facts we need to cover.

A need was expressed for a listing of sympathetic key people in the various communities of the South. It was recommended that such a list be pulled together and that those who are listed be briefed on what is happening and what is expected of them. It was hoped that in this manner an indiginous leadership group could contribute their thinking to the inter-agency cooperative effort. Two measures of caution were expressed: a) great care must be taken in the distribution of such lists, and b) it must be insisted that local constituents are indeed local and that all agencies may not have such constituents in every key community.

UTILIZING THE MEDIA OF COMMUNICATION

Discussion Leader: Alfred L. Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Chairman, CCD Mass Media Committee.

Rapporteur: Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

Mr. Bernheim delineated the main purpose of the workshop as an opportunity for interchange of ideas and of information between national and Southern field staffs of CCD organizations. The Mass Media Committee, he pointed out, deals with all materials used to educate people, written or audio-visual and operates through voluntary acceptances of assignments by the participating organizations.

After its scope and functions had been approved by the Executive Committee, Mr. Bernheim said, the MMC held six meetings, at monthly intervals. Attendance represented six to nine organizations at each session.

Among actions taken, omitting details, were the following:

Caused to be prepared and distributed lists of persons designated by agencies to receive mass media material.

Caused to be prepared a bibliography of material on desegregation, which brought up to date the bibliography of the University of Florida.

Caused to be prepared a catalogue of films, transcriptions and kinescopes dealing with desegregation (not quite completed).

Established clearence procedures through which materials bearing on desegregation are circulated among all the participating organizations.

Initiated series of conferences with outside public relations experts, for the purpose of getting their advice and help. The first conference was held with Edward Bernays in June. It is hoped that a meeting will be arranged with Elmo Roper in October.

Stimulated subscriptions from among the participating organizations to the Petal Paper, thus helping to assure its continued publication.

Exchanged information about the mass media activities, in the works or planned for near future by the organizations represented at the meetings. This information was transmitted to the other participating agencies through the minutes.

Problems were discussed among the agencies represented, and suggestions were made as to what might be done in respect to them. Conclusions and decisions transmitted to the other member agencies through the minutes.

Among the questions considered by the Workshop were the following:

1. Can we use the mass media to stress the economic costs of racial tension in the South to secure support for law and order by business, legal and other groups with status in the community?

2. Can we promote the use in Southern and national mass media of successful cases of school and other integration?

3. How can we counter the efforts by segregationists to use as weapons against integration the educational disparities disclosed when schools integrate -- as in Washington, D.C.?

4. Can we use the new Voting Rights law and school integration cases to spur Southern liberals and moderates to speak up for decency?

5. How can we use the mass media to create opportunities to stress support for law and order?

6. How can the mass media counter the trend by Southern segregationists to join the Klan and use violence (because of their disillusionment over alleged failure of legal methods to stop desegregation)?

It was reported that Business Week is planning a major story on the economic problems arising in the South from integration difficulties. It will probably appear in its October 19th issue and will deal with such questions as: Have race difficulties affected the sale of new school bonds; Are Negroes finding it any harder to get bank loans, credit or insurance; are Negro banks showing local growth?

Other questions it will consider include: Have race difficulties been reflected in real estate transactions, and is fear of eventual integration of public schools leading to a growth of enrollment in white private schools?

It will report examples of racial difficulties slowing down influx of new businesses and industry, due to reluctance of employers, with government contracts that require fair employment guarantees, to locate in pro-segregation states. The article will deal with boycotts aimed at either white or Negro groups; apprehension among businessmen over lost business due to race tension; activity by local Chambers of Commerce in this field and the present situation in Southern unions.

It will also inquire into whether or not there is fear that loss of Negro labor may hamper future Southern economic expansion; and whether plant personnel officers have noticed any racial tension among their work forces?

CCD people are helping to provide answers to some of these questions.

Workshop participants suggested that it might be possible to contact the Louisville Courier-Journal, or one of the TV or radio stations which have done a good job in reporting the success story of integration in its area for a report on how the mass media job was done. This might be used in connection with a manual prepared for use by local people on how to deal with local mass media. Alex Morisey of the American Friends Service Committee agreed to work with Harold Fleming of the Southern Regional Council on this project.

It was suggested that it might be useful to have an article printed in a popular magazine analyzing how the nation's press, including the Southern papers, handle the desegregation issue. The Society of Newspaper Editors and the Association of Southern Nieman Fellows were two prospects mentioned for doing the job. Publications to carry such a story might include Time's press section; New York Times Sunday Magazine; Life.

It was also suggested that it would be helpful if an important paper - like the Louisville Courier-Journal - should ask Associated Press to do a series on successful cases of school integration.

Since the South reacts to national opinion, it was felt that stronger support in national mass media for desegregation would help bolster law and order and pro-integration forces in the South. We were also warned to be on guard to counteract a forthcoming well-financed Southern segregationist propaganda drive.

Bill of Rights Day comes on December 15th, with October 29th serving as the 10th anniversary of the Report of President Truman's Civil Rights Committee, TO SECURE THESE RIGHTS. It was suggested that members of that committee (all but two are still alive) might be secured for local and national radio and television appearances celebrating progress since the report was first issued.

Segregationists from the South frequently send letters to Northern papers defending their viewpoint. It was suggested that a reverse twist might be useful -- that of having transplanted former Southerners write to their former home-town papers telling them how well integration works.

It was felt that the work of the Mass Media Committee would be greatly bolstered if CCD had better fact-finding machinery. One suggestion was for more organizations to participate in the work of the Mass Media Committee, and for all CCD agencies to report their mass media plans and programs promptly to the secretary of CCD's Mass Media Committee.

Workshop B

Interreligious Cooperation for Desegregation

Discussion Leader: Dr. Roy McCorkel, National Conference of Christians and Jews; Chairman CCD Committee on Interreligious Cooperation

Rapporteur: Paul N. Rilling, Southern Area Council, YMCA

Dr. McCorkel reviewed the recommendations for action previously adopted by the Committee on Interreligious Cooperation.

It was the sense of the meeting that interreligious co-operation for better intergroup relations is essential, that not enough of it exists, that the CCD channels should be used to foster more such co-operation, and that such cooperation can be achieved most effectively at the local level. The group took notice of the difference in structure and organization of the various religious groups, a situation which makes it possible for some groups to move faster and further than others in the same situation. It was emphasized that interreligious co-operation can sometimes take place most effectively in a non-religious framework, such as the success that religious groups have found co-operating through the councils on human relations in Alabama and elsewhere.

The workshop came up with eleven specific recommendations, as follows:

1. That the channels of C.C.D. organizations be used to stimulate local community meetings of representatives of the organizations involved. It was suggested that perhaps during the coming year such efforts could be made in ten selected cities of the South.

2. That the Committee on Interreligious Cooperation should be a more active and continuing body than has been true in the past, that it should serve as a national coordinating clearing house for interreligious co-operation in this field.

3. That church groups co-operate in local situations by involving youth within the various religious groups. This might be done by co-operation with schools, by special workshops and instruction in churches, through church schools and young people's groups, etc. It was pointed out that youth are caught in the middle when school desegregation tensions arise, and that some preparation is needed in this area. It was felt, however, that youth should not be pushed out in front, but that this orientation should involve other church age groups as well.

4. That churches could be of value in working out strategy by which the soon to be created Civil Rights Commission could be used as a forum on problems in this area. It was particularly emphasized that churches should make use of local hearings of the Commission when and as these develop.

5. That church groups go much further in the sharing of experiences and case studies concerning desegregation of churches and experience of religious groups dealing with matters of human relations. Members of the group felt that many churches could profit from the experience that some had moved through.

6. That the possibility of a South-wide interfaith meeting on human relations be explored. The success of the recent Protestant meeting of churchmen in Nashville was noted, and it was felt that such a meeting involving Catholic and Jewish groups would be most effective.

7. That religious and moral pressure on the President through religious groups be continued in the hope that it will lead to stronger moral leadership on the part of the President.

8. The value of a unified religious statement cutting across interfaith lines and dealing with the subject of desegregation was considered. It was felt that such a statement would provide important moral leverage by presenting a unified front of all religious groups. It was realized, however, that it would be quite difficult because of differing church structures to develop such a unified statement. It was therefore recommended that perhaps Protestant, Catholic and Jewish statements be published side by side in a brief form which would be given wide circulation.

9. All religious groups in the South were urged to encourage and extend interfaith work among women relating to the area of racial tensions. It was noted that some such work had gone forward under the leadership of Mrs. Tilley of the Southern Regional Council, and members of the group felt that more of this sort of co-operation would be highly useful.

10. Several members of the group felt that the churches and religious groups should co-operate on questions of basic civil liberties and in protection of persecuted groups such as the N.A.A.C.P. as well as on broader questions of law and order, ethics and morals

11. It was emphasized that there is a need for local government officials in the South in areas of tensions to be aware and informed concerning modern police methods of dealing with such tension situations. In some situations interfaith delegations have been able to exert influence in this direction. It was felt that local religious officials should be alert to such opportunities.

Workshop C

Desegregation and the Changing Economy of the South

Discussion Leader: John Hope II, American Missionary Association

Consultant: Philip Hammer, Southern Regional Council

Rapporteur: Benjamin D. Segal

Mr. Hammer pointed out that revolutionary changes had taken place in the southern economy in the last twenty years. Among some of the more significant developments to which he referred were the following:

1. In 11 southern states covered in a survey which his organization conducted for the Southern Regional Council, 4,105 new manufacturing plants were established between January 1946 and December 1955.

2. Four out of ten of the new plants were in what might be classified as "traditional" industries, such as textiles, apparel, lumber and furniture -- all of these being relatively low-paying industries.

3. Only four industries -- textiles, apparel and lumber -- of the "traditional" group, and food, of the "service" group -- accounted for nearly one-half of the new postwar plants.

4. Three out of ten of the new plants were in "new type" industries -- paper, chemicals, primary and fabricated metals, machinery and transportation equipment. The remaining three were in "service" and miscellaneous industries -- food, printing and stone, clay, glass.

5. More than half of the South's new postwar plants went into counties which were classified in the 1950 Census as 50% or more rural.

Although Negro employment has not been directly or immediately affected by the new industrialization Dr. Hammer said, as white workers have moved to more skilled and desirable jobs in the new plants, Negro workers, in turn, have moved into the jobs formerly held by whites. These "secondary" jobs into which Negroes have moved for the first time have resulted in a large increase in their income. and have established Negroes as an important new cash market.

Mr. Hammer called attention to the fact that the migration of whites in the South from the rural to the urban areas exceeded the migration of Negroes from rural to urban areas with the result that there is as yet no shortage of white labor in the South.

Mr. Hammer observed that unionization has not kept pace with the industrialization of the South and that in fact, opposition to unionism has, become more intensified. He noted that the unions are weakest in the traditional industries, and that opposition to unionism is most determined in these same industries. The various state "right-to-work laws," the multiplying ordinances being passed against unions, plus the increasing use of the race issue by employers were cited as some of the reasons for the failure of labor's organizing efforts in the South.

Mr. Hammer concluded his remarks by suggesting that the industrial revolution in the South is really just beginning, that it will move much faster in the South than it ever did in the North, and that the political and social implications for the future are extremely great.

The Workshop advanced a number of recommendations for future programming. Among these were:

1. The importance of improving the training and training opportunities of Negroes so that they can be in position to take advantage of new job opportunities which may open up as a result of the developing industrialization.

2. The importance of making full use of the President's Committee on Government Contracts -- especially the review provisions of the Committee - to extend equal job opportunities for Negroes.

3. The importance of pointing up the loss to the southern community when the educated Negro has to move away to find job opportunities.

4. Efforts to assure that the Government's anti-discrimination policy is fully carried out wherever Federal Government funds are involved (for instance, at atomic energy projects).

5. That southern staffs of CCD organizations should contact leaders of industry and labor unions in their localities to get them to provide more job opportunities for Negro workers -- in other words, to get them to change their practices. If no satisfaction is obtained at the local level, the national headquarters of these groups should be contacted.

6. There was considerable support for the suggestion that CCD initiate a top level off-the-record conference of a select group of major industry and union leaders to discuss the over-all implications of the southern situation. Among the areas suggested for consideration at such a conference were: the implications of the attempts at school desegregation on economic well-being, the effect of violence, industrial stability and growth, and the use of race hate by some managements against unions. A special effort should be made to include in such a conference representatives of northern-owned plants operating in the South.

Business Session

Presiding: Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, National Council of the Churches of Christ, Co-Chairman, CCD

Treasurer's Report. The secretary read the report which had been prepared by the treasurer, Lewis Hoskins. He recalled that the CCD has no fixed dues and that under the terms of the constitution was to be financed by voluntary contributions from the participating organizations. To date, a total of $435 has been received, representing contributions from 9 of the 35 participating organizations. No funds have been expended and the only obligation outstanding is a bill for $114.25 to cover the cost of stationery. It was estimated that the cost of the meetings would be approximately $100. Hope was expressed that each participating organization would make some contribution towards the cost of CCD operations.

Nominations. The chairman pointed out that the officers and members of the Executive Committee had been elected for one year terms. Since it was not expected that another Plenary Session would be held before the completion of the term in November, he suggested that a Nominating Committee be appointed to prepare a slate of officers and executive committee members and that elections be held by mail ballot. Following the adoption of this suggestion, the chairman designated the following Nominating Committee: Dr. J. O. Lee, National Council of Churches, Chairman; George Hunton, Catholic Interracial Council; Edwin Lukas, American Jewish Committee; Mrs. Savilla Simons, YWCA; Roy Wilkins, NAACP.

Reports of the morning workshops on Utilizing the Mass Media, Interreligious Cooperation, and Desegregation and the Changing Economy of the South were presented by Harry Fleischman, Paul Rilling and Ben Segal respectively. (Reports attached) The reports were received with appreciation and the recommendations referred to the appropriate committees.

Mr. Gunther recalled that the Executive Committee had been authorized to issue a release at an appropriate time regarding the nature and purposes of the CCD. This authorization had not been exercised. He reported that representatives of the wire services and of the Washington press had learned of the meetings from the hotel bulletin board and had expressed interest in doing a story on the CCD. After considerable discussion, the secretary was authorized to release information regarding the officers of the CCD and the general nature of the Plenary Session program, with the understanding that the names of individual participants on the program or of the participating organizations would not be released without their prior consent.

Several of the recommendations advanced by the Committee on Local Community Organization at the meeting the previous evening (recommendations attached) were considered and the following decisions reached:

1. That the Executive Committee take steps, including the holding of Committee meetings in the South, to develop closer liaison between northern and southern representatives and to facilitate the participation of southern staff members in all CCD activities.

2. That the Executive Committee be instructed to call together representatives of the appropriate agencies in order to consider ways and means of extending legal services to the South.

3. That the Fact-finding Committee be activated and be asked to consider the pooling of resources for coordinated research and fact-finding.

4. That the Constitution and structure of the CCD be reviewed in the light of ten months experience and that recommended modifications designed to facilitate the accomplishment of CCD objectives be made.

Dr. Morsell reminded the delegates that the CCD is a voluntary association of autonomous organization with no staff of its own. The recommendations that had been adopted, he said, were in large measure recommendations for action by the participating organizations themselves.

The extent to which these recommendations would be implemented therefore would be determined by the extent to which each organization in the light of its own structure, program and resources assumed responsibility for acting upon them.

Mr. Malin commended the work that had been accomplished on a volunteer basis. He suggested, however, that much more could be accomplished with paid staff and he recommended that consideration be given to the advisability of seeking foundation support for this purpose.

Upon a motion by Dr. Blake, a resolution was adopted expressing appreciation to the National Community Relations Advisory Council for making available a member of its staff to serve as secretary of the CCD.

Dear Arnie:

Thank you for your letter of October 2 gently jogging me to get out the report of the Monday evening CCD session in Washington. It is enclosed herewith.

You are right. Washington has been quite a distance from my mind as of late. We have been terrifically busy in the current crisis situations and most of our thought and energy has been directed towards finding solutions to the problems which face the people in the crisis areas. These may not be pleasant times but they certainly are exciting. It is good to be alive and to play even a small role in the mass of social change now being wrought in the south and the nation.

Best personal regards.

REPORT OF MONDAY EVENING - September 16, 1957 - CCD SESSION

Harold Fleming, who presided, opened the session by explaining that the contents of the evening's meeting came from a meeting of Southern staff members earlier in the day. He explained that the Southern representatives felt it more important to lay before the national agencies certain organizational problems than to entertain them with hair-raising reports of recent events in the Southern region. The Southern staff members wished the following recommendations to be made to the CCD:

1. All CCD meetings, including Executive Committee meetings, should be scheduled at least three months in advance so that Southern members might plan to attend.

2. Each national agency should try to bring one Southern staff member to at least one CCD meeting per year.

3. That some national agency with a high degree of legal savvy should attempt to organize a chain of sympathetic and well qualified lawyers across the South to assist intergroup agencies who are beset with legal problems growing out of legislative action or executive order by State Governments.

4. There is need for an inter-agency cooperative effort in fact finding. This should not be research for the sake of research, but fact finding which is action oriented. For example: there is a crying need to document discrimination in registration practices to present to the new Commission on Civil Rights.

5. There is a need for inter-agency cooperative effort to strenghten and improve law enforcement practices in the South. This would have particular reference to mob control and the prevention of violence.

6. Southern representatives of national agencies should pool their in~~terests~~ sights and experiences for use by communities which face desegregation.

7. The churches and church groups have a special responsibility to reinforce the children and the parents who are going through desegregation experiences.

8. It is recommended that CCD's structure and constitution be reconsidered now that we have completed one year's effort. There is need to reexamine the various committees to see whether or not they are functioning as now defined.

During the discussion which followed several points were brought out:

Pat Malin of the ACLU described the growth of cooperating attorneys in the nine south eastern states from only twelve a year ago to more than one hundred at the present time.

Isaac Robin of the American Jewish Congress reminded the group that his organization had a legal arm that might be of help in assisting Southern agencies.

A member of the fact-finding committee reported that it had not been operative and that there was a need to reactivate it immediately. It was pointed out that there was need to dodument discrimination in a) the area of voting rights, b) the area of equal employment opportunities, and c) the area of school desegregation. It was also pointed out that there was a need for a coordinated plan to develop what type of facts we need to cover.

It was pointed out that the role of the church is somewhat confused because of the activities and pronouncements of dissident ministers and that this was compounded by the press handling of the situation. A representative of one of the church groups said that much more work must be done through the youth groups so that white school-age children could behave in a Christian manner and welcome Negro newcomers to the schools. It was also pointed out that ministers should establish working relationships with law enforcement agencies before violence occurs.

A need was expressed for a listing of sympathetic kew people in the various communities of the South. It was recommended that such a list be pulled together and that those who are listed be briefed on what is happening and what is expected of them. It was hoped that in this manner an indiginous leadership group could contribute their thinking to the inter-agency cooperative effort. Two measures of caution were expressed: a) great care must be taken in the distribution of such lists, and b) it must be insisted that local constituents are indeed local and that all agencies may not have such constituents in every key community.

After a brief discussion of the points previously raised the meeting adjourned.

RE: Election of Officers and Executive Committee

As you will recall, it was voted at the Plenary Session in Washington "that a Nominating Committee be appointed to prepare a slate of officers and Executive Committee members and that the elections be held by mail ballot." In accordance with this decision, the Chairman designated the following Nominating Committee: Dr. J. Oscar Lee, National Council of Churches, Chairman; George Hunton, Catholic Interracial Council; Edwin Lukas, American Jewish Committee; Mrs. Savilla Simons, YWCA: Roy Wilkins, NAACP.

The Nominating Committee, having met, unanimously submits the following slate for your consideration.

Co-Chairmen:
Dr. Eugene Carson Blake
Rabbi Abraham J. Feldman
Father Maurice V. Shean

Treasurer:
Lewis M. Hoskins, American Friends Service Committee

Secretary:
Arnold Aronson, National Community Relations Advisory Council

Executive Committee:
Mrs. Moise Cahn, National Council of Jewish Women
Mr. Will D. Campbell, National Council of Churches
Mr. Harold C. Fleming, Southern Regional Council
Mr. Dumont Kenny, National Conference of Christians and Jews
Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Southern Leaders Conference
Father John La Farge, Catholic Interracial Council
Mr. Alexander Miller, Anti-Defamation League
Mr. William H. Oliver, United Automobile Workers
Mr. Shad Polier, American Jewish Congress
Mrs. Caroline K. Simon, American Jewish Committee
Mrs. Esther C. Stamats, United Church Women
Mr. Roy Wilkins, NAACP

Each of the above nominees has expressed a willingness to serve, if elected. In order that we may be able to proceed with the business of the CCD without delay, I would very much appreciate your returning the attached ballot no later than Monday, January 5. If we do not receive your ballot by that time, we shall assume you approve the slate as presented.

With every good wish for the New Year.

Dear Arnie:

It was good to see you at the Governor's and Steel Workers' Conference in Philadephia. Thanks for the invitation to come up to the NCRAC evaluation session - even if I could come for only one day.

Unfortunately, my itinerary is such that it would be impossible for me to be there for more than a very brief period of time -- roughly four hours -- and I don't believe this is worth the expense it would incur to your organization. So, with regrets I bow out and ask for a rain check for next year's meeting.

Report of Committee on Mass Media

Harry Fleischman, Secretary of the Committee, reported on an advertisement which appeared in the New York Herald Tribune on February 17 under the auspices of the Joint Legislative Committee of the State of Louisiana. The full page ad, which was headed "The Position of the South on Race Relations," not only defended segregation in the South but suggested that its extension and practice elsewhere "will enable our Northern friends to adjust themselves to the more than one-half of the Negroes in this country who will live in the North by 1980." An article in the Shreveport News of February 18, quoted Senator W.M. Rainach, Chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee (also chairman of the Associated White Citizens Councils of Louisiana) as saying that the New York Times had expressed interest in carrying a similar advertisement.

Mr. Fleischman reported that discussions in the Mass Media Committee had resulted in the following recommendations:

(1) That no attempt be made to prevent press acceptance of such advertisements.

(2) That affiliates of the organizations participating in the CCD be alerted to the possible appearance of such advertisements is their communities and requested to urge that newspapers or magazines accepting such advertisements include editorials expressing opposition to the position taken in the ad, as well as news articles quoting opponents of segregation. (It was pointed out that neither of these steps had been taken by the New York Herald Tribune.)

In the discussion that followed, it was suggested that the advertisement in the Herald Tribune was likely to be the forerunner of an expanded and intensified propaganda effort in the North by segregationist forces. Doubt was expressed regarding the efficacy of a taxpayer's suit on the ground that the state courts involved could not be expected to take action while federal courts would in all likelihood be unwilling to assume jurisdiction. The Executive Committee endorsed the recommendations of the Mass Media Committee and further recommended:

(1) That the Mass Media Committee be advised promptly of the appearance of such advertisements in other areas.

(2) That material be assembled that would be helpful in exposing the backgrounds of the individuals sponsoring the ad.

(3) That community leaders be stimulated to write Letters to the Editor immediately following the appearance of such advertisements.

Mr. Fleischman reported on explorations by the Mass Media Committee with Elmo Roper and Dean Barrett and Professor Baker of the Columbia School of Journalism regarding a conference of "moderate" southern editors and publishers and national leaders in the mass media. He said that the present focus of the proposed conference was "what can we do through the mass media in preparation for the school year beginning next September so as to prevent new Little Rocks and promote new Louisvilles?"

It was the consensus in the Executive Committee that CCD financing of the proposed conference would be interpreted as an attempt by outside sources to influence the press and would thus be self-defeating. Accordingly, it was recommended that the possibility of sponsorship and financing of the conference, either by a Foundation or by a southern school of journalism be explored. Some members of the Committee expressed doubt that southern editors would participate in such a conference, regardless of its sponsorship. Others expressed the fear that such a conference might result in a more cautious and conciliatory treatment of desegregation problems by northern media rather than in a more positive treatment by southern publicists. It was noted that the southern editors would be attending meetings of the ANPA and the ASNE in April and it was suggested that efforts be made to utilize these opportunities for informal approaches and discussions.

Report of Committee on Interreligious Relations

Mr. Roy McCorkel, Chairman of the Committee, reported on developments regarding the proposed interreligious conference. He reminded the Committee that the original proposal had called for a south-wide conference and that a southern committee had been appointed to carry this proposal forward. One of the suggestions emanating from the southern committee, he said, was that a northern conference of religious leaders also be held. Upon further consideration, the Committee on Interreligious Relations recommended that a single national conference be held, in lieu of separate regional conferences. The Committee suggested that the proposed conference be held in a southern or border city early in September so as to coincide with school openings.

There was considerable discussion around this question in which virtually all members of the Executive Committee participated. A substantial majority of the members appeared to favor a national conference. In their view, such a conference was desirable in order to emphasize the national and moral character of the issue. Separate southern and northern conferences, they suggested, would play into the hands of the segregationists by implying acceptance of their thesis that segregation was a southern problem to be handled by southerners. Continued national concern, pressure, and participation was essential, they maintained, in order to strengthen the position of southern moderates.

Those who favored separate northern and southern conferences suggested that southern religious leaders might be reluctant to attend a national conference. Moreover, they expressed the fear, that on the one hand, a national conference might appear to point the finger exclusively at the south, and on the other, to equate the problems in the north with those in the south.

The Committee on Interreligious Relations was instructed to convene a meeting as soon as possible, which would include the participation of southern members, in order to ascertain whether agreement could be reached regarding the holding of a national interreligious conference. The Committee was authorized, in the event of such agreement, to proceed with plans for a national conference in September. Should the proposal for a national conference prove unacceptable to the southern members, the Committee was instructed to ascertain the kind of assistance expected of the national organizations for a southern conference.

Committee on Local Community Organization

Harold Fleming, Chairman of the Committee, reported on the initiation of a cooperative fact finding project aimed at developing a comprehensive report of incidents of violence, intimidation, and reprisals. The cost of the project, which is estimated at between $3000 and $5000, is to be shared equally among the cooperating organizations. To date, he said, seven organizations have agreed to participate in the financing and it is hoped that other CCD organizations will lend their support. A staff director has been hired and will work under the supervision of a committee, made up of staff members of the American Jewish Committee, American Friends Service Committee, Anti-Defamation League, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Southern Regional Council. The data to be collected will be based on materials in agency files and published news reports.

Mr. Fleming recalled the request from southern agency staff members for supplementary legal services over and beyond existing resources. He said that the southern agency group had recommended that an experienced attorney with adequate secretarial help be stationed in Atlanta in order to provide counsel to agencies in the region on various legal and legislative developments. The work would be carried out under the direction of an inter-agency committee at an estimated cost of from $30,000 to $35,000 per year.

It was pointed out in the course of the discussion on Mr. Fleming's report that the American Civil Liberties Union now has approximately 150 lawyers in the south available for advice and guidance. Several members of Committee observed that the proposed project tended to oversimplify the legal issues involved. They emphasized that laws are subject to varying interpretations and that the strategy to be employed in a particular situation likewise involved differences in judgment. It was recommended instead that a committee of lawyers, comprising representatives of CCD agencies, be established to serve as a panel for legal counsel and advice to southern agencies.

Committee on Structure

Dr. John Morsell, Chairman of the Committee, suggested that more frequent meetings of the Executive Committee were necessary in order to advance the purposes of the CCD. He observed that while it was desirable that the co-chairmen of the CCD attend such meetings, it was unrealistic, in view of their already heavy schedules, to expect them to undertake the additional responsibilities involved. He recommended that meetings of the Executive Committee be scheduled at approximately 6 week intervals and that a committee chairman, and possibly a vice-chairman, be designated to preside at Executive Committee meetings. He urged that the policy of inviting each of the participating organizations to be represented at Executive Committee meetings be continued. Dr. Morsell's report was accepted.

School Desegregation

The Committee reviewed developments in communities in which it was expected that desegregation might be initiated next fall. It was noted that only one school during the past five months had taken steps to desegregate and considerable concern was expressed at what appeared to be a slowdown in the entire process.

Based on the discussion, it appeared to be the sense of the meeting that Dallas, Texas and Prince Edward County, Virginia were likely to be the two focal areas next September.

Although it was reported that community discussions were progressing in Dallas, it was suggested that there was not a sufficient involvement of Negroes in the process. Reports from Prince Edward County suggested that the situation has hardened during the past year and that the community appears prepared to close the public schools in the event of a court order to desegregate. It was the feeling of the Committee that such an eventuality might be used constructively in helping to focus attention on the threat to the public schools inherent in the massive resistance policy.

Reports of several committee members who had spent time in Little Rock seemed to be in agreement regarding the increasing demoralization among liberal forces. The total inaction of the federal government and lack of success in enlisting support from among the leadership elements in the community appeared to be major factors contributing to the sense of frustration. Considerable concern was expressed regarding reported plans for a demonstration during graduation period aimed at the one senior Negro student. The reports seemed to be in accord that a substantial number of white students were willing to accept the Negroes in Central High School but were intimidated by threats from a small but vocal minority of extremists among their classmates. It was recommended that local church bodies attempt to bring together such students in an effort to reassure them and to help overcome their fears. The Committee was in complete agreement that should the technique of harrassment now being pursued within Central High School prove successful, it would set a pattern that would be followed widely in other situation It was recommended that this question be reviewed at the next meeting

TO: Participating Organizations

FROM: Arnold Aronson, Secretary

DATE: June 11, 1958

RE: Congressional Hearings

Enclosed are the minutes of the last meeting of the Executive Committee.

As you will note, the Executive Committee recommended that the participating organizations support the Loser Bill to facilitate FBI investigation of the recent bombings in the South. Hearings on the Loser Bill (H.R. 11806) will be held on June 18, before Subcommittee #3 of the House Judiciary Committee. Organizations wishing to testify should write to Congressman Emanuel Celler, Chairman, House Judiciary Committee, House Office Building, Washington, D.C., requesting an opportunity to be heard. Organizations which are unable to present oral testimony, should submit statements in support of the bill to Congressman Celler, with the request that they be incorporated into the record of the hearings. If sufficient expressions of support for the bill are forthcoming, there is a good possibility that it can be enacted into law in the present session of the Congress. Hearings on the Civil Rights Act of 1958 (see minutes) and on other civil rights measures will take place before the House Judiciary Committee on June 25-26-27 and July 9-10-11. Organizations wishing to present testimony should follow the same procedures outlined above.

I would very much appreciate receiving a copy of any statement or testimony you may submit.

Report of Committee on Interreligious Relations

Mr. Roy McCorkle, Chairman of the Committee, recalled that the Committee had been instructed by the Executive to explore with Southern members the feasibility of convening a national conference of religious leaders. He reported that the Committee had met two days earlier and had recommended that a Consultation of from 100 to 200 religious leaders, at least one-half of whom should be from the south, be held sometime in the fall. The proposed meeting would extend over two days, beginning in the afternoon and running until noon of the second day. Sites suggested for the meeting included Williamsburg or Old Point Comfort, Virginia, or Gatlinburg, Tennessee, each of which, it was reported, has facilities for unsegregated meetings. Mr. McCorkle pointed out that the proposed Consultation envisaged selective rather than mass participation and that its success was therefore dependent upon our ability to secure the participation of prestige figures from the different faiths and denominations. It was hoped that one by-product of the meeting would be a statement signed by the participants. Such a statement, he observed, would provide a basis for effective follow-up actions in the communities.

In the discussion that followed Mr. McCorkle's report, several members emphasized the desirability of holding the Consultation in Virginia in view of the developing situation there, and, if possible, at the opening of the school year. It was also suggested that, in addition to the issuance of a statement of principles, the conference undertake to consider methods and techniques for cooperative interreligious activity in specific situations. Upon a motion by Dr. Morsell, it was agreed to accept the recommendations of the Committee with an expressed preference for Williamsburg as the first choice for the proposed meeting. Mr. McCorkle indicated that he would appoint sub-committees on organization, program and finance to carry forward the necessary plans.

Commission on Civil Rights

Mr. Aronson introduced Gordon Tiffany, Staff Director of the newly established Commission on Civil Rights, and Henry Shine, Consultant to the Commission. Mr. Tiffany outlined the duties of the Commission as follows:

1) To investigate complaints of denials of voting rights.
2) To study legal developments affecting denials of equal protection of the laws.
3) To appraise the policies and practices of the federal government.
4) To make a report and recommendations.

He noted that the Commission was authorized to consult with private and public agencies and to establish citizens advisory councils in the several states. He reported that the Commission was concentrating on this latter authorization and planned to appoint advisory councils of from 5 to 9 members in each state. It was hoped, he said, that the appointment of councils, comprising persons of prestige and stature from religious, labor, civic and academic circles would help overcome the resistance to federal civil rights activity which obtains in some areas and would foster understanding and receptivity to the Commission's program. He asked Mr. Henry Shine, who is responsible for organizing the Citizens Councils, to suplement his remarks.

Mr. Shine emphasized that neither the Councils nor the Commission itself were enforcement agencies. The role of the Councils, he said, was to submit information to the Commission regarding denials of voting rights or of equal protection of the laws, to participate as observors in such hearings as the Commission might hold, to review and make recommendations on the interim and final reports of the Commission, to consult with citizen's groups in their respective states, and to recommend whatever actions they believed the Commission should undertake. Council members, including the chairman, Mr. Shine reported, will be named by the Commission but each Council will elect its own vice-chairman. He said that an effort will be made to appoint "hidden moderates" rather than "known protagonists" as council members. However, he gave assurances that all southern councils will be biracial. The initial councils will be established in the home states of the members of the Commission and of the Staff Director. These include: Florida, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, New Hampshire, Texas and Virginia. Mr. Shine urged the organizations participating in the CCD to recommend persons for appointment to the advisory councils in the various states. The names of such persons should be sent to:

Gordon M. Tiffany, Staff Director
Commission on Civil Rights
726 Jackson Place, N.W.
Washington, D.C.

Recent Bombings in the South

Alex Miller reported that 57 bombings had taken place in the past 15 months, with relatively few arrests having been made and even fewer convictions. He said that although many organizations, including a number in the South, had called for an FBI investigation (see attached statement by Dr. Edwin Dahlberg, President of the National Council of Churches), the Justice Department maintains that there is no jurisdictional basis for federal intervention. Mr. Miller suggested that announcement of an FBI investigation would serve as a deterent to future bombings and would at the same time provide necessary reassurance to community leaders. He said that there was ample basis and precedent for FBI action and he strongly urged public pressure for such an investigation. He pointed out, however, that federal investigations are frequently stymied by the refusal of local police officials to cooperate. He therefore recommended that efforts be made to motivate local police to cooperate with the federal authorities.

Mr. Maslow observed that the threat upon the life of a federal judge (i.e. Judge Miller in Nashville) constituted a sufficient basis for federal investigation of the recent bombings. He pointed out that several southern political leaders including six Senators (i.e. Hill, Sparkman, Holland, Smathers, Gore and Kefauver) had urged such an investigation. He reported that a bill (H.R. 11806) had been introduced by Congressman J. Carlton Loser of Tennessee that would clearly establish the authority of the federal government to intervene. Passage of this bill, he said, would provide the "jurisdictional basis" which the Justice Department says that it needs. (The Loser bill would make it a federal crime to transport in interstate commerce or to possess any explosives so transported with "knowledge or intent that the explosive will be used in violation of law." It provides further that the possession of any explosive transported in interstate commerce in violation of the law of any state or territory shall be a federal crime. The bill establishes the presumption, which the accused would be under the necessity of rebutting, that anyone found to have had in his possession or to have used an explosive in violation of state law had transported the explosive in interstate commerce and thus violated the federal statute.)

It was recommended that the participating organizations go on record in support of the Loser Bill. To this end, the organizations were urged to call for public hearings on the bill and to seek to enlist support for the measure from the press and from political leaders, especially southern Governors and members of Congress.

Civil Rights Act of 1958

Copies of the legislation introduced by Senator Douglas and a number of other Senators of both parties were distributed and reviewed. The proposed bill seeks to provide federal assistance to communities seeking to comply with the Supreme Court decisions through the conduct of studies, the holding of conferences, the provision of consultative and technical services, teacher training, grants in aid, etc. In addition, the bill would extend the authority which the Attorney General now has in voting cases (i.e.

to initiate civil suits) to all civil rights violations.

It was reported that planned hearings on the bill had been tabled by a 3-2 vote in the Senate Sub-Committee on Constitutional Rights. (Voting for hearing were Senators Hennings D-Mo. and O'Mahaney D-Wyo.; opposed Senators Ervin D-N.C., Hruska R-Neb. and Watkins R-Utah.) It was suggested that the participating organizations write to Congressman Celler, Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, requesting that hearings on the bill be held in the House.

Respectfully submitted,
Arnold Aronson, Secretary

TELEGRAM

TO: Attorney General William P. Rogers
Department of Justice
Washington, D.C.

The National Council of Churches has noted reports of the bombings of a Negro school and a Jewish Center at Jacksonville and the attempted bombing of Temple Beth-El at Birmingham, Ala. When the recent bombings at Miami, Florida and Nashville, Tennessee are also considered, these events suggest that there may be concerted action involving people in several states to commit violence against religious institutions. We feel that this situation warrants a thorough investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The General Board of the National Council of Churches has repeatedly spoken out against the use of violence to intimidate people and thereby to deny them the use of their basic rights. Among the threatened rights are the freedom of speech, the free exercise of religion, the right of people to peaceably assemble and the equal protection of the law.

We now believe that those responsible for these acts of violence, who are unapprehended, are increasingly extending their vicious activities to include religious institutions in many states. Thus we urge strong action by the Attorney General's office and the Federal Bureau of Investigation to apprehend the perpetrators of these outrageous crimes.

Dear Arnie:

Dr. Gilbert Porter of the Florida State Teachers Association has recently brought to our attention a pamphlet containing an excellent speech of Dr. Rembert W. Patrick, Department of History, University of Florida. The Florida State Teachers Association has published this speech.

I have asked Dr. Porter, as you will note on the enclosed copy of my letter to him, to send you one hundred (100) copies of this pamphlet for distribution through CCD's channels. A memo from you to key people in the various agencies who participate in CCD should accompany the pamphlet when you distribute it.

Dr. Porter's approach is historically accurate, shows real insight into the southern situation, and provides a framework in which thoughtful southerners may move ahead. I hope you will give it a real boost.

All good wishes.

It was a real pleasure to be with the Jewish Community Relations group in Richmond. Aaron Goldman did a superb job of chairing the meeting and of getting all the participants heard.

Both Paul Rilling and I spoke briefly to the group; I outlined conditions in the region, and Paul within the state.

The expenses for my trip are being divided among several organizations. NCRAC's share is $62.50. I hope you feel my contribution was worth that much.

Dear Harold:

I would like to be put on the CCD mailing list.

If a request to SRC, as secretariat for the Southern Interagency wing is not sufficient, please inform me of the proper channel.

Thanks a lot.

Sincerely,

Dear Arnie:

This is in response to your memorandum received today.

As you know, I have reservations about releasing the CCD list. I recognize the strong arguments for it. But I am also conscious of the way in which this information will be used to harrass and intimidate people in exposed Southern situations. In many deep South communities, people identified with the YWCA, Churchwomen, human relations councils, and possibly the Jewish agencies are going to be hounded from now on with the distorted use of the CCD list.

I do hope that you and the other executive committee members there will consider this liability, as against the advantages of releasing the list.

If the dominant sentiment is that the list should be made public, SRC may be included with two provisos: (1) That the list include all of the agencies; if some agencies do not agree, we would want an opportunity to review the partial list and consider our decision anew. (2) That the release include a very clear characterization of CCD and the nature of participation in it, possibly quoting the language of the constitution we adopted.

If I seem unduly difficult, it is only because all of us operating in the South are going to have to live with the consequences of this decision from now on. And, obviously, anything that is going to further intimidate or inhibit people in identifying with our several organizations is something to worry about.

I will probably try to reach you by telephone Monday morning so that I can discuss these questions with you in the light of the reactions from the other agencies.

Best regards.

Sincerely,

Dear Arnie:

You asked us to keep you posted on any publicity accorded the CCD "expose'" in our areas. Roy Harris's Augusta (Ga.) Courier hardly rates as a newspaper, in the usual sense of the word. But I thought you would want to know that the Courier's issue of March 23 carries the Mass Media Committee minutes of February 4 in full, with the following headlines and introductory text:

"40 National Organizations Form Consultative Conference on Desegregation to Force Race Mixing on People of U.S.; Protestant Minister, Rabbi, Catholic Priest Are Directors of War on Southern Whites

"The wild-eyed radical race mixers are using every conceivable method to ram race mixing down the throats of decent people.

"A new one jumps up now. The Associated Press has discovered that a group of approximately forty national organizations over two years ago quietly established in New York City the Consultative Conference on Desegregation.

"This aggregation has three co-chairmen. They are: Dr. Eugene C. Blake, of the National Council of Churches; Rabbi Abraham Feldman, Synagogue Council of America; and Father Maurice Sheehan (sic) of the Catholic Committee of the South.

"The executive director is Arnold Aronson of the National Community Relations Advisory Council, and Lewis Hoskins, of the American Friends Service Committee, is treasurer.

"This Consultative Conference has established what they call the 'Mass Media Committee'. The CCD's Mass Media Committee met in New York on February 4, 1959.

"Believing that a copy of the minutes of this Mass Media Committee would be of interest to our readers to show how these wild-eyed radicals operate and the names and organizations which some of them represent, we submit below a verbatim copy of the minutes of this Mass Media Committee meeting:...."

Dear Arnold,

Arthur Walmsley passed on to me the material sent out on March 18 in regard to the Southern editorial attack on the CCD. I jotted down several notes as I read it over. My main reaction seems to be borne out somewhat by the memorandum which came directly to me and arrived this morning. Knowledge of what organizations comprise the CCD, and its purpose, would manifest enough stature so that reasonable people could not effectively use smear tactics of the type we are so used to in the South. The unreasonable extremists, of whom we must admit there are a great number, would use smear tactics against any group large or small, but particularly delight in trying to make charges of secrecy and sneaky dealings stick. I would have hoped that we were already well known enough to the AP and other responsible journalistic agencies so that our purpose and composition would have been a matter of record. Since this was evidently not the situation, I would certainly agree that such a statement as you were authorized to send out was the most effective action we could take. Coming at this time, however, we cannot escape the hint of apologetics and defensiveness in any statement that we make.

The latest Richmond Times Dispatch editorial is as amusing to me as it probably is to you, in that it points to CCD as evidence of a great well planned and monolithic system crushing the disorganized and defenseless South. I am sure that the editor's tongue was in his cheek and that he was using the CCD in order to spur Southern resistance on to greater unity and greater effort.

The only thing that causes me any concern is the indication in two or three instances that either the CCD or some of its committees had taken some substantive action. I was not aware that this was so. I hope that this, too, was an erroneous assumption on the part of the CCD's attackers. All of this brings to mind that I do not recall ever having seen a copy of the Constitution and By-Laws of the CCD. Could you send me a copy?

Hoping to see you sometime in the near future, I am,

Sincerely,

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE ON CIVIL RIGHTS

June 8, 1960

TO ORGANIZATIONS CONCERNED WITH CIVIL RIGHTS

Enclosed is a copy of a civil rights platform plank drafted by the Executive Committee of the Leadership Conference for submission to the platform committees of the forthcoming Republican and Democratic national conventions. We believe the plank reflects the needs and temper of the times with respect to the role of government in fulfilling the national promise of equality of citizenship.

The plank will enlist maximum support from the leaders and delegates at the conventions if it is shown to have the support of the largest possible number of national organizations committed to forward movement in this field. We believe you will find it in full accord with the principles expressed on many occasions by your own organization.

If this is the case, you will be doing our cause a great service by so indicating in the space provided at the foot of this message. If we are to have time to print and distribute final copy, we should have your reply no later than ~~Wednesday~~ THURSDAY, June ~~16~~ 16th. Thank you for expediting a reply.

PLEASE MAIL COMPLETED BALLOT AT ONCE TO: Arnold Aronson

In 1960, the spirit of the times is unmistakable from one end of the world to the other: the days of infringement upon human freedom everywhere are clearly numbered. The United States of America, in pronouncement and deed from its earliest days, has cherished the freedom principle and has inspired other peoples to invoke it. It has recognized that its own performance in this respect is still far from perfect, but it has sought to demonstrate good faith by steady movement in the right direction.

The chief enemy of steady movement toward equal justice under law is the theory that the passage of time will ensure continued progress. We reject this theory and, as the party which we believe will hold the reins of government after next November, we are firmly committed to continuous positive employment of the powers of government in the interest of equal opportunity and justice for all Americans, in every aspect of American life.

The courts of the United States, in a long series of decisions culminating in the public schools decision of May 17, 1954, have made it clear that governmentally-enforced racial segregation and other forms of discrimination are prohibited by the Constitution. These decisions have banned segregation in public schools, in publicly-supported colleges and universities, in interstate and intrastate transportation, in governmentally-aided airports and terminals, in public parks and recreational facilities, and in private facilities and accommodations in the District of Columbia. They have enjoined governmental participation in the enforcement of private discrimination in housing and education.

The judicial indictment of segregation has been unequivocal and has expressed the universal condemnation of the affront to personal dignity which segregation represents.

The responsibilities of government in these matters are comprehensive: they are not the province of the judiciary alone, nor of the executive alone, nor of the legislature alone. The protection of the constitutional rights of citizens cannot be relegated to chance, nor to the uncertainty of private resources. The public interest is poorly served if private citizens and organizations are required to vindicate constitutional rights of national significance through litigation in the federal courts. The development of public law should not be left primarily to private litigation. In sum, the legislative power of enactment and the purse must join with the administrative and enforcement power of the executive in thoroughgoing support of the constitutional interpretations of the judiciary.

There are three broad lines of attack along which this responsibility of government should be exercised.

First, government as protector must act continuously to prevent or eliminate infringements of the civil rights of its citizens, whether these infringements arise from private or from governmental sources.

Second, government must cease subsidizing racial segregation and other kinds of discrimination. Federal funds should not finance segregated schools or segregated housing, or in any other way aid the continuation or expansion of racial discrimination.

Third, in addition to its protective and preventive actions, government has a positive function to perform through the active promotion and stimulation of progress toward equality.

Only by the fullest exercise of the powers of government, united in service to the highest aspirations of its people, can all Americans be given the equal opportunity to be educated to the full extent of their human talents; equal opportunity to work to the fullness of their potential contribution to our society; equal access to housing and neighborhoods as befits their means and social development; and equal opportunity to participate in the body politic through the free and universal exercise of the franchise. Only thus can the promise of American democracy achieve genuine fruition.

VOTING

The right to vote is a fundamental right of every citizen in a democracy. Upon this right, perhaps more than any other, all other constitutional rights depend for their effective protection.

The 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution were intended to protect that right against discrimination on grounds of race or color. Yet today, more than 90 years later, only one Negro in four of voting age in the South is registered to vote; and in 65 counties where Negroes constitute a majority of the voting age population, none or only a handful are registered.

No one openly defends this discrimination against our Negro citizens. No one openly denies that the 14th and 15th Amendments forbid this discrimination. Yet all steps by the Executive, Legislative and Judicial branches of our government to eliminate this indefensible and undefended discrimination have been continually sabotaged, through the creation of legal impediments, administrative obstacles, intimidation, economic reprisals and physical harm.

The wholesale denial of the right to vote in our own country, so shockingly documented in the report of the Commission on Civil Rights, makes a mockery of our advocacy of free and unfettered elections in other parts of the globe. We can no longer permit this intolerable blot upon our democratic system. Accordingly, we pledge:

1. Vigorous Enforcement of Existing Statutes

Twice during the past three years the Congress has enacted legislation designed to safeguard the right to vote. A vigorous program of enforcement utilizing the powers for self-initiated action conferred upon the Justice Department is needed to test the efficacy of these statutes for the accomplishment of their stated purpose and to give evidence of the federal government's determination to enforce the Constitution.

2. Needed New Legislation to Guarantee the Right to Vote

The Congress, by its action in establishing a system of voting referees under the Civil Rights Act of 1960, has explicitly recognized the right of the federal government to intervene in the conduct of elections in order to guarantee the right to vote to all qualified citizens. Should existing laws prove inadequate for the accomplishment of this purpose, the full resources of the federal government should be utilized including, if necessary, direct federal control and operation of registration and elections.

3. A Constitutional Amendment to Establish Universal Suffrage

Discriminatory application and administration of voter qualification laws, including tests of literacy, education and "interpretation" continue to afford a ready means of arbitrarily denying the right to vote to qualified citizens. Illiteracy is close to being eliminated in our country. Only 19 states still require a literacy test. Adoption of a Constitutional Amendment, as proposed by the Commission on Civil Rights, giving the right to vote to every citizen who meets his State age and residence requirements would establish simple and objective standards which could easily be enforced.

4. A Campaign Designed to Educate Citizens in Their Voting Rights and Encourage Them to Exercise Those Rights

The responsibility of the federal government in the enfranchisement of our

Voting

Negro citizens goes beyond the mere enforcement of the law. Government should undertake a positive educational campaign to familiarize Negroes with their rights under the Constitution and existing statutes and with the procedures available to them for the protection of these rights. This should include the posting of notices on court houses, post offices, and other federal buildings, and utilization of all the media of communication. Above all, Negro citizens should be given such assurances as will overcome the fears bred of terror, reprisal and violence. If necessary, we will press for new legislation designed to implement these assurances.

Nothing would be more conducive to this end than a declaration by the President that their government desires all citizens to vote and guarantees to protect them in their exercise of their right to do so.

5. Home Rule for the District of Columbia

The disfranchisement of residents of the District of Columbia besmirches the symbol of democracy which our nation's capital should portray. It is essential that residents of the District be granted suffrage and the same measure of self-government possessed by other communities throughout the country.

EDUCATION

It is more than six years since the Supreme Court, in the proper exercise of its role as interpreter of the Constitution, declared racial segregation in public education to be unconstitutional. Commendable progress in implementing the decision has been made by most of the border states affected, thus demonstrating that given good faith, the transition can be effected in an orderly and harmonious manner.

Unfortunately, in many other states, the Negro children seeking access to that equal educational opportunity to which they are constitutionally entitled, have encountered not occasional denial of their rights by individual schools and school districts, but a massive rebuff by those very governments, state and local, whose constitutional duty it is to protect them in the enjoyment of their rights.

In these circumstances it is not the rights of individuals alone that are impaired or denied; the very processes of orderly government are challenged and flouted. The government of the United States cannot assume a posture of neutrality toward compliance with its Constitution. It cannot continue to view the nullification of law recalcitrant States, the evasion of court orders, the closing of public schools, and the enactment of obstructive State legislation as matters to be left to private litigation.

Accordingly, we pledge the full resources of the federal government to secure the constitutional right of all children to equality of educational opportunity, including action to:

1. Empower the Attorney General to File Civil Injunction Suits in Cases Involving Denials of the Right to Equal Educational Opportunity

Negro children denied their rights are indeed injured parties, but to require them to bear the whole burden of seeking redress of their injury through costly and prolonged litigation, to compete against the massive weight of official state opposition, is to deny justice. Recourse to injunctive relief is provided for in many statutes, including those protecting the right to vote. Similar authority should be provided in the case of all civil rights, including the right to equal educational opportunity.

2. Require Every School District Affected by the Supreme Court's School Desegregation Decision to Submit a Plan for Compliance No Later Than the Close of the 1961-62 School Term

In five states, not a single Negro child is as yet receiving the kind of education to which the Constitution entitles him; in five others, the total numbers but a handful. After six years, even under the most liberal interpretation, this can hardly be deemed to meet the test of "deliberate speed." To require school districts after eight full years to submit a plan for desegregation would seem to represent a minimum evidence of the "prompt," "reasonable" and "good faith" start towards compliance demanded by the Court's ruling. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare should be authorized to promulgate a desegregation plan, which shall be enforceable in the Courts for any school district which fails to submit its own plan within the time proscribed by the Congress.

3. Deny Federal Funds and Subsidies to Any School Which Refuses to Admit Students Because of Their Race, Religion, Color or National Origin

More than two billion dollars a year of federal funds go for educational purposes and to educational institutions. No proof of non-discrimination is required in the administration of any of these programs. The federal government cannot in good conscience continue to grant public funds for the perpetuation of discriminatory and unconstitutional practices. All departments and agencies administering federal educational assistance programs should be directed to make federal grants conditional upon proof of compliance with the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

Tax exemption represents a form of government subsidy. State or municipal bonds designed to raise funds for the construction, maintenance or operation of a segregated school system in defiance of a court order should not be subsidized by a grant of federal tax exempt status.

4. Grant Technical and Financial Assistance to Facilitate Orderly Compliance

The public interest in orderly compliance places a responsibility upon the government to lend assistance to those communities that seek to fulfill their constitutional obligations so as to enable them to make the transition as easy, as harmonious, and as rapid as possible.

The compilation and dissemination of information, the making of surveys, the arrangement of conferences, the provision of specialists' services, grants for the employment of additional teachers and for teacher training courses all can contribute significantly toward this objective. The United States Office of Education should be given authority and sufficient funds to provide such services.

5. Authorize the Commissioner of Education to Operate Schools for Children of Federal Personnel, Where Local Schools are Shut Down Because of Failure to Comply With a Court Desegregation Order, Such Schools to be Open on a Non-Discriminatory Basis to All Children in the Area

Hundreds of millions of dollars of federal funds have been appropriated for school construction under the impacted areas program. Any such school which is closed in order to evade compliance with the law should be repossessed and operated by the federal government for the benefit of all children in the area. Education is the foundation of good citizenship and our system of free public education the mainstay of our democracy. The government of the United States can neither permit that system to be impaired nor allow any child to be deprived of its benefits.

EMPLOYMENT

Every American is entitled to an equal chance to obtain, to hold and to advance on a job in accordance with his ability. For in our economic order, the opportunity to make a living is basic to making a life; without it many other rights and opportunities become impossible of realization. Discrimination in employment breeds poverty, disease, slums and crime. It depresses wages, curtails purchasing power, limits production and retards economic growth. The United States can no longer afford this wasteful drain on our human and economic resources.

Equality of economic opportunity is the declared public policy of the United States. To further that policy we pledge:

1. Equal job opportunity on all employment in the federal establishment.

The federal government is the largest single employer in the country. Its employment policies should serve as a model to other employers. To advance the attainment of non-discrimination in federal employment requires an increase in the staff of the Committee on Government Employment Policy, systematic and intensive in-service training for supervisory personnel in all federal agencies, and vigorous administration of existing executive orders and laws.

2. Equal job opportunity on all employment performed under government contract.

More than one fourth of all goods produced in the country are produced under contract with the federal government. Employers who are privileged to receive government contracts have a responsibility to comply with the non-discrimination policy ordered by three successive Presidents. To this end, the Committee on Government Contracts should be given statutory status, including authority to require proof of non-discrimination as a precondition to contract awards. It should be empowered to enforce compliance through contract termination, injunction and disqualification from future contract awards.

3. Equal job opportunity on all employment resulting from federal grant in aid and loan programs.

Employment resulting from federal funds paid for by all taxpayers should be equally available to all citizens. Federal funds expended as loans or grants for construction, vocational education, apprenticeship and public employment services should be conditioned upon assurance that they will be utilized in accordance with the national policy of non-discrimination.

4. Equal job opportunity in all employment in interstate commerce.

Seventeen states and approximately fifty municipalities have enacted legislation prohibiting discrimination in employment. More than fifteen years of experience have demonstrated the efficacy of such legislation. Unfortunately, the areas in which discrimination is most widespread are those in which no such legislation exists. We favor the enactment of a federal fair employment practice law establishing a commission with authority to receive and investigate complaints, to attempt to eliminate discrimination by conference, conciliation and persuasion and, if unsuccessful, to issue cease and desist orders which shall be reviewable and enforceable in the courts.

HOUSING

It is the public policy of the United States, declared by the Congress and the President, and in accord with the declared purposes of the Constitution, that every American family shall have equal opportunity to secure a decent home in a good neighborhood. Genuine equality of opportunity in housing means that a family should not be restricted by considerations of race or creed when it seeks to find a home. Only personal choice, availability and the free exchange of the market place should prevail.

In spite of this, it is accurate to say that housing is the one commodity in the American market that is not freely available on equal terms to everyone who can afford to pay. Minority group Americans everywhere find their opportunity curtailed and hindered, if it exists at all, for artificial reasons based upon racial, religious or nationality prejudice. Restriction of choice leads to crowding of available housing beyond endurance, with the concomitants of high rates of disease, fire, delinquency and crime, and inevitably spurs the growth of frustration and community demoralization. A nation dedicated to respect for the human dignity of every individual should not permit such conditions to continue.

The federal government has become the single most important factor in the national housing picture. It is encouraging and financing the rebuilding and redevelopment of vast areas of our cities and the construction of tremendous new suburban communities. Federal housing programs are made possible by federal funds drawn from taxes imposed on all Americans alike. Segregation or other forms of racial discrimination in any of them makes government a partner in the extension and perpetuation of segregated housing, thus negating the nation's basic principles of freedom and equality. The federal government should act now to eliminate discrimination from all aspects of its own housing programs.

Equal access to decent housing without restriction as to race or creed is basic to the enjoyment of full citizenship. We therefore pledge the issuance of:

An Executive Order forbidding segregation or other forms of discrimination based on race, religion or national origin in all federal or federally-aided housing programs. The order should include slum clearance, urban renewal, relocation, public housing, and the insuring and lending functions related to housing. It should provide for the establishment of an executive commission to implement this order.

PERMANENT COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

We pledge to establish the Commission on Civil Rights on a permanent basis, to clothe it with sufficient authority to investigate all areas of civil rights and intergroup tension, and to provide it with sufficient funds and staff to become a central clearing house for information, for research and for technical assistance to federal, state, municipal and private organizations concerned with advancing the national policy of full equality.

PRESERVING THE INTEGRITY OF AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP

The protection of the rights of United States citizens to travel, to pursue lawful trade, and to engage in other activities abroad without distinction as to race or religion is a cardinal function of United States sovereignty. Nevertheless, American citizens are being excluded from service in military, diplomatic and civilian capacities abroad solely because of their race or religion. Certain foreign governments, which receive United States economic aid, are maintaining a boycott against Americans and refuse to honor United States passports carried by United States citizens solely because of the religious faith of such citizens. These practices are incompatible with the constitutional principle of equality of citizenship. Accordingly, we pledge to:

1. IMPLEMENT THE REPEATEDLY EXPRESSED OPPOSITION OF THE CONGRESS TO THE IMPOSITION BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS OF DISCRIMINATIONS AGAINST UNITED STATES CITIZENS ON GROUNDS OF RELIGION OR RACE.

2. OPPOSE ANY INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT OR TREATY WHICH BY ITS TERMS OR PRACTICES DEPRIVES AMERICAN CITIZENS OF THE RIGHTS GUARANTEED THEM BY THE CONSTITUTION.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEDURES

At a time when free institutions are exposed to world wide attack from without, the operations of our governmental machinery must be made as efficient and as effective as possible. This is essential not only to meet the awesome foreign and domestic problems that confront us but also to demonstrate the efficacy of responsible representative government.

Under the Constitution, legislative power has been vested in the Congress. The purpose of Congressional rules and procedures is to facilitate the wise and judicious exercise of that power. Three rules in particular, however, appear to frustrate that purpose.

Through the restrictions imposed by Senate Rule 22, filibusters, or the threat of filibusters, have time and again been used to prevent legislation from being brought to a vote in the Senate. The House Rules Committee, which was designed to facilitate the orderly flow of legislation in that body, has instead too often become a vehicle for preventing legislation from reaching the floor. Committee chairmen in both the House and Senate, assured of their position through the operations of the automatic seniority rule, have frequently used their power to pigeonhole legislation in disregard of party commitments.

As a result of these rules and procedures, essential measures are delayed again and again; others are watered down to meet minority interests at the expense of the national popular majority; still others are shelved or wholly cast aside. There is a considerable and increasing danger that perpetuation of these inefficient and undemocratic procedures will lead to public cynicism and apathy towards the Congress and our governmental processes.

Accordingly, in order that the policies and programs set forth in this platform may be realized, we pledge to take action at the beginning of the 87th Congress to:

IMPROVE CONGRESSIONAL PROCEDURES SO THAT THE MAJORITY WILL MAY PREVAIL, AT EACH STAGE OF THE LEGISLATIVE PROCESS AND THE CONGRESS THUS MAY BE A MORE EFFECTIVE AND RESPONSIBLE INSTRUMENT OF OUR NATIONAL PURPOSES.

Dear Friend:

Enclosed are the minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation which met in New York City on March 1st.

The next meeting of the committee will be on Thursday, March 28, 1957 at 9:30 a.m. at the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, 838 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. The committee plans to meet on the last Thursday of each month.

We intend to issue a list of names and addresses of persons in all CCD agencies responsible for work with the mass media, plus a list of Southern regional offices and field representatives of the participating agencies. Would you please send us the names of your agency's Southern field personnel for this list and, if you have not yet told us who in your agency should receive mass media material, will you please do so now?

Enclosed is a partial list of organizations participating formally in CCD. Persons who have been designated by their organizations to receive mass media materials are identified with an asterisk. Please put them on your mailing list to receive any materials sent out by your agency.

Sincerely yours

Harry Fleischman

Meeting of Mass Media Committee, Consultative Conference on Desegregation, March 1, 1957, New York, N.Y.

PRESENT: Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Herb Jaffe, Anti-Defamation League; Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Sam Silver and Al Vorspan, Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Mrs. Ida Snyder, Young Women's Christian Association; Arnold Aronson, Secretary CCD, NCRAC: Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

Fleming reported on Atlanta conference of agencies working in the South. It urged mass media committee:

1. To stimulate agencies to get positive aspects of desegregation featured in the Southern press and in national media.

2. To push economic implications of racial tension. (Distribute Birmingham Post-Herald article and editorial on industry by-passing plant sites there because of race tension and hoodlumism.)

3. Interpret in mass media dangers of attacks on NAACP and Urban League through restrictive Southern laws and administrative action. Alert the public to the civil liberties threats posed by intolerant pro-segregation activity in the South.

It was agreed that the committee would issue a list of names and addresses of persons responsible for work with the mass media in all CCD agencies, plus a list of Southern regional offices and field representatives of participating agencies. Copies of material or notices of programs already available or planned by any agency should be sent by that agency to the entire Mass Media and Southern Staff lists.

The committee agreed to prepare a bibliography of material on school desegregation. One agency agreed to update the University of Florida bibliography of books and pamphlets (which goes up to Jan. 1956).

Another agency will prepare a bibliography of radio transcriptions, TV kinescopes, films and tape recordings.

It was agreed to consider possibilities of getting articles by lawyers in major professional and popular journals on the civil liberties implications of attacks on NAACP.

It was agreed that each month the committee would discuss one of the major problems in order to develop mass media lines of approach towards it.

The committee will meet on the last Thursday of each month. The next meeting will be on Thursday, March 28, 1957 at 9:30 a.m. at the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, 838 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Respectfully submitted

RECEIVED MAY 6 1957

Dear Elizabeth:

The Georgia Board of Education recently passed a resolution barring public school students from participation in regional or national bi-racial meetings. When the newspapers indicated that this would boomerang against Georgia students, statements were carried in local papers indicating that the 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers of America and Future Homemakers of America would not be affected. National 4-H Clubs hold separate national meetings for whites and Negroes. The FFA and FHA chapters in Georgia are for white students only but similar organizations exist for colored students.

Would it be possible for you to get any action by farm organizations to counteract -- in Georgia -- the harmful publicity created by these segregated farm institutions? Would it be possible to get any of the groups dealing with rural life, church and similar groups to issue statements on this subject? Shirley Greene might help you on this if you get in touch with him. I am enclosing some clippings from the Atlantic Constitution which I would appreciate your returning after you have used them.

Harold Fleming of the Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Ave., N.E., Atlanta, Ga., can give you more details if they should be required.

All the best.

Dear Member:

The June 12, 1957 meeting of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference On Desegregation will start, as previously scheduled, at 9:30 a.m.

However, we have been fortunate enough to arrange for the noted publicist, Mr. Edward L. Bernays to come to our meeting at 11 a.m. to stay with us through lunch.

Mr. Bernays will discuss with us how we might best overcome current resistance in the South to school desegregation.

The meeting will be held at the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue (corner 53rd St.), New York, New York.

Since we must plan for luncheons, please let me know whether or not you plan to attend.

Sincerely yours,

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference On Desegregation, May 22, 1957, New York, N.Y.

PRESENT: Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Louise Hager, Young Women's Christian Association; Henry Lee Moon, National Association For The Advancement of Colored People; Oscar Cohen, Anti-Defamation League; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; and Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Wednesday, June 12, 1957 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue (corner 53rd Street) New York, New York. Please notify Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service, 386 Fourth Avenue, as to whether or not you plan to attend.

The American Broadcasting Company's "Open Hearing" will carry an hour long documentary on "Segregation and the South" on Sunday, June 16, 1957. The documentary, prepared by the Fund For The Republic, examines the effects of the Supreme Court ruling on school integration during the past three years.

AN IMPORTANT NOTE

The Executive Committee of CCD is centralizing our distribution of materials. In the future, please send 100 copies of any material dealing with desegregation, plus notices of materials or programs, in addition to suggestions as to how the materials might best be used which you believe will be of interest to other participating agencies to Arnold Aronson, Secretary CCD, 9 East 38th Street, New York 16, New York. Also please include information regarding the availability and cost of quantity orders. Aronson will then distribute these materials to all CCD agencies.

The American Jewish Committee is considering possibilities of reprinting as a pamphlet the New York Times Benjamin Fine series on school desegregation in six border and Southern cities.

It was suggested that the Southern Regional Council might discuss with editors of daily papers in cities under court orders to desegregate their school system, or taking voluntary action to desegregate school systems, to arrange for those editors to publish articles similar to the Benjamin Fine series. They might either send their reporters to cover stories of successful integration or ask editors or reporters in the cities where integration has been accomplished successfully to write special articles dealing with their respective cities. For instance, Miami papers might be induced to carry a series on school integration in other Southern cities to help it prepare for integration in Miami.

Chet Huntley's half hour NBC OUTLOOK program on Sunday, May 19, 1957 presented one youngster connected with each of the five original desegregation cases which came to the Supreme Court. Kinescopes may be available from NBC.

It was agreed to try to arrange for a women's magazine to carry an article on progress of desegregation, to be printed just prior to school opening in the Fall.

It was agreed to attempt to arrange a series of off-the-record luncheon meetings with individual top public relations people to help prepare a broad outline for a campaign to overcome current resistance to school desegregation. Henry Lee Moon will make arrangements for this project.

Projected materials for the films and film strips catalog will be turned over to Robert Disraeli of the AJCommittee for final revision. The catalog should include information on where films could be secured, cost of rental or purchase, plus information as to whether or not the films are cleared for use on T.V.

Dear Harry:

I haven't had a chance to draw up a careful list of Southern "moderates" who might be considered for the Confederate-Union parley in New York. But here are a few names off-the-top, to supplement those of Ashmore, McGill, and Mr. Roper's Memphis friend, Birch (sp?).

Hodding Carter, Greenville, Mississippi; Reed Sarratt, Executive Editor, The Journal and Sentinel, Winston-Salem, North Carolina; Buford Boone, Editor, The News, Tuscaloosa, Alabama; Irving Carlyle, Attorney and civic leader, Winston-Salem, North Carolina; Professor James Silver, University of Mississippi, Oxford, Mississippi; Francis Pickens Miller, leading anti-Byrd figure, writer and churchman, Charlottesville, Virginia.

If the conference is to be bi-racial - and I don't see why it shouldn't be - an appropriate Negro editor from the South would be Thomas W. Young of the Norfolk Journal and Guide. Also, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, President of Atlanta University, might be a good choice. It occurs to me that to balance Young, an invitation might be issued to Claude Barnett, head of the Associated Negro Press in Chicago.

All of the people I have named would, I think, make a reasonable and constructive contribution to the discussion.

I haven't yet had a chance to discuss this with McGill, but I hope to next week when I get back from a trip I'm about to start. I will also give further thought to possible participants who might be more appropriate than some of those in the off-the-top list above.

Keep me posted.

The Mass Media Committee yesterday, decided that we should go ahead with attempting to arrange the conference but with a subcommittee of Henry Moon, Alan Reitman and myself to attempt to enlarge it to include more of the people whose presence would be really useful at such a conference. Dear Mr. Roper:

Alan Reitman of the American Civil Liberties Union and I met with Dean Ed Barrett and Professor Baker of the Columbia School of Journalism last week to discuss the suggested conference of southern liberals and moderates and national publicists. Enclosed is a copy of the letter I sent to Dean Barrett in advance of our session.

Both Dean Barrett and Professor Baker expressed keen interest in the idea of a conference but were concerned about its nature. People like Harry Ashmore, Ralph McGill and Hodding Carter, they said, are in frequent touch with leading national publicists. A conference composed largely of such people, they felt, would be bringing "coals to Newcastle." They suggested that a somewhat larger conference, with more of the people who are not likely to be in touch with leading national publicists, might be of more value.

Various members of our Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation have come up with names of persons whom they felt would meet Dr. Barrett's requirements. Here are the names thus far mentioned:

Harry Ashmore
Ralph McGill
Hodding Carter
Reed Sarratt, Executive Editor, The Journal and Sentinel, Winston-Salem, N. C.
Buford Boone, Editor, The News, Tuscaloosa, Alabama.
Irving Carlyle, Attorney and Civic leader, Winston-Salem, N.C.
Professor James Silver, University of Mississippi, Oxford, Miss.
Francis Pickens Miller, writer and churchman, Charlottesville, Virginia.
Thomas W. Young, Editor, Norfolk Journal and Guide.
Rufus E. Clement, President, Atlanta University.
Wilson Wyatt, Louisville, Kentucky.
Charles Farnsley, Louisville, Kentucky.
Lillian Smith, Georgia.
John B. Orr, Jr., State Senator, Miami, Florida.

J. M. Dabbs, Rip Rap Plantation, Mayesville, S. C.
Mrs. M. E. Tilley, Atlanta, Georgia,
J. H. Wheeler, President, Mechanics and Farmers Bank, Durham, N.C.
Sarah Patton Boyle, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va.
Reverend Martin Luther King, Montgomery, Alabama.
Dr. Charles Gomillion, Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Alabama.
Jonathann Daniels.

Among those suggested as participants from the North were yourself, Frank Stanton of CBS, Henry Luce, Gardner Cowles, David Sarnoff of NBC, Turner Catledge or Charles Merz of the New York Times, Whitelaw Reid of the Herald Tribune, someone from the American Broadcasting Company, representatives of the wire services, Seymour Bergson of the Journal American, someone from Readers Digest and someone from the Scripps-Howard chain.

Dean Barrett mentioned that Associated Press was holding a meeting of managing editors last weekend in Dallas and that the issue of national treatment of the race problem by the mass media would undoubtedly be one of themajor topics discussed, whether or not it was on the agenda. He also mentioned that a number of Southern journalists would be in New York in the Spring to serve on Pulitzer Prize Award juries and that our conference might conceivably be held then. But he wanted to be sure that a conference would serve a really useful function.

One suggestion was that such a conference might lead to a survey of the treatment of race news by both Southern and Northern mass media. One point that might well be considered in connection with such a conference are the findings by Dr. Melvin Tumin of Princeton University. His report in Public Opinion Quarterly revealed that those white southerners who are exposed to national hook-ups on radio or TV or who read national magazines, are more sympathetic to the desegregation point of view than persons who live in isolation.

If these findings are accurate for the entire South, the importance of getting together Southern and national opinion molders to try to develop a climate of opinion which will support law and order cannot be overstressed.

However, we still face the problem of where do we go from here in developing such a meeting. We would be very happy if our CCD committee -- Alan Reitman, Henry Lee Moon and I -- could have a chance to meet with you on this as soon as possible.

Cordially yours,

Mr. Edward W. Barrett
Dean, School of Journalism

Dear Mr. Barrett:

I am writing to you at the suggestion of Mr. Elmo Roper. I am the secretary of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, a clearing house of more than forty national organizations concerned with school desegregation. Among the cooperating agencies are the National Council of Churches, the Southern Regional Council, the Catholic Committee on the South, the National Urban League, the NAACP, the American Jewish Committee, the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, and a host of others.

Mr. Roper suggested that it would be extremely helpful to the cause of desegregation if some eight or ten top Southern liberals and moderates could meet with a like number of leading national publicists to consider how the national mass media might contribute toward a more favorable climate of opinion on law and order and desegregation.

Among those who might be invited to participate are Henry Luce, Frank Stanton, Arthur Hays Sulzberger, Whitelaw Reid, Harry Ashmore, Ralph McGill, Hodding Carter, Wilson Wyatt, etc.

Harold Fleming, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council and I met with Mr. Roper to discuss how such a conference might be arranged and Mr. Roper suggested that perhaps one of the most appropriate agencies to sponsor such an off-the-record conference might well be Columbia University's School of Jourhalism.

He added that he would be willing to co-sponsor it with you if you felt that was necessary, and that in any event he would be extremely happy to assist you on such a project both in terms of recruiting top national mass media people and some of the Southerners.

If this project finds any favor in your eyes I wonder if it might be possible for me to meet with you on this.

I shall take the liberty of phoning you about this matter on Wednesday.

With all best wishes.

Dear Harry:

Thanks so much for the run down on issues of the Firing Line. I may want to photostats of two or three of the articles later on, but for immediate purpose you have given me just the information I needed, and we are indebted to you.

I thought your last letter to Roper was good. Ashmore was just here, but though I had some time with him, it was under very hectic circumstances and I was never able to discuss the idea with him. I have talked with a few other people about it, including John Popham, the Southern correspondent for the New York Times. The reactions I have had from him and the others add up to a feeling that a conference involving second echelon newspapermen and community leaders from the South would serve a useful purpose. Popham himself showed no great eagerness to be included, but I think he would be a good choice. Other names that have occured to me are Martin Ochs of the Chattanooga Times, Wallace Westerfeldt of the Nashville, Tennessean, and Bill Baggs, the new editor of the Miami Daily News. The more I have thought about it, the more I have felt that the group should be restricted to newspaper people and a few others perhaps who mix well with newspaper people. If the range gets too broad, I am afraid there won't be enough rapport or a community of interest in the group to make meaningful communication possible within any reasonable brief time. Understand, I don't mean saneness of viewpoint, but enough similarity of background for them to understand each other.

I only wish I could be up there at times when I could help advance the project. It now looks as though I will be in New York again on Tuesday and Wednesday, December 17 and 18. This is not likely to be a very productive period but perhaps you and I will be able to get caught up.

All the best.

Dear Dean Barrett:

This note will confirm our telephone conversation today about our projected conference on the mass media and desegregation.

Our purpose would be to have ten to fifteen important but relatively unpublicized Southern editors and civic leaders meet with the same number of leaders of important national and Northern publications. Both groups could then consider how they might more effectively develop a climate of opinion in which respect for law and order and a smoother path to desegregation will prevail.

The conference might also consider a survey of the treatment of the desegregation problem in both Southern and Northern mass media.

Among the Southerners who might be invited to attend are:

Reed Barratt, executive editor, The Journal and Sentinel, Winston-Salem, N.C.
Buford Boone, editor, The News, Tuscaloosa, Ala.
Professor James Silver, Univ. of Mississippi, Oxford, Miss.
Thomas W. Young, editor, Norfolk Journal and Guide, Norfolk, Va.
Rufus E. Clement, president, Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga.
Weldon James, Louisville Courier Journal, Louisville, Ky.
Wilson Wyatt, Louisville, Ky.

As we mentioned this morning, the conference might start out with a statement of the problem and then have a period for both Southerners and Northerners to express their gripes on the way the mass media, both South and North, is currently handling the desegregation issue. It would then be the job of the chairman (either yourself or Elmo Roper) to make sure that from that point on the discussion was on a constructive level about things we could do now and in the future in respect to the mass media and desegregation.

We still have to decide whether the conference should be one, two or three days and whether it should be at Arden House or on the Columbia campus. We shall also, of course, consider means of financing such a conference since you indicated that having fifteen Southerners (and their travel expenses), and a like number of Northerners would probably require about $3,000. However, we are confident that we will be able to raise such a sum for this off-the-record conference.

After the first of the year, I will attempt to arrange for a meeting at which you, Elmo Roper and our subcommittee can meet to consider arrangements for such a conference.

With all best wishes for the season.

Sincerely yours,

HF/ht

Dear Harry:

Will Campbell called the other day to report on a recent conversation with our needy friend P. D. East. I know that he has been in touch with all his friends concerning subscription renewals. But Will came up with another approach; it seems P. D. is now willing to go on the speaking circuit as a means of augmenting his starvation income.

This isn't exactly mass media business, but I promised Will I would pass the idea along and, if anything can be done on it, I'm sure you would know best how to do it. Is there any easy and logical way to make P. D.'s availability (for a fee) known to those who might use him?

Unfortunately, I won't be with you at the January MM meeting, but as soon as you let me know the February date, I'll start trying to arrange it. I'll also be looking for word on possible reprints of Popham's article and the Wall Street Journal material. Since we served as principal adviser to Brumley on the cost-of-segregation piece, we are particularly fond of that one. Seriously, I think it was a very helpful job, and we would be glad to come in on a reprinting of it.

All the best.

(A first-rate public affairs programmer, current president of the Kentucky Council on Human Relations.)

Ralph Renick
WTVJ
Miami, Florida
(Has done some outstanding special programs which facilitated resolution of interracial controversies.)

Ken Kurtz
WIS
Columbia, South Carolina
(does a fair and full job on racial matters in an area where this is the exception.)

(Mr.) Dale Clark
WAGA
Atlanta, Georgia
(A news director who consistently goes out of his way to get positive facts on racial developments before his audience.)

Nat G. Williams
(ADDRESS TO BE SUPPLIED)
Memphis, Tennessee

Dear Harry:

I finally found the "Hannah" in the February 1958 issue of Southern School News. It is in a Florida section on page 15, the first item under "What They Say." Among other things, Hannah is quoted as saying, "There has been a lot of talk from both extremes, but more from the middle. Comments from both extremes - citizens councils on one side and the NAACP on the other - have been silly." I take it you are going to call this unfortunate statement to the attention of the various mass media folks.

I hope you got the message I left at your office about my conversation with the people at TIME. I found that the man who is currently running the press section is Mike Demarest whom I knew when he was stationed in the Atlanta bureau. He said they considered doing a job on the Herald Tribune ad, but decided instead to play up Kuettner's series on the New York schools. However, he said that if there were another similar ad by the segregationists, the press section would take it on. He also said that they would call on us for any background they might need. I am cognizant of my other assignments, dealt out at the last meeting of the Mass Media Committee, and will move on them as quickly as I can.

I suppose you know that there is going to be a CCD Executive Committee meeting on March 26. Will you be there or Ed Lukas, or who from ACJ? This timing is very awkward for me, but I do feel a powerful urge to be there and take part in the revival of the corpse. If so, perhaps I will see you.

Dear Harold —

At the last meeting of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, several organizations expressed interest in reprinting Walt Kelly's Pogo comic strip series on "Speakeasy Schools." The anguished howls of some Southern segregationist editors about this series indicates that it strikes hard at one of the most vulnerable spots in segregations armor -- the funnybone.

We checked with Kelly and he has given us permission to reprint the strips. Enclosed are copies of the series, which we plan to print as a 24 page pamphlet on newsprint.

The cost of the pamphlet would vary from $35 per thousand for a run of 10,000 copies to $20 per thousand for a run of 50,000 copies. (Imprint cost will probably run an additional $15.)

Please let us know if your organization would like to order a quantity, how many, and whether or not you want your own imprint on the pamphlet.

Northerner Backs Segregation

A Southerner's Words Supply Rebuttal

By John Lofton
Post-Gazette Staff Writer

IN TODAY'S issue of the Post-Gazette there is an advertisment consisting of a letter to President Eisenhower criticizing the Supreme Court's historic school desegregation decision. Carleton Putnam, the writer of the letter, is presented by the ad's sponsors as "a member of a famous New England family, a native of New York City, a graduate of Princeton and Columbia." These credentials are obviously intended to convey the impression that Mr. Putnam's segregationist views carry the weight of high, nonpartisan authority.

BY WAY of demonstrating that Mr. Putnam's preachments are something less than Olympian, we would like to quote in answer to them the comments of an observer who is much closer to the subject and who, we think, has credentials which make him a far more creditable authority. He is James McBride Dabbs, a member of a family that has lived in the South for 150 years, a native of South Carolina, owner and operator of a plantation employing Negroes, a graduate of the Uninversity of South Carolina and of Clark University, author of the recent book, The Southern Heritage (Knopf), from which we quote. Excerpts from Putnam and Dabbs follow:

Mr. Putnam: "It is my personal conviction that the local [Southern] customs in this case were 'hardened by time' for a very good reason, and that while they may not . . . have been decreed in heaven, they come closer to it than the current view of the Supreme Court."

Mr. Dabbs: "There's no doubt they [Negroes] are more poorly equipped than the whites. But, now, having made this probably correct observation, we conclude that nature, or God, made them so. This is a most happy conclusion. For it's perfectly clear that the inferior position of the Negro in the South is due either to God or to us; and as it's doubtful democratic and Christian doctrine for us to admit the responsibility, we are happy to pass it on to God."

Mr. Putnam: "Five minutes before the court's desegregation decision, the Constitution meant one thing; five minutes later it meant something else. Only one thing intervened, namely, an expression of the personal views of the members of the court."

Mr. Dabbs: "The Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments have been a part of the Constitution for that length of time [90 years] and, however adopted, are built into the conscience of the nation. True, the judges are just getting around to pinpointing their meaning, but the meaning has been there for any man to read, and as time has turned the pages the meaning has become increasingly clear."

Mr. Putnam: "In the matter of schools, rights to equal education are inseparably bound up with rights to freedom of association and, in the South at least, may require that both be considered simultaneously. (In using the word 'association' here, I mean the right to associate with whom you please.)"

MR. DABBS: "The Court didn't order anybody to 'integrate' anything; it merely said we should stop separating school children on the basis of race. . . . It's we who have substituted 'mixing' for 'stop separating.' . . . Negroes merely want the rights and privileges of American citizens. But desiring an equal chance with us at success isn't the same as wanting to sit with us in school and church."

Mr. Putnam: "Any man with two eyes in his head can observe a Negro settlement in the Congo, can study the pure-blooded African in his native habitat as he exists when left on his own resources, can compare this settlement with London or Paris, and can draw his own conclusions regarding relative levels of character and intelligence—or that combination of character and intelligence which is civilization."

Mr. Dabbs: ". . . with top-flight Negroes in practically every field, it seems rather late to raise the old question of the implied inferiority of the Negro because of the lack of a modern civilization in Africa. Yet the question is raised and should be answered briefly. First, though Africa has never had an industrial civilization—a Western creation of yesterday—the native Africans of the slaving period, especially those who were brought to America, were not savages but pre-literate folk with a complex agricultural, social, and legal society, with skilled workers in iron and other metals, and with great artists, especially in sculpture and wood-carving. Indeed, the invention of iron-smelting may have been brought to Europe from Africa."

Mr. Putnam: "I would emphatically support improvement of education in Negro schools, if and where it is inferior. Equality of opportunity and equality before the law, when not strained to cover other situations, are acceptable ideals because they provide the chance to earn and to progress . . ."

Mr. Dabbs: "We overlooked the 'equal' that Plessy v. Ferguson said they [Negroes] should have, and thus caused them and the courts to ponder its absence until now the "separate' has been outlawed. . . . They now have the right to desegregated schools, just like other people, and let the law forget race."

MR. PUTNAM: ". . . for 94 years . . . the North has been trying to force the black man down the white Southerner's throat, and it is a miracle that relations between the races in the South have progressed as well as they have."

Mr. Dabbs: "Whatever our dreamed-of Southern society, of slavery or segregation, might have become if left alone, it was not, it could not be, left alone in the dynamic world in which it was established. It would have been changed whether anyone, inside or outside, ever thought about changing it; it would have been changed by general forces moving in the world."

So speaks James McBride Dabbs. For a full, eloquent and knowledgeable answer to Carleton Putnam, readers should give The Southern Heritage a complete reading.

Dear Friend:

We are planning to reprint A FATE WORSE THAN INTEGRATION by Howard Zinn, which appeared in the August 1959 issue of Harper's Magazine.

This article, by an Atlanta professor points out that white Southerners have many values which many of them may consider more precious than continued segregation. Among these are: the economic (the desire to make money); the importance Americans attach to sports; majority support for law and order; the traditional Southern qualities of hospitality, courtliness and good manners; the desire to have political power; and the maintenance of public education.

Letter
JC

The article is very well written and seems extremely effective for use both with Northerners and Southerners.

On the basis of our present printing order the price would be $18 per thousand. Of course, if you should want to place an order for 1,000 or more copies in advance of publication it would help bring the final price down still further.

We may be able to include your imprint on the publication, but that, of course, will be an additional charge.

I am sorry that I do not have copies of the article to send along with this letter but I think you will find it rewarding enough to look it up in the current Harper's.

Please let me know by Labor Day how many copies you would like.

With all best wishes.

All I can say in extenuation is that I was doing the Lord's work. An appointment had been set up for me with a foundation interested in philanthropy - worthy race relations efforts in the South. Since they're already helping SRC, I wasn't even pleading my own cause, but others that need support.

Dear Harold:

Just a note to remind you that the Mass Media Committee meeting is on Wednesday, March 23rd at 11:30 A.M., at the Catholic Interracial Council, 20 Vesey Street, New York, N.Y.. I am sending this reminder because your letter to Ed on March 14 said that you would be in New York on Thursday, March 23rd, a day which ain't, at least not this year. Incidentally, we asked Marvin Rich of CORE to be at the meeting. He tells me that four of the Negro sit-down youngsters will be in New York on Thursday, March 24th for a TV show.

Ed is anxious to see you when you are in town, so let's plan on it.

All the best!

Cordially yours,

Harry

Subject: Mass Media Meeting

I have only obvious thoughts for agenda items for the September Mass Media Meeting.

Concerning the school situation, they might want to discuss Houston and quiet developments there, New Orleans, the new court decision there and its significance, potential for violence in that area. Also Prince Edward County. This still needs more national attention to illustrate the impossibility of successful private schools, the immorality of schooling for white only, etc.

There still needs to be interpretation of the sit-ins and particularly of the new kneel-in activities. More attention in the national media to constructive solution of lunch counter crises might be helpful to keep the momentum rolling.

Dear Harold:

Awfully sorry to hear that you won't be able to make the September Mass Media meeting. In view of the current developments relating to New Orleans, Houston, etc., what suggestions do you have for our agenda and what are some of the latest developments with which we should be concerned?

I saw Alan Reitman yesterday, and he mentioned that 3 white children from Koinania had been refused admittance to the white high school at Americus, Georgia because of "where they come from." The ACLU is handling their case.

I'll be in Atlantic City from September 18-21 for the Steelworker and Chemical Workers Conventions, and at home Thursday and Friday, September 22 and 23, since that's a Jewish holiday. If you get into New York during that time, would you give me a buzz at my home--Pershing 1-3069.

All the best,

Dear Friend:

When you last received minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, we told you that meetings would only be held on call -- when particular problems emerged.

The time has come. We are holding a special meeting on Friday, June 14, 1963 at the National Urban League, 14 East 48th Street, New York City, from 11:30 A.M. to 2:00 P.M.

Among the subjects we have been asked to consider are: Black Muslims and the mass media; the reactionary push for the states' rights constitutional amendments and mass media implications; the recent Supreme Court decisions on race relations; and America's response to the new rise in Negro militancy.

Since this will be a luncheon meeting, please call me at PL 1-4000 or write to me at 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, to let me know whether or not you plan to attend.

UTILIZING THE MEDIA OF COMMUNICATION

Discussion Leader: Alfred L. Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Chairman, CCD Mass Media Committee.

Rapporteur: Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

Mr. Bernheim delineated the main purpose of the workshop as an opportunity for interchange of ideas and of information between national and Southern field staffs of CCD organizations. The Mass Media Committee, he pointed out, deals with all materials used to educate people, written or audio-visual and operates through voluntary acceptances of assignments by the participating organizations.

After its scope and functions had been approved by the Executive Committee, Mr. Bernheim said, the MMC held six meetings, at monthly intervals. Attendance represented six to nine organizations at each session.

Among actions taken, omitting details, were the following:

Caused to be prepared and distributed lists of persons designated by agencies to receive mass media material.

Caused to be prepared a bibliography of material on desegregation, which brought up to date the bibliography of the University of Florida.

Caused to be prepared a catalogue of films, transcriptions and kinescopes dealing with desegregation (not quite completed).

Established clearence procedures through which materials bearing on desegregation are circulated among all the participating organizations.

Initiated series of conferences with outside public relations experts, for the purpose of getting their advice and help. The first conference was held with Edward Bernays in June. It is hoped that a meeting will be arranged with Elmo Roper in October.

Stimulated subscriptions from among the participating organizations to the Petal Paper, thus helping to assure its continued publication.

Exchanged information about the mass media activities, in the works or planned for near future by the organizations represented at the meetings. This information was transmitted to the other participating agencies through the minutes.

Problems were discussed among the agencies represented, and suggestions were made as to what might be done in respect to them. Conclusions and decisions transmitted to the other member agencies through the minutes.

Among the questions considered by the Workshop were the following:

1. Can we use the mass media to stress the economic costs of racial tension in the South to secure support for law and order by business, legal and other groups with status in the community?

2. Can we promote the use in Southern and national mass media of successful cases of school and other integration?

3. How can we counter the efforts by segregationists to use as weapons against integration the educational disparities disclosed when schools integrate -- as in Washington, D.C.?

4. Can we use the new Voting Rights law and school integration cases to spur Southern liberals and moderates to speak up for decency?

5. How can we use the mass media to create opportunities to stress support for law and order?

6. How can the mass media counter the trend by Southern segregationists to join the Klan and use violence (because of their disillusionment over alleged failure of legal methods to stop desegregation)?

It was reported that Business Week is planning a major story on the economic problems arising in the South from integration difficulties. It will probably appear in its October 19th issue and will deal with such questions as: Have race difficulties affected the sale of new school bonds; Are Negroes finding it any harder to get bank loans, credit or insurance; are Negro banks showing local growth?

Other questions it will consider include: Have race difficulties been reflected in real estate transactions, and is fear of eventual integration of public schools leading to a growth of enrollment in white private schools?

It will report examples of racial difficulties slowing down influx of new businesses and industry, due to reluctance of employers, with government contracts that require fair employment guarantees, to locate in pro-segregation states. The article will deal with boycotts aimed at either white or Negro groups; apprehension among businessmen over lost business due to race tension; activity by local Chambers of Commerce in this field and the present situation in Southern unions.

It will also inquire into whether or not there is fear that loss of Negro labor may hamper future Southern economic expansion; and whether plant personnel officers have noticed any racial tension among their work forces?

CCD people are helping to provide answers to some of these questions.

Workshop participants suggested that it might be possible to contact the Louisville Courier-Journal, or one of the TV or radio stations which have done a good job in reporting the success story of integration in its area for a report on how the mass media job was done. This might be used in connection with a manual prepared for use by local people on how to deal with local mass media. Alex Morisey of the American Friends Service Committee agreed to work with Harold Fleming of the Southern Regional Council on this project.

It was suggested that it might be useful to have an article printed in a popular magazine analyzing how the nation's press, including the Southern papers, handle the desegregation issue. The Society of Newspaper Editors and the Association of Southern Nieman Fellows were two prospects mentioned for doing the job. Publications to carry such a story might include Time's press section; New York Times Sunday Magazine; Life.

It was also suggested that it would be helpful if an important paper - like the Louisville Courier-Journal - should ask Associated Press to do a series on successful cases of school integration.

Since the South reacts to national opinion, it was felt that stronger support in national mass media for desegregation would help bolster law and order and pro-integration forces in the South. We were also warned to be on guard to counteract a forthcoming well-financed Southern segregationist propaganda drive.

Bill of Rights Day comes on December 15th, with October 29th serving as the 10th anniversary of the Report of President Truman's Civil Rights Committee, TO SECURE THESE RIGHTS. It was suggested that members of that committee (all but two are still alive) might be secured for local and national radio and television appearances celebrating progress since the report was first issued.

Segregationists from the South frequently send letters to Northern papers defending their viewpoint. It was suggested that a reverse twist might be useful -- that of having transplanted former Southerners write to their former home-town papers telling them how well integration works.

It was felt that the work of the Mass Media Committee would be greatly bolstered if CCD had better fact-finding machinery. One suggestion was for more organizations to participate in the work of the Mass Media Committee, and for all CCD agencies to report their mass media plans and programs promptly to the secretary of CCD's Mass Media Committee.

Dear Harold:

This will confirm our telephone conversation regarding the meetings of the Subcommittees on Mass Media and Fact Finding. The former will take place on November 7th at 2:00 P.M. in Allie Bernheim's office, Room 501, 386 Fourth Avenue, and the latter on November 8th at 10:00 A.M. in Arnold Forster's office, 515 Madison Avenue.

I have reserved a single room for you for the night of the 7th at the Commodore Hotel. I will be looking forward to seeing you.

Cordially,

Arnie

REPORT OF MASS MEDIA SUB-COMMITTEE

The committee was charged by the Sept. 18th conference in Washington with formulating recommendations and procedures which would facilitate cooperative planning and action in the exchange, preparation and dissemination of audio-visual materials, and to formulate concrete proposals regarding program and structure in regard to the mass media to be submitted in writing prior to the November meeting.

One of the great needs made evident by the participants at the Sept. 18th meeting in Washington was the need to inform each group of materials relating to desegregation already available and materials being planned -- in the fields of the daily and weekly press, magazines, books, pamphlets, radio, television and films.

While we recognize that it might at some time be desirable to set up a full-time paid public relations staff to coordinate and expand activity relating to desegregation in the mass media, this report confines itself to the current possibilities, based on voluntary cooperation among the agencies involved.

We recommend that there be a continuing committee on mass media, based in New York, the nerve center of the mass media, but to include representation from other sections of the country, particularly from the South, on the committee. The committee should meet at least once a month, and on call when emergencies occur. Committee members should be empowered to send alternates when unable to attend meetings themselves. The committee should have a chairman and secretary.

The committee should serve primarily as a clearing house. Its function should not be to carry on program but to make program recommendations, and, insofar as possible, utilize on-going programs and personnels of the constituent agencies. The committee is not intended to ~~obviate the need for~~ supplant existing lines of interagency ~~[illegible] current intgr-agency~~ communication + cooperation ~~cooperation.~~ In fact, we hope that such relationships will increase.

We propose that a list be prepared of names, addresses and phone numbers of each ~~constituent~~ cooperating agency, together with the names of the person in each agency responsible for work with the mass media. This list should be sent to each agency. Copies or notices of materials and programs already available, or planned by any agency, should be sent by that agency to the persons responsible for work with mass media in all the ~~constituent~~ cooperating agencies.

In sending such materials or notices, the agency should also indicate how the materials can best be used. Any agency securing information about upcoming items not prepared by one of the ~~constituent~~ cooperating agencies (a TV show or magazine article, for instance) should also notify the mass media list about such matters.

The committee should attempt to arrange for a bibliography to be prepared of materials and programs currently available.

It should review media experiences of the groups, attempt to crystallize common media strategy lines, suggest what materials are needed and invite particular agencies to develop them, arrange to transmit our needs to the media and reflect their needs to our agencies.

3. Approved in principle the reports of the Subcommittees on Mass Media, Interreligious Activities, Fact-Finding and Community Chests and referred the reports to the Executive Committee for action. (See enclosed copies of subcommittee reports).

4. Received a report from Harold Fleming of a meeting held at Tuskegee of southern representatives of a selected number of national organizations. Recommended that a similar meeting be convened, involving the southern field staffs of all the participating organizations, in an effort to determine the communities meriting priority attention and to allocate responsibilities among the several organizations for different aspects of the planned program.

5. Listened to a report by Roy Wilkins on the current attacks against the NAACP. Referred this question to the Executive Committee for follow-up. (See enclosed summary of Mr. Wilkins' remarks).

6. Agreed that no publicity be given to the meeting. Authorized the Executive Committee in its discretion to issue an appropriate release announcing the formation and purposes of the Consultative Conference.

REPORT OF THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON STRUCTURE

There was unanimous agreement at the meeting of September 18 regarding the desirability of closer cooperation and inter-consultation among the many organizations committed to "the rapid and harmonious implementation of the Supreme Court decisions on desegregation." The Subcommittee on Structure took this unanimous expression as its point of departure in its search for an appropriate means of making such cooperation effective.

The Subcommittee was guided throughout its deliberations by its desire to avoid any structure suggestive of, or conducive to, a new super or supra organization. The sentiment of the September 18 meeting appeared equally clear on this. At the same time the Subcommittee is strongly of the opinion that the desired measure of cooperation cannot be achieved without some formal structure, however skeletal, to provide channels for orderly inter-communication as well as fixed responsibility for continuing inter-consultation.

The structure which the Subcommittee is proposing as outlined in the draft of By-laws which follows, is a minimal instrument designed to assure on the one hand, the complete freedom of action of the cooperating organizations, and, on the other, a continuing exchange of information, opinion, experiences and plans among the organizations.

It is assumed that the proposed Consultative Conference on Desegregation (C.C.D.) will conduct its operations for the most part through the existing resources of the participants. It seems probable that its work cannot proceed indefinitely and with the enlargement to be anticipated without the eventual employment of a paid secretary but it is not proposed that this step be taken initially.

It is also assumed that the cooperation among the participating organizations at the natioanl level will be complemented by similar inter-consultation among local units of the same organizations.

A copy of the proposed constitution follows.

I Name

The name of this association shall be The Consultative Conference on Desegregation.

II Purpose and Function

The purpose of the Conference shall be to facilitate cooperation among the participating organizations in relation to problems of desegregation. The Conference shall serve as a clearing house for the exchange of information, views, experiences, and plans, and for inter-consultation among the participating organizations. The Conference shall not engage in legislative or political action.

The Conference shall take no public action nor issue any public statement in its own name. Its offices may be used, however, to facilitate the issuance of joint statements by such of the participating organizations as desire to join in such a statement. Deliberations of the Conference, or of its committees, shall be advisory only, and shall not be binding upon the participating organizations. No organization or group of organizations shall be designated as representing or speaking for the Conference.

III Participation

The Conference shall be a voluntary association of organizations which are committed to support of desegregation and which seek to facilitate the rapid and harmonious implementation of the Supreme Court decisions thereon. Participation shall be open to any organization subscribing to these purposes, upon recommendation of the Executive Committee and approval of a majority of the participating organizations. Each organization shall be entitled to one vote. Participation in the Conference shall not in any way restrict the autonomy of the participating organizations.

IV Officers

The officers shall consist of three co-chairmen, a secretary and a treasurer, who shall be elected annually by the participating organizations.

The officers, together with 12 other members, also elected annually by the participating organizations, shall constitute an Executive Committee, which shall be responsible for the administration of the Conference, and for calling meetings of the Conference.

The Co-chairmen, with the approval of the Executive Committee, may appoint such standing or ad hoc committees as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of the Conference. Individuals who, by virtue of their interest, competence and experience, can make a constructive contribution to the work of the Conference or of its committees, may be appointed to such committees and invited to participate in the deliberations of the Conference, without reference to membership in any of the participating organizations.

V Finances

The Conference shall be financed by voluntary contributions and payments for materials and services by the participating organizations. Contributions from other organizations and individuals may be received on the approval of the Executive Committee.

VI Amendments

This constitution may be amended by a 2/3 vote of the participating organizations present and voting at a meeting called for that purpose.

REPORT OF MASS MEDIA SUB-COMMITTEE

The committee was charged by the Sept. 18th conference in Washington with formulating recommendations and procedures which would facilitate cooperative planning and action in the exchange, preparation and dissemination of audio-visual materials, and to formulate concrete proposals regarding program and structure in regard to the mass media, to be submitted in writing prior to the November meeting.

While we recognize that it might at some time be desirable to set up a full-time paid public relations staff to coordinate and expand activity relating to desegregation in the mass media, this report confines itself to the current possibilities, based on voluntary cooperation among the agencies involved.

We recommend that there be a continuing committee on mass media, based in New York, the nerve center of the mass media, but to include representation from other sections of the country, particularly from the South, on the committee. The committee should meet at least once a month, and on call when emergencies occur. Committee members should be empowered to send alternates when unable to attend meetings themselves. Report of Subcommittee on Interreligious Activities

Submitted by: Father Maurice Shean - Catholic Committee of the South, Chairman
Dr. Will D. Campbell - National Council of the Churches of Christ
Rabbi David Kogen - United Synagogue of America
Dr. J. Oscar Lee - National Council of Churches

Mr. Arnold Aronson

The Subcommittee was charged with the task of formulating recommendations regarding programs to be carried out under interreligious auspices, on the national, regional and local level.

Among the factors considered as militating against effective interreligious cooperation were: (a) theological differences, (b) the tendency of each group to focus on the problems of its own adherents and (c) the fear of individual clergymen that their efforts in behalf of desegregation might not be supported by clergymen of other denominations. In order to overcome these obstacles, it is recommended (a) that the approach to interreligious cooperation focus on the development of effective working relationships on the specific problem of desegregation rather than on efforts to facilitate mutual understanding, (b) that efforts be concentrated on the local community level, on the assumption that such interreligious cooperation can be instrumental in giving impetus to and providing the nucleus for the organization of larger and more representative local citizens groups and (c) that emphasis be placed on the development of a positive program in support of integration, rather than on denunciation of individuals or groups opposed to desegregation.

The committee proposes the following activities:

1. That a comprehensive statement based upon the moral issues involved in desegregation be formulated and circulated by each denomination among its clergymen in the South, in an effort to secure the signatures of as many Southern clergymen as possible. Depending on the results achieved, consideration should be given to the public release and dissemination of the proposed statement.

2. That primary attention be given to the organization of community interreligious groups, consisting of ministers, priests and rabbis (plus such lay leaders from their respective churches as might be deemed advisable) and the development of appropriate local positive programs under interreligious auspices.

3. That regional meeting of the field personnel employed in the South by the several denominations be convened to discuss strategy, to determine the localities which merit priority attention and to develop procedures for continuing clearence and coordination in the field.

4. That, at a later date, a South-wide conference involving both clergymen and lay religious leaders, be convened on the problem of desegregation.

Report of Subcommittee on Fact-Finding

Submitted by: Arnold Forster - Anti-Defamation League, Chairman
Harold Fleming - Southern Regional Council
Edwin Lukas - American Jewish Committee
John Morsell - NAACP
Arnold Aronson -

The Committee was asked to recommend procedures for the continuous exchange of information among the participating organizations regarding the operations of the White Citizens Councils and other similar groups - their composition, personnel, methods, program, etc. The Committee recommends:

1. That a continuing committee on fact-finding, representative of the organizations most actively engaged in this type of activity, be appointed. The committee should have a chairman and a secretary and should meet at regular intervals in order to evaluate overall trends and developments and to recommend programs of counteraction.

2. That each participating organization indicate the person or persons in that agency responsible for work of a fact-finding or investigatory nature; that a master list of such persons be compiled and made available to each organization; and that all publications of a fact-finding nature issued by any of the participating organizations be sent routinely to all persons on the master list.

3. That each organization forward to the secretary of the committee information of a fact-finding character which comes to its attention. Wherever appropriate, the committee will undertake to duplicate such information and to circulate it among the participating organizations.

4. That upon the request of a participating organization the committee undertake to furnish information about the background, activities and organization of individuals or groups opposing desegregation.

5. While the committee was charged with developing procedures for the exchange of fact-finding information of a "negative" character, it believes that a similar exchange of information regarding positive experiences, i.e., instances where integration has been carried out successfully, etc., would be mutually helpful. Accordingly, it recommends that such information coming to the attention of any of the participati organizations likewise be sent to the secretary of the committee for duplicating and distribution among the organiza tions.

Report of Subcommittee on Community Chests

Current Problems of Social Agencies in the Integration Process

Attacks on social agencies have occurred since the May 17, 1954 Decision of the United States Supreme Court desegregating schools. They are attempts by the pro-segregationists to destroy organizations which are considered to be working for the implementation of the Supreme Court Decision.

The effects of efforts against social agencies differ from those faced by churches, for with the social agency financing is the most vulnerable point of attack and is a phase of the development of the integration process.

Scores of Community Chests and United Funds have felt the brunt of unwarranted attacks in recent years. In the main, they are attempts to have the Urban League removed from campaign participation on the charge that it seeks to foster integration of the races in its work. Other agencies in several cities have alos been targets. Some of them are: Red Cross, YWCA, Girl Scouts, Council of Social Agencies, YMCA, Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls.

It is incumbent upon the social work agencies, as well as the groups supporting these efforts, to take cognizance of and engage in programs to protect the interest of organizations established for the purpose of providing health and welfare services to communities.

The method employed has been one of intimidation, the most common of which has been the flooding of cities with pamphlets at the beginning of a Chest drive with the threat that the campaign will be boycotted unless the offending agency (in their eyesight) is removed. This action has resulted in the changed status of Urban League branches in New Orleans, La., Jacksonville, Fla., and Richmond, Va. In some cities where there is no branch of the Urban League, but financing of the National Organization endorsed by the National Budget Committee, blackmailing tactics have been used against campaigns in those cities, although the amounts are small.

Action Suggested

1. All organizations cooperating should send copies of material attacking social agencies to:

   Nelson C. Jackson
   National Urban League
   14 East 48th Street
   New York 17, New York

   Information will be shared with other national organizations to be used with their branches.

2. The problem of intergroup relations in social welfare is of primary consideration because it deals with the relationships between people and their environment. This should not be lost sight of. In this vein, national social welfare agencies might establish a policy to guide their locals. These include, in addition to the social agencies mentioned above, United Community Funds and Councils of America.

3. Recognizing the fact that voluntary social work is dependent upon the support of strong national and local groups such as National Association of Manufacturers, Chambers of Commerce, and Labor, it is suggested that these and other groups which have not done so, be approached for a policy statement for the purpose of undergirding the practice of social work, nationally and locally.

   Local organizations not having a specific social welfare interest are urged to use their prestige with local board members of Community Chests and Councils to have them stand firm against the current attacks facing social agencies.

4. Labor, nationally, has issued a policy statement in this area, Regional and local labor groups are urged to implement this in communities with as many unions as is possible.

5. Communication lines between racial groups have been damaged in many communities. It is urged that local groups, participants of this conference, seek to meet and work out plans to approach their community problems. Indicate to the parent body what has been accomplished.

Brief Resume of Roy Wilkins' Remarks Before Consultative Conference on Desegregation, November 20, 1956

Actions by state governments against the NAACP are assuming proportions and patterns which indicate a concerted attempt to put an end to NAACP activity in the South. At present NAACP is under injunctions of varying degrees of comprehensiveness in Alabama, Louisiana and Texas and is threatened in Virginia, Florida and Georgia.

The Louisiana action rested on the application of a forgotten statute requiring the filing of membership lists. NAACP, unwilling to expose its members to possible reprisals, sought to have law set aside; pending ultimate resolution in the courts, NAACP refused to file lists.

The Alabama and Texas actions were based on the general authority to police foreign corporations "doing business" in the states. In Alabama, accusations of a sweeping nature were made including opposition to the "laws and traditions" of the state; also failure to register as an out-of-state corporation. Membership lists were demanded as necessary to determination of how NAACP was doing business; injunction was instantaneous and prior to opportunity to answer. Heavy contempt judgment for failure to submit names and addresses of members. Texas action similar in intent and outcome.

In Florida, a legislative investigation is under way for the expressed purpose of arriving at proposals for anti-NAACP laws in next session of the legislature.

Georgia is acting on the pretext that NAACP is a profit-making corporation and thus subject to state income taxes. All membership records were demanded on ground that these were needed for purpose of investigation. (Note chain-reaction: Louisiana established NAACP sensitivity on the membership list question and Alabama applied this principle at once. Texas raised the "profit-making business" charge, and Georgia immediately sought to apply this.)

Virginia has proceeded by legislative enactments, culminating in a series of five laws which would effectively prevent NAACP from continuing its present activities, including aid to current and new litigation seeking to promote desegreation. In Virginia, as in Texas, the objective is seen to have broadened so as to incorporate specific attacks on the legal phases of NAACP work, as well as on the organizational phases, including meetings, solicitations, etc.

With this last development added to the unusually prompt use of the injunctive power, it becomes clear that the NAACP is the particular target of a multiple assault on the exercise of the constitutional freedoms of assembly, speech and petition by persons and groups who dissent from the majority views of the community. It does not need the lessons of the last twenty years to show how inevitable will be the extension of this attack to other groups unless it is halted in the present instance. For all organizations, and especially for those banding together in the CCD, the implications are clear.

Minutes of Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, March 28, 1957, New York, N.Y.

RECEIVED ... 57

PRESENT: Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service, American Jewish Committee; Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council; Henry Lee Moon, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Jack Schlitt, Jewish Labor Committee; Al Vorspan, Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Friday, April 26, 1957 from 9:30 - 11:30 a.m. at the NAACP, 20 West 40th Street, New York, N.Y.

Please notify Harry Fleischman, NLS, 386 Fourth Avenue, New York 16, New York, as to whether or not you plan to attend.

Agencies are requested to send a list of names and addresses of persons responsible for work with the mass media as well as a list of their southern regional offices and field representatives. Please put the entire mass media list, sent to you with our letter of March 12, 1957, on your mailing list to receive any materials on desegregation sent out by your agency.

A bibliography on school desegregation has been prepared and will go out together with a list of films, kinescopes and filmstrips and the University of Florida's bibliography on the same subject in a future mailing.

It was agreed to send out program notes, containing an inventory of what our respective agencies are doing in the field of desegregation mass media activity. Please send the information to the Secretary so that he can include it in the next mailing.

It was reported that the Saturday Evening Post and Look Magazines are scheduled to print articles on race relations in the South in the near future.

Beltman

The NAACP will reprint an article by Stanley Rowland in THE NATION. It was suggested that Robert McKay be contacted to do an article on the civil liberties implications of the attacks by the Southern States against the NAACP for the NYU ~~Law Review~~.

Firing Line

It was reported that state legislative hearings in Louisiana are carrying on smear attacks against the NAACP and the Southern Regional Council as "pro-Communist." The same technique unfortunately is planned for other states. It was suggested that Vice President Nixon be approached to prepare a statement indicating that his African tour convinces him that racism helps Communism internationally and those who stand for democracy and upholding the Supreme Court decision on desegregation are the most effective foes of Communism. One agency agreed to attempt to get in touch with persons close to Nixon.

Several agencies agreed to prepare and send to the Secretary material on the false attacks in the South on the NAACP and the Southern Regional Council, which will be submitted to a Senator from a border state for a speech in the Senate.

It was reported that syndicated smear editorials are being sent out to newspapers in the South. Copies of such editorials and a list of the papers carrying them for consideration on how such "canned hate" can be exposed will be sent by the NAACP to the Secretary.

"The Broken Mask"

Minutes of Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, April 26, 1957, New York, N.Y.

PRESENT: Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Henry Lee Moon, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Phil Pearlman, Anti-Defamation League; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Wednesday, May 22, 1957 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the American Civil Liberties Union, 170 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York.

Please notify Harry Fleischman, NLS, 386 Fourth Avenue, New York 16, N.Y. as to whether or not you plan to attend.

Attached are additions to the list of names and addresses of persons in CCD agencies responsible for work with the mass media, field representatives and Southern Regional offices. (The first list was sent to you on March 12, 1957.) Please make sure this entire list of names is on your mailing list to receive any materials or notices of forthcoming items on desegregation sent out by your agency.

Also enclosed is a bibliography on school desegregation prepared by the American Jewish Committee to supplement an earlier University of Florida bibliography. The latter will be sent to you in a future mailing.

Please send Harry Fleischman notes containing an inventory of what your agency has done and is doing in the desegregation mass media activity so that this may be included in the next mailing as well.

Look magazine had an article on the Klan in its April 30th issue. It also has in preparation an article on the NAACP and its work.

It was reported that the Saturday Evening Post will carry a five-article series, starting in June, on both the Southern resistance movement to desegregation and progress in desegregation, written by John Martin. Ballantyne will then publish this series as a paperbound book.

The May, 1957 issue of Current History magazine is devoted to desegregation.

The Anti-Defamation League is putting out a brochure on "Segregation and Desegregation -- a Digest of Current Research," written by Professor Melvin Tumin of Princeton. ADL will send a sample copy to the CCD Mass Media list.

The American Civil Liberties Union is preparing a statement on jury trials and civil rights legislation, answering the current drive by Southern Senators to weaken forthcoming federal civil rights legislation. Sample copies will be sent by the ACLU to the list.

The NAACP has reprinted a Nation article by Stanley Rowland on "Legal War on the NAACP" and will mail a sample copy to the list. The ACLU will follow up the possibilities of getting articles on the civil liberties implications of the attacks of the Southern states on the NAACP into law and other journals.

The United States Department of Justice has written to the NAACP repudiating the attempt by ex-Communist Manning Johnson to pose as an FBI employee while trying to link the NAACP with the Communist Party.

The American Legion's The Firing Line supports ex-Communist Manning Johnson's attack on the NAACP in its March 1st issue. Attempts will be made to reach The Firing Line with factual corrections.

Vice President Nixon issued a statement following his African tour pointing out that racism hurts America internationally and is serving as a basis to boost international Communism.

The Daytona Beach Florida Evening News carried an editorial, "Alternative to Violence," which the NAACP plans to reprint. This editorial opposes five bills introduced into the Florida legislature earlier in April. These bills could seriously affect not only the NAACP but also many other agencies concerned with the elimination of racial and religious discrimination.

Forthcoming films dealing with race relations and desegregation include a documentary now being prepared by the Fund for the Republic Newsfilm Project and a dramatic story in production by Potomac Films. The NAACP has a script for a half hour T.V. film which it hopes to have ready in the fall. The National Council of Churches' Broadcasting and Film Commission put out a film entitled "Broken Mask."

Our next committee meeting will consider what will happen when schools reopen in September and what preparation is needed, mass media wise, to meet the problems that will arise.

We will attempt to arrange an off-the-record meeting in the Fall of top public relations people, to help prepare a broad outline of a campaign to overcome current resistance to school desegregation.

RECEIVED JUN 24 1957

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, June 12, 1957, New York, N.Y.

PRESENT: Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Henry Lee Moon, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Guichard Parris, National Urban League; Louisa Hager, Young Womens Christian Association; Herbert Poster, American Jewish Congress; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Jacob Schlitt, Jewish Labor Committee; Galen Weaver, Congregational Christian Churches; Edward L. Bernays and Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Thursday, June 27, 1957 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the National Urban League, 14 East 48th Street, New York City. Please notify Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service, 386 Fourth Avenue, as to whether or not you plan to attend.

The minutes of the meeting of May 22, 1957 were read and accepted.

It was suggested that it might be possible to arrange for a woman's magazine to carry an article similar to the Chet Huntley NBC "Outlook" program May 19, 1957, which presented one youngster connected with each of the five desegregation cases which came to the Supreme Court and discussed what had happened to them since.

A memo from William Peters to the Fund For The Republic was forwarded to our Committee by Adam Yarmolinsky. It contained a suggestion for a grant to enable a top free lance magazine writer to spend from three to four months over a year's time studying race relations, particularly in the South. The program might include interviews with governors of Southern states, with law enforcement officials, Negro leaders, newspaper publishers and reporters, with farmers and businessmen of both races, with professionals and house-hold servants, ministers, entertainers and laborers. It would include a long look at the leaders of Southern resistance to integration, probes in the direction of labor unions, white and Negro teachers and school administrators, and the so-called enlightened element of the white population.

While none of the agencies present felt that they were in a position to make such a grant, it was suggested that the Sidney Hillman Foundation or the Guggenheim Scholarship Fund might be approached. The American Friends Service Committee added that it was holding a Southern seminar with newspaper and magazine people and will approach Mr. Peters.

The American Jewish Committee is reprinting as a 24 page pamphlet entitled "Integration In Action," a series of six articles by Benjamin Fine in the New York Times on school desegregation in six border and Southern cities. Sample copies will be mailed to all CCD groups.

The Anti-Defamation League is pressing 45 r.p.m. recordings of a new song "Black and White," sung by Sammy Davis Jr. The other side of the record contains "The House I Live In," also sung by Sammy Davis Jr. Individual recordings will cost about 65¢ each -- approximately 50¢ for bulk orders.

It was reported that the National Council of Churches would have a television program, "Frontiers of Faith," on Sunday, June 23, 1957 at 1:30 to 2 p.m. over the National Broadcasting Company network. This program will feature a discussion of the violance being used against the Koinonia community in Americus, Georgia. The program will include Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, President, National Council of Churches; P. D. East, Editor, The Petal Paper, of Petal, Mississippi; Clarence Jordan of the Koinonia community; and Carl Rowan, author of "South of Freedom."

We will attempt to arrange with Harold Fleming of the Southern Regional Council for a favorable date in September to hold a meeting of the Committee.

It was reported that foreign journalists are not receiving sufficient constructive material on desegregation from the wire services and that their coverage tends to play up the dramatic unfavorable situations. Fleischman and Parris will speak with Joseph Johnson of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace when he returns from his tour of duty as advisor on employment discrimination to the American delegation at the International Labor Organization Conference in Geneva. We will discuss with him the possibility of getting the wire services to send more constructive material on desegregation. Alan Reitman agreed to speak about the same problem to Jim Kearny of the "Trenton Times," who is active in the International Press Institute.

It was agreed to get a listing of films on school desegregation out within a week.

Mr. Edward L. Bernays, the noted Public Relations Consultant, addressed the Mass Media Committee on the public relations approach to the problem of overcoming the current resistance in the South to school desegregation. A summary of his remarks, largely prepared by Jacob Schlitt, is attached.

Summary of remarks by Mr. Edward L. Bernays, to the Mass Media Committee of CCD on June 12, 1957

Bernays stressed the findings of social scientists that "information does not really modify attitudes." We are basically interested in changing attitudes toward desegregation, but people do not change willingly in response to words, and tend to rationalize in terms of preconceived attitudes. Information, then, is only a secondary tool. Attempting to change the culture pattern is the basic problem.

Our goals are three-fold: 1) To intensify favorable attitudes; 2) to convert; 3) to negate or modify negative attitudes. This is a problem of social engineering. We must try to engineer acceptance of the Supreme Court decision.

He set up a program.

1) Decide on objectives.

2) Research your publics.

3) Decide on your strategy.

4) Plan your organization.

5) Tactics - planning and timing.

Our first step is to define our objectives, both immediate and long-run. For example, are we concerned with peaceful penetration of border states, or do we want to tackle first the toughest pro-segregationist states in the deep South? The objectives must be defined in terms of attitudes and actions to be changed and place and time. He recalled the Ford Peace Ship slogan, "Out of the trenches by Christmas," as an example of an easily understood objective.

Bernays cited as a possible objective that by 19--, we insure that x number of border states are desegregated.

We are dealing with people. People get their attitudes from 1) the culture pattern; 2) childhood conditioning; 3) what they see and hear. In order to approach the problem intelligently, after deciding on objectives, our second step should be a study to find out if they are realizable, who are the people we must deal with and how their attitudes can be changed. In other words, who is for us, who is against us, who is on the fence in the South and how their attitudes can be modified. This study should be made of a sampling of opinion molders in the area, based on a variety of criteria--age groups, religious affiliation, political affiliation, business and professional leadership, etc. What is in the minds of the people who control social media in the South? What authority, what persuasion do they respond to? What media do they follow?

It is possible to isolate a sample of a few thousand of the 30 million Southerners and obtain a profile of the South and what their group configuration is. Bernays suggests that a cross-section study can be done in two to three weeks with money for this project coming from any one of a number of foundations. Organizations that might undertake this study, suggested by Bernays, include the Institute of Groups Dynamics at the University of Michigan under Rensas Likert, or Elmo Roper. Their interest in this area may prompt them to undertake this investigation on a non-profit basis.

The third step after such research is undertaken would be to proceed with the original objectives or revise such objectives in accordance with the patterns determined by the study.

The fourth step is to decide on the strategy to be used, how to employ the manpower, mind power and mechanics at our disposal. A possible strategy might be to take a particular group in the South showing favorable attitudes and get their opposite number in other areas to contact them. For example, the Bar Association could prepare a brief on law enforcement, a syndicated paper or press group could emphasize the issue of a free press in correspondence respectively with Southern lawyers and newspaper men. The issue of desegregation could be effectively advanced through related sub-issues. This strategy could be developed for the various publics in the South.

The fifth step would be to decide on organization: undertake a study of the resources of the groups in the Consultative Conference on Desegregation. In this way, those agencies which are best equipped to work in a certain area could be utilized for work in that area.

The sixth step would be to decide on tactics to modify attitudes. Under this subhead comes media. It is possible that getting into the mass media without decision on the preliminary themes and strategies could do more harm than good. Articles on desegregation and civil rights may not be read at all in the South, even if it gets into local or national publications. Our aim might be to tackle the media of the South only after we have found the tactics embodying the correct strategy. We must stress the appeals in accordance with our research and strategy.

If our research shows that business is afraid that industry will not come to the South because of dissension over the race issue, or that they are losing their labor supply through migration from the South, we might approach a university with the suggestion that it conduct a symposium of leading economists who would discuss this issue. Such a symposium would be picked up by the press and weekly news magazines which are respected in the South and might have more effective results than a direct appeal through an article or TV show.

The same indirect approach was suggested by Bernays in obtaining space for time on radio or TV. Requests can come not from the organizations desiring the time, but from a Senator or Congressmen whom we might be close to. Bernays decried the haphazard approach to publicity, getting news items or feature stories into a paper for the sole purpose of getting names or issues into print. Those who have no interest in the issue never are affected by it. Publicity is only effective when it is treated in terms of an integrated approach and change in the underlying societal structure. Bernays closed with the suggestion that leading businessmen interested in international affairs who realize that segregation in the South can affect their business, might be interested in footing the bill for the necessary research. Examples were John J. McCloy, Paul Hoffman, as well as the rubber and steel industries.

The members of the subcommittee agreed that Mr. Bernays' remarks were extremely valuable. Another meeting of the Committee will study it and then forward proposals based on it to the Executive Committee for its consideration.

RECEIVED JUL 10 1957

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, June 27, 1957, New York, N.Y.

PRESENT: Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Louisa Hager, Young Women's Christian Association; Julius Schatz, American Jewish Congress; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Guichard Parris, National Urban League; Jacob Schlitt, Jewish Labor Committee; George Hunton, Catholic Interracial Council; Arnold Aronson, CCD Secretary, NCRAC; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The Mass Media Committee will in all likelihood hold its next meeting with the Southern field staffs of CCD agencies, in conjunction with the plenary session of CCD. This is tentatively scheduled to be held September 16th and 17, 1957. You will be notified later of the time and place of the meeting.

The minutes of the meeting of June 12, 1957 were read and accepted.

A list of films dealing with desegregation was read and discussed at the meeting. It was felt that the list should be revised before it was sent out. Robert Disraeli will meet with Julius Schatz and Joseph Kenas on this and will also discuss possibilities of preparing a brief handbook on how to use films on school desegregation and how to get such material on T.V. They will also consider possibilities of getting discussion guides available. It was suggested that Ben Segal, Trade Union Consultant to the Fund for the Republic might organize a workshop on how to use films at the Fisk University Seminar on race relations.

A letter from Robert E. Hughes, Executive Director of the Alabama Council on Human Relations, was read thanking the committee for the work it is doing. He added that the national news editor of Look magazine told him that the numerous articles on race in recent editions have sharply increased sales of Look in the South. Mr. Hughes pointed out that whereas the Montgomery White Citizens Council had 14,000 members shortly after the bus boycott began it dropped down to 2,500 since many white segregationists there felt that the legal approach was futile in trying to stop desegregation. However, he added, since December, 1956, the Klan has mushroomed and is carrying on a widespread campaign of intimidation by threats, cross-burnings and bombings.

The Committee agreed that there was urgent need to re-examine the changing developments in the field of desegregation but, to do this effectively, we must have material from the Southern field staffs periodically.

It was suggested that committee members and agencies might prepare questions which we would ask the Southern field staffs to answer at the September meeting. If you have any such questions please send them in to Harry Fleischman to send to the Southern field staffs.

Mr. Hughes remarks were considered by the committee when it discussed the excellent talk of Edward L. Bernays at the June 12, 1957 meeting. The committee requested the CCD Executive Committee to consider the potentialities of Bernay's proposals and it was recommended that the Executive Committee also consider the possibility of approaching some foundation for a research project such as was suggested by Mr. Bernays. The Executive Committee was reminded that the Mass Media Committee is planning future sessions with other public relations experts. George Hunton will approach Elmo Roper to ask him to speak at a meeting of the committee in October.

One of the agencies asked whether or not any socio-dramatic scripts on school desegregation are available. If you know of any such scripts will you please send copies to Harry Fleischman. (National Labor Service, 386 Fourth Avenue, NYC)

The American Jewish Congress has just printed two pamphlets -- "Children Together -- A Manual For Study Groups on Integration In Public Education," ($1.00) and "Assault Upon Freedom of Association," a pamphlet on the attacks against the NAACP. (50 cents)

It was agreed that George Hunton would meet with the Fund for the Republic to secure information concerning its new program and possible relationship to CCD's activity.

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, October 22, 1957

PRESENT: Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Reverend Will D. Campbell, National Council of Churches; Bernice Cofer, American Baptist Convention; Mrs. Page H. Dougherty, Americans For Democratic Action; Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council; Mrs. Louisa Hager, Young Womens Christian Association; Al Hamilton, United Auto Workers; George Hunton, Catholic Interracial Council; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Guichard Parris, National Urban League; Naomi Pfeiffer, National Council of Jewish Women; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; John Paul Jones, National Urban League; Mr. Jacob Schlitt, Jewish Labor Committee; Albert Vorspan, Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Wilton Dillon, Phelps-Stokes Fund; Secretary Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service; GUEST: Elmo Roper

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Tuesday, November 19, 1957 at 9:30 a.m. at the Jewish Labor Committee, 25 East 78th Street, New York City.

Please fill out the enclosed post card to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

Alex Morisey reported on a proposed manual analyzing the Southern press coverage of the desegregation story. It was agreed that Harry Fleischman would talk to the Sidney-Hillman Foundation to ascertain whether or not it could help in financing such a project. The American Friends Service Committee will contact Bill Peters on the possibility of a magazine article on the same subject and Alan Reitman agreed to talk to Robert Brown, President of Editor and Publisher, on the possibility of that magazine conducting such a survey.

It was reported that the youth group of the National Council of Churches is writing a statement on law and order, fair play and morality, aimed at young people, which will be distributed through local Southern ministers. George Hunton agreed to contact the Catholic Youth Organization to find out whether it could do a similar job.

It was suggested that the National Conference of Christians and Jews might spark a non-discriminational statement on the same theme, for local Southern distribution to youth groups in tension areas.

Al Hamilton suggested that it might be possible to ask the U.S. Department of Education to prepare a general statement on law and order and desegregation for distribution through the schools in the South. It was suggested that religious leaders might request such a statement from the Department of Education.

It was also suggested that we approach Senator Javits to get in touch with President Eisenhower to propose that the President include an item on law and order and support for court decisions in the Thanksgiving Proclamation that he will make. This is to be read in schools throughout the country.

Mr. Elmo Roper, Chairman of the Fund for the Republic and nationally known public opinion analyst then discussed with the Committee the methods of helping to create a favorable climate of opinion, both in the South and North, to help speed successful school desegregation.

Mr. Roper opened the discussion by posing two questions:

1. Do we believe that work on desegregation in the North is the best way to change the climate of opinion in the South?

2. Would we join hands with those in the South who, though opposed to integration, are in favor of law and order?

Harold Fleming, speaking for the entire group, answered yes to both questions.

According to Roper, a concerted drive to eliminate pockets of segregation in the North would have a real psychological effect in the South.

Harry Fleischman pointed out that consideration had been given by the committee to a campaign to use professional and other groups in the North to communicate with their Southern counterparts in striving for law and order and to spell out Northern experiences in successful integration.

John Paul Jones emphasized that we must learn how to work with those prople in the South who, though they oppose integration, do respect law and order.

According to Roper, a viewpoint prevalent among decent people in the South is that all Northern do-gooders work quietly on the question of segregation in the North but are very noisy concerning segregation in the South. These Southerners suspect a bias against the South, since we had fought a war with Russia on our side though we were frankly opposed to Communism, but we won't join forces with Southern moderates. Therefore, those forces in the South, with which we would be able to work, feel beleaguered and are dropping out of the fight. We must realize that middle-of-the-roaders, like Gov. Collins of Florida and Gov. McKeldin of Maryland, are considered wild radicals in the South.

Harry Fleischman pointed out that, though the State AFL-CIO in Arkansas spoke out in favor of integration before the Little Rock incident, after the trouble broke out no word was heard from them. Roper suggested that the national AFL-CIO has done so much good in this area that they should not be blamed if they took it easy at some point.

In regard to Little Rock, Roper pointed out that it would be tactically bad to have an article appearing on how badly the churches behaved in that situation. Rather, he suggested, it might be effective to show how much faster the Episcopal, Catholic and Presbyterian churches came to the defense of law and order there than did the churches in Levittown, Pennsylvania.

Roper insisted that the posture of the average Northern liberal regarding integration is such that the middle-of-the-roader in the South feels shunned. The South, he insisted, has made a great deal of progress in race relations, much greater in the last 15 to 20 years than the North, considering their respective starting points.

Harold Fleming pointed out that the open polling in the South tends to undercut those who stand for something positive. Faubus put the issue squarely: "Are you for or agin' segregation?", and 85% answered that they are for segregation. Those small forces which oppose segregation become traitors to the South. Fleischman reported the Gallup Poll, which showed 36% of Southerners supported Eisenhower's use of troops in Little Rock and 53% opposed. Roper asserted that a survey with four alternative results might very well show that one-half the people in the South favor some form of desegregation. These questions must not be polarized. Instead, the South should be given a choice of alternatives which might truly represent their feelings.

Al Hamilton raised another issue which he felt was just as important as the problem of the Southern middle-of-the-roader, that is, the problem of the Southern Negro, both in the South and those who have recently migrated to the North. They are becoming more aware of the unjust treatment they have received and are now receiving. To Al, the recent pilgrimage to Washington on May 17th was a revelation. This was an emotional response on the part of the Negro which showed mass concern with the problem of segregation. It is necessary that we bridge this gap as well. Roper agreed and indicated that conditions will improve with the increasing number and effectiveness of right-minded people everywhere, especially in the South. First priority, according to Roper, must be given to making the situation safe and respectable for those Southern leaders who oppose violence and race riots.

Al Vorspan took exception to the remarks which minimized the role of the clergy. According to Al, they are the most crucial group in the community, and in the Levittown situation they were the prime movers for the acceptance of the Myers' and for the maintenance of harmony. In fact, in the South, according to Al, the clergy is more important than the Southern intellectual. The heroes of all of us have been the Southern moderates, and we have gone out of our way to seek them out. However, a danger exists in this practice, for the pattern which develops has been for these people to insist that they handle the problem in their own way and for the national agencies which have spearheaded the drive for integration, to be kept out.

Roper felt that this diagnosis is not correct, since it was Harry Ashmore, a leading Southern moderate and editor of the Arkansas Gazette, who persuaded the Fund for the Republic to give $350,000 to the Southern Regional Council to carry on their work. The leadership for equality, stressed Roper, must pass to the South.

Harold Fleming pointed out that in the past the self-interest of the industrial leadership in the South has worked in a negative direction and that the effort must be made for industry to work for better race relations in the area. The trade unions, according to Harold, have done an effective job, but the burden of responsibility rests with the industrial leadership. Roper agreed that this group must be appealed to for leadership in the integration struggle.

Harry Fleischman cited a forthcoming article in Business Week dealing with the impact of racial tensions on the Southern economy, which we hope will have an effect for good. Among other items which might be cited are the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce statement which indicated that the tensions in the area have driven away new industry; Gov. Collins' description of good race relations in Florida, which resulted in the attraction of a new factory to Tampa; and the statement by some one hundred Southern lawyers in favor of law and order.

Roper concluded with a "concrete suggestion" for the committee. His idea was that a conference be arranged with some 6 to 10 Southern moderates of the Harry Ashmore type -- Negroes and whites -- and a like number of national publicists and editors such as Arthur Hays, Sulzberger of the N.Y. Times, Henry Luce, etc. This should be an off-the-record conference which might be aimed at helping the Southern leaders of good will and which would permit these Southern moderates to let their hair down and talk freely. Roper volunteered to help in interesting both Southern leadership and national publicists in this meeting.

In conclusion, Alan Reitman suggested that the chairman choose a subcommittee to expedite this conference.

Harry Fleischman and Harold Fleming met with Mr. Roper later in the week and will report on progress at the November 19th meeting of the Mass Media Committee.

Alan Reitman sent in a report of his talk with Robert Brown, editor of Editor and Publisher, on the possibility of a survey of race coverage by Southern newspapers. Brown suggested that any such survey should include northern as well as southern newspapers. While Brown felt that his magazine could not undertake such a survey, he thought that one of the journalism schools might do it and suggested several possibilities. Henry Lee Moon suggested that the University of Missouri or the Columbia School of Journalism might be interested in such a survey. It was also suggested that the Duke University Department of Sociology might be willing to do such a survey and Alex Morisey agreed to explore the possibilities.

No report has yet been received on whether the National Conference of Christians and Jews will spark a non-discrimination statement for local Southern distribution to youth groups in tension areas.

Alan Reitman and Harry Fleischman met with Dean Ed Barrett and Professor Baker of the Columbia School of Journalism to discuss the conference of Southern moderates and national publicists urged by Elmo Roper at the October 22nd meeting of the Mass Media Committee.

Both Dean Barrett and Professor Baker expressed keen interest in the idea of a conference but were concerned about its nature. People like Harry Ashmore, Ralph McGill and Hodding Carter they said, are in frequent touch with leading national publicists. A conference composed largely of such people, they felt, would be bringing "coals to Newcastle." They suggested that a somewhat larger conference, with more of the people who are not likely to be in touch with leading national publicists, might be of more value.

Various members of our Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation have come up with names of persons whom they felt would meet Dr. Barrett's requirements. Here are the names thus far mentioned:

Harry Ashmore, Ralph McGill, Hodding Carter, Reed Sarratt, Executive Editor, The Journal and Sentinel, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Buford Boone, Editor The News, Tuscaloosa, Alabama; Irving Carlyle, Attorney and Civic Leader, Winston-Salem, N.C.; Professor James Silver, University of Mississippi, Oxford, Miss.; Francis Pickens Miller, writer and churchman, Charlottesville, Va.; Thomas W. Young, Editor, Norfolk Journal and Guide; Rufus E. Clement, President, Atlanta University; Wilson Wyatt, Louisville, Kentucky; Charles Fransley, Louisville, Kentucky; Lillian Smith, Georgia; John B. Orr, Jr., State Senator, Miami, Florida; J. M. Dabbs, Rip Rap Plantation, Mayesville, S. C.; Mrs. M. E. Tilley, Atlanta, Georgia; J. H. Wheeler, President, Mechanics and Farmers Bank, Durham, N. C.; Sarah Patton Boyle, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va.; Reverend Martin Luther King, Montgomery, Alabama; Dr. Charles Gomillion, Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Alabama; and Jonathan Daniels.

Among those suggested as participants from the North were Elmo Roper, Frank Stanton of CBS, Henry Luce, Gardner Cowles, David Sarnoff of NBC, Turner Catledge or Charles Merz of the New York Times, Whitelaw Reid of the Herald Tribune, someone from the American Broadcasting Company, representatives of the wire services, Seymour Bergson of the Journal American, someone from Readers Digest and someone from the Scripps-Howard chain.

Dean Barrett mentioned that Associated Press was holding a meeting of managing editors last weekend in Dallas and that the issue of national treatment of the race problem by the mass media would undoubtedly be one of the major topics discussed, whether or not it was on the agenda. He also mentioned that a number of Southern journalists would be in New York in the Spring to serve on Pulitzer Prize Award Juries and that our conference might conceivably be held then. But he wanted to be sure that a conference would serve a really useful function.

One suggestion was that such a conference might lead to a survey of the treatment of race news by both Southern and Northern mass media. One point that might well be considered in connection with such a conference are the findings by Dr. Melvin Tumin of Princeton University. His report in Public Opinion Quarterly revealed that those white southerners who are exposed to national hook-ups on radio or TV or who read national magazines, are more sympathetic to the desegregation point of view than persons who live in isolation.

If these findings are accurate for the entire South, the importance of getting together Southern and national opinion molders to try to develop a climate of opinion which will support law and order cannot be overstressed.

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, January 10, 1958

PRESENT: Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Mrs. Louisa Hager, Young Women's Christian Association; Henry Lee Moon, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Albert W. Hamilton, United Auto Workers; Jacob Schlitt, Jewish Labor Committee; Alan Reitman; American Civil Liberties Union; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Friday, February 14, 1958 at 9:30 a.m. at the National Conference of Christians and Jews, Building for Brotherhood, 43 West 57th Street, (Baker Room), New York, New York.

Please fill out the enclosed post card to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

It was reported that the Southern Regional Council is considering reprinting the article by John M. Popham in the December 1, 1957 issue of the New York Times Sunday Magazine, entitled "The Southern Negro: Change and Paradox." It is also interested in reprinting an article in The Wall Street Journal of December 17, 1957 by Cal Brumley entitled "Segregation Costs -- Dixie Firms Find Them More of a Burden as Racial Tension Grows." Any agencies interested in joining the Southern Regional Council on such reprints should get in touch with Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Ave., N.E., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

Attempts are being made to secure blocks of subscriptions to The Petal Paper of Petal, Mississippi. P. D. East, editor of The Petal Paper may be available for lectures around the country. Interested agencies may contact him at the above address.

Alex Morisey reported that Bill Peters is writing an article for McCalls Magazine. It will supplement the material by John Bartlow Martin, whose Saturday Evening Post series, "The Deep South Says Never," failed to reflect those forces in the South willing to support law and order on desegregation.

Peters has been in touch with Doubleday and Co, which firm is seeking commitments for orders of 20,000 copies in paper covers of a book expanding the McCalls' article. The committee felt that none of the agencies present were in any position to make commitments, at least until the McCalls' article was read, in which case that article might serve as a synopsis of the book. It was suggested that the Ford Fund for Advancement of Education, which put out the Ashmore book on "Schools and the South" might be approached to do the same in regard to this projected book.

Our subcommittee met with Elmo Roper and later talked to Dean Edward W. Barrett of Columbia University's School of Journalism, concerning the projected conference of editors and national publicists.

It was agreed that our purpose would be to have ten to fifteen important but relatively unpublicized Southern editors and civic leaders meet with the same number of leaders of important national and Northern publications. Both groups could then consider how they might more effectively develop a climate of opinion in which respect for law and order and a smoother path to desegregation will prevail.

The conference might also consider a survey of the treatment of the desegregation problem in both Southern and Northern mass media.

Among the Southerners who might be invited to attend are:

Reed Sarrett, executive editor, The Journal and Sentinel, Winston-Salem, N.C.; Buford Boone, editor, The News, Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Professor James Silver, Univ. of Mississippi, Oxford, Miss.; Thomas W. Young, editor, Norfolk Journal and Guide, Norfolk, Va.; Rufus E. Clement, president, Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga.; Weldon James, Louisville Courier Journal, Louisville, Ky.; Wilson Wyatt, Louisville, Ky.; John B. Orr, Jr., State Senator, Miami, Florida; J. M. Dabbs, Rip Rap Plantation, Mayesville, S. C.; J. H. Wheeler, president, Mechanics and Farmers Bank, Durham, N.C.; Rev. Martin Luther King, Montgomery, Ala.; Dr. Charles Gomillion, Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Alabama; Harry Ashmore, editor Arkansas Gazette, Little Rock, Ark.; Andrew McDoud Secrest, editor Cheraw Chronicle, Cheraw, S.C.; John Popham, Southern corr. New York Times, Atlanta, Ga.; Wallace Westfeldt, Nashville Tennessean, Nashville, Tenn.; Sylvan Meyer, Gainesville Times, Gainesville, Ga.; Carter Wesley, Houston Informer, Houston, Tex.; Nelson Poynter, Jr., St. Petersburg, Times, St. Petersburg, Fla; C. A. Scott, Atlanta Daily World, Atlanta, Ga.;

Among the Northerners who might be invited are:

Elmo Roper, Fund for the Republic; Ed Murrow, CBS; Ed Thompson, LIFE; Dan Mich or Bill Attwood, Look; Davidson Taylor or Ken Kirby, NBC; Turner Catledge, New York Times; Ogden Reid, N.Y. Herald Tribune; J. Russell Wiggins or Al Friendly, Washington Post; Roy Howard Jr., Scripps-Howard; Alan Gould, exec. ed. Associated Press; Frank Bartholomew or Earl Johnson, United Press; Seymour Berkson, INS and Hearst chain; John Charles Daly, ABC; Wade Nichols, Redbook; Kenneth Payne or Fritz de Schiel of Readers Digest; Lou Gillenson, Coronet; Otis Wiese, McCalls; Beatrice Blackmer Gould and Bruce Gould, Ladies Home Journal; John Denson, Newsweek; Roy Alexander, Time; Ben Hibbs, Saturday Evening Post.

It was suggested that the conference might start out with a statement of the problem and then have a period for both Southerners and Northerners to express their gripes on the way the mass media, bothSouth and North, are currently handling the desegregation issue. It would then be a job of the Chairman, (perhaps Mr. Barrett or Mr. Roper) to make sure that from that point on discussion was on a constructive level on what we can do now and in the future, with respect to mass media, on desegregation.

It is planned to arrange a meeting shortly with Elmo Roper, Dean Barrett, Harold Fleming, Henry Lee Moon and Harry Fleischman, to see whether such arrangements for a conference can be completed.

Other names suggested for attendance at the conference included Pete MacKnight, editor of the "Observer," Charlotte, N.C.; (MacKnight might inform us who should represent the Knight chain of papers); Cabell Phillips of the New York Times; Ed Morgan, ABC commentator; Chet Huntley, NBC commentator and Harold Fleming.

It was also suggested that John Hannah, chairman of the Federal Civil Rights Committee, might be invited to sit in with the group.

It was suggested that Dean Barrett might be able to arrange for some of his students to prepare a packet of copies of Southern and Northern editorials on either the Little Rock situation or the recent Dallas desegregation ruling and that it might be possible to get Southern press, radio and TV reactions to the recent Ed Murrow Show with Marian Anderson.

It was agreed that the subcommittee should raise, with Messrs, Roper and Barrett, the problem as to whether any non-media people should be at the conference and a detailed agenda for the conference.

It was also suggested that Harold Fleming should give us a list of people in Radio and TV in the South who should be invited to attend the conference.

Al Hamilton reported that 400 radio stations throughout the nation now carry special programs beamed to the Negro market. A list of these southern stations is being prepared to enable CCD agencies to pay greater attention to them.

It was voted to send a letter of condolence to Mr. Roper on the death of his father and a letter of sympathy to George Hunton who is undergoing an eye operation.

It was suggested that the next meeting consider the impact of recent court decisions delaying desegregation in Dallas on our mass media programs.

Respectfully submitted

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, February 14, 1958.

PRESENT: Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council; John Hudak, National Conference of Christians and Jews; Robert Kohler, Anti-Defamation League; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Guichard Parris, National Urban League; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Wilton Dillon, Phelps-Stokes Fund; Henry Lee Moon, NAACP; James Hughes, Catholic Interracial Council; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Friday, March 7, 1958 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue (53rd St.), New York, New York.

Please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

Henry Lee Moon agreed to secure an analysis from Thurgood Marshall on what impact the court decision postponing desegregation in Dallas has created on the desegregation picture in the rest of the South.

It was reported that the Anti-Defamation League is printing a manual on Police Law and Minorities, written by Carl Hannson, Chief of Police of Dallas, Texas, and a former president of the International Association of Police Chiefs. It was suggested that when the manual appears attempts be made to promote mass media use of Chief Hannson and his manual, particularly in the South. It was suggested that New York University Law School's Judge Jerome Frank Memorial might be contacted for an award to Chief Hannson for his efforts in aiding due process of law.

James Hughes reported that the Catholic Interracial Council had compiled 30 sermons by priests on Interracial Justice, and will send copies to all members of the Mass Media Committee.

Harold Fleming agreed to contact Father Sigur to attempt to arrange for the Catholic Youth Organization to write and distribute a statement on desegregation for useby Southern Catholic youngsters. The National Council of Churches reported that its United Christian Youth movement is preparing a leaflet on the same subject for wide distribution in Southern states. John Hudak reported that the National Conference of Christians and Jews will be working on a non-denominational leaflet for distribution to young people in the South. It was also suggested that it would be helpful if a statement on law and order and desegregation could be secured from Attorney General Rogers.

The question was raised whether or not mass media attempts can be made to stimulate registration and voting in the south. It was suggested that the Carrie Chapman Catt Fund of the League of Women Voters and the American Heritage Foundation be contacted for material on the importance of voting, which can be distributed widely throughout the South.

In connection with the projected conference of editors and national publicists, various suggestions were made for consideration by the subcommittee in its meeting with Elmo Roper and Dean Edward Barrett of Columbia University's School of Journalism.

The next meeting of the committee will consider what can be done to counteract such items as the pro-segregation ad placed in the New York Herald Tribune February 17, 1958 by the Joint Legislative Committee in the State of Louisiana and the growing trends towards widespread propaganda in the North by Southern racists.

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, March 7, 1958

PRESENT: Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Henry Lee Moon, NAACP; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Guichard Parris, National Urban League; Oscar Tarcov, Anti-Defamation League; Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council; James Hughes, Catholic Interracial Council; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Wednesday, April 16, 1958 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue, (53rd St.) New York, New York.

Please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

Henry Lee Moon agreed to send copies of statements on desegregation by southern clergymen (reprinted from Christianity and Crisis) to members of the Mass Media Committee. He will also attempt to secure an analysis by Thurgood Marshall of the impact of the Dallas desegregation postponement on the rest of the South.

The manual on Police Law and Minorities by Carl Hannson, Chief of Police of Dallas, Texas, is scheduled for release around May 1st. Copies will be sent by the Anti-Defamation League to Mass Media Committee members. It was reported that the Southern Police Institute plans to use the manual. Attempts may be made to arrange for the manual to be used for a series of articles, to be released by one of the wire services.

Henry Moon and Harold Fleming are checking on the possibility of arranging for mass media attempts to stimulate registration and voting in the South. The National Council of Negro Women will be contacted and asked to prepare material for wide distribution throughout the South.

In connection with the projected conference of editors and national publicists, Harold Fleming is to talk to Harry Ashmore. The focus of the conference is to be "what can we do, through the mass media, in preparation for the new school year which starts in September 1958?" What mass media actions can discourage new "Little Rocks" and promote new "Louisvilles?" Fleming agreed to talk with the Fund for the Advancement of Education on the possibilities of sponsorship of such a conference. Tarcov is to talk with Look magazine about Gardner Cowles in relation to such a conference.

The Committee considered what can be done to counteract pro-segregation ads placed in Northern newspapers by Southern state governmental units. Henry Moon reported that the NAACP had sent out a memorandum on the advertisement of the Joint Legislative Committee, State of Louisiana, published in the New York Herald Tribune, February 17, 1958. Copies of that memorandum are available from Henry Lee Moon, 20 West 40th Street, New York, N.Y.

CCD member agencies were urged to alert their local units to pro-segregation ads and ask them to check with editors and publishers about the problem. It was suggested that if such ads are used by newspapers or magazines, that they be asked to include editorials rebutting them, and news articles quoting opponents of segregation.

It was reported that the United Steelworkers of America had put out a new movie, BURDEN OF TRUTH, which emphasizes the need for interracial cooperation in our country. This full-length movie will have its New York premiere around the end of April or beginning of May. Prints of the film will be made available without charge to interested organizations by the United Steelworkers of America. The Steelworkers are also preparing an elaborate discussion guide which is being written by UCLA sociologists.

Harold Fleming reported that the inter-agency group in the South had decided to set up a joint fact-finding program which would catalogue instances of violence and intimidation used in the South to discourage desegregation. Seven agencies have already agreed to participate in the joint fact-finding program and three more may join.

The March issue of the ATLANTIC MONTHLY contains an article by Roy Wilkins of the NAACP answering a "go-slow on desegregation" article by Agnes Meyer.

The February 1958 issue of Harpers magazine had an article on "The Hillbillies Invade Chicago" by Albert Votaw, which points out that Chicago's chief integration problem has nothing to do with Negroes but involves some 70,000 white migrants from the South.

It was agreed to request Arnold Aronson, CCD Secretary, to attend the next Mass Media Committee meeting to inform us of CCD plans and activities.

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, April 16, 1958

PRESENT: James Hughes, Catholic Interracial Council; Oscar Tarcov, Anti Defamation League; Henry Lee Moon, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Bernice Solomon, National Council of Jewish Women; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Tuesday, May 20, 1958 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the National Council of Jewish Women, 1 West 47th Street, New York, New York.

Please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

It was reported that the Bill Peters article, "New Voices from the Old South," will appear in the September 1958 issue of McCall's Magazine.

The basic theme of the article is that neither the strong segregationists nor the strong anti-segregationists represent the most significant segment of the south. A large number of white southerners, probably accounting for a majority in every state, says Peters, are "active proponents neither of segregation nor of desegregation; they are, rather, passive adherents of the status quo. In the question of segregation, as in most questions, they will acquiesce to whatever exists. What exists today is segregation, and to it, if asked, they give their passive assent. What will be tomorrow may well be desegregation. With the assurance that it is permanent, backed by law, that it squares with religious principles, moral precepts and democratic ideals, and that "the best people" seem to be going along with it, they will, in a short time, as easily acquiesce to it.

"This process is already going on in many of the places where desegregation is an accomplished fact. According to Mr. Harold I. Lief, Associate Professor of Psychiatry at Tulane University's School of Medicine and a student of racial prejudice, one of the striking psychological facts demonstrated by desegregation is that 'behavioral changes often precede changes in attitude. This explains,' he says, ' the many attitude changes to be found among teachers, school administrators and parents who have accepted desegregation against their will only to become advocates of it in the process.'"

The McCall's article will stress white Southern support for desegregation, particularly among church groups. It was suggested that it would be very valuable if a Southern church or business group could sponsor reprints of the Peters article. Peters will also expand the article into a book to be published by Doubleday. The manuscript of the book is scheduled to be completed in October, 1958 and the book to be printed in March, 1959. If sufficient CCD groups are interested it may be possible to have Doubleday put out a paper-cover edition of the book.

The manual on Police, Law and Minorities by Carl Hannson, Chief of Police of Dallas, Texas has been postponed but should be available early in the summer.

Although Harry Ashmore, editor of the Arkansas Gazette, strongly urged the need of a conference of editors and national publicists, Dean Edward Barrett of Columbia University's School of Journalism indicated that a number of Southern editors, with whom he had talked, felt that such a conference could serve no useful purpose at this time.

It was agreed to ask Harold Fleming to consult with the Fund for the Advancement of Education on the possibility of sponsoring a conference on "What should we do through the mass media in preparation for the new school year which starts in September 1958?" Unless the Fund evinces interest in such a conference, it was agreed that we should discontinue our attempts to arrange one.

The committee agreed to ask Harold Fleming to check with the inter-agency group in the South to find out what things they think are most necessary in relation to preparing articles for the mass media in terms of helping to ease the situation in those cities that will be facing desegregation in September.

The committee considered the problem of what methods might be used to combat the smear drive that is being spread by pro-segregationists. It was suggested that it would be very useful if agencies could alert their Southern members to write letters favoring desegregation not only to their local Southern papers but also to such papers as the New York Times and Washington Post. It was also agreed that it would be helpful if the inter-agency groups in the South could develop joint local mailing lists in the various Southern cities of influential persons in that community who should receive selected literature.

On the question of local use of radio and TV time in the South to discuss desegregation, it was agreed that we need information from the Southern inter-agency group on what time is available on radio and TV stations in the South, and what kind of material would be desired from us. We might be able to prepare sample TV or radio formats for panel discussions if that would prove desirable.

Harold Fleming reported that the joint fact-finding program, cataloging instances of violence and intimidation used in the South to discourage desegregation, is already under way.

The NAACP is preparing a film on school desegregation, which will be available for TV and for meetings. The film, entitled "Once Upon A Time," deals with a classroom scene some time in the future and "looks back" to the period of the 1950s. The film is scheduled to be ready before September.

The ADL has reprinted an article on "More Southern Pastors Plead for Moderation; Many Fight Segregation," first printed in the Wall Street Journal, February 14, 1958.

The National Council of Churches is preparing, in cooperation with ADL, an interracial newsletter on success stories on desegregation. It should be ready this summer.

The Catholic Interracial Council is attempting to secure reprints of a statement on desegregation by Archbishop Cushing of Boston, which was printed in The Pilot.

Abingdon Press is bringing out a book on "Segregation and the Bible" by Everett Tilson, which will be out May 5th.

Roy Wilkins' article on desegregation in the Atlantic Monthly, answering Agnes Meyer's "Go Slow On Desegregation" article, is being reprinted by the NAACP.

P.S. Attached is an item from the March 10, 1958 issue of Time Magazine which I think will interest you.

TIME Magazine March 10, 1958 (page 61)

Depth from Dixie

During the wave of rapes and stabbings in New York City schools this winter, the South's segregationist dailies pounced jubilantly on the story as a Yankee-sent sermon on the evils of mixing the races in the classroom. When a Brooklyn principal killed himself during a grand jury investigation of violence at his junior high school (Time, Feb. 19), Mississippi's extremist Jackson Daily News front-paged the story with a picture of a Negro policeman guarding the school. Caption: "Mixed school violence led to this."

The facts did not support such racist conclusions, and despite pressure from Southern editors, the wire services refused to give that slant to their reports on Northern school delinquency. Many Southern editors nonetheless echoed the Montgomery Advertiser's taunt that the real story was being suppressed by "such deluded racists as the New York Times." A widely distributed series of cartoons in the Nashville Banner derided "Mixiecrats" and "Bleeding Hearts," pictured the North's "objective liberal press" as burying delinquency stories on the obituary pages. When newsmen such as the Atlanta Journal's Managing Editor William Ray tried conscientiously to dig deeper by demanding a racial breakdown of the 644 students expelled from New York schools as troublemakers, they ran afoul of school regulations that forbid such identification.

A Place in Society. Last week the Southern editors finally got firsthand coverage of the racial angle in New York's school problem from a first-rate Southern reporter. To cover the story in depth the United Press assigned able, Georgia-born Alfred G. Kuettner, the U.P.'s long-time Atlanta bureau chief. Promised the U.P.'s Executive Editor Harry Ferguson: "If there are any squawks, I'll be your lawyer."

Hard-driving Reporter Kuettner, 44, spent a week prowling the city from the cluttered streets of East Harlem to the seedy side of Brooklyn, talked to school officials and students, white and Negro members of teen-age gangs, storekeepers and social workers, judges and Mayor Robert Wagner. Result: a perceptive, carefully documented three-part series. Reporter Kuettner's conclusion: "You cannot in honesty find that actual racial conflict is causing the rampage of juvenile delinquency. You cannot but admit that Negroes, white children and Puerto Ricans get along amiably in their classes."

Al Kuettner also reported that the racial issue is "at least partly to blame," that Negro and Puerto Rican children cause "a huge percentage of the crime and violence." But, he found, "mixing of the races is not the basic cause." As a tough-minded Brooklyn principal told him: "This problem is not because Negroes are Negroes, it is because they are newcomers. They are often at the bottom of the economic scale." The school man added an observation of equal relevance to the South: *"It is a sociological truth that uhtil a person finds his place in society he is rebellious."

Footnote * Which has such serious delinquency problems as vandalism, theft and knife-carrying in some of its all-white schools. In Atlanta, of 3,700 juveniles who appeared before the courts in 1957, 50% were white.

Lost Viewpoint. Virtually every major U. P. paper in the South ran Kuettner's series; South Carolina's segregationist Greenville Piedmont gave it an eight-column top-of-the-banner headline. To most editors, Al Kuettner's byline was the story's best recommendation. He has amassed 45 file drawers on racial problems since spotting desegregation as a looming battle in 1945, roamed 3,600 miles through the South in 1956 to write a series on integration that won him Sigma Delta Chi's top award for general reporting.

Though his New York series will prompt few Southerners to trade in their prejudices, it bridged briefly a chasm that is making it increasingly difficult to report the news with any depth in the Deep South. As segregationist Atlanta Journal Editor Ray, who gave the series a big play, said last week with unconscious irony: "I don't think Kuettner presents the viewpoint of the South. I expect he has become so objective that he may have lost his viewpoint."

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, May 20, 1958.

PRESENT: Henry Lee Moon, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Jack Schlitt, Jewish Labor Committee; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Bernice Solomon, National Council of Jewish Women; Al Vorspan, Union of American Hebrew Congregations; James Hughes, Catholic Interracial Council; Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Friday, June 20, 1958 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the National Council of Jewish Women, 1 West 47th Street, New York, New York.

Please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

It was reported that Look magazine is considering an article comparing "good" and "bad" police officials in the South -- in terms of respect for law and order. William Peters is also writing an article for Look on the failure of the Federal Government to use the tools which it currently has available to promote equal opportunity in the South.

It was reported by the ACLU that apparently little coordination by anti-segregation groups is taking place in Virginia cities scheduled to come under desegregation orders this Fall. This was referred to the Southern Inter-Agency Conference for remedial proposals. It was also agreed to try to contact them to analyze the situation in key Southern areas, concerning not only community organizations but approaches to the mass media.

It was suggested that we ask the Southern Inter-Agency Conference whether or not it would be useful to arrange for attitude surveys of key elements in those Virginia communities (educators, professionals, business people) to ascertain their views on closing of public schools in Virginia, support of private schools, or re-opening -- even on a desegregated basis -- of public schools.

It was agreed to explore the idea of arranging informal conferences of CCD agencies with Southern editors coming North to Newspaper Association or other journalistic conventions.

It was agreed that a report of the executive committee of CCD and of the Southern Inter-Agency Conference would be presented at the next meeting of the Mass Media Committee on Friday, June 20, 1958.

It was agreed that it would be useful to have a pamphlet, "Southern Churches Speak," which would be a collection of statements of church groups in the South and which could be published under the imprimatur of the United Church Women of the Southern states. CCD groups will be asked to guarantee quantity orders in advance to help cover the cost.

It was reported that the joint fact-finding project, cataloging instances of intimidation, violence and bombings in the South, is close to completion.

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, Friday, June 20, 1958

PRESENT: Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council; Louisa Hager, YWCA; Jack Schlitt, Jewish Labor Committee; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Bernice Solomon, National Council of Jewish Women; Frank Demers, Catholic Interracial Council; Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The Citizens Councils of America are distributing from Washington a filmed 13-week series of fifteen-minute television programs, called Citizens Council Forum, featuring a number of Southern Congressmen. (Enclosed is a letter and fact sheet sent out by the Citizens Council.)

It was agreed to arrange for an analysis of these programs, to find out which Southern stations carry them and to explore possibilities for promoting alternative programs which support law and order.

It was agreed to attempt to arrange a meeting of TV and radio network news executives with key professional intergroup relations persons from each of the Southern cities where a desegregation decision or other tension situation is likely to come about this Fall. This meeting would be held around the middle of August at the national YWCA, both to brief the networks on the potential for positive news on race relations in these communities, and to alert the networks to the problems that may arise. The network executives might also be able to suggest approaches by CCD agencies that would be helpful in producing positive coverage. MMCCD members will be invited to attend this meeting (when it is definitely arranged.) The Southern Regional Council will secure key people from the Southern communities and will set up the agenda and program for the meeting.

It was suggested that it would be helpful if CCD agencies would loan one of their public relations men to be available to help in each tension area in preparation for the Fall opening of schools. It was suggested that the projected interfaith Williamsburg, Va. conference of national and Southern religious leaders would provide an excellent opportunity for radio, press and TV positive coverage of the desegregation issue.

It was agreed that a brief fact sheet on the White Citizens Councils should be prepared to indicate the nature of the organization.

The Southern Regional Council is reprinting "The Untold Story Behind Little Rock" by Harry Ashmore, editor of the Arkansas Gazette. The article, which appeared in the June 1958 issue of Harper's magazine, deals with the failure of the mass media to present the real significance of the Little Rock crisis. Quantity orders will cost from $30 to $35 per 1,000. Check with Harold Fleming at the Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Ave.,N.E. Atlanta, Ga. if you are interested.

The Congress Of Racial Equality (CORE) has just printed a pamphlet "First Step Towards School Integration," by Anna Holden, which relates the uses of non-violent techniques to aid school desegregation in Nashville. The pamphlet is priced at 25¢, 5 for $1, $15 for 100, $100 for 1,000. On orders for 1,000 or more, CORE is willing to imprint the name and address of the distributing organization. For details contact James R. Robinson, Executive Secretary, CORE, 38 Park Row, New York, New York.

The next regular meeting of the mass media committee will be in the Fall. Members will be notified later.

Dear Mr._____:

Here's something fresh, just in time for summer programming! We have just prepared a special series of "Citizens' Council Forum" programs from Washington, featuring a number of leading Congressmen, including several from your area.

In this series, the lawmakers discuss the dangers to individual freedoms and States' Rights growing from the mounting trend towards centralization of power in the Federal government.

This series is professionally-produced on 16 mm. film, and is of network quality. The first 13 weeks of this series is now ready for distribution.

We would be pleased to add your station to the growing number of leading TV outlets now running "Citizens' Council Forum."

We sincerely believe that by scheduling this program, you will perform an invaluable service to your viewers, by alerting them to the dangers of "big government." In addition, your station will gain in prestige, and will win acclaim from business leaders in your community, many of whom have long been aware of this dangerous trend.

The enclosed fact sheet will give you detailed information about our program. We will be happy to discuss this series with you and to answer any question you may have concerning it. Just call, wire or write us at the above address, or complete the enclosed reply card.

We certainly hope you can find a place in your station's schedule for "Citizens' Council Forum." May we hear from you soon?

Sincerely,
s/ W.J. Simmons

(This Fact Sheet contains information on the special series from Washington)

15-minute weekly program available on 16 mm. film free of charge to television stations.

Type: Discussion-interview between moderator and from one to three guests. Guest participants are different from week to week. During special series of 13 programs from Washington, guests will be about 30 Congressmen, discussing the need for maintaining States' Rights against the growing trend toward centralization of power in the Federal government. Program is entirely non-political. No commercial message content in program.

Moderator: Program is moderated by Dick Morphew, associate news director of WLBT television and WJ DX radio, Jackson, Mississippi.

Production: Produced by the Citizens' Councils of America, thru facilities of WLBT and WJDX, Jackson, Mississippi. Producer for Citizens' Councils is W.J. Simmons, editor of the Councils' nationally-circulated newspaper. Special series of programs from Washington filmed by professional crews in the nation's capital. Staging and direction by Al Fred Daniel, WLBT production manager. Voice and music open and close. Filmed with double-system sound track, so that both picture and sound are network quality.

History: Began in early 1957 as weekly television program on WLBT, Channel 3, Jackson, Mississippi. Continuous weekly since then. Highly-rated in all surveys. Selected programs of special interest filmed and recorded for other TV and radio stations. At urging of numerous station managers, specially-edited version for radio made available early in 1958, offered to stations through the South on no-cost basis. Currently scheduled weekly by dozens of radio stations in 11 states. Special series of programs from Washington available on film to television stations throughout the nation.

Purpose: Program is designed to present the Southern point of view on important issues of the day, and to counteract the propaganda barrage leveled at the South by most national media.

Guests: The first in a series of special programs from Washington is now ready for distribution. These programs will feature leading members of Congress from virtually every Southern state and several from the North. About 30 Congressmen will appear during the first 13 weeks, with many programs presenting interviews with two or three lawmakers from as many states. Both political parties are represented, but the programs are entirely NON-political. To list a few of the distinguished lawmakers who will appear would be to slight the others. Each of them is capable of doing an excellent job of explaining why the historic concept of States' Rights is vital to the preservation of our American freedoms. The series could well be used as a basic lesson in American government, with the "teachers" being the men chosen by the people as lawmakers.

Availability: "Citizens' Council Forum" is offered as a public service to any TV station wishing to broadcast the program. The station's only obligation is to return the film after use, and to keep the producer informed of the day and time the program is scheduled. In order to fully utilize the tremendous news and prestige value of this series, it is suggested that it be scheduled at a time likely to reach the maximum potential adult audience.

Commercial Sponsorship: This program is available for local sale. The only requirement is that commercial message must not imply endorsement by the participants on the program or its producers, and that each program be run in its entirety without interruption, including opening and closing with commercial messages preceding and following the full program. May we suggest that your local Citizens' Council or affiliated group be offered first chance to sponsor this valuable series, or to purchase tie-in announcements immediately preceding and following the programs. A number of stations report obtaining institutional-type sponsors for this program, and with the sponsors highly pleased with the show, both as to production and content. Since the Citizens' Councils are a non-political organization, we are certain you will cooperate by NOT offering this series to any political party or faction.

Action: To add "Citizens' Council Forum" to YOUR station's schedule, simply sign and return the enclosed reply card, indicating day and time you wish to begin the series. Audition prints available upon request, from address given below.

REMEMBER---"Citizens' Council Forum" is the O-N-L-Y Syndicated Public-Affairs Program Giving the SOUTHERN Point of View!

---more than that, it goes beyond sectional boundaries to present

"THE AMERICAN VIEWPOINT WITH A SOUTHERN ACCENT!"

To begin this valuable series on YOUR station, call, wire or write today! You'll be glad you did!

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, Thursday, September 18, 1958

PRESENT: Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council; Louisa Hager, Young Women's Christian Association; Sidney Hollander; Mrs. Macy, National Urban League; John Marion, Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Jack Schlitt, Jewish Labor Committee; Bernice Solomon, National Council of Jewish Women; Esther Stamats, United Church Women; Al Vorspan, Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Arnold Aronson, Secretary, CCD; Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Tuesday, October 21, 1958 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Young Women's Christian Association, 600 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

Please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

A report was presented of the meeting which was held in August with T.V. and radio network news and public affairs people and key southern intergroup relations professionals to discuss school desegregation problems arising this Fall. It was felt that the session was likely to lead to a continuing relationship of the networks with CCD agencies which should be of great value in presenting a balanced picture of desegregation problems.

A. Philip Randolph, President of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, is sponsoring a Youth March on Washington, Saturday, October 11th, which is intended to bring a thousand or more Negro and white children from Northern and Southern cities to parade down Pennsylvania Avenue. It is scheduled to be a silent protest against the harrassment of Negro school children striving to attend desegregated classes in the South. CCD Mass Media Committee members plan to consult with Mr. Randolph on effective public relations tactics relative to his project.

The American Friends Service Committee, American Jewish Committee, Anti-Defamation League and the National Council of Methodist Women have purchased reprints of "The Story Nobody Tells You" by William Peters, which appeared in McCalls Magazine in September. The eight-page feature article can be ordered from McCalls at 10¢ a piece.

The Virginia AFL-CIO plans to distribute 50 thousand copies of an article "As September Comes to Virginia," reprinted from the IUD Digest.

Harold Fleming and John Marion reported that segregation proponents in both Little Rock and Virginia admitted privately that "massive resistance" was doomed to failure due to intransigeance of the Federal courts. However, it was reported that official Southern state bodies similar to the Joint Legislative Committee of the state of Louisiana are planning a series of pro-segregation ads in many Northern papers. CCD member agencies are again urged to alert their local units to the danger of such pro-segregation ads. It was suggested that if such ads are used by newspapers that their editors be asked to include editorials in the same issues rebutting the ads plus news articles which would include quotes from opponents of segregation.

A newly mimeod version of the Joint Fact-finding Project cataloging instances of intimidation, violence and bombings in the South, has been distributed to the agencies involved. The study will be published shortly.

Dear Harold:

Enclosed are the minutes of the Mass Media Committee. As you will note, we summarized the points made in the article "West Virginia Press Sets Good Example" in the September "New South." Are there any chances of reprinting that article for distribution to radio, TV and newspaper people?

We seem to be having some trouble in relation to the fact-finding project. Oscar Lee called to tell us that the UAW don't want its name used on the pamphlet. When we added that the AJC didn't want its name on the pamphlet either, he was very upset. He indicated that he might have to go back to his chairman and have the matter brought up before his Race Relations Committee and that he was uncertain what would be the decision.

I have been trying to reach Roy Wilkins on this whole thing, but he has not been available. As soon as I do get his attitude I will let you know. Meanwhile I will try to talk to other people here at the AJC. I guess we will have to talk this over by phone within a few days. DONE.

Do you think you will be able to come to New York for the next Mass Media Committee meeting December 2nd or will you be in Pittsburgh for the NAIRO Conference November 19-21? We should get together and iron out some of these things.

All the best.

Cordially yours,

Harry

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation, Tuesday, October 21, 1958

PRESENT: Al Chernin, National Community Relations Advisory Council; Wilton Dillon, Phelps-Stokes Fund; Louisa Hager, Young Women's Christian Association; Gunther Lawrence, Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Henry Lee Moon, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Jack Schlitt, Jewish Labor Committee; Bernice Solomon, National Council of Jewish Women; Esther Stamats, United Church Women; Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Tuesday, December 2, 1958 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, 838 Fifth Avenue (65th St.) New York, New York.

Put this on your calendar and please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

Mass Media members present reported noting that TV and radio networks, with the opening of the school year in September, are now presenting a more balanced picture of desegregation problems than formerly. Committee members outside New York are urged to inform the secretary of the nature of TV and radio coverage on this issue in their areas.

The bombings of Clinton High School and of Jewish temples in Atlanta and Peoria have led many organizations to adopt resolutions protesting the bombings. Among those who have adopted such resolutions are the Georgia Council of Churches, the United Church Women, and the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. The AFL-CIO NEWS carried an editorial on the bombings, the National Council of Churches and the YWCA sent telegrams to the President calling for a White House Conference to plan a program to prevent future bombings. Other CCD agencies may wish to issue similar statements. Most statements pointed to the importance of keeping the FBI on the job to arrest and convict the perpetrators of these outrages and stressed the necessity for arousing the moral conscience of the community against lawlessness.

It was stressed that it would be desirable to urge the mass media in the affected cities to use discretion in reporting about bomb threats. While it is important to report acts of violence, it was felt that sensationalizing threats to bomb schools or houses of worship tend to incite warped bigots in other areas to emulate the bombers.

In this connection it was suggested that an article in the September 1958 issue of The New South, entitled "West Virginia Press Sets Good Example," was an excellent statement of a useful method of promoting harmonious intergroup relations. The following four points were highlighted in the article.

1. Stop identifying individuals by their race in news stories. Race labeling is "a subtle form of discrimination designed to segregate individuals in the mind of the public." "Negro News" columns should be dropped for the same reason.

2. Devote more space to examples of harmonious race relations and the newsworthy accomplishments of Negroes. Newspapers also should give their readers more background on the causes of racial tensions and troubles.

"Much more than it has so far, the press should report, interpret, and discuss the facts and attitudes involved in the crucial issue of race relations," said Sulzberger of The New York Times. "We need to know widely about communities that have established successful patterns of integration so that other communities can take encouragement from their success."

3. Don't hush up serious racial incidents, but report them with the greatest accuracy and factualness to avoid stirring up mob violence. Absence of news will inspire hard-to-control rumors, which inflame the public far more than responsible news coverage. Sensationalizing such incidents, however, will sharpen community tensions.

4. Replace wishy-washy editorial on the glories of brotherhood and evils of prejudice with ones that take strong stands on specific discriminatory situations. And editorializing without adequate news coverage is fruitless since your reader can't understand or respond.

A discussion of the attempts of Arkansas and Virginia to set up private segregated schools led to several suggestions. Among them were: That TV programs might well examine the private schools in operation and contrast them with successfully integrated public schools in other areas. It was suggested that it might be useful to investigate the poor chances for students in those private schools to receive vocational training as well as college accreditation. Interviews with industry leaders in the South on the dangers of inadequate high school training would be particularly helpful.

It was also suggested that the Mass Media in the South might well be alerted to the desirability of interviewing educators on the dangers of trying to supplant public schools with private schools.

The U.S. News and World Report, October 31, 1958, carried an article on "When Public School Closes, What Happens?" This on-the-scene report from four Southern cities, in this ultra-conservative magazine, shows how closing of public schools adversely affects students.

It was reported that a poll has just showed that Protestant clergymen in the South favor compliance with the Supreme Court's order on desegregation of public schools. The Pulpit Digest, a non-denominational monthly in Great Neck, L.I., sent questionnaires to 3,600 clergymen in the South. Replies came from 769. Of these 600 favored compliance; 146 favored "searching for possible legal means of avoiding the consequences of the Court's decision," and only 23 favored open disobedience.

Only 46 of the 769 ministers who replied were Negroes. They unanimously favored integration. Most of the replies, 237, came from Baptists. There were replies from 203 Methodists and 71 Presbyterians.

Civic and religious organizations throughout the United States will observe the 10th Anniversary of the United National Universal Declaration of Human Rights on December 10, 1958. In Miami, Florida, a group of organizations, spearheaded by the United Church Women, are planning a community audit probing seven areas of human rights concern -- employment, education, public health, recreation, public accomodations, government and housing.

It was suggested that CCD agencies wanting to observe this event should request copies of the pamphlet, IN YOUR HANDS, from Harry Fleischman.

As a public service contribution, the Industrial Union Department of the AFL-CIO in cooperation with the American Jewish Committee is offering radio stations a platter of one-minute spot announcements by prominent Americans to be used throughout the week of December 7-14. Included on the spots will be Marian Anderson, Leonard Bernstein, Althea Gibson, Paul Hoffman, Danny Kaye, Raymond Massey, Mark Van Doren, George Meany, Walter Reuther, and Eleanor Roosevelt.

In addition to the organizations previously reported as purchasing reprints of THE STORY NOBODY TELLS YOU ABOUT THE SOUTH by William Peters, which appeared in the September 1958 issue of McCalls, the NAACP reprinted 5,000 copies. The 8-page feature article can still be ordered from McCalls at 10¢ a copy.

Wilton Dillon reported that the Phelps-Stokes Fund plans to print a pamphlet by Philip Hammer on the economic progress of the Negro in the South and the rise of the Negro market. Organizations interested in this pamphlet should contact Mr. Dillon, Phelps-Stokes Fund, 101 Park Avenue, New York City.

The Mass Media Committee will check with the Protestant Episcopal Church to find out whether or not they plan to reprint the excellent pastoral letter of the Episcopal Bishops on race injustice.

It was reported that President Eisenhower may be urged to make a speech pointing to the benefits to the South and to the country as a whole that would accrue following a solution of the desegregation problem.

Respectfully submitted,

Harry Fleischman

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation
Tuesday, December 2, 1958

PRESENT: Henry Lee Moon, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Gunther Lawrence, Al Vorspan, Mrs. Lee, Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Mrs. Macy, National Urban League; Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Tuesday, January 20, 1959 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the National Urban League, 14 East 48th Street, New York, New York.

Put this on your calendar and please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

The Committee noted the report of Arthur Flemming, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, on the million student-days lost in closing of schools in Norfolk, Little Rock, Charlottesville, and Front Royal.

It was suggested that the National Education Association and other educational organizations be urged to comment publicly on the implications of the report. Morisey will check the possibility of the AFSC reprinting the Flemming statement. Henry Moon will attempt to ascertain chances of constructive Presidential reaction to possible queries by reporters on the subject at the next Presidential press conference.

The Committee agreed on the need to show the human aspects of the Flemming report, to show how children are abused by school closings and to inquire whether or not juvenile delinquency is growing. Alan Reitman will approach The New York Times to suggest a series of articles on the subject, to be written by Harrison Salisbury. Milton Krents will approach Ed Murrow to suggest a documentary on the subject.

The Southern Regional Council will consider reprinting the New York Herald Tribune analysis by Professor Arthur E. Sutherland of Harvard of the Alabama pupil placement decision of the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Georgia Council of Churches is printing 20,000 copies of the statement on schools and the race issue adopted by over 300 Atlanta ministers and rabbis. Organizations desiring bulk orders may order them at $20 per 1,000 from the Georgia Council of Churches, 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

It was agreed that it would be desirable to have articles in mass media magazines on the role of the clergy in the South in supporting law and equality.

Alan Reitman will talk to Life magazine and AJC will contact Look magazine. Harold Fleming is to send a memo on church statements and actions in this respect to Harry Fleischman.

The Civil Rights Commission will hold a hearing in Montgomery, Alabama, December 9th on denial of voting rights to Negroes. Fleming will investigate the possibility of getting Deans of Southern law schools to urge Southern officials to comply with the subpoenas of the Civil Rights Commission in order that the public should receive the basic facts which it needs to determine policies.

Tom Young, public information specialist of the Civil Rights Commission, will be asked if it is possible to secure a status report on the Commission's work. It was suggested that we should urge our mass media contacts to prepare articles critically analyzing the Commission's activity or lack of it, while basically supporting the Civil Rights Commission.

Harold Fleming reported that the Interagency Conference in Atlanta last month set up a clearing house on hardship cases in respect to displaced children who are victims of school closings. Attempts are being made to raise money to secure a tutor for the 22 Negro students displaced in Front Royal, Virginia.

Harold Fleming reported that Southern segregationists are making considerable propaganda use of the unfavorable report on Washington, D. C. school desegregation by the Davis Congressional subcommittee.

It was suggested that Washington staffs of our agencies might explore the possibility, perhaps through the Civil Liberties Clearing House, of getting an objective Congressional Committee to investigate progress made through desegregation in the District of Columbia. This might be done as part of hearings on new Civil Rights legislation in the next session of Congress.

A constructive series on school desegregation in Washington will soon appear in the Washington Post and Times Herald, and will be reprinted by the American Friends Service Committee.

The Mass Media Committee voted to ask the Executive Committee of CCD to consider the problem raised by the State Education Department of Arkansas making payments to public and private schools, that are teaching Little Rock's displaced high school students.

The Little Rock Women's Emergency Committee to Open Public Schools requested a list of television films and kinescopes which could be used to help educate public opinion on the school desegregation problem. The Committee was sent a list of films prepared by the Mass Media Committee of CCD in October '57. The Secretary will send additional material to the Little Rock Committee.

It was agreed that Harry Fleischman would talk with Walt Kelly about the possibility of reprinting his Pogo comic strip series on "Speakeasy Schools" or the possibility of a special comic strip on the subject to be done by Kelly.

The Union of American Hebrew Congregations has just reprinted the Commonweal article on "Integration In Washington," by Isaac Franck. Sample copies will be sent to all CCD agencies.

Time magazine is scheduled to print an expose on Birmingham, Alabama in its next issue.

Respectfully submitted, Harry Fleischman

Minutes of the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation
Wednesday, February 4, 1959

PRESENT: Arnold Aronson, National Community Relations Advisory Council; Gunther Lawrence, Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Henry Moon, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee; Guichard Parris, National Urban League; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Ed White, United Steelworkers of America; Chairman, Ali Bernheim, American Jewish Committee; Secretary, Harry Fleischman, National Labor Service.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Wednesday, March 18, 1959 from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon at the NAACP, 20 West 40th Street, New York, New York.

Put this on your calendar and please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. Approximately 15,000 copies of POGO and the SPEAKEASY SCHOOLS, a reprint of Walt Kelly's comic strips on that subject, will be published by the National Labor Service of the American Jewish Committee, the Southern Regional Council, the Anti-Defamation League, the American Friends Service Committee, and six AFL-CIO unions. Sample copies will be distributed to CCD agencies.

2. A letter was received from Herman Long, of Fisk University, Director, Race Relations Department, Congregational Christian Churches, mentioning that race labeling has begun to appear widely in wire service stories in the newspapers. It was agreed that Alan Reitman would talk with officials of Associated Press, United Press International and Editor and Publisher concerning this matter.

3. Reitman agreed to contact Life magazine again concerning a proposed article on the role of the clergy in the South in supporting law and equality.

4. The American Friends Service Committee is sponsoring a pamphlet on American Race Relations, which will be published by the University of Oklahoma Press. Agencies interested in quantities of the pamphlet should write to Alex Morisey, American Friends Service Committee, 1201 Chestnut St., Philadelphia 7, Pennsylvania.

5. The Southern Regional Council reported that it will reprint the Arkansas Gazette report on the effect of the desegregation controversy on economic conditions in Arkansas. Sample copies will be sent to all CCD agencies.

6. The National Urban League has prepared an attractive 11 x 14 illustrated pamphlet, "Half a Life," in connection with Equal Opportunity Day. Copies are being sent to CCD agencies.

7. The Turnpike Press has just published as a 24 page pamphlet, THE TRUTH ABOUT DESEGREGATION IN WASHINGTON'S SCHOOLS, which first appeared as a series of articles in the Washington Post by Erwin Knoll. The series is an excellent survey of progress in the Washington schools and should be helpful in countering the vicious propaganda being spread by Governor Faubus of Arkansas and other Southern segregationist leaders. Single copies are 15¢ postpaid; 10 copies or more 10¢ each postpaid; 100 copies or more 7½¢ postpaid; 500 copies or more 5¢ each plus shipping charges. Please order from the Turnpike Press, Annandale, Virginia.

8. A group of organizations in Miami, under the leadership of the United Church Women, have conducted a Community Audit in connection with United Nations Human Rights Day. Copies of the folder describing the Community Audit are being mailed to all CCD agencies.

9. Pro-segregation ads have appeared in The New York Times, January 5, 1959 and in the Wall Street Journal, February 9, 1959 under the signature of Carleton Putnam, who describes himself as a distinguished New Englander. Putnam, a Board member of Delta Airlines, has set up a Putnam Letter Committee in Birmingham, Alabama to solicit contributions to reprint his letter as an ad in additional Northern newspapers. When a similar ad was placed by Louisiana segregation leaders in the N.Y. Herald Tribune in February 1958, we urged CCD member agencies to alert their local units to such ads and ask them to check with editors and publishers about the problem. When such ads appear in Northern papers, it would be helpful if Southerners would write dissenting letters to the editors analyzing the misstatements and errors in the ads. Where such ads appear, editors should be asked to include editorials rebutting the segregation thesis advanced in the ads, or at least run news articles (in the same issue carrying the ads) quoting opponents of segregation.

10. INTEGRATION - A CHALLENGE TO THE SOCIAL AGENCY, a 25-page report of a Workshop conducted by the National Social Welfare Assembly's Committee on Intergroup Relations, features discussion of case histories in hiring Negro social workers, establishing integrated programs, problems of loss of financial support by pro-integration agencies, achieving community acceptance, developing national and local policy on integration, etc. Copies of the Workshop Report are available at 75¢ each from the National Social Welfare Assembly, 345 East 46th Street, New York 17, N.Y.

11. Papers throughout the nation carried an Associated Press Wirephoto February 2 and 3, showing a lone Negro boy in Maury High School Auditorium in Norfolk, Va. -- apparently shunned by his classmates. An article in the New York Post February 3 reported that the photo was phony. Photographers had beckoned the Negro boy up front and took the picture. A minute later, the seats around him were filled and other kids were asking him if he could play basketball or football. By then the photographers had gone. It was agreed that it would be useful if editors throughout the country who used the photo would query A.P. on the alleged irresponsible reporting, and also bring this to the attention of Editor and Publisher magazine.

12. Alan Reitman agreed to suggest to The New York Times that it carry a story concerning the reactions of students who have returned to desegregated public schools from private schools and private tutoring classes. It was felt that such a human interest story might make the comparison more meaningful, even in the South. Henry Moon agreed to suggest the same kind of stories for the educational pages of Time and Newsweek.

13. Members of the Committee expressed great indignation over the way in which Chet Huntley had called for virtual suicide by the NAACP on his program on The Second Agony Of Atlanta. It was suggested that the February 8, 1959 program ought to include a genuine moderate, who recognizes the importance of the role of the NAACP in the desegregation issue. This it was felt, could effectively explode the Huntley thesis that Southern moderates were only awaiting NAACP abdication to rise up in their might to support orderly desegregation. NAACP attempts to arrange for the inclusion on the program of such a moderate were unavailing. (Fortunately, Roy Wilkins did such a tremendous job on the February 8, 1959 NBC program with Chet Huntley and Thomas Waring, editor of the Charleston, S. C. News and Courier, that he removed a good deal of the sting from the Huntley thesis.)

Teachers, Lyndon Johnson And The Putnam Letter

"Ladies that come to the ball,
I am in love with you all.
Golden and gay are the lamps that whirl. . . ."

EVERYBODY LOVES teacher when she comes to the convention — merchants, photographers, beauticians, restaurants, speech-makers, philosophers and flirts.

But when midnight strikes Cinderella goes back to the kitchen and leaves no slipper nor any pixillated prince.

What can you really say to a teacher in times like these in the South except "carry on" and "your noble profession!"? That ought to be sufficient, perhaps, for the dedicated. But it's hard to be dedicated in a state of malnutrition and of nervous indigestion about the future.

Let's say it, though. For even if it isn't enough it is much, and to some, even in this practical age, it is everything. Let's say that through the ages dedication hasn't paid off in the coin of any practical realm and has had to depend on its own mintages. It is so of the teacher, the preacher, the writer, so of the artist. And we continue to have, thank God, teachers, preachers, writers and artists.

WHEN SEN. LYNDON Johnson asks rhetorically whether Berlin is to be "the deathbed of democracy or the graveyard of aggression" some will feel that the subject is too vital for alliterating like that. It calls for imagery, perhaps, but in simplest language. Such as Trotsky's when he heard Lenin was dead: "The words are like great rocks falling into the sea."

In defense of much alliterating here, my story is that it is done in a spirit of romp-in-writing and good clean fun.

FLASH! The Putnam Letter is upsetting the "Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation."

And massively!

In organization is made up of some 40 organizations interested in promoting integration. Recent minutes suggested that members "check with editors and publishers about the problem." (Apparently checking has been successful with The Washington Post and Los Angeles, which refused the letter as an advertisement.) "To judge from the waspish tone of (the minutes)," writes Editor James J. Kilpatrick in The Richmond News-Leader, "the 'Carleton Putnam letter' is beginning to hurt." The "Mass Media Committee" circulates stories and editorials from The Arkansas Gazette (Harry Ashmore), The Washington Post and The Urban League (which is still receiving over $2 million a year from community chest groups even though a number of Southern chest organizations have dropped it).

SUMMARY OF MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE , CCD MEETING, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18, 1959

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Wednesday, April 22, 1959 from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon at the Jewish Labor Committee, 25 East 78th Street, New York, New York.

Put this on your calendar and please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. The Richmond News-Leader printed the February 4, 1959 minutes of the Mass Media Committee on February 27, 1959 with an editorial, Pow-Wow on 40th Street. We have been unable to ascertain how these minutes came into the hands of the News-Leader. Following the printing of the minutes in the News-Leader, they were reprinted, again with editorials, in the Charleston, S. C. News and Courier, the Jackson, Mississippi Daily News and the Augusta, Georgia Courier. The Richmond editorial and the minutes were inserted into the Congressional Record of March 3, 1959 by Congressman Watkins M. Abbitt of Virginia and the Jackson editorial and the minutes into the Congressional Record of March 13, 1959 by Congressman John Bell Williams of Mississippi. (A copy of the News Leader editorial is enclosed.)

The Richmond News-Leader, through the Associated Press, asked for further information about CCD. The enclosed reply was sent to A.P.

2. It was suggested that an objective study of the economic effects of school closings by some foundation might help movo the business community to preserve the public school system. Possibilities for such a study will be investigated.

The February 1959 issue of New South, published by the Southern Regional Council 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E., Atlanta, Ga., carried an article by Dr. Lorin A. Thompson on VIRGINIA EDUCATION CRISIS AND ITS ECONOMIC ASPECTS. A pamphlet on THE ECONOMIC EFFECT OF SCHOOL CLOSING by Jim Montgomery, Business Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, has been printed by Emory University. Copies are available from the Southern Regional Council.

It was suggested that some business organization might be interested in doing a roundup pamphlet on the subject.

3. The Montgomery, Ala. Citizens Council published an ad in the Montgomery Home News on February 12, 1959, which states that "We insist that no white person should participate in any consultations directed towards 'working out' the :school situation' with any person of either race who is promoting integration in any way... In no discussions between any groups or persons shall any proposal to alter or modify our segregation pattern in the schools be a subject of consideration or discussion. Any person who violates these standards will, in our sober opinion, be adjudged and marked by the people of these communities to be an enemy of the white people and a traitor to the heritage and cause of white people."

The ad insists that if any whites fail to actively support total segregation, "an aroused and informed public will make it unprofitable and uncomfortable for any (such) person to remain in our community...From now on the Council must call a spade a spade, and name the names of friend and enemy."

Discussion at the mass media meeting indicated that the Montgomery ad was in the vein of Hitler and Stalin, both of whom insisted that it was not enough for their subjects to refrain from opposing totalitarian policies, but instead had to actively support such policies or else be considered "enemies of the state." It was suggested that reportage of the Montgomery ad to editors, commentators and public officials might reinforce and stiffen public opinion in the nation against such totalitarian views.

4. The Interracial News Service of the National Council of Churches, has published a compilation of statements on race relations by various Protestant denominations in its January-February and March-April 1959 issues. Write to NCC's Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York for copies.

5. A series of seven thoughtful and provocative articles on how Southern states have responded to the Supreme Court's desegregation decision and the adjustments that are still to come have been assembled in a booklet, SOUTHERNERS AND SCHOOLS . Order from The New Republic, 1244-19th Street, N.W., Washington 6, D. C. at 35¢ a copy, $20 for 100 copies.

Pow-Wow on 40th Street

Elsewhere on today's editorial page appear the minutes of a most interesting meeting held in New York City on February 4, at the NAACP's headquarters on West Fortieth Street. The document speaks for itself, and it should speak eloquently to white Southerners.

Until this week, we ourselves had never heard of the "Consultative Conference on Desegregation", or of its "Mass Media Committee." Inquiry this morning to the Associated Press elicited a few facts, drawn unwillingly from a reluctant source: The CCD is made up of "about 40" organizations with an interest in promoting racial integration. The AP's source declined to release a list of these members. The CCD's "Mass Media Committee," we may conclude for ourselves, is charged with influencing newspapers, magazines, press associations, and radio-TV networks in behalf of the integration cause. In a free country, this is certainly anybody's privilege and there ought not to be any particular secret about what these people are up to.

What are they up to? They are a busy crew.

They are distributing thousands of copies of a "Pogo" comic strip which ridicules Virginia's action in closing schools last Fall. They are reprinting a series of pieces from the Arkansas Gazette and circulating some articles from the Washington Post. They direct attention to a pamphlet of the Urban League and a "workshop report" of the National Social Welfare Assembly.

Several special assignments claimed the committee's attention on February 4. A letter was at hand mentioning that the Associated Press and United Press International are engaging in "race labeling." Alan Reitman, of the American Civil Liberties Union, is instructed to talk with officials of the wire services concerning this matter. Evidently the committee had been unsuccessful in planting in Life magazine an article about Southern clergymen who support integration. Mr. Reitman agrees to contact Life again. The busy Mr. Reitman also will call upon the New York Times to suggest a particular article there. The NAACP's Henry Moon is to push the same kind of stories at Time and Newsweek.

To judge from the waspish tone of Minute No.9, the famed "Carleton Putnam Letter" is beginning to hurt. This was an open letter sent by Mr. Putnam to President Eisenhower last Fall. Following its publication in the Richmond Times-Dispatch in October, the letter was distributed widely around the country. Subsequently, a group of Alabamians formed a committee to arrange for publication of the letter as paid advertising in major newspapers. (James E. Simpson, Attorney, 317 North Twentieth Street, Birmingham, is treasurer of the committee.) Mr. Putnam, who assuredly is "distinguished" though he has not described himself as such, had nothing to do with formation of this committee. In his letter, the New York born historian, biographer, and bussinessman ringingly defends the Southern point of view on school segregation, and urges upon the President a reconsideration of civil rights agitation. The integrationists' "Mass Media Committee" finds the Putnam letter a problem, and outlines various schemes for undermining the letter's effectiveness.

There is much for the Southern traditionalist, believing in essential separation of the races, to learn from the minutes of this New York committee. Two points especially bear emphasis:

First, this is a coordinated effort. Nine different organizations sent representatives to the committee meeting.

Second, this is a professional effort. Reitman and Moon are not amateurs in public relations. They are pro's, full-time people, and when the committee members meet on West Fortieth Street in Manhattan they meet within a few minutes' taxi ride of the top men in the communications industry.

What does the white South have to match this? Let us attempt an answer in one word: Nothing.

Organizations that believe in the constitutional right of the States to maintain racially separate institutions have no coordination of any sort. Conservative, right-wing groups as a whole have no unity or strength. We have no "consultative conferences," no "mass media committee," no skilled and personable representatives to call upon magazine editors and network officials. Is it any wonder that the South continues to take a terrible licking?

Let us ponder these revealing minutes more in sorrow than in anger, more in honest concern than in resentment. We live in a day of the pressure group, in which public opinion is molded like wax and the grass roots are fertilized from a hundred artificial sources. It is high time for the conservative South to unstuff its shirt, put up some real money, and adapt the techniques of its foes to the cause we hold to be right.

55 West 42nd St.
New York 36, N.Y.

Copy of Letter to Robert Farrington of Associated Press

Dear Mr. Farrington:

This is in reply to your request for information regarding the Consultative Conference on Desegregation.

The Conference was formed a little over two years ago in order to further communication among organizations committed to facilitating orderly compliance with the constitutional requirements regarding desegregation.

As its name implies, the Conference is a mechanism for interconsultation and for an exchange of information, views and experiences among the participating organizations. The deliberations of the Conference are advisory only and are not binding on any organization.

The Conference itself is not an operating agency. It does not engage in legislative activity nor does it take public actions or issue public statements.

The officers of the Conference are: Co-Chairmen; Rev. Eugene Carson Blake, Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., Very Rev. Maurice V. Sheen, Catholic Committee of the South, Rabbi Abraham J. Feldman, Synagogue Council of America; Treasurer; Lewis M. Hoskins, American Friends Service Committee; Secretary; Arnold Aronson, National Community Relations Advisory Council. The Conference has no paid staff.

In addition to the organizations represented by the officers, other organizations which participate in the consultative processes include: American Civil Liberties Union; Americans for Democratic Action; American Jewish Committee; American Jewish Congress; Anti-Defamation League; Board of National Missions, United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.; Catholic Interracial Council; Council for Social Action, Congregational Christian Churches; Department of Social Welfare, United Christian Missionary Society, Disciples of Christ; Evangelical & Reformed Church, Commission on Christian Social Action; Jewish Labor Committee; National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; National Board, YWCA; National Council of Jewish Women; National Council Protestant Episcopal Church, Division of Christian Citizenship; National Sharecroppers Fund, Inc.; National Social Welfare Assembly; Southern Regional Council; Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Unitarian Service Committee; United Automobile Workers of America; United Church Women; United Steelworkers of America; and Women's Division of Christian Service of the Methodist Church.

Yours truly,

ARNOLD ARONSON
Secretary

EXCERPT FROM:

Jackson Mississippi
Daily News - March 5, 1959

Publicity Peter Funks

The extent to which organized, professional pressure groups apply the squeeze to the Nation's large newspapers, magazines, wire services, radio and television outlets on behalf of stirring up racial hatreds and warped opinions of the South has been uncovered.

Minutes of a secret meeting held in New York recently have been obtained. This document reveals very significant background into reasons the South continues to suffer abuse and slander in the court of last resort - public opinion. The judge and jury are both stacked against millions of decent, law-abiding people who disagree with leftwing, Communist-front strife-spreaders, do-gooders, and social and publicity Peter Funks.

The minutes of the hush-hush session at which distorted stories against the South were conceived appear, along with additional editorial comment, on the editorial page in this issue of the Jackson Daily News.

You will see from the pressure techniques plus an abundance of fawning willingness on the part of journalists and television commentators that the South has no more chance of unbiased treatment than a billy goat has of winning a prize at a perfume contest.

The minutes reveal propaganda leaflets are distributed by the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation to all CCD agencies. It is reported about 40 agencies cooperate in this the falsehood spreading, but the names of these agencies are kept secret.

Visiting newsmen can swarm into the South and get all the factual information they desire on any organization, but the nerve-center of world journalism, television and radio has not been able to get a list of these agencies.

Right-thinking southerners should study with concern the underground activities of vicious sabotage against reputable people.

It must be accepted that the South has been long-suffering in enduring the assaults.

Although it can hardly hope to cope with a secret underground of hate-pushers, the Citizens Council (there's no secret about its board of directors) is the only active organization putting up an intelligent defense against the constant barrage of smear against the South.

After reading the details on the editorial page today we believe our readers will hold renewed respect and admiration for those who stand on the forefront of this all-important fight for decency and fairplay.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22, 1959

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Wednesday, May 20, 1959 from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon at the American Jewish Congress, 15 East 84 Street, New York, New York.

Put this on your calendar and please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. The Southern Regional Council reported that it was preparing a memorandum summarizing available material on the economic effects of school closings. A foundation indicated interest in a possible study of the subject as did a business magazine.

2. Articles and editorials in the Montgomery, Alabama Advertiser, April 9, 10 and 12, 1959 protested success of the White Citizens Council in Montgomery in forcing the cancellation of a film showing, and Klan and Citizens Council success in Tuscaloosa in forcing the resignation of a hospital superintendent. See attached.

3. A key list of mass media and public figures is being compiled to receive reprints of news stories, articles and editorials from Southern papers. Please send names and addresses of those you would like included on the list to Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

4. The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette has printed an article contrasting the pro-segregation views of a Northerner, Carleton Putnam (printed as an advertisement in many Northern papers by Southern segregationists) with the anti-segregation views of a Southerner, James McBride Dabbs, president of the Southern Regional Council. Write to Harold Fleming for copies.

5. Frank Stanton, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, gave a talk on "The Neglected Frontier" at the Anti-Defamation League Freedom Forum last December. The speech, which reported CBS human relations programming plans, has been published as a pamphlet by CBS. Copies are being sent to all CCD agencies.

6. INTIMIDATION, REPRISAL AND VIOLENCE IN THE SOUTH'S RACIAL CRISIS -- a survey listing 531 such cases in 11 Southern states reported in the press from January 1955 to January 1959, will soon be published. The survey is sponsored by the Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.; the Southeastern Office of the American Friends Service Committee; and the Southern Regional Council.

GANGLAND IN A SEAT OF LEARNING

That which needs to be understood about the Klan is that it would like to rule everything, including your grocery budget and the amount of air you carry in your tires. The sorry state of affairs at Hale Memorial Hospital in Tuscaloosa illustrates and ought to be a warning to those who are complacent about the Klan.

At the Tuscaloosa hospital, the superintendent, Dr. Horace L. White, was forced to resign by the Klan and local Citizens Council. The issue was the manner in which white nurses helped Negro patients.

It is not only that the Klan element has caved in public resistance to the extent that this could happen, but the probate judge of the county, David Cochrane, entreated White to leave Tuscaloosa for "his own safety."

That, not a guard of police, was the cowed response.

In short, not only were the Kluxers in Tuscaloosa able to take over a hospital and force its head to resign, they were able to make the first officer of county government pass along a warning to leave town.

The Kluxers are now after two more hospital employes and five of the nurses were threatened with assault in an anonymous telephone call.

All this is gangland in a famous seat of learning.

THREATS FORCE HOSPITAL HEAD TO QUIT HALE

Tuscaloosa, Ala. (AP) Trustees of Hale Memorial Hospital Friday night accepted the resignation of their medical director over the protests of a majority of the patients at the tuberculosis sanatorium.

The resignation apparently stemmed from a racial situation at the hospital which serves 11 west Alabama counties.

Dr. Horace L. White resigned as superintendent and medical director. Dr. O.L. Jordan, chairman of the board of trustees, was named temporary medical director.

White's resignation brought in to public a controversy that has been brewing for some time over objections by the Citizens Council and the Ku Klux Klan of certain duties white nurses perform for Negro patients.

During the trustees' meeting White said threats have been made against him and his family as well as against other hospital employes.

A Citizens Council spokesman, Walter Wyatt, declined to comment on the situation and members of the KKK could not be reached for comment.

-more-

Petitions were presented at the meeting bearing the names of 102 of the 147 patients at the hospital urging the board to refuse White's resignation.

The petitions commended White and denied any attempts to break down segregation in the hospital.

The ratio of Negro and white patients at the sanatorium was not available.

Trustees have met several times recently with the Citizens Council and KKK groups in efforts to iron out the controversy.

Jordan told the trustees that Probate Judge David Cochrane called him last Wednesday urging that he "get Dr. White out of town tonight for his own safety."

FEARED FOR SAFETY

He quoted Cochrane as saying he had heard certain threats and feared for White's safety.

Jordan said he took White to Montgomery that night to talk with State Health officers.

Said Jordan:

"I thought everything would be all right after I had Dr. White's resignation but they (outside agitators) are not satisfied.

"Now they have started on two other men at the hospital. Val Destino and the boiler tender, Mr. Hall." Destino and Hall were not further identified.

"Someone also called the hospital last Saturday night and told one of the nurses that they knew there were five nurses on duty and they were going to beat them up when they got off."

Jordan said he got police escorts to see the nurses home.

Jordan indicated that the incident apparently began some time ago with the firing of three nurses whom White charged were incompetent.

Accusations were made against White at the time that white nurses were ordered to perform certain duties for Negro patients.

White denied giving any such orders.

COUNCIL HAD SPOKEN Film Showing Blocked By 'Fear Of Violence'
By Arthur Osgoode

Fear of possible violence caused him to cancel a film that had been nominated as best picture of 1958, a Montgomery movie theater manager told The Advertiser Thursday.

"The Defiant Ones," which Monday received awards from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the best screenplay and best photography of the year, was withdrawn after a protesting telegram from the Montgomery Citizens Council.

Though it did not win, the film was among five nominated for the best picture award. It deals with the escape of a white man and a Negro from a Georgia chain gang.

A. B. (Bickey) Covey, manager of the Empire Theater, said that "you just don't know what the next move would have been."

"Knowing what has been done here, you just can't be complacent about it. I'd be a nervous wreck thinking about what might happen."

But Covey said he had received numerous telephone calls protesting the cancelling of the film.

He quoted one caller as saying "I think it's a damn shame."

He said another asked: "Well, why aren't you playing it?"

Covey said he "always fought back" in past cases of attempted censorship, but that in this case he feared for the safety of theatre patrons. He pointed to past instances of violence on the part of segregationist elements in the city.

Bruce Wyatt, chairman of the local Citizens Council, said the telegram was sent after approval by the council's executive committee.

Members of the council executive board are William R. Burt, official of a boiler works, William Garner, attorney, John Blair Hawthorn, Snowdoun farmer and dairyman, Jesse Hodges, electrical firm estimator, Herbert Lancaster, architect, J. R. Syfrett, civil engineer, and Wyatt.

None of the group had seen the picture, said Wyatt though he believed " a couple of them had seen parts of it."

The telegram to the theater was "based on research," Wyatt said.

Wyatt said "it remains to be seen" whether the Citizens Council will seek to prevent the playing of other film which may touch on racial issues.

As to "The Defiant Ones," Wyatt commented that "I don't believe the average person would have been able to realize exactly what it was."

He said the picture was investigated after the Council had received several telephone calls protesting the impending showing of the film which deals with escape of a white convict and a Negro convict, both chained together.

Glenn Saunders, who handles public relations for the Citizens Council, termed the picture "low-pressure, insidious propaganda that very likely would not be recognized for what it was."

Before sending the telegram, he said, "we had fairly conclusive evidence that it was a clever propaganda job."

Saunders also said that none of the Citizens Council group had seen the picture, but they had talked to two people who had seen it elsewhere. But he said that the decision to protest the picture was based on the reading of numerous reviews as well as on an article appearing in a newsletter put out by the American Legion's Americanism Committee.

The question of whether the group was entitled to the right of censorship, "wasn't discussed at all," Saunders said.

Covey declined to say whether he would cancel other pictures in face of similar protests. "You've got to cross each bridge as you get to it," he said.

Of the question of whether a film should be shown, he asked, "Who can we hand it to to handle it?"

"If it wasn't a question of racial issues, where we've had all our troubles, and bombings and so forth, I'd have told them to go to hell," said Covey.

The Citizens Council, he said, "is getting their stuff out of publications."

Protests over the movie were reportedly received at City Hall by city officials

Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers said he had received one telephone call objecting to the showing of the film.

But, he said, "I did not call Covey, and I had absolutely nothing to do with it."

Mayor W. A. Gayle could not be reached for comment Thursday night.

"The Defiant Ones," replaced Thursday by "Ride Lonesome," a picture starring Randolph Scott, was to have run here for seven days.

It tells the story of two convicts, played by Tony Curtis and Sidney Poitier, who escape while chained together and overcome their racial hatreds during their harrowing experiences.

LAUDED BY CRITICS

Both Curtis and Poitier were nominated for Academy Awards for their performances, and the picture was lauded by many critics.

The Citizens Council telegram, however, said that "it is not a very good picture, being replete with contrived actions and stilted, unconvincing characters who do not do justice to the talent of the actors,"

The incident was not the first in which segregationist opposition forced the cancelling of a film in this area.

Last July, a mob stormed a drive-in movie in Elmore County which was showing "Island in the Sun," a film starring a white woman and Negro singer Harry Belafonte.

On this occasion, an Advertiser photographer was knocked down and his film seized by members of the mob, which held the manager captive and cut off theater power supply.

Though notified of the violence, Elmore County Sheriff Lester Holley failed to investigate. Theater manager Max Singleton withdrew the film.

It was also scheduled to be shown at a local Negro drive-in theater, but it was withdrawn at the request of the Montgomery City Commission.

MONTGOMERY ADVERTISER, APRIL 12, 1959

HE KNOWS BEST: CONFORM OR GO

In this examination of the Montgomery Citizens Council, The Advertiser is going to be careful not to exaggerate that organization's potential for mischief, nuisance or menace to our way of life in Montgomery.

But now that the Council has prevented the showing of a movie here. The Advertiser feels a duty to urge the citizens of Montgomery to take a keen look at the Council's stated aims and to assess how much of your personal freedom it craves to devour.

The head of the Council in Montgomery is Mr. Bruce Wyatt.

Today, as you have just seen, Mr. Wyatt is manager of the Empire Theater. He has taken over the managerial duties from the former manager, Mr. "Bickey" Covey.

The question becomes whether, tomorrow, Mr. Wyatt aims to function as president of the Montgomery Bar Association, the Dental Society, the Medical Society, the Merchants Association, the Ministerial Association, the Farm Bureau, and manager of the local TV-radio stations.

If you doubt that such is the toxic vision of Mr. Wyatt, hold until you have re-read it in his own words. We will presently quote them.

It did not matter a hoot to our social order here whether the movie Defiant Ones was shown or not. For the overwhelming mass of white public opinion in Montgomery is opposed beyond alteration to race mixing. No amount of propagandistic bombardment can change that.

But if any kind of propaganda assaults and injections could alter the convictions of white Montgomerians about race mixing, it would not be an elusive, brief whiff of a "message" in a movie.

If any kind of propaganda would derange overmastering white sentiment in Montgomery, it would be such authoritative influences as President Eisenhower, Congress, the magazines, national church bodies and your TV set.

The council cannot seal off Montgomerians from these sources of propaganda. Instead, you are told you cannot see the movie Defiant Ones.

And that goes by the name of "thought control."

Now who is the gentleman that decided for you that you might be harmed by seeing the movie?

Our impression of Mr. Wyatt is that of an earnest, upright man with whom you would never suffer in a personal business transaction.

Our further impression of Mr. Wyatt is that, had he been on the jury at the Scopes Monkey Trial, he would have voted Thomas Scopes guilty as charged; that Mr. Wyatt's conprehension of an American's personal freedom is unachieved; and that if shown the writings of Thomas Jefferson with the author's sanctified name obliterated, he would adjudge them dangerous and un-Montgomery.

Not for a moment does the Advertiser question Mr. Wyatt's sincerity and good intentions. Nor do we think that at this point he is a consequential danger to the freedom of Montgomerians. But, as is seen in inexhaustible profusion throughout man's history, Mr. Wyatt has embraced a dogma, and if you will not embrace the same dogma, he aims to put you behind the pale. "You either think my way or you're against the white folks." The formula is more ancient than Adam's baby teeth.

Our interpretations of the aims of Mr. Wyatt are entirely derived from his own written words. On Feb. 1, the Council ran a large ad in The Advertiser entitled, "This Is The Program Which Will Keep The Schools Segregated."

Here are some extractions from the ad which show the governmental role the Council aspires to play:

... As the organized voice of our white citizens in matters pertaining to racial affairs, we are entitled to expect, and we do expect, that the public officials whom we elect shall consult with the Citizen Council officials whom we elect at all stages of the planning and execution of policies and measures involving the question of racial segregation.

When the Council wants a lawyer, it demands that he come running:

As citizens we feel that in a time of crisis like this we have the right to expect, and we do expect, the complete cooperation of members of the legal profession in making their services available on such a panel... We do expect similar cooperation from other leaders in the community life in making their time and services available.

Here is the two-headed threat the Council makes if you dare reject its infallible dogma. It's hard to believe, but it was prominently displayed in this paper Feb. 1:

(1)...No person who now enjoys success, leadership or acceptance in our communities will continue to enjoy success, leadership or acceptance should he aid in making more difficult our mission of maintaining segregation...
(2)...We feel that an aroused and informed public will make it unprofitable and uncomfortable for any person to remain in our community if he is not willing to support the community in this matter.

In short, a day is envisioned when there will be bodies elsewhere known as Montgomerians-in-Exile.

It is plain that this kind of vicious idiocy would leave the Council making war, not on the Negro revolutionaries, but on white people.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1959

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting, to be held Wednesday, June 17, 1959 from 11:30 until 2 p.m. at the National Community Relations Advisory Council, 55 West 42nd St., New York 36, N.Y.

Since luncheon will be served, it will be necessary for us to know whether or not you plan to attend. Please put this on your calendar and call or write to let us know if you will attend.

1. Notre Dame Law School plans to put out a special Symposium Issue of its law review, the Notre Dame Lawyer, in the Fall. The issue will concentrate on the practical problems arising from the Supreme Court decisions on school integration and on the responsibilities of the churches, of educators and school administrators, of the legal profession, of the Negro community and of public officials on the local, state and national levels.

A symposium was held at Notre Dame on May 8 and 9, 1959 which heard from: Catholic Bishop Vincent S. Waters of Raleigh, North Carolina; Rev. J.J. Murray, visiting professor at the Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary and former moderator of the Virginia Synod of the Presbyterian Church; and Rev. Albert T. Mollegen of the faculty of the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Virginia; representing public officials, Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, former Governor Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland, and Mayor William B. Hartsfield of Atlanta; representing educators and school administrators, Professor Harvey Wheeler of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va.; Dr. Carl F. Hansen, Superintendent of Schools of the District of Columbia; and Dr. Omer Carmichael, Superintendent of Schools of Louisville, Kentucky; representing the Negro community, Dr. Rufus Clement, President of Atlanta University, Atlanta, Georgia and former Dean George M. Johnson of Howard University School of Law, Washington, D. C.; representing the legal profession, Mr. Howard C. Westwood of the firm of Covington & Burling, Washington, D. C.

The speeches at that conference plus a section on "The Practical Problem of Desegregation: A Legal Analysis," written by Notre Dame Law School students (see attached outline), will be published in the Symposium Issue. Notre Dame Law School plans to print 5,000 copies and distribute them without charge to public officials, religious leaders, newspaper editors, educators and others who are influential in forming public opinion. To do this will require about $6,000. The Mass Media Committee unanimously recommended that each organization in CCD contribute to this project.

Contributions should be sent to Dean Joseph O'Meara, Notre Dame Law School, Notre Dame, Indiana. Dean O'Meara informs us that copies of the Symposium Issue will be sent to each contributing organization for distribution to its key people.

2. A progress report was presented on the economic effects of school closings. When the Southern Regional Council memorandum summarizing available material on the subject has been completed, it will be sent to CCD agencies. It was suggested that additional business magazines and newspapers might be interested in doing articles or series on the subject.

3. It was suggested that it would be very helpful, when schools re-open in the Fall, if T.V. programs illustrating successful desegregation of schools, despite initial difficulties, could be shown. Nashville, Tennessee was mentioned as one possibility.

4. The May 13, 1959 issue of Variety contained the attached article. It was agreed to check the legality of this action by segregationists.

5. Fisk University has just published "Human Relations and the Moral Challenge," a condensation of presentations at the 1958 Fisk Institute of Race Relations. The sixty-four page pamphlet is available from Dr. Herman H. Long, Race Relations Department, Fisk University, Nashville 8, Tennessee. at 50¢ each for single copies; 40¢ each for 10-20 copies; 30¢ each for 20 or more copies.

6. The AFL-CIO Education News and Views, May 1959 issue contains an article on "Indirect Approach to Educating On Civil Rights." Through a discussion of the right to picket and Federal minimum wage legislation, parallel problems involving the role of the Federal Government in school integration are considered. Copies are being sent to all CCD agencies.

7. Father Joseph H. Fichter, S.J. head of the Sociology Department of Loyola University, New Orleans, wrote an excellent article on "The Reluctant South" in the May 15, 1959 issue of Commonweal. The Catholic Interracial Council is considering reprinting it.

8. The Southern Temper, by William Peters, has been published by Doubleday & Co., 575 Madison Avenue, New York, with a foreword by Harry Golden. (238 pages. $3.95) This fine book points to the growing body of Southerners -- educators, church women, religious leaders, unionists, responsible businessmen and an increasing number of political leaders -- who are struggling effectively against extremists on the desegregation issue. It not only tells the story of what has been happening, but also contains many program implications for the future.

9. The Integrated Classroom, by H. Harry Giles, has just been published by Basic Books, Inc., 59 Fourth Avenue, New York 3, New York.(338 pages, $5.00) It is an excellent summary of community reaction to the integration order, a view of the social conflict, an analysis of its implications for educators and a listing of teaching aids to use in the school to promote desegregation. It is very valuable for use in classroom situations.

10. The United Auto Workers Eye Opener radio program will feature a documentary June 11 based on The Civil Rights Story...1958, written by Theodore Leskes of the American Jewish Committee. Write to Guy Nunn, UAW, 8000 E. Jefferson Avenue, Detroit 14, Michigan for stations and details.

U.S. TAXPAYERS PICKING UP TAB FOR SEGREGATIONIST TV-RADIO PROPAGANDA

Washington, May 12

The American taxpayer is subsidizing the segregationist propaganda through cut-rate tv films and radio tapes produced in the U.S. House and Senate Recording studios at the U.S. Capitol, VARIETY learned today.

Through the "sponsorship" of Mississippi's Sen. Jim Eastland and Rep. John Bell Williams, the White Citizens Council Forum of Jackson, Miss. -- the "educational" arm of the segregation-buff organization, the White Citizens Council -- is able to get Congressional rates on tv films and radio tape for duplication and distribution to more than 200 station outlets.

It's all accomplished within the Congressional rules which limit the recording studios (equipment and staff are maintained by government funds) to members of Congress only.

The studios were established to give Congressmen and Senators a convenient and inexpensive way to send radio-tv reports back to their Congressional districts. The member is billed at cost. A 15-minute tv film costs $30 to $55, depending upon how many cameras are used. A radio tape costs $1.50 to $5. Commercially, the cash would be many times this figure.

Both Rep. Williams and Sen. Eastland's offices have been active in arranging films and tapes for the Forum series. More than 40 members of Congress have been interviewed in the studios, by Williams or Eastland, and often with a moderator sent up from Jackson headquarters.

Rep. Williams and Sen. Eastland are billed at the regular rate. Then the film and tape is shipped to Jackson where it is duplicated and mailed out to the Forum list of stations.

Most recent interview was Rep. Williams' discussion with Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas who was in Washington to appear on "Youth Wants To Know," the Westinghouse Broadcasting syndicated show.

Note the difference in the costs of Faubus' tv time in Washington:

The 30-minute tv film and radio tape of "Youth Wants To Know," at commercial rates, in Westinghouse Broadcating Co's studios cost $2,000. This was the production bill received by Producer Ted Granik.

The 15-minute tv film and radio tape for the White Citizens Council Forum, made at Congressional rates in the tax-supported House Recording Studio, cost $30 to $55. This was the bill received by the "sponsor," Rep. Williams.

RECEIVED JUL 1 1959

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING FRIDAY, JUNE 19, 1959

1. A report was presented on the illegality of the White Citizens Councils' use of U. S. Senate and House recording facilities for White Citizens Councils propaganda programs. Information on this will be made available to Senators for further action at their discretion.

P. D. East's Petal Paper on May 28, 1959 carried a letter from Richard J. Scholem, Co-Manager of Station WTIG in Massillon, Ohio, the first Northern outlet to air the Citizens Council Forum radio show (which the WCC now claims is carried by over 400 radio stations in 44 states.) Scholem wrote:

"We offered to air the warped ideas of the Councils', not because of agreement but because Representative John Bell Williams of Mississippi spoke of a Northern propaganda curtain among newspapers, radio stations and television stations. We knew this to be untrue and called his bluff.

"The point of this letter, is, however, that we run our own 15-minute show right after the mental manure spread by the Councils' in which the president and executive secretary of the local Urban League and WTIG news staffers, along with an occasional local attorney or minister, dissect the preceding program. We sincerely hope that at least the Northern outlets in the 44 states carrying the Councils' shows will give their local liberals a chance to counter this professional Southern thinking and an equal amount of time to do it. Certainly, your readers who are also listenors to Citizens Council shows, can help a great deal by urging their local station managers to make equal time available to the other (and more enlightened) viewpoint."

It was agreed to suggest to each participating agency that it would be desirable to send memorandums to their local groups in cities carrying the Citizens Council's Forums, urging them to check on whether the station named is actually carrying the program, and if so, to request equal time for a local reply to it. (See attached list of stations advertised by the WCC as carrying their programs.)

A committee was appointed to check into possibilities of preparing adequate material for such programs, and to consider ways in which they could be sent out.

2. The report on Intimidation, Reprisals and Violence in the South's Racial Crisis; published by the National Council of Churches' Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, the American Friends Service Committee's Southeastern Office and the Southern Regional Council; has received excellent front page play in the Chattanooga Times, Atlanta Journal, New York Times, New York Herald Tribune and a long inside story in the Washington Post. Editorials have appeared in the New York Times, Washington Post and Atlanta Journal. The New York Times Sunday editorial section June 21, 1959 carried a special piece dealing with the pamphlet.

It was suggested that it might be an excellent thing if a border state Senator or Congressman would insert the pamphlet in the Congressional Record.

3. The American Friends Service Committee is putting out a pamphlet, Race and Conscience in America, to be published in early July by the University of Oklahoma Press. The pamphlet includes practical suggestions for action by individuals and groups to promote equality in America. Single copy 50 cents. Bulk orders available at much lower rates. Write Alex Morisey, AFSC, 20 S. 12 St., Phila., Pa. for details.

4. The Southern Regional Council has been putting out a series of reports on economic effects of the school crisis in the South. It would appreciate receiving any reports of speeches, interviews and statements by business leaders relating to the problem of the impact of race and tension on the South's economy.

5. A study by two members of Emory's University's faculty on using private schools as substitutes for public schools, will be published shortly by the Southern Regional Council.

6. It was agreed that the next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held in the Fall, but that the Chairman is empowered to call a special meeting at any time if the situation warrants such action.

Respectfully Submitted

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING FRIDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1959

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Tuesday, November 17, 1959 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 20 West 40th Street, New York, New York.

Put this on your calendar and please call or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. A report was presented on the Southern Inter-Agency Conference. The American Friends Service Committee is working with local people in Burnsville and Asheville, N. C. to try to provide some form of interim education for 28 Negro children in Yancey County (Burnsville) who are now out of public school. (Note Sept. 28th report from Paul Rilling, Field Director, Southern Regional Council, which was sent to your agency.)

The local committee is seeking $6,560 to continue the project throughout the year. Assistance should go to Burnsville Educational Project, c/o Lola B. McCracken, 13½ Eagle St., Asheville, N. C.

Negro students in Prince Edward Co., Va., are currently without any schooling, as the result of the county's ending all public schools. Private schools have been set up for white students. Those wanting to help are urged to contact Barbara Moffett, AFSC, 20 S. 12th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

2. The implications of pupil placement laws and experiences under such laws were discussed. It was suggested that it might be useful if a wire service, major metropolitan paper or national magazine would do a story on the thousands who have applied and the meager number accepted in order to put human dimensions on the story of token integration. The Southern Regional Council plans to issue a statement on the subject November 11th.

3. Save Our Schools movements in Southern cities affected (or soon to be affected) by desegregation orders are growing. It was reported that local church groups in such cities are considering issuing statements opposing the use of church facilities for private schools, as a substitute for desegregated public schools.

4. Friendly World Broadcasting, 122 N. Providence Rd., Wallingford, Pa., makes available to radio stations and organizations tapes on The Little Rock Story, The Atlanta School Story and similar subjects without charge. For details, write to Edwin T. Randall at the above address.

5. Very few copies are still available of the hard-hitting report of the Civil Rights Commission. If your organization has not yet secured a copy of the full report or the abridged edition, write to your Congressman for a copy. The Macmillan Company is considering reprinting it.

6. The Southern Regional Council published a 46 page mimeod Background Report on School Desegregation for 1959-60 as well as an 83-page pamphlet by Margaret Price on The Negro and the Ballot in the South. Copies are available from SRC, 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

7. The Virginia Committee for Public Schools has published a 23-page pamphlet, Organizing to Save Public Schools, written by the Committee's executive secretary, William M. Lightsey. It reports how Virginians rallied to the defense of the public school system when it was under attack by Virginia law-makers. Copies available from The Messenger Press, Box 312, Manassas, Va. at 15¢ each; 10 or more copies -- 10¢ each; 100 copies or more -- 7½¢ each.

8. The National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials is printing an 80-page pamphlet, Civil Rights in the Nation's Capitol: A Report on a Decade of Progress. Edited by Benjamin D. Segal and William Korey, the pamphlet will sell for 75¢ a copy; 500 for 50¢ per copy. Write for copies to NAIRO, 426 W. 58 Street, New York 19, New York.

9. The National Labor Service of the American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56 Street, New York 22, N.Y., has reprinted Howard Zinn's A Fate Worse Than Integration from Harper's Magazine. The article shows why many Southerners value law and order, public education and economic progress more than segregation. Five cents per copy, $3.50 per hundred.

10. The Anti-Defamation League and the International Association of Chiefs of Police have just published With Justice For All: A Guide for Law Enforcement Officers. The 36-page illustrated pamphlet contains a foreword by Attorney General William P. Rogers and has been endorsed by the Southern Police Institute. It deals specifically with group conflict and riot control.

11. Another ADL pamphlet scheduled to appear soon is Achievements in in Washington D. C. Schools, by D. C. School Superintendent Carl Hansen.

12. Oceana Publications will soon publish Let's Be Human, a book based on Harry Fleischman's column of the same name.

13. The Department of Christian Social Relations, United Church Women; Council for Christian Social Action, United Church of Christ; Anti-Defamation League; Department of Social Education and Action, United Presbyterian Church in USA; and the Division of Christian Citizenship, National Council, Protestant Episcopal Church in USA jointly published Save Our Schools: A Roundup of Southern Press Opinion.

14. The American Jewish Congress, 15 E. 84 Street, New York 28, N.Y. has just published a 57-page pamphlet, From Color Blind to Color Conscious, a study of public school integration in New York City. Copies are $1.00 each.

15. The National Council, Protestant Episcopal Church, 281 Park Ave. S., New York 10, N.Y., has issued a 12-page pamphlet, The Church Speaks on Race -- Official Statements of the Episcopal Church and the Anglican Communion, 1940-1958. Price 10 cents each, $6.50 per 100.

16. The American Friends Service Committee issued a pamphlet, Race and Conscience in America, published by the University of Oklahoma Press. Single copy 50 cents. Write Alex Morisey, AFSC, 20 S. 12 St., Philadelphia, Pa. for quantity order rates.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1959

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting on Wednesday, January 6, 1960 from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the American Jewish Committee, Institute of Human Relations, 165 East 56 Street, New York 22, New York (Room 800 B).

Since this will be a luncheon meeting please call (PLaza 1-4000) or write to let us know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. The Brethren Service Commission of the Church of the Brethren suggested a number of proposals to the committee. One was a TV program on Puerto Rico, Our Associated Commonwealth, which might be similar to NBC's excellent program on Hawaii, Our Newest State. Inquiries will be made concerning such possibilities.

2. It was also suggested that a TV show, demonstrating how the Communists use news of segregation and racial discrimination for their anti-American propaganda among uncommitted peoples of other nations, might help counteract McCarthyism in the South. It was reported that Walter Cronkite had participated in a CBS film on this subject but that it might now be time to do another.

3. It was also suggested that a magazine like Commentary or The Reporter might be interested in an article on how this issue is covered in the Asian, African, European and Latin American press.

4. Dr. Douglas E. Jackson, Professor, Social Ethics at Perkins School of Theology, Dallas, Texas, reported a "widening gulf" between Southern clergy and their segregationist lay members following the Supreme Court's school integration decisions has resulted in a power struggle over racial policy. Segregationist lay groups are using names of churches in their titles even though those unofficial organizations are in open opposition to stated denominational policies.

It was suggested that material be prepared by various denominations for use in Southern church papers and magazines, protesting such segregationist actions. It was felt that it would be particularly helpful if Southern bishops and other top church leaders would help in arranging for such material to be used in their areas.

It was reported that the Catholic Diocesan press with four million circulation, and Catholic magazines, with twenty million circulation, are covering the desegregation issue very effectively with the help of the Catholic Press Service and the Catholic Interracial Council.

5. The Holston Conference of the Methodist Church, meeting in Knoxville, June 5, 1959, approved without opposition a recommendation that the Church refuse to let its buildings be used as private schools if public schools are closed by states to circumvent court orders to begin desegregation. (Note text of attached story on this action as reprinted from the Knoxville Area Human Relations Council Newsletter.)

6. Jonathan Daniels, editor of the News and Observer, Raleigh, N. C., made a speech to the Southern Historical Association in Atlanta, November 14, 1959, terming the past quarter century an "era of massive change" thoughout the region and adding that "the hope of all that is left of this century in the South is that we may recognize change as the basis for thinking, not sulking." It was suggested that the Southern Regional Council might be interested in reprinting this speech and sending it to Southern editors.

7. A publication, Love Of This Land, has been put out by the Christian Education Press to set forth the progress of the Negro in American life. Sample copies will be sent to CCD organizations. The Board of Christian Education and Publication, Evangelical and Reformed Church (United Church of Christ), 1505 Race Street, Philadelphia 2, Pennsylvania has 15,000 copies of the book available for organizations interested in it. Thousands of copies were sold through regular trade channels for resale at $1 per copy. The Christian Education Press is carrying this remaining stock at 18¢ per copy. Those interested in securing quantities should write to Mr. F. I. Sheeder, Executive Secretary, at the above address.

8. An interesting article, McCarthyism Under The Magnolias, by Wilma Dykeman and James Stokely, appeared in the July issue of The Progressive. The Southern Regional Council is interested in reprinting the article and would like to know if other organizations would care to join them. Cost of reprinting would be about $35 per thousand.

9. Jim Montgomery, in his column, "Georgia Business" in the Atlanta Constitution, November 5, 1959, wrote on "Challenge from Little Rock: Courage Can Save Schools," an interview with Boyd Ridgway, Executive Vice President of the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce. It is reported that Help Our Public Education (HOPE) in Atlanta is considering reprinting the article.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1960

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting on Wednesday, February 17, 1960 from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue (53rd St.), New York, New York.

Since this will be a luncheon meeting please call Mr. Fleischman at PLaza 1-4000, or write to him at 165 East 56 Street, New York 22, New York to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. Some of the cities mentioned as likely to come under desegregation orders this year are: Atlanta, Georgia; Miami, Tampa and Palm Beach, Florida; New Orleans, La.; Dallas, Houston, Forth Worth and Galveston, Texas; Richmond and several other Virginia cities. Committee members are urged to be alert to mass media possibilities of positive stories in these cities.

2. With regard to the economic impact of race on the South, it was suggested that all members of the committee subscribe to the Southern Regional Council's Leadership Reports, which contain fairly comprehensive economic data. The Twentieth Century Fund is considering doing a full scale project on the economic impact of the race problem on the South. The Southern Regional Council is preparing a shorter study on this to be done by Professor Donald Dewey of Duke University.

3. For Brotherhood Week, February 21 - 28, the National Conference of Christians and Jews is putting out a pamphlet entitled, "What You Can Do For Brotherhood." The Anti-Defamation League is putting out a program service bulletin for public schools. Copies will be sent to all CCD groups.

4. The article, McCarthyism Under the Magnolias, by Wilma Dykeman and James Stokely, will be reprinted by the Southern Regional Council and it was suggested that the agencies use it.

5. Challenge From Little Rock has been reprinted by HOPE (Help Our Public Education) in Atlanta and will be sent to all CCD agencies.

6. An Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity has just been formed by lay members and clergy. Other Protestant denominations, it was reported, are considering creation of similar groups, which are particularly needed in the South.

7. A national conference of local Catholic Interracial Councils has been set up and plans to encourage the formation of more local Councils in the South.

8. New South will carry an article by Rev. Will Campbell on "The Role of the Church in the South" and the Southern Regional Council will also publish an article by Neil Tarplee on the same subject.

9. The Senate sub-committee on Constitutional Rights wants to know if any organization is preparing a pamphlet on how the foreign press views the United States of America's desegregation difficulties.

10. The National Urban League celebrates its Golden Anniversary in 1960. It will carry an exciting illustrated special supplement in the January 17th Sunday issue of The New York Times and plans to distribute 250,000 additional reprints of the supplement. Agencies wanting quantities for distribution should contact Guichard Parris, National Urban League, 14 E. 48th Street, New York 17, N. Y. Sample copies are being sent to all CCD agencies.

12. The question of stimulating the religious press in the South against attempts of segregationists to use the names of churches in their titles will be considered by the Southern interagency conference, January 19.

13. The Southern Regional Council plans to reprint the speech by Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh, N.C. News and Observer, to the Southern Historical Association.

14. Contributions are being sought by"The Friends of P.D. East" to keep the Petal Paper in circulation. Those interested should write to Alfred Hassler, Treasurer, Box 48, Nyack, New York.

15. The "Desegregation Symposium" issue of the Notre Dame Lawyer will be distributed in January. Those interested in securing quantities for distribution to key persons should write to Dean Joseph O'Meara, Notre Dame Law School, Notre Dame, Indiana.

16. The National Broadcasting Company will carry, as a TV tribute to the Institute of Human Relations of the American Jewish Committee, Sunday, January 24, from 2 to 3 P.M. (E.S.T.), a play, "Destiny's Tot" adapted for television by S. Lee Pogostin from the book, "The Fifty Minute Hour" by Dr. Robert Lindner.

17. The forthcoming issue of the Interracial Review will deal primarily with juvenile delinquency. Those desiring to see a copy should write to Catholic Interracial Council, 20 Vesey Street, New York, N. Y.

18. The United Steelworkers of America, in cooperation with Pittsburgh's Carnegie Museum, have prepared a portable display, WE HUMANS, dealing with anthropological proofs of fallacies about race. The union also plans to prepare a film strip and color slides of the display for school use, as well as a discussion manual for group leaders. For use of the display or film strip in your area, write to John E. White, United Steelworkers of America, 1500 Commonwealth Building, Pittsburgh 22, Pennsylvania.

19. The publication date for Oceana Publication's new book, LET'S BE HUMAN, will be February 23rd, during Brotherhood Week. A flyer on the book is enclosed.

Respectfully submitted,

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1960

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting on Wednesday, March 23, 1960 from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Catholic Interracial Council, 20 Vesey Street, New York City. (Directions: 8th Ave. train to Chambers St.; BMT train to Cortland St.; Broadway-7th Ave. train to Park Pl.; or Lexington Ave. train to Fulton St.)

Since this will be a luncheon meeting please call Mr. Fleischman at PLaza 1-4000 or write to him at 165 East 56th Street, New York, N.Y., to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. The current issue of the Southern Economic Journal carries an article by Vanderbilt University Professor William H. Nichols on Southern Tradition and Regional Economic Progress.

2. The Anti-Defamation League is currently conducting a study on the role of leadership in the Little Rock situation. It will include a chronology, interviews with white and Negro leaders, a section on the role of the church, a log of incidents against the Negro children in integrated schools, the role of school leadership, and the pattern of race relations in Little Rock before Faubus.

3. The lunch-counter demonstrations in the South were discussed. It was agreed that the situation may presage a new step in the racial problems of the South. Apparently, as Harold Fleming suggests, there is a trend to "a shift in leadership and technique to the younger, more militant Negro group and to new flexible uses of non-violent protests." The arena is shifting from the courts to the market place as Negroes demand more than token integration.

It was reported that some national organizations are urging their local groups, both in the North and South, to make representations in behalf of lunch counter facilities to the national offices of variety store chains, such as Woolworth and Kress, and also to their local store managers, on a desegregated basis.

The American Civil Liberties Union supported, as an exercise of free speech, the "sit-in" protests of Negro college students at lunch counters which refused to serve them. The ACLU called the arrests of Raleigh, N.C. students for trespassing illegal and urged North Carolina Attorney General, Malcolm B. Seawell, to reconsider his statement that "the sit down strikes in restaurants in this state pose a serious threat to the peace and good order in the communities in which they occur" and that "the right of the owner of a private business to sell or refuse to sell to customers has been recognized by our State Supreme Court." (Seawell cited the case of Williams v. Howard Johnson's Restaurant, 268 Fed. Rep. 2d series, in which the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals stated that a privately operated restaurant is at liberty to deal with such persons as it might select and that the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments of the Federal Constitution do not operate to prevent its proprietor from excluding Negroes.)

The ACLU, in reply, noted the case of Freeman v. Retail Clerks Local 1207, decided by the Kings County Superior Court of the State of Washington, on December 9, 1959. This case is summarized in 28 Law Week 2311. In substance, the Court held, in upholding the right to picket on the sidewalks of a shopping center that, "the shopping center owner has contracted away his right to a personal use and occupancy." There have been similar lower court decisions in recent months. The U.S. Supreme Court spoke authoritatively in this field in Marsh v. Alabama, 326 U.S. 501, holding that persons could not be denied access to a company-owned town for the purpose of exercising their rights of freedom of speech and of the press (in that case the right to distribute religious literature). The Court said, "The more an owner, for his advantage, opens up his property for use by the public in general, the more do his rights become circumscribed by the statutory and constitutional rights of those who use it (at page 506)."

On the basis of this Supreme Court case, and others in the same field, the ACLU insisted that the shopping center arrests were illegal, and that a similar situation would apply in the case of a private storekeeper who has not asserted his allegedly absolute right under North Carolina law to bar a customer altogether but, after having invited him upon the premises as a potential purchaser of his wares, had determined by reason of color to exclude him from a particular department available to all other invited persons.

4. The United States National Student Association has established a two year Southern Student Human Relations Project, under a $60,000 grant from the Field Foundation. The Project will hold seminars in the South during the summers of 1960 and 1961 to provide an educational experience in depth for a limited number of selected student leaders. It will also hold metropolitan, state and area conferences to bring together students from various campuses, both to discuss the questions of race relations in general and to confront the problems of attitudes, policies and actions on their campuses and in their community and states.

Campus conferences and programs similar to the inter-campus meetings but dealing mainly with the students of one campus, will place emphasis on programs such as human relations committees, Brotherhood Week, interracial work camp and discussion groups. Students from all interested organizations - Student Governments, Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., Student Christian Associations, Newman Clubs, etc., will be encouraged to cooperate. Those interested in more details should contact Constance Curry, Southern Project Director, 41 Exchange Place, S.E., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

5. Enclosed please find copy of a brochure, "The Last Citizen," which describes an eighteen program radio series produced at Purdue University by radio station WBAA under a grant from the National Association of Educational Broadcasters. The NAEB holds broadcast rights to these programs and the tapes will be furnished by them for $5.00 per tape for non-commercial use. Those interested in securing copies of the tapes are urged to get in touch with the series' producer, Mr. E. Walt Richter, Station WBAA, Purdue University, Lafayette, Indiana.

6. The Southern Regional Council has just reprinted McCarthyism Under the Magnolias, by Wilma Dykeman and James Stokely. A copy is enclosed.

7. Another reprint available from the Southern Regional Council is The Agony of a Southern Minister, by Ralph McGill, which appeared in the September 27, 1959 New York Times Magazine. Copies are being sent to all CCD agencies.

8. The American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League are reprinting The Human Background of the Civil Rights Issue by Anthony Lewis, which appeared in the February 14th issue of the New York Times Magazine. Copies will be available from either organization at $7.50 per 100.

9. Cracking the Color Line, illustrating non-violent direct action methods of eliminating racial discrimination, has been published by the Congress of Racial Equality, 38 Park Row, New York 38, New York. Copies of this pamphlet have been sent to all CCD agencies.

10. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has just published No Harvest for the Reaper, the Story of the Migratory Agricultural Worker in the United States. Single copies are 50¢; prices for quantity orders are available upon request to NAACP, 20 W. 40th St., New York 18, New York.

11. A Supplement to Segregation and Desegregation - a digest of recent research 1956-1959, by Melvin M. Tumin, has just been published by the Anti-Defamation League. It contains digests of selected materials from professional journals, theses, unpublished manuscripts, studies, and papers delivered at professional meetings on various aspects of segregation and desegregation. Price of the 32-page supplement is 60¢.

12. A handsome illustrated pamphlet, Can We Afford to Close Our Public Schools? has been issued by 14 Southern educators. Copies may be secured by writing to Mr. J. Bryant Kirkland, Dean of School of Education, North Carolina State College, Raleigh, N.C.

13. Enclosed find A Changing City - New Issues and New Relationships, by James R. Dumpson, New York City Welfare Commissioner. It was reprinted by the American Jewish Committee from the February 1960 issue of CRISIS, official NAACP magazine. Copies are available at 5¢ each; $3.50 per 100.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1960

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting on Friday, April 29, 1960 from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the National Council of Jewish Women, 1 West 47th Street, New York City.

Since this will be a luncheon meeting please call Mr. Fleischman at PLaza 1-4000 or write to him at 165 East 56th Street, New York, N.Y., to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity has accepted our invitation to participate in the CCD Mass Media Committee. The society issued a statement backing the Negro student lunch-counter demonstrations.

2. Marvin Rich, Community Relations Director of the Congress of Racial Equality, (CORE) reported that the lunch-counter demonstrations had erupted spontaneously. They had spread like wildfire and had solidified many Negro communities in the South. In North Carolina, Virginia and Texas, he noted, the sit-ins have served to lessen the communications gap between whites and Negroes. While the sit-ins have been well reported, both in the South and throughout the nation, not enough analysis of their meaning has appeared in the nation's press, radio and television. It was suggested that church and union publications might also be urged to give more attention to such analytical material.

3. It was reported that Houston, Galveston and Dallas are likely to follow San Antonio's example and end lunch-counter segregation. The national variety store chains, it was indicated, would be willing to integrate their stores in the South if both the chains and other similar establishments would desegregate at the same time. They are fearful, however, that publicity on such desegregation might bring counter-actions by segregationists.

4. Woolworth's annual report noted that lunch counters are the largest dollar producers to the stores, not just a convenience to the shoppers. Many of the stores were planning this year to produce more elaborate meals, rather than hot dogs and sandwiches. While figures on the boycotts are not available, observers noted that when pickets were at the stores, the boycott has been about 90 per cent effective in Negro neighborhoods, about 20 per cent effective in downtown areas, and about 10 or 15 per cent effective in all-white neighborhoods.

5. Life magazine was reported to be planning an article on a student body of a particular Negro college, probing into the whys and hows of the demonstrations. It was suggested that this case study approach might be a useful one for TV networks to use.

6. WNEW-TV will carry a half-hour documentary on the sit-downs, narrated by Harry Golden on Sunday, April 3rd. It will include several Negro students and a white Southerner who posed as a Negro for several weeks to find out how degrading segregation really is. The David Susskind "Open End" show on WNTA-TV April 3rd, will have Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr.; segregationist editor, James Kilpatrick of The Richmond, Va., News Leader; and a number of Negro students as participants. The ABC network is planning a documentary on the Southern situation and CBS is working on a documentary on the Negro in the North.

7. Arthur Krock's column in The New York Times on the illegality of sit-downs, was mentioned. It was reported that a group of prominent lawyers plan to write a letter to The Times answering Krock.

8. The March 21 issue of The Presbyterian Outlook contains a Protestant-Jewish-Roman Catholic conversation on the sit-ins, plus editorials and articles dealing with church support for the sit-ins. Copies are available in quantity from The Presbyterian Outlook, 512 E. Main St., Richmond 19, Va., at $10.00 per 100 copies or $80.00 per 1,000 copies.

9. The indictment of Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr., has been viewed by Negro students and adults as an attempt to weaken their movements for equality by discrediting their leadership. It was suggested that statements by religious and civic groups supporting Reverend King might be helpful.

10. The New York Times article of March 18th by Claude Sitton on Baker County, Georgia, gave the human side of the picture about this county whose population is more than 60% Negro, yet has not a single Negro registered to vote. It was suggested that if organizations could dig up information along these lines it would help to alert other newspapers, magazines, radio and TV outlets to cover similar stories.

11. Georgia's Commission on School Problems, set up by the state legislature, will report to the legislature by May 1st. Of the 1,620 witnesses it heard, the majority in 5 districts in south Georgia, where Negroes generally outnumber whites, were for closing schools rather than desegregate. The majority in 4 districts in north Georgia, where the Negro population is smaller, were for local option. The other district was about evenly divided. Throughout the state, cities generally supported local option. The Federal court has not yet set a date for desegregation of Atlanta schools, but it is expected to be September, 1960. New Orleans has been ordered to submit a plan for school desegregation by May 1st, but little has happened as yet.

12. It was reported that the White House Conference on Youth would have many speakers and many of its sessions dealing with school desegregation and the equal availability of all facilities to young people of all races.

13. Southern Traditions and Regional Progress, by Prof. William H. Nichols of Vanderbilt University, will be published April 30th by the University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N.C., at $5.00 per copy. The book provides useful economic facts for intergroup relations agencies.

14. The Day They Changed Their Minds, an article about the Negro student sit-ins, has just been published by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Sample copies are being sent to all CCD agencies. For quantity rates, write Henry Lee Moon, NAACP, 20 W. 40th St., New York, N.Y.

15. Student heads of six Negro colleges in Atlanta inserted An Appeal For Human Rights as an ad in the Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution. The ad was so effective that Gov. Vandiver insisted that "obviously, it was not written by students," and that it was not written in this country. One of the student leaders agreed that it had a foreign inspiration -- in Christ's teachings in Palestine 2,000 years ago. The Southern Regional Council, National Students Association and Young Women's Christian Association are interested in reprinting the "Appeal" which would cost no more than $20.00 per 1,000. Agencies interested should send their orders to Harold Fleming, SRC, 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E., Atlanta 3, Ga.

16. Human Background of the Civil Rights Issue, by Anthony Lewis, has just been reprinted from The New York Times Magazine, February 14, 1960, by the Community Relations Service, Institute of Human Relations, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, N.Y. and the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22, N.Y. A copy is enclosed. Quantity rates are $3.50 per 100.

17. The World of Wonderful Difference, an illustrated book by Hans Guggenheim blending light verse and charming illustrations on the value of difference among people, has just been published by Friendly House in cooperation with the ADL. Price $2.50 per copy. Flyers are being sent to all CCD agencies.

18. A Southern View of the South, by Harold C. Fleming, has just appeared in the April 3, 1960 issue of The New York Times Magazine. Your chairman thinks this article describing the revolutionary changes now occurring in the South one well worth reprinting. Agencies are asked to contact the Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E., Atlanta 3, Ga., if they want copies.

19. Addendum: A Five Year Report on Desegregation in the Washington, D.C. Schools, by Carl F. Hansen, Superintendent of Schools, Washington, D.C., has just been published by the Anti-Defamation League. It describes the progress of the Washington schools success in changing from a segregated to a desegregated system. The pamphlet sells for 35¢ a copy and sample copies are being sent to all CCD agencies.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING FRIDAY, APRIL 29, 1960

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting on Wednesday, May 25, 1960 from 11:30 A.M. to 2 P.M. at the National Community Relations Advisory Council, 55 West 42nd Street, New York City.

Since this will be a luncheon meeting please call Mr. Fleischman at PLaza 1-4000 or write to him at 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, New York, to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. The American Civil Liberties Union reported that a group of prominent lawyers plan to write a letter to The New York Times, correcting Arthur Krock's column alleging that the sit-ins and picketing at shopping centers were illegal. They will cite the Supreme Court decision under which the arrest of a group of Southern students in North Carolina was dismissed.

2. The report of the 1959 hearings of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights contain much documentary evidence to substantiate denials of Negro voting rights. It was suggested that organizations might contact editors in their communities to urge them to publish articles similar to The New York Times story of March 18 by Claude Sitton on Baker County, Georgia. That county has more than 60% Negro population, yet not a single Negro is registered to vote.

3. CBS-TV will carry an Ed Murrow show on school integration in Georgia on May 27.

4. The National Educational Television and Radio Center is preparing to produce a series of 8 or more one-hour films on desegregation, North and South. The programs will be carried on the 47 educational TV stations now in operation, and on public service time on commercial TV stations in cities without educational TV outlets. Representatives of the Center will attend the next Mass Media Committee meeting to discuss the project with our committee.

5. "A Southern View of the South," by Harold C. Fleming, has just been reprinted from the April 3 issue of The New York Times Magazine. Copies are available from the Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E., Atlanta, Georgia, at $5.00 per 100. Sample copies will be sent to all CCD agencies.

6. Charles Oldham, national chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality, reported that the Southwestern regional director of Woolworth, based in St. Louis, had agreed to promote desegregation of facilities in Texas, Oklahoma and Southern Missouri. After evidences of good faith had been shown by desegregation in San Antonio, Galveston and Dallas, CORE withdrew its Woolworth picket lines in St. Louis, Mo. In another development, the McCrory chain desegregated its stores from Charleston, W. Va. to St. Louis, Mo., including Louisville and Lexington, Ky.

It was reported that the sit-in demonstrations have slackened in the South as arrests have mounted. But picket lines and boycotts in the rest of the country are increasing. Parenthetically, it was noted that most Southern states had no laws against integrated service. Segregation has been the custom, but not the law. It was anticipated that the summer months would see an increase in tensions.

A study is being prepared by CORE on the economic effects of the boycotts. One store in St. Louis reported having lost $800 in one day, as compared to a comparable day when there was no boycott. Stockholders plan to attend Woolworth's annual meeting at Watertown, New York on May 18 to ask about the effects of the current policies and to urge management to order desegregation of all Woolworth facilities. The Commission on Ecumenical Mission and Relations of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S. holds 1,500 shares and will have a representative at Woolworth's annual meeting to move for a policy of non-segregation.

7. In Georgia, the Sibley Commission on School Problems, set up by the legislature, split 11 to 8 with the majority voting for local option. (Justice Hooper set Sept. 1961 as the date on which desegregation of Atlanta schools is to take place, thus giving the Georgia legislature one more chance to enact local option legislation.)

8. Knoxville, Tennessee has asked the federal court for permission to start integration with the stair-step method, going from the 12th grade on down--one grade a year.

9. The New Orleans school board polled white and Negro parents on whether the public schools should be closed rather than accept even token desegregation. While the total vote for both races showed 14,114 in favor of keeping schools open and 12,978 for closing them, white parents voted overwhelmingly to close the schools. 12,299 whites voted to close the schools and 2,707 for keeping them open "even though a small amount of integration is necessary." The Negro ballots were 11,407 for integrated schools to 679 against. The board has indicated that it will follow the mandate of the white parents and accept closed schools rather than desegregate. The school board had been instructed by Judge J. Skelly Wright of the Federal District Court to submit a desegregation plan on May 16.

10. In Houston, Texas, voters will go to the polls June 4 to express their views on school desegregation. A 1957 state law prohibits the granting of state financial aid to school districts which integrate classes without approval of the district's residents. The federal district court has ordered both Houston and Dallas to desegregate their schools. Houston has been ordered to submit an integration plan by June 1. If Houston voters reject desegregation and schools are desegregated because of a federal court order, a test of the Texas law on financial aid will take place.

11. It was reported that when 2,000 Negro students and others marched on the Orangeburg, South Carolina city hall, the news was barely reported in Northern papers. It was suggested that perhaps wire service editors in the South were not sending on such information, and that it might be useful for Northern editors to request details of such information from the wire services.

12. The law suit against The New York Times by Birmingham, Alabama's city commissioners, as a result of Harrison Salisbury's articles, was reported. It was suggested that other key newspapers check both on The Times story and the Birmingham officials' replies and do features on the subject, together with editorials in defense of the free press and the right of free comment. Robert Hughes, director of the Alabama Commission on Human Relations, 1218 Comer Building, Birmingham 3, Alabama, would be available to provide information to newspapers which requested it. It was also suggested that it would be useful to approach wire services and major columnists to deal with this situation.

13. The Congress of Racial Equality is publishing a 16 page pamphlet entitled "Sit-Ins: The Students' Report," with a foreword by Lillian Smith. Copies of the pamphlet, which contains case stories of the students' experiences, are available from CORE, 38 Park Row, New York 38, New York, at 25¢ per copy, $10 per hundred. Sample copies will be sent to all CCD agencies.

14. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has just published a 16-page comic booklet on voting and registration, entitled "The Street Where You Live." Single copies cost 10¢. For quantity rates, write to Henry Lee Moon, NAACP, 20 West 40th Street, New York, New York. Sample copies will be sent to all CCD agencies.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1960

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting on Friday, June 24, 1960 from 11:30 to 2 P.M. at the National Conference of Christians and Jews, 43 West 57th Street, New York, N.Y.

Since this will be a luncheon meeting please call Mr. Fleischman at Plaza 1-4000 or write to him at 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, New York, to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. Ray Rogers of Andover Productions, Inc., reported that his firm has available radio tapes and films of the sit-ins in the South. Material concerning these are enclosed.

2. Warren Kraetzer, vice-president of the National Education Television and Radio Center, reported that NETRC is preparing to produce a series of 8 one-hour films on desegregation, North and South. A budget of $160,000 is needed for production and distribution to the 47 educational TV stations now in operation, plus audio-visual use by university film libraries and service organizations. Help from interested organizations is requested. Their plans call for films dealing with desegregation problems in Boston, Mass; Greensboro, North Carolina; St. Louis, Mo.; Detroit, Michigan, and Birmingham, Ala. Advisory boards in each city would help enforce an accurate and balanced presentation in the films. Enclosed is fuller information about the films from NETRC.

Those at the meeting praised the idea of the film series, but warned that stereotypes must be avoided. It was indicated that the CCD groups had no uncommitted funds that might cover the full costs of so large a project, and wondered whether even token support might be helpful. The chairman agreed to set up a committee to consider the problem further.

3. Carl Creger, a white Little Rock Central High School student, and his father, Ralph Creger, chief train dispatcher in Little Rock for the Rock Island railroad, have written a manuscript, "An American Success Story," which deals with the story of the Negro in this country. The manuscript started as a history assignment for the 17 year-old student, and wound up as both a study of the history of the American Negro, and the reasons why a white son and father in Little Rock came to support integration. Harold Fleming felt that while the manuscript needs considerable editing, it could serve a very useful purpose if it could be published as a small paperback book and distributed to high-school students, particularly those in the South. It was agreed that efforts would be made to contact publishers to see whether or not they would be interested in such a manuscript.

4. The Southern Regional Council has just put out a report on lunch-counter desegregation in Corpus Christi, Galveston and San Antonio, Texas, by Kenneth Norland, chairman of the Sociology and Anthropology department of Randolph-Macon Woman's College. The report deals with the patterns of solutions developed in those areas. Those desiring to furnish copies of this report to key people in Southern areas should send names and addresses of the latter to Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue N.E., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

5. It was suggested that business magazines and business editors of daily papers might be induced to write first-hand reports of the economic effects of the sit-ins in the South. It was also suggested that college editors might increase their coverage of the problem.

The situation in Nashville and Dallas, where desegregation of lunch counter facilities took place without publicity, created problems of reporting to other areas on how successful action was secured, as a stimulus to action in other areas. The SRC is preparing an analysis of press blackouts of the sit-ins.

6. The American Civil Liberties Union is preparing a statement on abuses of academic freedom in connection with the sit-ins. Key community leaders throughout the nation are being sought to sign it.

7. Judge I. Skelly Wright, of the Federal District Court, has ordered the New Orleans school board to desegregate its schools in September 1960. Archbishop Rummel has announced that the Catholic Parochial schools will be desegregated no later than the New Orleans public schools. If the New Orleans public schools are closed rather than desegregated, it is not yet clear what the parochial schools there will do.

8. In Prince Edward County, Virginia, where all the public schools are closed, 1500 Negro children have had no schooling during the past year, and the white children--in makeshift private schools--have had inferior schooling. It was suggested that it would be useful if magazines, daily papers, TV and radio could focus on this situation in terms of the breakdown of educational standards, even for the white students.

9. Rev. Robert E. Hughes, executive director of the Alabama Council on Human Relations, reports that the Salisbury articles in the New York Times on Alabama have had a healthy effect in that people in Birmingham revealed a sensitivity to what others think or say about them, and the subject of violence--which usually is avoided--came up for discussion. He insists that far from being an unbalanced picture, the Salisbury articles "did not go far enough." Even with the exposé, he adds, the Klan burned some 30 crosses over Birmingham Friday midnight, May 13, according to an AP count.

10. The Southern Regional Council has just printed an article by Rev. Cornelius C. Tarplee of the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church on "The Church in Areas of Racial Tension." Copies will be sent to all CCD agencies and are available from SRC.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING FRIDAY, JUNE 24, 1960
(plus additional notes)

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 28, 1960 from 11:30 A.M. to 2 P.M. at the Institute of Human Relations, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22.

Since this will be a luncheon meeting, please call Mr. Fleischman at PLaza 1-4000 or write to him at the above address to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. An American Success Story, written by Carl Creger, a white student at Little Rock Central High School and his father, Ralph, deals with Negro progress in America. It will be published as a book by Lyle Stuart, Inc., 225 Lafayette Street, New York, N.Y. CCD agencies interested in promotion of the above book should get in touch with the publisher at the above address.

2. Although Houston, Tex. residents voted in August by 3 to 1 to continue school segregation, Federal Judge Ben C. Connally ordered the School Board to integrate its schools a grade each year for 12 years, starting this fall. A similar situation prevails in New Orleans, La., where Judge I. Skelly Wright has ordered the School Board to desegregate its schools in September, 1960. Efforts to improve news coverage of the problem in these cities will be attempted.

3. Despite the belief that Negro student sit-ins at segregated lunch counters would diminish during the summer, they continued with increasing success. As this is written (August 8), stores in 28 Southern communities have desegregated their lunch-counter facilities. A report by the Southern Regional Council, noting that stores which desegregated suffered no adverse economic or public relations effects, was carried in the August 7 issue of The New York Times. Copies of the report will be sent to CCD agencies.

4. A statement by Raleigh, N.C. ministers on racial tensions in the South is enclosed.

5. The Nashville Community Relations Conference, 2001 Division St., Nashville 4, Tenn., has just published Settling a Sit-In by Wallace Westfeldt. Write to the above address for sample copies.

6. School Desegregation: the First Six Years, a question and answer booklet which also contains a map of desegregated counties in the South, has just been published by the Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E., Atlanta 3, Ga. It is a splendid introduction to the problem.

7. A Conversation in Alabama by Nat Hentoff appears in the July 16, 1960 issue of the New Yorker magazine. It deals with the repressive climate of opinion in Montgomery, Alabama in explicit fashion.

8. With the election campaign moving into high gear, the Fair Campaign Practices Committee has just issued Fair Play in Politics. It defines a smear, gives brief case studies of smears used in recent election campaigns and a code of fair campaign practices. Copies are available from the Fair Campaign Practices Committee, 8 East 66th Street, New York 21, N.Y. Another pamphlet on the same subject, Prejudice and Politics, has just been published by the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22, N.Y. Copies will be sent to all CCD agencies.

9. What is Prejudice? by Marie Jahoda, Ph.D., has been reprinted from Look by the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League. Copies are being sent to CCD agencies.

10. People Aren't Born Prejudiced by Ian Stevenson, M.D., has been reprinted from Parents Magazine. Copies are being sent to CCD agencies.

11. A new monthly magazine, Current, 177 East 71 Street, New York 21, N.Y., contains a listing of pamphlets available free to readers. CCD groups willing to provide free copies of their material on desegregation are invited to send sample copies to the magazine.

12. Ten Myths of Racial Integration has just been published by the American Jewish Congress. Copies are being sent to CCD agencies.

13. The United Steelworkers of America, 1500 Commonwealth Building, Pittsburgh 22, Pa., has just published Housing In Your Town -- What You Can Do About It. Copies of this excellent pamphlet will be sent to all CCD agencies.

14. Christian Education News, published by the United Church of Christ, 1505 Race Street, Philadelphia 2, Pa., carries considerable material about race relations. New Sunday School lessons for the denomination's Council for Christian Social Action teaches love for all racial groups. Material goes from nursery school to fourth-grade levels.

15. The one-hour film, Destiny's Tot, explores some of the psychological causes of bigotry, including various influences in the home and the community which give rise to anti-social attitudes. A Guide for Group Discussions has just been prepared, and is available with the film from the American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, N.Y.

16. Emotional Aspects of School Desegregation, a 48-page pamphlet about the psychological factors in school desegregation, is available at 50¢ per copy from the Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry, 104 East 25th Street, New York 10, N.Y.

17. The National Educational Television and Radio Center, the network headquarters for the 48 non-commercial TV stations in the USA, plans to produce eight one-hour programs, each devoted to a specific issue involved in the question of racial desegregation. The series will objectively study Birmingham, Alabama; Greensboro, N.C.; St. Louis, Mo.; Detroit, Mich.; and Boston, Mass. By examining and comparing many different facets of Negro life in each of these cities and then by interpreting the results in the light of probable future trends, the series would indicate the nature and extent of segregation as it exists in the North as well as the South, the attitudes which must be recognized or changed, the obstacles which must be overcome and the possible solutions to the problem.

As conceived, the series should provide a means of achieving a better understanding between the races and thereby help to create the atmosphere for an orderly and reasonable solution to this complex social problem burdening out nation. The major topics to be covered in the eight programs are:

(a) The Neighborhood - Where the Negroes originally come from, where the Negro districts are located, where "break-outs" are occurring, existence of tension areas, percentage of Negro to white population and its effect on the problem.

(b) The Home - Fears of whites which create resistance to Negro movement into white neighborhoods.

(c) The Schools - Reaction to the 1954 Supreme Court decision.

(d) The Wage Earner - Hiring and employment practices and policies in industries.

(e) Business, Professions and Higher Education — Survey of the successful Negroes in the community.

(f) Laws and Customs - Survey of existing state and local laws and ordinances, as well as tacit policies which affect discrimination.

(g) The Social Work Problem - The Negro who is a public charge, economic and social reasons for his prevalence and efforts made to remove him from welfare rolls.

(h) Communication - A study of the opportunities and lack thereof for whites to become acquainted with Negroes in other than menial positions and its effect on white prejudice or compassion toward the Negro.

The series will be produced through the facilities of Station KETC in St. Louis, sponsored by the NETRC in New York City. CCD agencies interested in cooperating with the above project are urged to get in touch with Warren Kraetzer, National Educational Television and Radio Center, 10 Columbus Circle, New York 19, N.Y.

A STATEMENT BY RALEIGH MINISTERS - February 26, 1960

In view of the continuing racial tensions and crises in our region, we as ministers cannot be silent about our convictions. This unhealthy situation must be faced constructively and with a positive program of understanding and just action. The issue of discriminatory service at lunch counters is only a symbol of the many problems which need to be faced openly and frankly. These problems deal with the right duties, and dignity of all free people in our republic. They are moral and spiritual as well as political and social issues. As Christian men, therefore, we must bear witness to the truth as we see it.

We speak in a spirit of deep humility. We speak in penitence for our own failures. We make no claim to possess infallible solutions to these problems for which we all share the responsibility. We confess that the problems of discrimination within our own churches have not been solved. While respecting the right of individual opinion, we nevertheless believe that all such varying opinions must be subjected to examination in the light of the Word of God as revealed in Christ and witnesses to through Holy Scripture. For us, this matter is not primarily one of social custom but one of allegiance to God's Word through Jesus Christ and His Church. It is not primarily a matter for legal consideration and technicality but for Christian faith, decision, and action. We believe that we must without delay face these issues openly and voluntarily in order to decrease prejudice, hatred, and suffering. We are convinced that our problems must be faced and solved in the spirit and atmosphere of Christ-like love, understanding, and tolerant planning before other crises arise.

We are convinced that the problems of discrimination cannot be solved apart from Christian principles. We affirm that the following relevant teachings from the Bible are basic to the solution of both our church and our community problems. (1) That God created all men in His own image with equal dignity, giving no superiority to any one race or group of people by nature or worth, but ordaining that they should dwell together as brothers, with justice, decency, and humility in all human relationships. (2) That God offers all men equally -- all classes, races, and nations - the same Lord and Savior and the same promise of redemption. (3) That God especially calls all people who accept Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior to transcend all human barriers and to live as new creatures in love, obedience, and service for His glory.

Therefore, in the light of these basic principles, we invite all Christians and the community at large to join with us in the following: (1) That we support leaders of Raleigh's civic, business, governmental, and religious life in opening and using every possible channel of communication for discussion and understanding of the problems and needs of all races and citizens. (2) That we encourage individuals and the public to refuse to participate in physical or verbal violence and name-calling. (3) That we commend students and all other persons who use orderly and non-violent means in a forgiving spirit to express their views on the practices of discrimination. (4) That we uphold freedom of speech for all persons, and urge that all of us learn to disagree agreeably over differences for conscience's sake while we search for a solution to our mutual problems. (5) That we urge prompt steps be taken which give opportunity and service to persons as persons in all community relationships such as worship, education, business and employment regardless of race, creed, or color.

We call upon the community of Raleigh to be fair-minded -- to make the name of Raleigh appreciated for its good human relations and friendliness. We feel that Christ would refuse no man food if he were hungry; no child education if he wanted to learn; and no person fellowship if he sought to worship. We believe that Jesus would open the door to every man who knocked. Therefore, we call upon every person to seek divine strength and guidance in leading our churches and community to obey God rather than man.

SUMMARY OF MEETING OF CONSULTATIVE CONFERENCE ON DESEGREGATION, MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE
NOVEMBER 21, 1960

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting on Thursday, January 5, 1961 from 11:30 A.M. to 2 P.M. at the National Community Relations Advisory Council, 55 West 42nd Street, New York City. Since this will be a luncheon meeting, please call Mr. Fleischman at Plaza 1-4000 or write to him at 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, N.Y. to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. Sally G. Swing, information officer of UNESCO, offered sample copies (enclosed) of the UNESCO COURIER issue on Racism to CCD agencies, with the hope that these agencies would order quantities for distribution to their key people. Quantity rates are as follows: 10 to 99 copies, 27¢ each; 100 to 499 copies, 24¢ each; 500 to 1000 copies, 21¢ each; more than 1,000 copies, 18¢ each. Please send orders to UNESCO Publications Center, 801 Third Avenue, New York 22, N.Y.

2. UNESCO is publishing a series of books on the race question in modern science, and on the race question and religion. A list of UNESCO Publications can be had by writing to the above address.

3. The situation in regard to school desegregation in New Orleans was discussed at great length. It was reported that the board of the Greater New Orleans Federation of Churches had adopted the following statement:

"The Board of the Greater New Orleans Federation of Churches, meeting on November 15, 1960, to give prayerful thought to the present public school crisis in New Orleans respectfully addresses the member churches of the Federation and the entire population of this area.

Speaking in Christian love and forbearance, we note with deep appreciation the degree of calmness in which the people of New Orleans are facing the present crisis and would call upon all citizens, and especially all those of the Judeo-Christian faith, to continue to exercise calmness and to deplore all acts and destructive attitudes which are prompted by hatred and ill will.

Although the legal angles in this conflict will be settled by the duly constituted authorities, the emotions which divide men may linger for many years unless men of goodwill work to develop understanding, sympathy and Christian love.

In these times when our emotions can do much to retard or advance human relations it is essential that our churches, and all those who are interested in a better community and world, practice and teach good will.

Therefore, we would urge that all citizens:

(1) pray earnestly for all those who are involved in the present crisis, and for all those in authority;
(2) entrust the legal struggle to the courts;

(3) be guided by reason and refuse to be guided by emotional thinking;
(4) respect the law and those who enforce it;
(5) and have confidence that our people can and will, through God's grace, work out a good issue for this crisis (and other problems which beset us).

This statement is sent to the member congregations of the Greater New Orleans Federation of Churches in the belief that the will of God and the message of the Gospel can be operative in the world only through the actions of those who profess allegiance to His Kingdom."

4. Editorial notes from some of the nation's leading Southern newspapers on the school crisis in New Orleans follow :

TIMES-PICAYUNE, New Orleans, La.
"Violence, it seems to us, yields nothing but loss for everybody and no gain to anybody. It profits not one bit the cause of those who participate, and obviously there is nothing but loss in it for the youngsters who skipped school. Uncontrolled actions of this kind slow up normal activities of the city and place an unreasonable strain on the hard-worked police force. They create serious antagonisms among the people and give the city a black-eye with outsiders."

JOURNAL, Winston-Salem, N.C.
"An important victory will have been won if New Orleans' authorities can keep the lid on the seething cauldron of hate and violence. If the situation reaches the point where the armed power of the federal government must be employed to prevent mob rule, it will be proof that the lesson of Little Rock was in vain."

THE CONSTITUTION, Atlanta, Ga.
"Atlanta and Georgia have watched New Orleans and Louisiana closely. We have seen again that Federal court orders cannot be evaded. The first day of the Louisiana crisis is over and the schools were desegregated but not closed. That state's chief loss has been confined to a loss of dignity and prestige.
"Georgia can avoid that loss, with its subsequent damage to the state's development, if the legislature will pass in January the laws that inevitably must come...those recommended by the Sibley commission. If we do not do this, the danger remains that Georgia may not be as lucky as Louisiana."

THE POST, Washington, D.C.
"Interposition is no more valid in Louisiana than when it was proposed and discarded in Virginia. The State of Louisiana cannot simultaneously be part of the Federal Union and be its own judge of what Federal laws it will choose to respect. That issue was decided at Appomattox. The outcome of the current Battle of New Orleans over school desegregation is as certain as the fact that Andrew Jackson won a victory at Chalmette 145 years ago."

THE GAZETTE, Little Rock, Ark.
"The reputation of the South is suffering grave damage once again and the reputation of the United States in a shrunken world will suffer even more. In the continuing struggle for the minds and loyalties of men everywhere, the United States will be encumbered with the memory of what cannot be merely a regional disgrace. Nations and regions, like individuals, live by their reputations."

5. The Fellowship of Reconciliation is visiting with the parents of Negro children attending desegregated schools and greeting cards are being sent by more than 1,000 Harvard students to the children. It was suggested that organizations might well contact their Louisiana members to urge them to write to Governor Davis protesting against his actions and to support the maintenance of open public schools.

6. The Congress of Racial Equality, 38 Park Row, New York 38, N.Y., has initiated the enclosed petition to President Eisenhower, urging him to use his moral leadership on Bill of Rights Day, December 15th, to call upon the people of New Orleans and Louisiana to accept school integration quietly and peacefully.

7. It was suggested that the Governors' Conference on Civil Rights might be interested in having a group of governors reply to Governor Davis' telegram warning of "creeping federalism" in New Orleans school integration.

8. The American Friends Service Committee has appointed Helen Baker, American Friends Service Committee, Box 463, Farmville, Va., as director of a community relations program in Prince Edward County. A report on Prince Edward County will be sent by the AFSC to all CCD agencies.

Securing national publicity about Prince Edward County and the national implications of closed schools there is extremely important. Agencies are urged to explore the possibility of stories in major national publications and TV networks.

9. While the state legislature in Louisiana has not changed its laws dealing with aid to dependent children, 60% of the children who were cut off the welfare rolls have now been put back, due to pressure from the Federal government and interested citizens.

10. It was reported that 125 cities in the South and border states have desegregated their lunch counter facilities. There are an additional 35 cities where there have been demonstrations, but where desegregation has not yet been accomplished. The Committee on Racial Equality reported that it would like to have help in reaching the management of the variety store chains to induce them to make plans for opening some facilities in the hard-core states of the South, i.e. Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi; and also to use the influence of the chains to arrange that legal proceedings be dropped against those students whose trials are still to come.

11. The National Broadcasting Company will carry an hour-long television documentary on Tuesday evening, December 20 dealing with the sit-ins in Nashville and the economic boycott in Fayette County, Tenn. Agencies in the South were urged to contact their NBC TV affiliates to carry the program.

12. Look magazine (January 3rd issue, on newsstands Dec. 20) will carry an article on what white students have been doing on the sit-ins. Time Inc. is shooting documentary material on the sit-ins for ABC-TV.

13. The Supreme Court decision, referring back to the Federal Courts for trial the gerrymandering of Tuskegee by the Georgia legislature, raises the question of a reversal by the Supreme Court of its previous refusal to accept jurisdiction in cases dealing with political boundaries.

14. A Federal district court has forbidden the Americus, Georgia school board to bar white children from the local high school because their parents are members of the Koinonia community, a religious fellowship which believes in non-violence and racial equality as Christian concepts. Judge Bootle ruled that the school board's action in rejecting the students was "state action within the meaning of the 14th amendment." Pointing out that the school board has rejected the students because of "anticipated trouble from other students as a result of community resentment against Koinonia Farm," he noted that the reason for rejecting them was the "religious and social beliefs of themselves, their parents and the other residents of Koinonia Farm. This will not do." Incidentally, the three children are now attending the Americus High School and a goodly number of other Americus students have gone out of their way to make friendly overtures. Look magazine is considering a story on this situation.

15. During the recent election campaign the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity drafted a statement, signed by 25 religious and civic leaders, calling upon Vice-President Nixon and Senator Kennedy to affirm that, if elected, each would refuse to participate in segregated housing, public accommodations, or worship. While no public statement was made by either candidate, Senator Kennedy indicated that if elected, he would be willing to issue such a statement at an appropriate time.

16. Lillian Smith has been asked to write an article for Redbook magazine concerning how and why parents have placed their children in integrated schools in such places as Little Rock and New Orleans.

17. CBS carried a remarkable documentary TV show on the migrant workers, titled "Harvest of Shame," on November 25, with Edward R. Murrow as the narrator. The show appealed to viewers to push for action to eliminate the migrants' shameful conditions. A follow-up on this program will appear on the American Broadcasting Company TV network, a dramatic show about migrant labor, "Down the Road," on Sunday, December 18, from 11:30 A.M. to 12 noon, EST. Among the sponsors of the show, which commemorates Universal Human Rights Day, are the American Jewish Committee, the Industrial Union Department of the AFL-CIO, and the National Sharecroppers Fund.

18. The National Conference of Christians and Jews, 43 West 57th Street, New York 19, New York, has put out the following new publications, which are available free in single copies from all NCCJ offices:

Human Relations and Audio-Visual Materials--revised edition, by Jean D. Grambs.

Books for Brotherhood--1960 edition, an annotated list of books for adults and children.

To: The Librarian, human relations program suggestions directed to the librarian.

General Brotherhood Week Folder, announcement of Brotherhood Week, February 19-26, 1961 and suggested programs for schools, churches and synagogues and community groups.

The American City: Its Human Relations Future, reprint from the Journal of Human Relations--Exposition of the social changes that have characterized our modern cities and the problems incident to this evolution.

The School President, open-ended script with suggested questions for discussion for High School age level.

19. The American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, N.Y. has just put out the following publications:

The People Take the Lead, a record of progress in civil rights 1948-60, with 1961 supplement, 25¢ per copy, $20 per hundred.

Science Looks at Anti-Semitism, 25¢ per copy, $20 per hundred.

As the UN Probes Prejudice, observations on the UN inquiry into anti-Semitism and other forms of religious and racial prejudice. Single copies available free.

20. The Southern Regional Council has just issued a report on Racial Violence and Law Enforcement, by George McMillan. This analysis on the role of the police in the South has received considerable publicity. Copies will be sent by the SRC to all CCD agencies.

21. Enclosed is a flyer about Andover Productions' exciting new documentary film, Integration: Report 1. The film may be purchased from the Center for Mass Communications at $135 per print or rented from Andover Productions, Inc., 107 West 43rd. Street, New York 36, New York for $15 per day; $37.50 per week.

22. When NBC-TV Opera of the Air carried Don Giovanni last April 10, Caesar Seipi played the lead role but Negro operatic star Leontyne Price played Dona Ana, the main female role. As a result, according to NBC officials, eleven Southern stations cancelled the program because of Miss Price's race.

SUMMARY OF MEETING OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE, January 5, 1961.

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting on Wednesday, February 15, 1961 from 11:30 A.M. to 2 P.M. at the Jewish Labor Committee, 25 East 78th Street (corner of Madison Avenue) New York City. Since this will be a luncheon meeting, please call Mr. Fleischman at Plaza 1-4000 or write him at 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, New York, to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. It was reported that CBS-TV plans to carry a one-hour documentary program on Thursday January 19, on Representative Howard Smith and the Rules Committee.

2. Newsday, a Long Island daily, carried a series of articles on the Battle of Prince Edward, Virginia , dealing with the only county which abolished its public school system and set up private segregated schools for its white students. As a result of this series of articles, which appeared from December 19-23, 1960, many Long Islanders have undertaken drives for books and other educational materials to stock the 14 volunteer community centers in Prince Edward Co. attempting to educate the Negro children. Organizations desiring to help should contact Helen Baker, Director, Community Relations Program, at the American Friends Service Committee, Miller Building, South Main at Madison Streets, Farmville, Virginia. (Mailing address Box 4630, Farmville, Virginia). The American Friends Service Committee is considering reprinting the Newsday series. Attempts will also be made to interest a mass circulation magazine in carrying an article similar to the Newsday series.

3. Although the Louisiana State Legislature had not changed its laws dealing with aid to dependent children, pressure from aroused citizens and the Federal government has forced the state to alter its interpretation of the laws. More than 85 percent of the children who were cut off the welfare rolls have now been put back. The National Urban League raised tens of thousands of dollars to meet the emergency and is carrying on a program to strengthen family ties in the area. As a result of the entire situation, the Ford Foundation has made a grant to study aid to dependent children programs in other states to see how they are being administered and if any changes are needed.

4. David Susskind's "Open End" TV show featured Leander Perez, leading Louisiana segregationist, with another segregationist and the President of the New Orleans school board, in a discussion on the New Orleans school situation. A number of agencies questioned the wisdom of having an all-white panel to discuss this issue and felt that Perez' lies and distortions had been allowed to stand uncorrected. These agencies indicated that they were getting in touch with Mr. Susskind to discuss the problem.

5. The civil rights possibilities inherent in the changeover of the Federal administration and the election of a new Congress were discussed. It was decided to wait until specific legislative and administrative programs have been put forth by the Administration and Congressional leaders before making determination on mass media possibilities in connection with them.

6. There was universal acclaim over the hour-long NBC TV documentary, Sit-In, which was carried December 20. The program emphasized the economic consequences of racial discrimination not only to the merchants directly affected by the sit-ins, but to the central city areas as well. The program was cancelled by Station WAPI-TV, Birmingham, Alabama, and WDSU-TV, New Orleans, Louisiana. It was reported that the mayor of one large Southern city had arranged a special showing of the program for business and community leaders and it was suggested that other Southern communities might be interested in doing likewise. The program can be rented without charge for a period not exceeding 10 days. Write to Arthur Hepner, NBC News, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, New York, listing the dates you would like to have the program. A $100 deposit is required, which is returned when the film is returned.

7. A report was presented on the situation in Fayette and Haywood counties Tennessee, where the Federal courts have enjoined white landlords from evicting hundreds of Negro tenant families for exercising the right to vote. In addition to the evictions, economic boycott has been waged against the Negro voters.

The AFL-CIO, NAACP & CORE have been helping to provide food and clothing for the dozen families already living in tents. Agencies can send money, food and clothing to: The Fayette and Haywood Counties Welfare and Civic Associations, c/o John McFerrin, Route 4, Box 133-A, Somerville, Tenn. In preparing NBC's program Sit-In, much additional film was shot in Fayette County. It was suggested that NBC might be contacted to use some of that footage in another program on the situation in Fayette and Haywood counties.

8. The Southern Regional Council's report on Racial Violence and Law Enforcement has received considerable publicity. The whole Atlanta police force has been writing reports based on the study. The National Conference of Christians and Jews will use the report at its police institutes throughout the country. Copies have also been sent to law enforcement magazines. It was suggested that the United States Conference of Mayors and the American Municipal Association might both be interested in this report.

9. It was reported that the United States Civil Rights Commission is preparing to undertake a major study on the administration of justice in the country, similar to its studies on housing and voting rights.

10. The Congress of Racial Equality, 38 Park Row, New York 38, New York, is planning to reprint the article on white sit-in students in the South which appeared in the January 3 issue of Look.

11. It was reported that the Voice of America will beam abroad a 13-week series on the status of the Negro. In charge of the project is Harold Courlander, Voice of America, Washington 25, D.C.

12. CBS TV, with the cooperation of the Anti-Defamation League, will carry an hour-long program on January 15, from 4 to 5 P.M., Eastern Standard Time, on "A Question of Chairs: The Challenge to American Education."

13. It was reported that a paper-back revised edition of the Strange Career of Jim Crow has just been published. The Education Department, United Auto Workers, 8000 East Jefferson, Detroit 14, is distributing the book at 50¢ per copy.

14. It was suggested that the mass media might be interested in carrying articles on the way in which the pupil placement laws in the South have worked out.

15. The Georgia Conference on Educational Opportunities, P.O. Box 4844, Atlanta, Georgia, has published a pamphlet, "Georgia's Divided Education," a report on the separate but unequal education of Georgia's white and Negro children. Individual copies are available at the above address.

'The next meeting of the Mass Media'
'Committee will be a special meeting'
'on Thursday, March 2, from 10 A.M.'
'to Noon, at the National Conference'
' of Christians and Jews, 43 West '
'57th Street, New York City.'

1. The Southern Regional Council and the National Urban League have sent separate, publicized memoranda concerning the executive power of the Federal Government and civil rights to President Kennedy. Many other agencies have sent "off-the-record" memos and have held meetings with President Kennedy or his advisors. Nevertheless, the main pressures now being brought on Kennedy in relation to civil rights seems to be coming from segregationists in the South.

Moreover, in order to get through his basic program of increased minimum wage, aid to depressed areas, medical care for the aged, aid for the unemployed and increased aid to education, the President appears determined to avoid promoting civil rights legislation. Civil rights groups had become largely reconciled to this prospect, but anticipated that Federal executive orders would be issued dealing with an end to discrimination in publicly assisted housing, as well as executive action for ending segregated education and more forceful action on discrimination in employment.

Apparently the same pressures that decided Kennedy to avoid civil rights legislation in order to get his main package of "must" legislation through a Congress in which a Dixiecrat-Republican coalition has almost half the votes, is now leading him to similar reluctance in relation to executive action. Instead, Kennedy has appointed well-qualified Negroes to many important posts, probably gambling that this may deter criticism for not moving faster on executive action on civil rights. It was generally agreed at the meeting that organizations desiring action in this area might well press the Kennedy administration publicly as well as privately, to act in support of the principle that where Federal funds are used, they must be used equally by all people. Only such public pressure, it was suggested, would convince the President that there was enough public backing to enable him to carry out the platform to which he is committed.

2. The Save Our Schools committee in New Orleans has offered to provide bus service for white children to go to the integrated schools, but many white parents are afraid of the intimidation that others have already experienced. It was noted that Attorney General Kennedy was quietly exerting pressure to insure payment of New Orleans teachers. (President Kennedy sent a telegram to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission meeting in Virginia, praising the New Orleans school board, teachers and white parents who were supporting school desegregation and stressing forcefully the moral as well as legal right of children of all races to go to school together.)

3. Desegregation of the University of Georgia in Athens has occurred with a considerable change of policy on the part of Governor Vandiver. Atlanta's Mayor Hartsfield, the Atlanta papers and the business community, all are working for peaceful desegregation. While it was felt that this situation ought to simplify chances for peaceful desegregation of schools in Atlanta next September under a Federal court order, recent tensions dealing with sit-ins plus a concentration of extreme segregationists in Atlanta, raises grave doubts as to what is likely to occur. The situation remains fluid.

4. Four Mississippi citizens filed suit in Federal court in January for an injunction barring payment of public funds by the State Sovereignty Commission to the White Citizens Councils. The State Sovereignty Commission is the official agency created by Mississippi state government to promote segregation. The Commission was charged with making payments to the White Citizens Councils of $20,000, and other monthly payments of $5,000 during 1960, "for the purpose of advertising segregation." These payments, the plaintiffs claimed, violated the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution because "tax money exacted from them by the state of Mississippi" was being used "for the purpose of subverting and opposing the law of the land." Two of the citizens bringing the suit, C.E. Shaffer, a local official of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and Lonnie B. Daniel, Communications Workers of America Director for Mississippi, Alabama, and Louisiana, received so much pressure from local union members, business and public officials, that they withdrew from the suit, although insisting that they were still in agreement with its purposes. White attorney William Higgs and Negro grocer Robert T. Smith are continuing the suit. It is estimated that they will need up to $1,000 for court costs.

5. The American Friends Service Committee decided not to reprint the series of articles on Prince Edward County that appeared in Newsday, a Long Island daily newspaper. Other series have been carried in the Philadelphia Bulletin, the Newark News and the Washington Post. Look Magazine and the Saturday Evening Post have had staff members in Prince Edward County for work on possible stories. The American Friends Service Committee will prepare a pamphlet on Prince Edward County which will soon be available. The Southern Regional Council has put out a special report on "Sanctuaries for Tradition: Virginia's New Private Schools" by Mary Ellen Goodman, dealing with segregated private schools in Front Royal, Norfolk, Charlottesville and Prince Edward County. Copies are being sent to all CCD agencies.

6. NBC, which shot considerable film in Fayette County, Tennessee, in preparation for its Sit-In program about Nashville, has turned this footage over to Chet Huntley for a possible new program dealing with the economic boycott and voting rights in Fayette and Haywood counties.

7. A segregationist drive, Monitor South, is now under way, aimed at TV and radio sponsors. Ned Touchstone, executive director of Monitor South, and owner of Bossier City Printing Co. in a suburb of Shreveport, La., told Broadcasting magazine that his organization plans to tape radio and TV network programs, study them for "deliberate distortion" and publicize the results to 2,700 "patriotic and civic" groups in the South which have "requested" them. Most persons acting as monitors, said Touchstone, are people of "means," well able to pay the costs of making tapes, which they do as a "labor of love." Some of the material on last season's Garry Moore show, Touchstone charged, was "sociologically offensive" to Southern viewers. While disclaiming responsibility, he noted that "merchants in this part of the South took Kellogg's (cereals) off their shelves. Kellogg's said: 'We have no control over the program.' We said: 'You do. You paid for it. And we have control over our children.'" The result: Kellogg's and Pittsburgh Plate Glass, co-sponsors of the Moore show, failed to renew and, according to Touchstone, "The show is not offensive now. Everybody's happy." Checks indicate that despite Monitor South's claimed effectiveness, no real inspired letter-writing campaigns have as yet been noticed by the networks.

8. It was reported that Brotherhood Week material was being used more this year than ever before, but that it required year-round follow-through to make an important impact. Press, radio and TV kits were furnished by the National Conference of Christians and Jews to the mass media throughout the country.

9. The March 1961 issue of Esquire Magazine carries an article by Caroline Bird on "The Solution Seekers: New Hope for Civil Rights in the South," which argues that the logic of events is forcing the day for integration and the recognition of minority rights in the South. This article will be reprinted by the AJC, which will also print "The Civil Rights Story...A Year's Review" by Theodore Leskes, Director of its Legal Division.

10. The Anti-Defamation League has just published, and will distribute to CCD groups, a pamphlet on "On Recognizing the Human Species" by Harold Courlander and a book "Strangers--Then Neighbors" by Clarence Senior, which deals with the various waves of immigration into the United States and the way in which these migrants have been treated.

11. The AFL-CIO and the National Educational Television and Radio Center are jointly sponsoring a series of half-hour discussion programs entitled "Briefing Session." One of the programs will deal with Civil Rights.

12. The Religion and Labor Council of America, 3498½ North High Street, Columbus 14, Ohio, featured an article on "Equality and the Unions" by Harry Fleischman, in its special Brotherhood issue of Religion and Labor, February 1961. Copies will be sent to all CCD agencies.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1961

LWDV
MF

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will again be a luncheon meeting from 11:30 to 2 P.M. on Wednesday, April 12, at the American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56th Street. Please call Mr. Fleischman, Plaza 1-4000 to let him know if you are coming, or write him at the above address.

1. The Kennedy executive order, setting up the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity, was gratifying to the MMCCD agencies, since it is considerably stronger than the comparable agencies set up by both President Truman and President Eisenhower. At the same time, discussion revealed that many agencies feared that, in the field of ending housing discrimination, the Administration might water down executive action from the strong planks in the Democratic Party platform. That platform called for ending discrimination and segregation not only in publicly-built, but also in publicly-assisted housing. It is feared that, unless sufficient public pressure by interested agencies becomes evident, publicly-assisted housing will not be included in any forthcoming housing anti-discrimination executive order. The National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church, the AFL-CIO Executive Council, the United Steelworkers of America, are among the groups that have issued such statements. Other agencies may want to do likewise.

2. It was reported that Benjamin Mays, President of Morehouse College of Atlanta, had been proposed for a member of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission. Senators Talmadge and Russell of Georgia immediately attacked Mays' alleged pro-Communist affiliations and indicated that they would consider his appointment "personally obnoxious." Under the usual procedures of the Senate, such statements by Senators concerning appointments of people coming from their states have frequently sufficed to doom the appointments. It was noted, however, that if this custom applies, virtually no white or Negro southerner who fights for integration will be able to win an appointment, since such persons would be considered "personally obnoxious" by Dixiecrat senators. Several national organizations indicated that they felt that it would be necessary to secure a good deal of public pressure against such practices and that the mass media should be alerted to the implications of this policy.

It was reported that Kennedy and Congress have received little mail about civil rights. Additional activity by pro-civil rights agencies seems to be needed to step up the pace of federal action. One step, which it was felt Kennedy could do easily without political jeopardy, can be to insist that the National Guard of various states be desegregated.

3. The National Urban League report on Negro unemployment in 50 cities stressed that Negro unemployment is frequently twice to three times that of the total unemployment rate. In Detroit, for instance, 112,000 Negro workers are out of work, out of 185,000 total unemployment for the city. Mass media coverage of such a situation is likely to make an impact on the country and the President.

4. The Federal Government has been working behind the scenes to see to it that school teachers in New Orleans are paid. Although some funds have been released by the state to permit such payments, there is still fear that more money may be needed until school operating funds become available in cash in June. Since the State legislature has set up a new school board to replace the legal New Orleans board, local banks are unwilling to lend money to the legal board for fear that the courts might uphold the state legislature. It was agreed to investigate possible sources for such short term loans. It was also agreed to discover whether the Federal Government can find some way to use Federal funds in relation to this problem.

Another major problem in New Orleans is to counter the intimidation which has prevented many white parents from allowing their children to go to the desegregated schools. Mass media action to promote Federal injunctions against anybody who hampers Federal Court desegregation decisions was suggested. FBI investigations of those using economic reprisals, threats and intimidation might be helpful. New Orleans has suffered considerable economic hurt due to the tense situation and agencies with personnel and constituency in New Orleans were urged to utilize their resources during the summer to make next fall's integration more effective.

5. Efforts are being made in Atlanta to avoid the mistakes that occurred in Little Rock and New Orleans when school desegregation starts next fall. The problem was tied in with the Atlanta sit-ins; plus the fact that anti-Negro and anti-Semitic hate groups are concentrating their resources on Atlanta. (A few days after our committee meeting, leading Atlanta department, variety and drug stores agreed to desegregate their lunch counters and other facilities next fall, shortly after the 11th and 12th grades in Atlanta's schools are integrated. Meanwhile Negro leaders have agreed to call off sit-ins, boycotts, picketing, or other reprisals against stores with segregated lunch counters until the integration deadline. This was worked out by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and a group of student and adult Negro leaders.)

6. The problem of desegregated movies in the central sections of Southern cities is now coming to the fore. In Nashville, stand-outs at movie box-offices have been carried on. Negotiations are now under way with several movie chains. It was agreed to have a meeting of organizations with contacts in this field to consider steps that might be taken to facilitate desegregation of theaters.

7. The litigation on Prince Edward County challenges tuition grant payments for students at private segregated schools and claims that it was unconstitutional for Prince Edward County to close down its school system to avoid desegre ation. Should these contentions hold up in court, it will have implications for many other states. For instance, under the Georgia laws adopted by the recent special session of the Georgia legislature, counties and school districts may vote to close their schools rather than desegregate.

8. The Catholic Interracial Council's Interracial Review for February 1961, features a series on "The Catholic and the Changing Neighborhood." Write to Catholic Interracial Council, 20 Vesey Street, New York City for sample copies.

9. The Anti-Defamation League has just published "The Treatment of Minorities in Secondary School Textbooks," an excellent survey of the need for more adequate textbooks to help eradicate prejudice.

10. The January-February 1961 issue of Interracial News Service, published by the Department of Racial and Cultural Relations of the National Council of Churches of Christ, 475 Riverside Drive, New York 27, New York, features "Racial and Cultural Relations Denominational Statements, 1959-60." The Council also adopted a resolution on "Christian Influence toward the Development and Use of all Labor Resources Without Regard to Race, Color, Religion, or National Origin," which can be secured by writing to the above address.

11. The Southern Regional Council has just published a special report by Mary Ellen Goodman on "Sanctuaries for Tradition: Virginia's New Private Schools." Copies will be sent to all CCD agencies.

12. In our minutes of February 15, we reported that a hard-cover revised edition of The Strange Career of Jim Crow has just been published. We goofed on the price. The Education Department, United Auto Workers, 8000 East Jefferson Avenue, Detroit 14, Michigan, is distributing this 183-page book at 65¢ per copy.

1. Harold C. Fleming, of the Southern Regional Council, and Everett Tucker, Jr. , President of the Little Rock, Arkansas school board, exchanged views on how fast schools should desegregate on "Briefing Session," a public affairs television series, presented by the AFL-CIO and the National Educational Television and Radio Center. Edward P. Morgan, ABC radio commentator, served as moderator. Stations carrying the series and dates of the program are listed on an attached sheet. If possible please notify people in your area.

2. Federal pressures for increased school desegregation came both from the courts and the executive department during the last month. The U.S. Justice Department, which had previously intervened only after trouble developed in enforcing court orders, revised its policy by entering four Louisiana school desegregation cases as a friend of the court. Attorney General Robert Kennedy explained the move (concerning suits in which St. Helena and East Baton Rouge parishes and 6 state-supported trade schools have been ordered to desegregate) would "assist the court in preventing potentially dangerous and critical situations from coming to a head." The new Attorney General has also held personal conversations with a number of Southern governors o civil rights matters.

Another federal agency, however, seems to have been dragging its feet in relation to school desegregation. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has thus far been occupied primarily with attemp ting to secure passage of legislation for federal aid to education. Its U.S. Office of Education has not offered its services, financial aid and encouragement to wipe out segregated educational situations. It was pointed out that vocational school grants on a segregated basis continue the inequality which worsens the picture in respect to employment discrimination against Negroes. While HEW may be taking internal steps to promote integration within the department, it has yet to take action in the broader areas of vocational training and school desegregation. The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights is preparing an analysis of the Health, Education and Welfare Department to show the extent of HEW programs in the area of vocational education, segregation and the impact of the federal government's working at cross purposes with itself. When this material is available, attempts will be made to supply it to interested organizations and to the mass media. The Labor Department, Commerce Department, Treasury Department and Justice Department are all busy in recruiting Negroes for federal employment and in planning effective steps to end discrimination.

3. The Holland sub-committee of the House Labor Committee has been holding hearings on automation and unemployment. It was suggested that the NAACP, the National Urban League and the Negro American Labor Council might testify before the committee on the impact of automation on the Negro worker.

4. It was reported that the Tennessee Supreme Court upheld the revocation of Highlander Folk School's charter and ordered the institution closed, on the basis that Miles Horton, Director of the School, had operated it for private gain and that intoxicating beverages had been sold on the premises. The high court did not rule on a third holding of the lower court that the "integrated operations had violated a state law against permitting Negroes and whites to attend the same classes." The American Civil Liberties Union is consulting with Highlander's lawyers and will prepare a summary of the case. It was felt that magazine articles and newspaper editorials might be useful.

5. Opposition elements in Mississippi are beginning to speak up. The state superintendent of education, J. M. Tubb, told the convention of the 12,000-member Mississippi Education Association of white educators, meeting in Jackson, that if segregated schools are stricken down in the courts that "in the days of last resort, our people must know that to abolish the public schools would be to close the door of hope for many ambitious youth in the state. It would bring to a halt the wheels of industry on the borders of our state, and destroy the dreams we have had for a great state whose economy would be based upon agriculture and a great industry. A private school system on a state-wide level simply would not work. Think of all the experience which would be lost if our public schools are closed." He noted that "other state have tried, and failed, with school closing attempts."

The Mississippi State Sovereignty Commission contribution of 60 thousand dollars to the White Citizens Council national radio and television activity since last July, has engendered considerable opposition in the state. A lawsuit has been started against such practices. (See MMCCD minutes of February 15, 1961). The Commission said its speakers bureau had filled 13 engagements during the last 9 months in Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, and Mississippi. A canned speech given to those in the speakers bureau says in part that "Negroes received better treatment and more consideration of their welfare in Mississippi than in any state in the nation." Most speakers appear in conjunction with the showing of the commission's film, "The Message From Mississippi," which is designed to show that Negroes live happily under segregation there. The effect of the speech and the film was weakened when club-swinging Jackson police and two German police dogs drove more than 100 Negroes from a courthouse where 9 Negro students were convicted for staging Mississippi's first sit-in demonstration. It was suggested that this situation might lend itself to an article in the New Yorker magazine by someone like A.J. Leibling.

In a "progress report" the commission said 228 investigations had been conducted in 82 Mississippi counties by its staff in the last 9 months. The commission, said Erle Johnston Jr., its public relations director, is "sometimes referred to as a watch dog agency to protect segregation, but its responsibilities are far deeper than such an identification suggests. The commission also is engaged in a detailed investigation program to build a file of persons whose utterances or actions indicate they should be watched with suspicion on future racial attitudes." One of those so watched was a University of Mississippi journalism student, Billy Barton, who was smeared in an effort to defeat him for editorship of the student newspaper. The basis for this was a "confidential report" which charged that Barton was employed last summer on the staff of the Atlanta Journal and was actively involved in several lunch-counter sit-in demonstrations in Atlanta. Economic coercion against opponents of the White Citizens Councils continues in the state. Mrs. Hazel Brannon Smith, editor of the Lexington Advertiser, has lost much advertising and printing business. Her husband, Walter Dyer Smith, was discharged as administrator of the Holmes County Hospital after she began criticism of the Councils.

The White Citizens Council Forum reported at the end of last year that 51 television and 263 radio stations in 41 states had scheduled its series of programs. It was suggested that LeRoy Collins, President of the National Association of Broadcasters, be contacted to ask what is the policy of the networks on the use of such pro-segregationist programs. Will the NAB suggest that equal time on a free basis be made available to the opponents of segregation or will the networks be transformed into a one-way forum because the segregationists have so much state money available to pay for programs?

6. Several Louisville theatres agreed to desegregate recently after movie stand-ins and CORE picket lines. It was indicated that a number of chains appear likely to desegregate their theatres soon. It was felt that after more progress has been made it might be advisable to contact movie stars to sign a statement indicating that they want their films to be shown to all people on a desegregated basis.

7. The Industrial Union Department of the AFL-CIO has just published a pamphlet, "Tent City...Home of the Brave," which tells the story of the economic coercion against Negroes in Fayette and Haywood Counties, Tennessee for registering to vote. Copies of the pamphlet are available free in quantity from IUD AFL-CIO, 815 16th Street, N.W. Washington 6, D.C. Sample copies are being sent to all CCD agencies.

Despite economic reprisals, hundreds of Negroes are continuing to register to vote. They have been able to exist only because of outside help. Operation Freedom has been working as a lending agency for the past two months to permit the farmers to get their crops in the ground on land purchased by the National Baptist Convention. Secretary of Agriculture, Orville Freeman, has taken steps to insure that racial bias is not used to deny loans to otherwise eligible Negroes under the Farmers' Home Administration Program. The Justice Department won another round April 6 in its fight to prevent the eviction of Negro sharecroppers from farms in Tennessee's Haywood County. The Federal Court of Appeals directed District Judge Marion S. Boyd of Memphis to grant a preliminary injunction against landowners.

The Justice Department civil rights division had sought the injunction on the grounds that the Negroes were being evicted because they had registered and voted in the 1960 election. Landowners had refused to renew contracts by which the Negroes farm for a share of the crops.

8. Harold C. Fleming has just resigned as Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council to become the Executive Vice-President of the Potomac Institute, which has been set up by the Taconic Foundation to serve as an intergroup relations agency in Washington, D.C. Fleming's successor as Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council is Leslie Dunbar.

9. The February 1961 issue of Social Progress, published by the United Presbyterian Church, features a series of articles on "Why They Sat In" and "What Does it Mean?" Copies will be sent to all CCD agencies.

10. The January 1961 issue of Social Action, published by the Council for Christian Social Action of the United Church of Christ, 289 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. features several articles on the sit-ins. We will try to arrange for copies to go to all CCD agencies.

11. The American Jewish Committee has reprinted an article on "Human Relations Goes to Washington" by Senator Philip A. Hart. The article proposes a new cabinet Department of Urban Affairs with concern for problems of intergroup relations. A copy is enclosed. Additional copies available at $3.50 per hundred.

12. CORE, 38 Park Row, New York 38, New York, will print a new pamphlet, "Jailed In" by Thomas Gaither. Sample copies will be sent to all CCD agencies.

13. The May 1961 issue of Redbook magazine contains an article by Lillian Smith on "The Ordeal of Southern Women."

14. The April 25, 1961 issue of Look features a series of articles on "The Second Battle of Atlanta," dealing with the desegregation problem.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING FRIDAY, MAY 12, 1961

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be a luncheon meeting on Wednesday, June 14, 1961 from 11:30 A.M. to 2 P.M. at the National Conference of Christians and Jews, 43 West 57th Street, New York, N.Y.

Since this will be a luncheon meeting please call Mr. Fleischman at Plaza 1-4000 or write to him at 165 East 56th St. New York 22, N.Y. to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. The Administration's proposal for a Department of Urban Affairs was discussed. It was reported that the Administration plans to wait on issuing any executive order on discrimination in housing until after housing legislation has been passed by Congress. It was suggested that it would be useful to get the mass media to carry articles and stories dealing with successes in housing. An article on housing by Boris Shishkin, civil rights director of the AFL-CIO, will be sent to all CCD agencies.

2. No date has yet been set to try the suit filed by William Higgs and Robert T. Smith in Federal Court in Jackson, Mississippi last January, for an injunction barring payment of public funds by the State Sovereignty Commission to the White Citizens Councils. A similar suit may be filed in a State Court. Recently, for the first time in history, the third largest paper in the State, the Jackson State Times, strongly criticized the Sovereignty Commission for its payments to the Citizens Councils. The Jackson Clarion Ledger and Daily News carried an article in their combined Sunday edition that "NAACP Backs Higgs' Suit in U.S. Court." This may lead to a libel suit against the papers. These two papers, it is reported, serve as the unofficial mouthpieces of the White Citizens Councils. For instance, when Attorney General Robert Kennedy spoke on civil rights at the University of Georgia, the papers failed to even mention the fact.

As a result of the Billie Barton case (see MMCCD minutes of April 12) many citizens in the state have begun to criticize the White Citizens Councils. A suit against the State Sovereignty Commission may soon be brought by Barton.

We were informed that last May in Madison County, deputy sheriffs handcuffed a man in his home, took him out in front of his wife and family and shot him. It was mentioned that in the past year there has been a murder of a Negro person about every month and a half in Madison County, with law enforcement officers invilved. A Negro client of William Higgs, it was said, had an eye gouged out by a policeman and was in jail 15 hours before a doctor was allowed to see him. It was said that the local papers failed to mention such incidents or at best mentioned that someone was shot while "resisting arrest." It was said that men have been arrested and put in a "hot box" whose heat is so intense that their vision becomes permanently impaired.

We were informed that Senator Eastland has submitted the name of Harold Cox to the Justice Department for appointment as a Federal Judge for the Southern District of Mississippi. If Cox, a prominent segregationist, is named, it may be very difficult to enforce voting and other rights for Negroes in Mississippi.

The White Citizens Councils appear to be in a poor financial condition if they are unable to count upon support from the public treasury. They have had to close a store in Jackson which they use to solicit membership. In attempting to get membership renewals they are sending out cards saying: "I believe in segregation. Enclosed are my dues," and another card says "I believe in integration. Take my name off your list." This constitutes a form of intimidation but has evidently not been very successful in getting membership renewals.

There have been some repercussions from the John Birch Society on the desegregation problem. Birch Society members in Jackson, Mississippi spied on interracial meetings being held at the Episcopal Church, took illegal tapes of telephone conversations and played them to the Church School Board in an attempt to get the minister of the Church fired.

3. An advertisement appeared in the New York Times of March 29, 1960 seeking funds to help in the defense of Martin Luther King against a then-pending perjury prosecution by the State of Alabama. Because their names appeared as sponsors of the ad, four Negro ministers in Alabama were sued, together with the New York Times in five libel suits for 1/2 million dollars each. Already judgments have been obtained for the full amount demanded in two of these suits and the other three will be tried soon. Because, under Alabama law, a judgment can be stayed pending appeal only if a bond for twice the amount of the judgment is posted, (which obviously the individual defendants could not do), the plaintiffs have already gone after the ministers' small property holdings. Their automobiles have been taken and they have been subjected to searching examinations to uncover their meager real and personal property. The judgments against the New York Times have been stayed pending appeal since the Times has posted the two million dollars in bond.

A lawyers' advisory committee to aid these defendants has been set up in New York including Theodore W. Kheel, William H. Davis, Charles H. Tuttle and 15 others. They are determined to protect the process of law against these attempts to create "unequal injustice under the guise of law." Mr. Tuttle said that these cases are as important to the question of freedom of the press and freedom of speech as was the Zenger case, which centuries ago established the principles of freedom of the press in America. The American Bar Association may be asked to file an Amicus Curiae brief in this case. If not, the lawyers' advisory committee may attempt to do so itself. It was suggested that mass circulation magazines might be interested in doing stories about this.

The Harvard Law School Students Civil Liberties Research Service prepared a "Memo on a Trial Within a Segregated Courtroom," which suggests that the fact that the trial was segregated might lead to a Supreme Court decision that the trial was illegal.

4. The Saturday Evening Post, April 29, 1961 carried an article by editor Irv Goodman on Prince Edward County, entitled "Public Schools Died Here."

5. Davison's Department Store in Atlanta, Ga. carried a full-page ad in the April 23 Atlanta Sunday Journal-Constitution, saluting Atlanta's public school system and calling for united support in "helping all the children of Atlanta achieve the true fulfillment of Georgia and the United States in the Western Democratic World," as the Atlanta public school system "stands on the threshold of new tasks and responsibilities." Copies of this ad have been made available to Atlanta's Help Our Public Education (HOPE) and samples will be sent to CCD agencies.

6. A Core booklet, Sit-In Songs, which includes more than a score of lyrics, has just been published. Copies are available from CORE, 38 Park Row, New York 38, NY.

7. Christianity and Crisis, 537 West 121st. Street, New York 27, N.Y., will examine the race problem in the USA in its May 29 special double issue. Articles will include "Universal Suffrage for Negroes," by Harold C. Fleming; "Our Caste-Ridden Protestant Campuses," by Thomas F. Pettigrew; "Residential Segregation: A Major Confrontation for the Churches," by S. Garry Oniki; "Probing the Ethics of Realtors," by Kenneth Underwood and Elden Jacobson. Special quantity rates are:10 or less 35¢; 11 to 99 20¢; 100 or more 15¢. For copies write to the above address.

8. The April 1961 issue of The Progressive carried an article on "Explosion in Birmingham" by James Clayton.

9. The May 1961 issue of the Southern Regional Council's New South carries an editorial dealing with a recent Gallup poll, showing that 76% of Southerners believe that integration in schools, restaurants and other public accommodations is on its way.

10. The April 15 issue of The New Yorker contains an article entitled "It Doesn't Seem Quick To Me," by Katherine T. Kinkead, which is a report on the Sit-In movement in Durham, N.C.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING, SEPTEMBER 19, 1962

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Monday, October 29, 1962 from 11:30 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. at the Jewish Labor Committee, 25 East 78th Street, New York City.

Since this will be a luncheon meeting, please call Harry Fleischman at PL 1-4000 or write to him at 165 East 56th Street, New York 22 to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

1. Birmingham's business leadership appears quite perturbed over the current situation. It feels that Police Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Conner has consistently attempted to intimidate and terrorize Negroes who are trying to exercise their civil rights. A Negro boycott of white stores has created much economic dislocation.

The business leadership is currently supporting a referendum to change the form of city government. Should it pass, it would, in all likelihood, mean the elimination from official life of Commissioner Conner.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., has just held a conference in Birmingham to prepare a widespread plan of action for Alabama and other Southern states. Negro voting in Birmingham has been growing slowly but surely. While the conference was on, Bull Conner cancelled all press passes in the city, but the SCLC meeting went off with only minor hitches. A self-styled member of the American Nazi Party struck Rev. King twice in the face. Although Dr. King did not press charges, the police took the assailant into custody. He was found guilty of assault and battery and sentenced to thirty days in prison and fined $25 and costs.

An editorial in The Birmingham News (August 20, 1962) asks "Desegregated Schools Here By '63?" and stresses that Birmingham faces "an almost certain desegregation order by the fall of 1963," and that "It is folly for city officials, school people or public to refuse to face the record." (Editorial attached.)

2. A conference will be jointly sponsored by the Southern Regional Council and the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen on December 27th and 28th (tentative) in Nashville, Tennessee. The themeof the conference is "The South: Ethical Demands of Integration." Martin Luther King, Jr. has agreed to deliver the keynote address. About 200 persons will be invited to attend, chosen from Southern leadership who are seriously concerned to move forward from desegregation into integration. The conference will attempt to consider ethical problems as illustrated by concrete examples, and for that purpose three subjects and areas have been selected: education, using Charlottesville, Virginia as the area of study; the religious life of a community as expressed through its churches, using Atlanta as the case; and employment, using Greensboro, North Carolina.

3. The wanton burning of Negro churches in Georgia has stiffened the resolve of Negroes to attain civil and political equality. Discussion was held on what the member organizations of the MMCCD could do to demonstrate their moral concern. Should we participate in a nationwide campaign to help rebuild the burned churches? Many felt that the Voter Registration Drive was the prime concern, and that this should be the outstanding concern rather than the church burnings. Others, however, felt that the church burnings might create the emotional impact needed to educate people that this happened because of the Negroes' fight for the right to vote. Suggestions were made that the mass media should bring to the public the fact that the church burnings happened because of the Voter Registration Drive, and emphasis should be made very strong that such a drive does exist and should be supported. Various agencies have adopted resolutions dealing with this problem. (See attached American Jewish Committee release.)

4. New Orleans appears to be over the hump on school desegregation. Segregationist politicians, as well as the general public, seem to have accepted desegregation in the city as a fact of life. Last year's public school integration here was calm, but for two reasons the opening of schools here a few weeks ago was considered a major test for the city. The pace of public school integration was greatly increased and parochial schools admitted Negroes for the first time this century. It was feared that the magnitude of the two changes could bring trouble. Actually, their combined effect worked in favor of better public acceptance of desegregation. They were mutually reinforcing.

Seventy-seven restaurants and lunch counters in New Orleans were opened on an integrated basis after more than two years of struggle. During this time scores of CORE members have been arrested in their attempts at desegregating eating facilities. It was hoped that New Orleans has set the pace for the rest of the state to follow.

5. "Tokenism" carries, with a shrug of inadequacy, a feeling that only the crumbs of progress, "token progress," is being achieved; that the rate of advance is too slow in view of the time it has taken and the imperative of the demand. Negroes in the forefront of the civil rights movement and from varied professional fields have found it an increasingly useful word to denote too-slow progress. A joint study on tokenism will be made jointly for the Anti-Defamation League and the Southern Regional Council by Prof. Ken Morland of Randolph Macon Women's College.

6. The forthcoming commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation led to a suggestion for a White House Conference commemorating the anniversary to be held in the deep South, to be addressed by President Kennedy, and to feature other top governmental, religious, minority groups, industry, labor and other civil leaders. Some members of the committee felt that the President should do something more meaningful on civil rights, and use the centenary to issue an executive order banning discrimination in all federally affected activities. Others suggested that such a Conference might offer the occasion for such a historic order. Suggestions were made that television, as well as other mass media, should be urged to cooperate in every way for an effective observance of this major historical event.

7. On many occasions well-meaning people have complained against Negro use of civil disobedience to secure civil rights. Their main thrust appears to be "Why don't Negroes just obey the laws, and trust to time to work out the solution?" In an article, "Are We Heading In The Wrong Direction?," by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, August 11-18, 1962, he objects to a bill with penalties involving jail sentences for farmers who fail to comply with certain regulations set forth in the measure. Becoming a strong advocate of civil disobedience, Mr. Eisenhower then wrote: "When I learned of this proposal,

I rather explosively exclaimed that if these provisions were enacted into law and applied to a raiser of beef cattle (which I am) I would offer myself as a test case. I said that I would go to jail if necessary and conduct a public monologue on human rights from behind the bars." This quote may be of use if you hear other people complaining about civil disobedience.

8. In the past few weeks, the Mississippi Free Press, a new Negro paper, has given extensive coverage to a courageous biracial group of men who are striking for decent wages at a bakery. The Free Press believes the living standards of the little man in the South can be improved by encouraging responsible, democratic labor unions.

Another project of the Free Press has been the case of Clyde Kennard, a bright young Negro who applied to the all white Mississippi Southern last year. He was arrested and convicted of stealing $25 of chicken feed, and is now in Parchman State Prison serving a seven year term. By publicizing the case, the Free Press hopes that some action can be taken to release Kennard.

While the paper is primarily for Mississippians, and supported by them, its news may be of interest to our agencies. Write to Charles L. Butts, Editor of the Mississippi Free Press, 1253 Valley Street, Jackson, Mississippi, for a sample copy and subscription rates.

9. The meeting discussed the forthcoming registration of James Meredith at the University of Mississippi. It was agreed that the mass media would give top coverage to the issue, but warnings were uttered lest the Federal Government move too hesitantly in the crisis, thus permitting violent segregationist sentiment to harden. The riots that did occur following Governor Barnett's almost open incitation to violence underscored the validity of our fears.

10. The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity has instituted a suit against certain authorities in Jackson, Mississippi who arrested fifteen Episcopal clergymen, who were subsequently acquitted. The clergymen have brought suit for false arrest. For details, write ESCRU, Room 200, 5 Forsyth Street, N.W., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

11. "Segregation and Desegregation in American Education," a bibliography from the Education Library, a branch of the University of Florida libraries. Copies may be obtained by writing to: Education Library, College of Education, University of Florida, 317 Norman Hall, Gainesville, Florida.

12. In a new publication, "Justice?," the Congress of Racial Equality has documented evidence of police intimidation and brutality, judicial intimidation and maltreatment by law enforcement officers used against persons attempting to achieve desegregation. The booklet summarizes testimony in Washington in May 1962, before a Committee of Inquiry into the Administration of Justice in the Freedom Struggle. Chairing the committee was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. Other members included legal experts and leaders in several areas of human relations. "Justice?" is available from the Congress of Racial Equality, 38 Park Row, New York 38 at 25¢ per single copies, reductions on quantity orders.

13. The U. S. Department of Labor has recently published a study of "Antidiscrimination Provisions in Major Contracts, 1961." The bulletin also includes an appendix illustrating similar provisions in several union constitutions. Copies may be obtained by writing to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor, Washington 25, D. C.

14. "The Negro and Employment Opportunities In The South: Atlanta." This report, the third in a series of Negro employment studies in Southern cities, is based on interviews carried out in the summer and fall of 1961 and on continuous observations since then. Reports have previously been issued on Houston, Texas and Chattanooga, Tennessee. Copies may be obtained from the Greater Atlanta Council on Human Relations, 41 Exchange Place, S.W., Atlanta, Georgia or the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, N.W., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

15. "Human Relations In Law Enforcement," remarks of Michael J. Murphy, Police Commissioner of New York City, at a meeting of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, April 12, 1962. Single copies can be obtained free from the NCCJ, 43 West 57th Street, New York 19, New York.

16. Two articles, "Strategy in Suburbia," by Dennis Clark - an examination of the committees of conscience that are challenging housing segregation in the suburbs, and "White Suburbia - Token Integration Northern Style," by Richard Hepburn, have been reprinted from the Interracial Review, July 1962. Copies may be secured from the Catholic Interracial Council, 20 Vesey Street, New York 7, New York.

17. "Race and the Religious School," a report on a study conference on interracial understanding held in cooperation with the Ursuline Nuns at the College of New Rochelle Chapter of the Catholic Interracial Council of New York. Copies of this report may be secured from the Catholic Interracial Council, 20 Vesey Street, New York 7, New York at 25¢ per copy.

18. "Catholics and Racism in the North," by Matthew Ahmann. While the Catholic Church is active in eliminating segregation in the South, little is being said about its role in racial justice in the North. Mr. Ahmann presents some practical programs for organized Catholic effort in the North. Reprinted from The Catholic World, August 1962. Distributed by the National Catholic Conference on Interracial Justice, 21 West Superior Street, Chicago 10, Illinois.

19. "It Happened In Shippensburg!," written by Virginia H. Ellison from a report by Eleanor M. Peterson. Newspapers in the North have generally played up the controversy over desegregation in the South and more recently have been publicizing the ruckus over attempts at desegregating public eating facilities along Route 40. Generally the implication has been that such things do not happen in the North. But this incident happened in Shippensburg, Pennsylvania. For information on reprints write Miss Carrie E. Meares, director, Assignment: RACE, United Church Women, Room 822, 475 Riverside Drive, New York 27, New York.

20. "Richmond Quietly Leads Way in Race Relations," by Robert E. Baker. Reprinted from The Washington Post, Sunday, July 29, 1962. The progress that has been made in desegregation and non-discrimination in Richmond is one of the exciting racial stories in the South. Copies are available from the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, N. W., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

21. "A Hundred Years Later," by James McBride Dabbs, Frank P. Graham, Paul Green, Benjamin E. Mays, James Stokely and Marion A. Wright. The pamphlet deals with the Centennial of the Civil War. Copies are available from the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, N. W., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

22. "The Police and Community Conflict." A valuable 24-page pamphlet by William P. Brown, a career policeman who is the current chairman of the Education and Training Division of the International Association of Chiefs of Police. Deals with emerging community situations involving overt conflict between groups within a community. DESEGREGATED SCHOOLS HERE BY '63?

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans has refused a Negro parents' attempt to speed up hearing of a case before Judge Hobart Grooms, here, intended to force a desegregated Birmingham school system.

This was the second of two such cases filed in federal court here. An earlier case before Judge Seybourn H. Lynne, filed in 1960, has been set for October hearing. Plaintiffs with the "newer" second case before Judge Grooms had asked the court of appeals to force a hearing on that case on allegation that the first case too long had been delayed.

The court of appeals found, three judges concurring, that date for hearing had been set in the earlier-filed case and that it would be wasteful to push the second ahead.

But one judge, John R. Brown of Texas, agreeing not to speed the case nevertheless said that he "cannot imagine" that it should have taken so long to "get pleadings, motions, etc., in shape." The Texas judge went on virtually to settle the Birmingham cases in so many words in advance:

"The matter is now simple: Does Birmingham have a segregation system? If -- and there really is no if -- that is so, then the question is: What is being done to eradicate it? We have now made it plain ... that a plan of desegregation must be offered or the district court will fashion its own plan." (In the New Orleans case, the district court -- because of a sequence of events -- drew up two plans; the appeals court then fashioned still a third, now to be enforced.)

Judge Brown said that "eight years after the warning to commence with deliberate speed," there has been no desegregation action in Birmingham. More, he continued, "the case about to be heard to consider non-existent defenses" will not reach the bar until October. By that time "the fall term will have passed and it will be too late administratively to accommodate the school system to the Constitution" for "yet another year."

Key phrase is "non-existent defenses," which means Judge Brown's mind apparently is already made up as to any Birmingham school board defense against the Negroes' plea for "reorganization of the dual racial school system into a unitary non-racial system." (The Negroes say in suit that they did not pursue remedy through the placement act in Alabama because "the remedy there provided is inadequate.")

Judge Brown in his opinion in effect concedes there can't be a desegregation order in Birmingham for the fall term. He also used the term "yet another year." It seems obvious, if this opinion is read correctly, that he does see an almost certain desegregation order by the fall of 1963.

The language, as it may be interpreted, means Birmingham probably has one year of grace between next month and the following September.

Judge Brown reveals strong irritation further, at delay to date. Though he agrees with the other two judges that "Judge Grooms (is) the victim of an unsupporting charge that he has failed in the discharge of his personal duty," he seems to say of the case before Judge Lynne (without naming him) that it should proceed "here and now," that "those aspects which are novel should, or may, be put to one side." Judge Brown holds that "there should be an early and effective declaration of rights and the issuance of appropriate injunctions so that the wheels will at least start to turn at some speed whether deliberate, or, if the past is any indication, more likely at a slow, if not a snail's pace." That is strong judicial language regarding the time the issue has been before a Birmingham court.

Judge Brown's opinion was not inclusive in these respects of the other two judges' opinions. Judge Rives said that "the district court has not abused its discretion."

These three judges refusing to move ahead a Birmingham case are the same three who Aug. 6 set out a very broad directive to the New Orleans parish school board for desegregation. At that time, The News warned all who should be thinking ahead, the court stated with emphasis that "the key to the problem is the elimination of dual or bi-racial school zones." Heavy emphasis in Birmingham suits is against the bi-racial zoning here. A state placement act, the court said, is not a desegregation plan. It said such plan is essential. If not supplied by local authorities, then the court will so provide.

This delay is comforting for Birmingham in that one of the suits here, the older, will be heard in full procedure, commencing on Oct. 3. But circuit court opinion, now allowing procedure as projected by judges here, comes from a circuit court the views of which are already much on the record in a parallel case. And in new opinion from New Orleans, one of three judges strongly expresses, misgivings at length of time it has taken the 1960-filed suit to come to hearing.

Birmingham, to repeat, will do well to heed and prepare. It will not be possible late to claim "rush," nor is it likely later appeal for delay to prepare would win sympathy from a court already lenient as to timing, a court making the future probably predictable not only by past rulings in other cases, but in the meaty concurring footnote by Judge Brown of Texas.

It is folly for city officials, school people or public to refuse to face the record.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING, DECEMBER 3, 1962

The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Wednesday, January 23, 1963 from 11:30 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. at the American Civil Liberties Union, 156 Fifth Avenue (20th Street), New York City. (Please take rear elevator to 9th floor.)

Since this will be a luncheon meeting, please call Harry Fleischman at PL 1-4000 or write to him at 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

Among those present were: Alfred Chernin, National Community Relations Advisory Council; Dennis Clark, Catholic Interracial Council; Louisa Hager, Young Women's Christian Association; Sonya Kaufer, American Jewish Committee; Carrie Mears, United Church Women; Marvin Rich, Congress of Racial Equality; June Shagaloff, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Rev. John Morris, Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity; Oscar Cohen, Henry Schwartzchild, Stanley Wexler, Anti-Defamation League; Harry Fleischman, Evelyn Kirshner, National Labor Service.

1. Four clergymen, members of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity have brought suit for false arrest against police officials in Jackson, Mississippi who arrested fifteen freedom-riding Episcopal clergymen, all of whom were subsequently acquitted. The suit calls for the recovery of funds which have been expended pursuant to travel back and the appeal process. If the suit is successful, the money will be used for the defense of other freedom riders still facing further appeals.

2. A report was given on the Southern Interagency Conference, held in Atlanta on September 13-14, 1962.

New Orleans: 36 Roman Catholic schools opened on a desegregated basis in September 1962. The exact number of Negro students involved was unknown. 20 white public schools accepted 108 Negro students.

Chattanooga: No trouble or violence occurred upon desegregation of public schools, due to efforts of the Mayor's Committee and the police. The community had been prepared for the maintenance of law and order. There is severe overcrowding of Negro Junior High schools. Some Negro students attend school from 2:30 in the afternoon until 7:30 at night. There was a boycott by some of the students attending one school.

North Carolina: Seven more North Carolina communities had some desegregation this year, bringing the total up to 19. Four school boards desegregated voluntarily.

Atlanta: Ten schools were now desegregated, involving 44 Negro students.

Florida: 83 motels have been desegregated through the efforts of CORE and the NAACP.

Albany: The difficulties have been increased by personality and organizational splits in the Negro community and leadership. There were suggestions for future cooperation between intergroup agencies.

Voter Education Project: The project to date has spent $32,000 for a total of 21,000 reported new voters. A report was made on the harassment of organizational leaders who attended Voter Education meetings in Clarksdale, Mississippi.

3. "A Letter From A Region In My Mind," by James Baldwin, which appeared in the November 17, 1962 issue of the New Yorker Magazine, was discussed. Baldwin's letter, as was noted by commentator Edward P. Morgan, may mark the nearest anyone has ever come to leading a white man intellectually into the furnace of torment that has been, and still is, a black man's fate. Baldwin makes frighteningly clear the deadly purposefulness of Elijah Muhammad and his Nation of Islam movement, which has attracted thousands of followers on a doctrine of black supremacy, venomously preaching that all white people are devils, about to be brought down. The letter may first shock and enrage even the most thoughtful minds, who then, however, are likely to wilt in shame and humility before the major truths that Baldwin insists on assembling. The largest truth of all is that time is running out on the opportunity for the amicable acceptance of the Negro as a full-fledged member of the human race.

4. While the South desegregates its schools slowly and with great reluctance, tension over integration is growing in the North and West. Miss June Shagaloff, Special Assistant for Education for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, discussed with the Committee the problem of de facto school segregation.

School segregation in the North and West does not stem mainly from residential patterns. Although schools located in the centers of vast segregated residential areas of the big cities are a result of housing patterns, in many communities and even in the "fringe" districts of the large cities, zone lines have been drawn in such a manner as "to contain" Negro pupils in separate schools.

Segregation of children in public schools solely on the basis of race, even though physical facilities and other tangible factors may be equal, deprive the children of the minority group of equal education opportunities. The harmful psychological damage to the minority child, the lessening of his motivation to learn, the feelings of inferiority -- all of these are reinforced by segregated schools. Gerrymandering of school districts leads to segregated schools. Boards of Education have been accused of policies and practices resulting in inferior schooling for minority children.

Dy and Leave? Yes!

The Jim Crow School - North and West describes in great detail the problems of de facto segregation, as well as the role of the NAACP with this problem. Copies have been sent to the members of the Committee.

5. Executive Order Against Discrimination in Federal Housing, by Sol Rabkin and Theodore Leskes. Report on Executive Order No. 11063 barring discrimination in the sale or rental of federal housing and housing financed through federal assistance. Copies available without charge from the American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, or the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22.

6. The People Take The Lead, a record of progress in civil rights 1954 to 1963. A new edition of the American Jewish Committee's annual roundup of civil rights advances in the United States -- which reviews civil rights developments since 1954. Copies available from the American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, at 25¢ per copy, $20.00 per hundred.

7. Race, Religion and Revenge, by William Stringfellow. Negroes in New York's Harlem: what do they see, what do they say, as they look ahead to tomorrow? Copies can be obtained at 3¢ per copy by writing to The Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, 5 Forsyth Street, N. W., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

8. NAACP Public School Desegregation Front in North and West, by June Shagaloff, Special Assistant for Education of the NAACP. A summary of NAACP activity, state by state, reporting the existing problems in each community and the scope of NAACP action to eliminate segregation and discriminatory practices in public schools of the North and West. Copies have been sent to Committee members by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 20 West 40th Street, New York 18.

Yes

9. Farewell to the Liberals; A Negro View, by Loren Miller. Reprinted from the October 20, 1962 issue of The Nation. "There is a certain irony in the fact that liberals are the targets of Negro displeasure precisely because of their long association in the quest of equality." Copies are available without charge from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 20 West 40th Street, New York 18.

10. Equal Opportunity Union Made, published by the Educational Department of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. A history of ILGWU efforts through the years to combat discrimination. Single copies available free from the ILGWU, 1710 Broadway, New York 19.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING, JANUARY 23, 1963

RECEIVED FEB 11 1963 CCDTV LD

'The next meeting of the Mass Media Committee will be held on Wednesday, February 27, 1963 from 11:30 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. at the Young Women's Christian Association, 600 Lexington Avenue, New York City (52nd Street).

'Since this will be a luncheon meeting, please call Harry Fleischman at PL 1-4000 or write to him at 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, to let him know whether or not you plan to attend.

Among those present: Charles Butts, Editor, Mississippi Free Press; Lillian Cohen, National Conference of Christians and Jews; Bob Gore and Marvin Rich, Congress of Racial Equality; Louisa Hager, Young Women's Christian Association; Gunther Lawrence, Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Edith Macy, National Urban League; Jack Pomberton and Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Henry Schwartzchild and Stanley Wexler, Anti-Defamation League; Jacob Schlitt, Jewish Labor Committee; Harry Fleischman and Evelyn Kirshner, National Labor Service, American Jewish Committee.

1. Charles Butts, Editor of the Mississippi Free Press reported that his paper, the only liberal newspaper in the state, encourages all citizens to participate fully in their government. It is pro-civil rights and pro-labor, but is temperate in its approach.

The Free Press now has 5,000 subscribers, 4,200 in Mississippi itself. It needs $20,000 to absorb entire membership lists of organizations sympathetic to their aims. The leaders of these groups (unions, Masons, church groups, etc.) are encouraging this plan, but do not have the funds to pay for the subscriptions ($1.00 a year for 52 issues). After a year, he felt that most would renew on their own. Twenty thousand additional readers would make the Free Press the fourth largest in the state, and would expand its effectiveness in increasing the political voice and raising the living standards of the forgotten people of Mississippi.

Committee members felt it would be helpful if Editor & Publisher, Time, Newsweek and similar publications carried stories about the Free Press. They also offered suggestions concerning possible financial support for the paper.

Funds for bloc subscriptions may be sent to Charles L. Butts, Editor, Mississippi Free Press, 1253 Valley Street, Jackson, Mississippi.

2. Clyde Kennard, now suffering from cancer, is well into his third year in Mississippi's Parchman Penitentiary. He was charged with planning the theft, by an illiterate Negro teen-ager, of four sacks of chicken feed valued at $25. He was indicted and convicted by all-white juries. He was sentenced to seven years in the state penitentiary - the maximum penalty - by a white judge. All this happened in 1960, after he tried to enroll in the all-white University of Southern Mississippi at Hattiesburg, Kennard's home town. Now he's waiting for the Mississippi Supreme Court to rule on his appeal for a new trial.

During Army service in Korea Kennard purchased a 130-acre farm for his mother and stepfather to run. He attended Wendell Phillips High School, earned enough credits for graduation while in Korea, later went to the University of Chicago for three years. He left in 1955 at the end of his junior year to take over the Hattiesburg farm when his stepfather died. His troubles began after he persisted unsuccessfully in negotiations to complete his college education at the University of Southern Mississippi. After Kennard's 1959 application to MSC was rejected, the then Mississippi Gov. J. P. Coleman was reported to have said that "if Clyde did reapply, there'd be no way of holding him out because his record was sufficient. There'd be no alternative but to close the college."

In Mississippi there is a law that no one with a felony on his record will be admitted to a state school. Burglary is a felony. The Mississippi Free Press is the only state paper demanding justice for Kennard.

3. MISSISSIPPI - In view of the uncertainty over whether or not James Meredith would return for the second semester at the University of Mississippi unless harassment ceased, the Committee discussed ways of bringing the Meredith story more strongly to public view. It was suggested that a compilation of the harassment Meredith suffered during his stay at Ole Miss would be useful. It was agreed to contact leading educators and educational groups concerning statements on the difficulty of keeping up grades with such harassment, as well as raising the problem of dropping accreditation of Ole Miss for failing to uphold and represent the rights of students.

Up-to-the-minute developments in the continuing stories of two Negro students in the South - James Meredith and Harvey Gantt, scheduled to register at Clemson College in South Carolina - were reported on "Eyewitness" on Friday, January 25th on the CBS-TV Network.

A review of James Meredith's first term as the first Negro enrolled at the University of Mississippi, including an interview with U. S. Deputy Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach who was with Meredith during the crucial days of his enrollment, was presented on "This Is NBC News," Sunday, January 27th on the NBC-TV Network.

4. SOUTH CAROLINA - The voice of restraint, of moderation, was heard in South Carolina with increasing frequency as legal moves continued against operation of racially segregated public schools. Even as attorneys for state-supported colleges and secondary schools struggled to keep South Carolina schools segregated, state officials, school leaders and editorial writers sounded the call for public calm and order in the event desegregation is ordered. The enrollment of Harvey Gantt at Clemson College with little difficulty, received widespread coverage in the mass media.

For the first time in South Carolina history, Negroes came to lunch at the governor's mansion. There was no disturbance as Negroes and white persons mingled in the buffet-style serving lines and then on the mansion lawn throughout the afternoon. Negroes also joined in the receiving line that wound thru the mansion itself. They shook hands with the new governor, Donald S. Russell, and outgoing Gov. Ernest F. Hollings. Negroes of all economic classes were on hand.

5. ALABAMA - Eleven Alabama religious leaders issued a joint statement calling for "law and order and common sense" rather than "inflammatory" speeches in dealing with the state's racial problems. The statement followed an inaugural talk by Gov. George C. Wallace who pledged to preserve racial segregation practices, saying "segregation now, segregation tomorrow and segregation forever

Auburn University revealed that "several" Negroes have asked about enrolling at the all-white institution, but none had completed applications. The University of Alabama has announced that applications for enrollment from at least three Negro students were not completed before the deadline.

State Democratic Chairman Roy Mayhall of Jasper said in Birmingham that maintenance of law and order is more important to the state than segregation. Speaking to the Ministers Association of Greater Birmingham, Lt. Gov. elect James B. Allen said that he stands for "law and order through an honorable, lawful, peaceful means." These statements have put Mayhall and Allen at odds with Alabama's Governor.

6. NORTH CAROLINA - Durham City schools must give an estimated 200 Negro children "complete freedom" to choose the school they want to attend at the start of second semester. U. S. District Judge Edwin M. Stanley also ordered the school board to submit a desegregation plan by May 1, 1963. Queens College of Charlotte, a private women's college, will accept Negro students. Enrollment at Negro colleges in North Carolina is increasing at a faster rate than enrollment at white colleges in the state, a State Board of Higher Education chart revealed.

7. A report was made on the National Conference on Religion and Race, which was held in Chicago, January 14-17, 1963. This was the first national meeting convened jointly by all the major faith groups in the United States. The Conference provided an occasion for a serious and concrete examination of the role of churches and synagogues in meeting religious and civic racial problems. Preparation for the Conference was assisted by grants from the Aquinas Fund, the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation, the William J. Kerby Foundation, the Irwin Sweeny Miller Foundation and the Rockefeller Brothers Fund. The Secretariat for the Conference was the National Catholic Conference for Interracial Justice.

The Conference agreed upon continuing a united religious front against racial discrimination and segregation. Elimination of residential segregation in ten "target" cities (Atlanta, Chicago, Detroit, New Orleans, Oakland, San Francisco, St. Louis, San Antonio, Seattle and Pittsburgh) - will be one of the primary goals.

An appeal to the conscience of the American people was presented at the close of the Conference. It called for open occupancy in housing, equal opportunities in education and jobs, equal protection under the law, equal voting rights and the end of all forms of discrimination and segregation.

Most members of the committee hailed the success of the Conference, while others were less enthusiastic, feeling there was insufficient representation of Negro groups.

Highlights of the Conference were presented on "Directions '63" on Sunday, January 27th on the ABC-TV Network. Portions of the program were devoted to filmed segments of the conference and a panel discussion by religious leaders evaluating the meeting and its achievements. Among them were Rev. Martin Luther King; Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth; Albert Cardinal Meyer, Archbishop of Chicago; Rabbi Julius Mark; J. Irwin Miller, Rev. Benjamin E. Mays and Rev. John Morris. Dr. Franklin H. Littell, professor of church history at the Chicago Theological Seminary, prefaced the discussion with a statement on the historical perspective of race and religion.

The major papers and findings of the Conference will be published March 15, 1963 under the title of "Race: Challenge to Religion," to be published by Henry Regnery Company, 14 East Jackson Blvd., Chicago 4, Illinois. Hardcover $4.95; paperback $1.65. Special bulk discounts are available from the publisher.

8. Apprenticeship training is the toughest nut to crack in dealing with employment discrimination. Negroes throughout the land fill less than two per cent of apprenticeship spots, despite concern and pressure by civil-rights groups, Federal, state and local government agencies and some labor and management organizations. California industrialist Eddy Feldman, head of the Los Angeles Home Furnishing Mart, has devised a plan to stimulate minority group inclusion in an enlarged apprenticeship program. The problem, Feldman stresses is not so much dreaming up new ways to combat discrimination as it is to create adequate numbers of on-the-job training opportunities. Therefore he calls for administrative action and legislation by the State of California to require that all state contracts in which journeymen would be employed, include clauses providing for non-discriminatory hiring of at least one apprentice or trainee for every five journeymen.

The U. S. Department of Labor reports that hundreds of thousands of workers are needed for "hard-to-fill" skilled jobs. The "Let's Be Human" column has proposed the expansion of Mr. Feldman's proposal to cover the entire nation. Mandatory non-discriminatory training quotas for Federal, state and local public works, public service and defense projects would then go a long way toward filling the gap in skilled jobs and strengthening equal opportunity in training at the same time.

The failure to open training opportunities for Negroes and other minority group workers frequently stems from advice by school counsellors to minority group youngsters not to study for the skilled trades, on the grounds that job openings, except in rare cases, do not exist. Negro youngsters, therefore, are not motivated to attempt to become skilled workers. If government contracts included a mandatory clause for non-discriminatory hiring of apprentices it would be a strong factor in eliminating fears of exclusion and creating the proper motivations.

Another facet of the problem has been the reluctance of some local craft union leaders, for understandable economic reasons, to advocate either non-discriminatory apprenticeship or opening union rolls by increasing the number of apprentices. In addition, since many such locals are democratically run, local union heads fear that such advocacy might lead to their defeat in the next election. These union leaders are not unmindful of the fact that government action could make it easier for unions to live up to their equalitarian ideals. If the Federal, state and local governments would adopt the above program, these union leaders would be able to go to their members and say, without fear of successful opposition, "This is the law of the land. We've got to go along with this policy of anti-discrimination and increased apprenticeship training."

Members of the Committee were urged to encourage mass media support of this plan to stimulate the inclusion of minority youth in enlarged apprenticeship programs, on the theory that the best way to insure greater opportunity is to increase the number of apprenticeship openings.

9. At a time when major crime is rising alarmingly in U. S. cities, a new approach to the problem is being tried in Detroit. The strategy is to combine improved police work with better relations between police and Detroit's Negroes. The man responsibile is George Edwards, who resigned as a Justice of the Michigan Supreme Court to become Police Commissioner. Commissioner Edwards is a veteran of stormy days in Detroit's history. In the 1930s, as an organizer for the United Auto Workers, he clashed with the police himself. Later, he was admitted to the bar, served as Detroit city councilman, and became successively a judge of the Wayne County juvenile court, a circuit-court judge and a State Supreme Court Justice. Relations between police and Negroes have been a sore spot in Detroit for a long time. Edwards has ended that "cold war." Right off, he undertook a heavy speaking schedule in Negro neighborhoods, explaining why he had to be tough and promising to be fair to both black and white. He has been able to get across the feeling that he is impartial, that he will not tolerate racial discrimination by the police. For the first time in Detroit's history, in the course of budget negotiations, the Detroit branch of the NAACP endorsed the Department's request for more police manpower and for higher police pay.

It was agreed that it would be useful if an article on this story should appear in a mass circulation magazine.

10. The United Packinghouse, Food and Allied Workers, AFL-CIO (UPWA) established in 1960 the Russell Bull Annual $1,000 Scholarship Award, to be granted "each year to the student in college or in high school preparing for college who makes an outstanding contribution of character and performance in the area of civil rights" and establishes "financial need for the award in order to continue his studies." Applications for the Russell Bull Scholarship are now being accepted. Inquiries may be directed to President Ralph Helstein, UPWA, Room 1800, 608 S. Dearborn, Chicago, Illinois.

The Educational and Defense Fund of the Congress of Racial Equality is offering several $500 and $1,000 Civil Rights Scholarships. Inquiries may be directed to the Educational and Defense Fund, Congress of Racial Equality, 38 Park Row, New York 38.

If you know young people who may be eligible, please be good enough to draw these opportunities to their attention.

11. A pocket-sized booklet, WHAT'S AHEAD? written expressly for parents and other adults as a guide to helping youngsters choose worthwhile careers, has been published by the National Urban League. The brochure sets forth in simple language both the needs of youth today for career guidance and training, plus suggestions on what best the adult can do to help. Copies, priced at 5¢ each or $4.00 per hundred, may be obtained in quantity from the National Urban League, Program Department, 14 East 48th Street, New York 17.

12. PUBLICATIONS OF AJC - 173 individual items are listed with descriptive annotations and indexed by title in the new edition of the American Jewish Committee's publication catalog. These are tools and materials, carefully selected by intergroup specialists, for use by unions, human relations agencies schools, social action groups of church and synagogue, civic organizations and the individual citizen. The range of subject matter is wide. It includes materials on civil rights, civil liberties and the democratic process; the manifold aspects of prejudice - from the subtle to the violent, the United Nations and international affairs. Single copies are available free of charge from the American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22.

13. INTEGRATION AND THE NEGRO MOOD, by Harold Isaacs - Discusses changes within the Negro community as the struggle for integration proceeds too slowly. Raises complex but important questions about the Negro search for group identity. Reprinted from the December 1962 issue of Commentary magazine. Copies are available from the American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, at 15¢ per copy, $12.50 per hundred.

14. PREJUDICE IN CHILDREN: A CONVERSATION WITH DR. SPOCK. In an interview, conducted by Miss Gertrude Noar, director of the Anti-Defamation League's education department, Dr. Spock offers practical advice of the kind that has made his "Baby and Child Care" a household necessity. Copies are available from the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22, at 25¢ per copy, $20.00 per hundred.

15. RACE AND THE RELIGIOUS TRADITION, by Robert Gordis - This pamphlet is a chapter from the recently published volume "The Root and The Branch: Judaism and the Free Society," by Dr. Robert Gordis. Dr. Gordis' analysis of the sources of the Jewish attitude toward human equality and racial justice meets a critical need. Both Christian and Jewish leaders must make increased efforts to educate the community to a more active awareness of the utter incompatability of racist doctrines and practices with the teachings of their faiths. Copies are available from the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22 at 25¢ per copy, $20.00 per hundred.

16. RACE, by John Gillin - An anthropologist's approach to the question of race. Copies are available from the National Conference of Christians and Jews, 43 West 57th Street, New York 19, at 5¢ per copy.

17. DESIGN FOR DEMOCRACY - Announcement of Brotherhood Week Observance. Copies are available from the National Conference of Christians and Jews, 43 West 57th Street, New York 19. Single copies are available free of charge.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING, FEBRUARY 27, 1963

Among those present: Vincent Bowditch and Lillian Cohen, National Conference of Christians and Jews; Ivis Calvet, Catholic Interracial Council; Louisa Hager, Young Women's Christian Association; Sonya Kaufer, American Jewish Committee; Edith Macy, National Urban League; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Henry Schwartzchild, Anti-Defamation League; Joel O'Brien, Joel O'Brien Productions; Harry Fleischman and Evelyn Kirshner, National Labor Service, American Jewish Committee.

1. Instead of having regular meetings of the Mass Media Committee, in the future we will hold meetings only when some emergency situation requires one. Should any member of the Committee feel that a meeting is needed, he is asked to call me at PL 1-4000. All members are urged to send me copies of any new literature or mass media plans of their organizations in the field of desegregation.

2. A report was made on the Mass Media Committee's effort to stimulate educators to take up the question of the effect of harassment and intimidation on learning at the University of Mississippi. The Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues, a committee of the American Psychological Association, has asked one of its members to prepare an article on the subject for a scholarly journal, which organizations might quote in future educational work. The preparation of this article, reports Dr. French, chairman of the Society, will take several months. Even though James Meredith has returned to the University of Mississippi, the article may have far-reaching significance in the effort to inform the public why desegregation must be accomplished in other schools without the kind of harassment that confronted Meredith.

3. The Association of University Professors does not initiate an inquiry unless there is a specific request from an aggrieved party, and also deals only with denials of academic freedom in a particular one. Attempts will be made to bring the facts about harassment and intimidation on the University of Mississippi campus to the attention of several college presidents who might stimulate their fellow educators through their professional associations to make representations to the Southern Accrediting Association. A summary was prepared of the press clippings and is now being reviewed by Professor Robert Bierstedt, chairman of the Department of Sociology of New York University, to make sure that the content and tone comports with academic standards. Professor Bierstedt also suggests that we may wish to broaden the point of our statement to say that not only learning but teaching is affected by an atmosphere of intimidation and harassment. He may have some other suggestions for the use of this summary statement.

4. The Committee helped Charles Butts, editor of the Mississippi Free Press, contact various people who could aid the paper's expansion program. Butts said our contacts were rewarding not only for money but for giving his newspaper additional credentials. Nine thousand dollars has already been pledged by various unions, foundations and individuals toward the twenty thousand dollars needed.

5. Clyde Kennard, sentenced to seven years in prison in Mississippi for "stealing" five bags of chicken feed, has been released from prison. Governor Ross Barnett ordered Kennard, who is suffering from cancer, transferred to the University of Mississippi Hospital and later suspended his sentence and set him free. The Governor explained, however, that the suspension would be revoked if Kennard was not good. If Kennard still wants to go to a white university, Governor Barnett may decide that it is "bad" conduct.

After his release, Kennard underwent an eight-hour operation in Chicago for the removal of a section of cancerous intestine, and is now convalescing.

6. William Higgs, a Mississippi lawyer who is leading the legal and political fight against civil rights violations in Mississippi, was convicted of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and sentenced to six months in jail and a $500 fine. Hinds County Judge Russell Moore passed sentence after an all white male jury deliberated 35 minutes to find the Jackson attorney guilty. It was reported that the Hinds County Bar Association will probably move to disbar Higgs.

He was convicted on the testimony of William McKinley Daywalt III, 16, of Collegeville, Pennsylvania, who said that Higgs had committed unnatural sex acts with him, even after Higgs' housekeeper, chief defense witness, testified that the boy told her that the story was not true. Daywalt was picked up after he hit an automobile with Higgs' car. He gave police the phony name he had been using in Jackson -- Tom Bono.

Higgs, who flatly denied the charge, said that under present conditions in Mississippi he would have no real chance to prove his innocence in the Mississippi courts and that his conviction would be automatic by a white Mississippi jury presided over by a Judge who is on the Board of the Citizens Council. Added Higgs:

"In effect I have been forced to leave my home state because I believe that the Constitution of the United States means that Negro citizens deserve the same rights as white citizens, and I have tried to implement my belief. The charge against me, which is completely false, has in my opinion been manufactured to stain my reputation because I am so involved in the civil rights movement. I would not hesitate for one minute to have this charge heard by a jury any place in the United States where its members would not face economic reprisal, social ostracism and possible physical harm by returning a verdict of not guilty.

"I speak not as a martyr, but on the basis of my arrest last summer in Clarksdale for travelling in an integrated group where I was threatened with death by local police for my civil rights activities. I believe that if I returned to Mississippi the simple misdemeanor charge would be changed to one or more felony charges that would result in a very long prison sentence. The record shows that civil rights proponents in Mississippi who have served prison terms have been the victims of physical abuse and cruel treatment."

Higgs related the following facts about the charge brought against him on February 1.

"On February 1, 1963, I was arrested in Jackson on the charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. The 16-year-old boy who made this charge is a native of Pennsylvania who had been given emergency temporary lodging by me. I have had many people stay over at my house in the last few years who have been in Mississippi to assist me in my civil rights work.

"This youth on several occasions asked me if he could borrow my car but I refused. Finally on January 29 the boy took my car without my permission and wrecked it in an accident. After his arrest and lengthy questioning by police, he made his accusation against me. He is still in jail in Jackson.

"I was arrested on Friday, February 1, and released on $500 bail. Trial has been set on the charge which, under Mississippi law, is punishable by a fine of up to $500 and imprisonment for not more than 6 months, for February 14, 1963."

Higgs based his statement that the charge against him was reprisal for his civil rights activity on these facts:

1) He was one of the attorneys for James Meredith in the successful suit for Meredith's entrance into the University of Mississippi.

2) He is the attorney for Dewey Greene, the second Negro student seeking admission to the University. He had filed the Greene case only 3½ hours prior to his arrest.

3) He is representing a Negro, William Smith, before the United States Supreme Court on a rape conviction where the confession was coerced through brutal beatings.

4) He was legal advisor to the Reverends Merrill Lindsay and R.L.T. Smith, in their 1962 congressional campaigns, the first two Negroes to run for Congress since the Civil War.

5) He has filed suit in Washington, D. C., along with seven Mississippi Negroes, seeking to compel the Department of Justice to provide federal marshals to protect Negro citizens and to require the government to prosecute Mississippi officials who have denied Negroes their civil rights.

6) He was counsel for many Freedom Riders in 1961.

7) He is counsel for four Episcopal ministers presently suing three Jackson policemen and the city judge for $44,000 damages under the federal civil rights acts.

Higgs emphasized that he hoped some day to return to his native state and resume the practice of law in an atmosphere of freedom. "I was born in Mississippi and planned to live my life there. But under the present conditions, I am convinced that my life is not safe in Mississippi."

Higgs, whose parents still live in Mississippi, was graduated at the age of 19 from the University of Mississippi as the top man in his class. After his graduation from the Harvard Law School, he returned to practice law in Jackson. He was voted by Life magazine a few months ago as one of the 100 most outstanding young men in the nation. Higgs was a recipient of a Lasker Civil Liberties Fellowship at Brandeis University and was honored with the annual Florina Lasker award of the New York Civil Liberties Union, and a similar award from the Civil Liberties Educational Foundation of Los Angeles.

7. Politics Is Our Business, a new 26-minute educational film, sponsored by the Institute for Political Education at Morgan State College, Baltimore, Maryland, was shown to the members of the Committee. Its purpose is to fill some gaps not filled by existing political films. For instance, the film gives a rather full description of the operation of a voting machine, on the premise that "most people are afraid of a voting machine and do not trust them." It also pays more attention than usual to the subject, "How to Organize and Work a Precinct." The film also portrays politics as an activity for all citizens, regardless of race or color. It reflects present-day urban America and includes more Negroes registering and voting than are found in other existing political films. The film was produced by Samuel L. Schulman, Inc., 23 Livingston Street, Trenton, New Jersey for the Institute for Political Education at Morgan State College. Dr. G. James Fleming, professor of political science at Morgan State College, is writer of the script and director of the film. It may be rented from any agency or library which usually rents films. Politics Is Our Business is one of several projects in a citizenship education program assisted by a grant from the Ford Foundation to Morgan State College.

8. The ethical intent and the true meaning of such present-day behavior as prayer vigils and freedom rides were considered on a television program, "The Ethics of Integration," which was presented on Directions '63 on Sunday, March 3rd on the ABC-TV Network. Participants in the program were noted author Lillian Smith; Rabbi Everett E. Gendler, spiritual leader of Princeton Jewish Center, who participated in a 1962 prayer vigil in Albany, Georgia; and Father Robert L. Pierson, Vice-Chairman of Christ the King Foundation, Assistant Priest of Grace Church, White Plains, New York, who traveled South with other clergymen from the North to discuss the religious aspects of integration with their Southern colleagues. (Father Pierson is the son-in-law of Governor Nelson Rockefeller).

9. FREEDOM TO THE FREE: CENTURY OF EMANCIPATION, 1863-1963. A report to the President by the United States Commission on Civil Rights. Copies are available from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C., at $1.00 per copy.

10. BOOKS FOR FRIENDSHIP, a list of books recommended for children. This is an annotated listing of current and classical children's books which are outstanding for their intergroup content and treatment of human relations subjects. Copies are available from the American Friends Service Committee, 160 North 15th Street, Philadelphia 2, Pennsylvania and the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22, New York at 50¢ per copy.

11. RACE RELATIONS IN THE SOUTH - 1962; A Tuskegee Institute Report. Forty-ninth annual report to the American people on developments in race relations. Copies may be obtained by writing to the Department of Records and Research, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama.

12. DESEGREGATION IN HIGHER EDUCATION. A list of formerly all-white colleges and universities of the 17 southern and border states and the District of Columbia known to be desegregated. Copies may be obtained by writing to the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, N.W., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

13. THE OXFORD DISASTER - PRICE OF DEFIANCE, by Karl Wiesenburg, representative of Jackson County, Mississippi. The articles were first printed in the Pascagoula Chronicle as "a reasoned viewpoint around which may rally all Mississippians who are appalled at what is happening in their state. It can be the foundation of their credo." Rep. Wiesenburg is a well-known legal scholar and has fought courageously for labor and welfare in the Mississippi House of Representatives. Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained by writing to The Chronicle, Pascagoula, Mississippi.

14. THE GREAT QUESTION, an action guidebook by 34 groups marking the 15th anniversary of the UN's Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The 48-page manual spells out specific programs to wipe out discrimination in jobs, education, housing and public accommodations. Available at 50¢ per copy from the American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING, JUNE 14, 1963

Among those present: Whitney Young, Guichard Parris, Edith Macy, Evelyn Broide, National Urban League; Bernice Bridges, National Social Welfare Assembly; Louisa Hager, Young Women's Christian Association; Father Philip Hurley, Catholic Interracial Council; Sonya Kaufer, American Jewish Committee; Jean Luckey, American Baptist Convention; Carrie Meares, United Church Women; Risa Pollack, National Council of Jewish Women; Marvin Rich, Congress of Racial Equality; Henry Schwartzchild and Stanley Wexler, Anti-Defamation League; Jac Wasserman, National Sharecroppers Fund; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Amram Nowack, American Jewish Congress; Harry Fleischman and Evelyn Kirshner, National Labor Service, American Jewish Committee.

1. With his legislative effort sputtering and with Negro revolution increasing in its impetus, President Kennedy's speech on national television ringingly raised the moral issues involved. All agreed that the soundest reason why whites should want to get rid of race discrimination is not that Negroes are protesting, but that bias violates justice and morality.

Suggestions were made that we try to get the three major TV networks to simultaneously present a broadcast in support of the President's program. National organizations are asked to urge their local affiliates to call on local radio-TV stations to editorialize in support of that program. It was hoped that such activity might influence local organizations and citizens to take a more active role in support of civil rights.

2. Whitney Young, Jr., executive director of the National Urban League, discussed with the Committee a massive domestic Marshall Plan to help ready Negroes for acceptance of their legal rights. The plan would include the elimination of Negro ghettos, provisions for better schools and teachers, assurance to qualified Negroes of all types of employment and job advancement and guarantees of "first-class citizenship."

The concept of equal opportunity is not enough. Something must be done about the despair and hopelessness that has been plaguing the Negro for 300 years. Negroes should be given preferential treatment to help them catch up to their fellow whites. There must be tangible evidence that things will be better, people must realize its reality. The Negro today is impatient, he wants his due. He wants to feel that he is capable of making a major contribution to his community. Mr. Young called for a special national effort to overcome the damaging effects of generations of denial, and urged that both public and private social agencies cooperate in this massive program.

Mr. Young felt that the Black Muslim were being built up by the mass media, which gave them too much favorable publicity, thus painting a distorted picture of what the Negro is really fighting for. They do not help the civil rights movement. He urged the mass media to expose the racist character of the Black Muslims rather than play them up. He suggested that Negro organizations ignore the Black Muslims, and refuse to appear on TV or radio with any Black Muslim people.

3. The problem of unfair reporting by magazines and newspapers of the Negro situation was discussed. It was felt that predictions of inevitable violence are getting too much publicity. It was suggested that a seminar be held for the press stressing the importance of improving the reporting of the racial crisis. It was suggested that Fisk University or the Columbia School of Journalism might be willing to hold such a conference with the Southern Regional Council. It was also felt that individual visits by top leaders in the civil rights movement to top leaders of the press stressing this need for fair reporting would be very helpful to civil rights progress.

It was suggested that a fact sheet on the Black Muslims should be prepared for distribution to the mass media giving them background, numbers, reasons for opposition and other material. Editors would appreciate such information. The press should encourage reports of progress, the non-violent demonstrations and the importance of bi-racial discussions and actions.

4. Three proposed constitutional amendments that would radically change the United States system of government are moving quickly but quietly through the nation's state legislatures. (See attached article from The Machinist, June 20, 1963.)

During the six months since the campaign began, the amendments have been introduced in as many as 40 states. Although several legislatures have rejected the proposals, others still have them under consideration. A survey has shown that one, two and even all three of the proposals have been pushed through one or both legislative bodies in 26 states, often with little or no debate.

The members of the Committee were urged to encourage their local chapters to call upon their members and other citizens, bar associations, civic groups, religious bodies to join in an effort to inform the nation about these proposals and to urge state legislatures to defeat them. In New Jersey, the State Senate passed two of the amendments, but later rescinded its actions because of the strong pressure exerted by the New Jersey Bar Association.

5. The Civil Rights Story; a Year's Review, by Theodore Leskes, covers the period October 1, 1961 to September 30, 1962. It highlights the provisions of civil rights laws enacted by state legislatures during 1962; the Meredith case; federal civil rights activities; developments in the Federal legislative, executive and judicial branches and recommendations of the Civil Rights Commission regarding higher education, voting, employment, public education, housing and the administration of justice; desegregation in public schools; the status of desegregation in the 17 southern and border states; and actions against de facto segregation in the north. Copies are available from the National Labor Service, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, N. Y., at 25¢ per copy, $20.00 per hundred.

6. Apprenticeship Training in New York, a handbook to help young people secure training for skilled trades in existing apprenticeship programs. This handbook is a compilation of apprenticeship opportunities in New York at the present time. Copies are available free of charge from the Workers Defense League, Committee on Minority Employment Rights, 112 East 19th Street, New York 3, New York.

7. Letter from Birmingham City Jail, by Martin Luther King, Jr. Eight of Alabama's ranking white religious leaders issued a formal statement terming the Negro protest action "unwise and untimely." They commended the white community, the local dailies and "law enforcement officers, in particular, on the calm manner in which these demonstrations had been handled," and ended by saying: "We further strongly urge our own Negro community to withdraw support from these demonstrations, and to unite locally in working peacefully for a better Birmingham." From his cell in the Birmingham jail, Dr. King, President of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, answered the white religious leaders. Copies are available from the American Friends Service Committee, 160 North 15th Street, Philadelphia 2, Pennsylvania, at 10¢ per copy. Quantity prices on request.

8. The North and West Have Problems, Too, by G. W. Foster, Jr. Reprinted from the April 20, 1963 issue of Saturday Review. This article deals with school segregation arising from residential patterns, the concepts of the neighborhood school, and the problem of the slum school. Professor Foster reviews the methods now employed to overcome de facto segregation. Placed in the hands of school boards, administrators, teachers and concerned citizens, this article can help to raise the level of understanding and practical action to cope with one of the most serious problems facing America today. Copies are available from the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22, or the American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, at 10¢ each, $7.50 per hundred.

9. Business - Next Target for Integration, by John Perry. Reprinted from Harvard Business Review, March-April 1963. Until now business has been left pretty much alone, and for the most part management has followed a do-nothing policy; but forces are gathering which may well develop into active conflict. Copies are available from Harvard Business Review, Soldiers Field, Boston 63, Massachusetts, at $1.00 per copy, quantity prices on request.

10. North Cautioned by Urban League; Broad Plan Offered to Close Gap Between Races and Avert Negro Violence, reprinted from The New York Times, June 10, 1963. Article on the speech made by Whitney Young, Jr., executive director of the National Urban League at the Commodore Hotel. Copies are available from the National Urban League, 14 East 48th Street, New York 17, N. Y., without charge.

11. A statement by the Board of Trustees of the National Urban League, urging a crash program of special effort to close the gap between the conditions of Negro and white citizens. Copies are available from the National Urban League, 14 East 48th Street, New York 17, at 10¢ per copy.

12. Federal Programs to Promote Employment and Development in Rural Communities, by M. Hayes Mizell. This report is the outgrowth of a conference held at Penn Community Center in the winter of 1963. Copies are available from the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, N. W., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

13. Businessmen Point the Way, contains texts of statements made by business groups in a number of Southern cities calling on all businesses serving the public to desegregate. Copies are available from the Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth Street, N. W., Atlanta 3, Georgia.

14. The Great Question, a guide for community action for human rights, sponsored by 34 national organizations. Copies are available from the American Jewish Committee, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, at 50¢ per copy, $35.00 per hundred. (See attached brochure.)

MEETING OF THE MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE OF THE CONSULTATIVE CONFERENCE ON DESEGREGATION AND THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION IN HOUSING WITH THE PRESIDENT'S COMMITTEE ON EQUAL OPPORTUNITY IN HOUSING

September 17, 1963

Among those present: Paget L. Alves, Federal Housing Administration; Doris Beausoleil and Lloyd Trent, State Commission on Human Rights; Leslie Bidwell, United Church Women; Algernon B. Black, Roma Conable, Frances Levenson, National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing; Rev. Clarence Cove, United Presbyterian Church; Alfred Chernin, National Community Relations Advisory Committee; Frederick Echelmeyer and Charlotte C. Meacham, American Friends Service Committee; David Gerard, Walter Giesey and George Schermer, President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing; Marvin S. Gilman, Renewal Developers, Inc.; John Heyman, City Rent and Rehabilitation Center; Reginald A. Johnson and Edith Macy, National Urban League; Henry Lee Moon, NAACP; Jack E. Wood, N. Y. City Commission on Human Rights; Sol Rabkin and Henry Schwartzchild, Anti-Defamation League, Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; James Scheuer, Renewal and Development Corp.; Boris Shishkin, AFL-CIO; Rev. Cornelius C. Tarplie and Rev. Arthur Walmsley, National Council Episcopal Church; Sonya Kaufer, Harry Fleischman and Evelyn Kirshner, American Jewish Committee.

1. At the request of the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing, a joint meeting was held with the Mass Media Committee of the Consultative Conference on Desegregation and the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing to discuss a national education and information program for open occupancy housing.

2. There was much discussion on the techniques of an education and information program, and what role and responsibilities the President's Committee, national and local civic and religious groups play in setting up machinery for such a program. All present agreed that what is needed is a broad plan for generating public support and participation. A positive posture by the President's Committee was deemed essential. One suggestion advanced by participants was the need for success stories, as well as good pictures about integrated middle-class suburban housing.

3. The enclosed paper was presented by George Schermer, and the following recommendations agreed upon:

A Sub-Committee was set up to work with the President's Committee to make suggestions on the format and follow-up of conferences to be called by the President's Committee in pilot communities with industry, business and community leaders. It was suggested that communities with no state or municipal fair housing laws, and with a fairly large Negro housing market, be picked. The members of this Sub-Committe include: Charlotte Meacham, convenor; Marvin Gilman, Frances Levenson, Reginald Johnson and Ed Rutledge. The Committee is empowered to coopt other members if necessary. Some of the communities suggested for possible inclusion in such a program were Cape Canaveral, Florida; Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo, Akron, Ohio; Washington, D. C.; Wichita, Kansas; Des Moines, Iowa; Louisville, Kentucky and Norfolk, Virginia.

A WORKING PAPER ON PUBLIC SUPPORT AND PARTICIPATION IN A PROGRAM FOR EQUAL OPPORTUNITY IN HOUSING

PREPARED FOR THE PRESIDENT'S COMMITTEE ON EQUAL OPPORTUNITY IN HOUSING
BY GEORGE SCHERMER

The goal of equal opportunity in housing set forth in President Kennedy's Executive Order 11063 requires effective action by three major groups:

a. Government
b. The Housing Industry
c. The General Public

The government agencies are required to act in response to the EO. The housing industry can be caused to act by the government agencies. The industry, however, will respond with reluctance and resistance unless there are indications of support from the public. What follows is a broad plan for generating public support and participation.

I UNDERLYING CONSIDERATIONS

A. The Elements of Public Support

More than general public good will is required. The emphasis must be upon participation and action by thousands of particular persons and organizations.

First, two groups of dedicated pioneers or pace setters are required:

(a) Middle income non-white families in significant numbers who will deliberately and actively undertake to buy or rent homes on a widely dispersed basis in developments which would normally be exclusively white.

(b) Middle income white families in substantially larger numbers who will deliberately and actively undertake to buy or rent homes next door to pace setting non-white families.

The more important of these two is the non-whites. If non-whites actively seek homes on a dispersed basis the other elements of the program will fall into place. Unless that happens no other part of the program will have any value. This type of pace setting behavior will not emerge spontaneously in response to a mass education program. It must be fostered by civic and religious organizations. A citizen-based pioneering crusade is required.

. Second. Civic, religious, labor, civil rights, and similar organizations in large numbers must voice their support regularly and repeatedly for all affirmative actions on the part of government, the operators of the housing industry, and the pace setters.

Third. Large numbers of white families who may be unready to act affirmatively as pace setters should be conditioned through the organizations and institutions with which they identify, to accept racially inclusive patterns without resistance or panic.

Fourth. The mass media, press, radio and television, should be fully informed so that it can sympathetically interpret both the general program and specific activities and events.

B. The basic Approach

The basic approach then should be organizational. The PC should not attempt to conduct its own mass education program. It is unlikely that the PC can command sufficient staff to sustain an educational program of the vast proportions required.

The PC should place the responsibility for generating public participation upon the shoulders of those institutions and organizations that constitute the civic consciences of the Nation. Tremendous resources and energies are available. The racial unrest of 1963 has generated widespread anxiety and the emotional need to act constructively. The PC has the opportunity to harness this energy and to direct it toward desirable and constructive goals.

Because its own resources are so limited, the PC must be particularly adroit in exercising an inspirational and directive role while avoiding involvement in operational detail. It should chart the general course, generate a broad sense of common cause, stimulate movement and supply general guide lines. Once those things are done, it should do whatever is necessary to sustain the momentum but it should provide ample opportunity to each of the groups to exercise its own creativity in designing the program.

II A BLUEPRINT FOR INITIAL PLANNING FOR PUBLIC PARTICIPATION

A. Elements of General Strategy

The general strategy may be divided into two elements:

1. The mobilization and activation of the organizations and institutions which collectively serve as the civic conscience.

2. The direct utilization of the mass media.

B. The Specific Functions of the PC

1. Define the common goals.

2. Develop the basic theme or message which will serve as the banner for all groups.

3. Mobilize the groups for action.

4. Provide the inspiration and the general guide lines for action.

5. Sustain momentum.

6. Communicate with the general public through the mass media.

C. The Goals

1. In general terms, the goal is an open racially inclusive housing market throughout the United States.

2. In specific terms, the goal is to have a particular Negro family take possession of a home of its choice in a neighborhood which is not likely to become a segregated Negro area. This specific objective must be repeated thousands of times in thousands of localities.

D. Precipitating Affirmative Action

The policy has been established by the EO. The stage has been set. The government housing agencies and the industry have their roles defined. No action will occur, however, except as individual citizens and organizations act. Such action should be directed to achieving the goals. This will occur only if civic organizations are mobilized to act.

E. Mobilizing the Organizations

1. Organizations to be mobilized. The organizations included in the Leadership Conference on Human Relations provide a basic list. Numerous other groups which may have been reluctant to participate in the Leadership Conference may be responsive to a call from the President or the PC. The list of organizations can be extended indefinitely subject to practical considerations of time and resources. (An extended list is in preparation.)

2. Procedure

Step 1. Organize a small planning committee representative of the groups in the Leadership Conference. The Mass Media Committee of the Leadership Conference, with a few additions, would make an ideal planning group. (This group will meet in early September.)

Step 2. Call a general conference of top level organizational leadership. If possible, have the President personally issue the invitations to the conference or arrange for him to meet briefly with the group. At this level, the plans should be outlined in general broad terms. The objective of the meeting is to arrive at agreement in principle on a coordinated program without going into detail.

Step 3. Follow through with a series of working conferences with those representatives who will be responsible for the program in each of the respective organizations.

Step 4. The national series of conferences should probably be supplemented with regional conferences.

Step 5. Establish and maintain a system of communication among the organizations so that a sense of common cause and concentrated action can be sustained.

F. Theme or Message

The over-all program must be strongly inspirational. There will need to be dozens, perhaps hundreds, of distinctive and specially tailored appeals, pamphlets, speeches, persuasive documents, etc. These will be more effective if prepared and distributed by the cooperating groups. However, all must be variations on a central theme. This central theme should be supplied by the PC. (Consultant is attempting to develop such a theme. However, this is something that should emerge after a number of creative people have contributed their thoughts.)

G. Mass Media

1. The message content to be conveyed through the mass media should be designed to condition the public for the programs to be conducted by the organizations in consultation with the organizational representatives.

2. The actual utilization of the mass media should be developed as fully as possible by the PC through its own staff specialist. However, all of the participating organizations should be encouraged to channel their own messages through the mass media, as well.

H. Educational and Informational Materials

1. A few basic informational pamphlets featuring the general theme and the goals should be prepared and distributed by the PC.

2. A periodic informational newsletter should be issued to all the participating organizations.

3. The PC should provide the machinery for expediting the exchange and distribution of educational and informational materials created and utilized by the participating organizations.

I. Staff Requirements

(Consideration has been given only to staff requirements for the education and public participation aspects of the program.

1. Director of Public Affairs and three assistants.

(One assistant for mass media and two for the preparation and exchange of educational and informational materials.)

2. Director of Organizational Activities and four assistants.

(Assistants to maintain liaison and communication with dooperating organizations, promote regional conference, etc.)

J. Intra-Governmental Resources

Substantial benefits will accrue if there is consultation and a degree of coordinated planning on the part of the PC, the HHFA and the Constituent Agencies, the Commission on Civil Rights, and the PCEEO. It would seem advisable that there be established an inter-agency committee at the staff level. In any event, the PC, which suffers most seriously among these agencies with respect to staff inadequacies, should seek assistance from these sources until its own staff structure has been more fully developed.

SUMMARY OF CCD MASS MEDIA COMMITTEE MEETING, JANUARY 31, 1964

V Mr TW

FLASH!
As we were preparing these minutes for mimeoing, word came that the United States Supreme Court on March 9, 1964 ruled unanimously that a public official cannot recover libel damages for criticism of his official performance unless he proves that the statement was made with deliberate malice. The Court's unanimous reversal of a $500,000 Alabama libel judgment against the New York Times and four Negro ministers should have an important, immediate and helpful impact on press coverage of race relations in the South.

Among those present: Alfred Chernin and Sam Spiegler, National Community Relations Advisory Council; Val Coleman, Congress of Racial Equality; Bernice Graziana, National Council of Jewish Women; Louisa Hager, Young Women's Christian Association; Sonya Kaufer, American Jewish Committee; Walter Long, American Baptist Convention; Robert McNamara III; S. Gary Oniki, United Church of Christ; Myrtle Passantino, Catholic Interracial Council; Alan Reitman, American Civil Liberties Union; Galen Weaver, National Conference on Religion and Race; Albert J. Zack, AFL-CIO; Harry Fleischman and Evelyn Kirshner, National Labor Service.

1. Robert C. McNamara III of Chicago discussed his proposal for a Civil Rights Information Service which would operate as a clearing house for public information concerning the civil rights movement. Its principal project would be a daily audio news service to Negro radio stations. A reporter would travel through the South with a tape recorder, to be on the spot as big events occurred, get interviews and other newsworthy recordings, and transmit these twice a day to Negro radio stations via a telephone conference call arrangement. Mr. McNamara estimated that for 6 minutes per recording, twice a day, it would cost the stations $30 to $40 per month.

There were many questions raised by those present. Could this be done so cheaply; could the Negro stations afford this service; would they really want it or need it; did they have the recording equipment necessary to receive these transmissions; how costly would it really be to send a reporter on such a mission; would it not be a duplication of existing news service by newspapers. The consensus seemed to be that while it was a laudable idea, many financial and technical problems remained to be worked out.

Other points of his project -- a clearinghouse for civil rights pamphlets, and a library of films concerning civil rights -- were questioned because they seemed to duplicate existing services provided by the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Civil Liberties Clearing House, the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League. It was suggested that it might be cheaper to expand these services rather than initiate a brand-new one.

2. The Arts Division of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California has produced civil rights spot announcements delivered by leading actors and authors, Rod Serling, Gary Merrill, Sam Jaffe, Betty Ackerman, Anthony Franciosa, Burt Lancaster and Rick Jason. The eight announcements on tape can be purchased for $5.00, including shipping charges. These announcements could be used on local

Some organizations reported that some hotel and restaurant business leaders were writing to their Senators supporting the public accommodations section of the civil rights bill, to offset the restaurant lobby against it. The ACLU reported an ingenious method of putting pressure on Congress. Some people write letter to the editors of hometown newspapers - sending a copy of that letter to their Senators to make sure they know who sent it. On these letters, the writers list a "cc to Senator So-and-So" so the editor knows that they are also sending copies to their Senators.

3. The representative from CORE described a serious problem confronting that organization and asked for advice. The St. Louis Globe Democrat ran a series of articles charging CORE with being infiltrated by Communists. Unfortunately, a CORE secretary in the midwest mistakenly said that CORE did not care what a member's political beliefs were, and released such a statement to the papers. However, CORE's constitution states that members of the Communist Party cannot be members of CORE. CORE was thinking of suing for libel, and asked for advice. Suing a newspaper is a very tricky business, because they are in a position to ferret out every skeleton in every closet of the opposition group; American libel laws are looser than those in Britain and harder to pin down; if a favorable decision is not received, your position is worse than before. It was suggested that CORE prepare a "defense packet" such as the ACLU keeps on hand for such occasions, consisting of a group of endorsements by prominent statesmen, standard defense material, etc. It was suggested that another St. Louis paper might be urged to carry a series of articles telling the true story of CORE and its activities. Another suggestion was that CORE run a large ad in the St. Louis Globe Democrat with a blown-up picture of President Johnson talking with James Farmer, and list some of the activities in which CORE is involved.

4. A letter was received recently from Charles Butts, manager of the MISSISSIPPI FREE PRESS, an anti-segregation weekly at 583½ N. Farish St., Jackson 2, Miss. The paper is now ninth in size in the state. The response from advertisers indicates that people are definitely reading the paper. Many unions, civil rights groups and sympathetic individuals have bought subscriptions to be sent to impoverished Mississippi families. Other groups, unable to contribute money, have contributed the use of their mailing lists to promote an "underwriting" program. Any additional assistance that organizations can give should be sent to the above address.

5. "No Hiding Place" - which was rebroadcast on Monday, February 3 as part of the "East Side/West Side" series and which received the ADL TV award, is now available from the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, 315 Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016, for organizational showings. The prints are for sale at $250.00 per print. A discussion guide is now in preparation.

6. An hour-long documentary entitled, "The Other Face of Dixie," a CBS report shown about two years ago, is the story of how four cities have desegregated their school systems. Three of the cities, Clinton, Tennessee; Norfolk, Virginia; and Little Rock, Arkansas; had either closed the schools or had difficulty in opening on a desegregated basis. The fourth city, Atlanta, Georgia, shows how the school board and city government worked together for compliance of court-ordered desegregation on a peaceful basis. The U. S. Commission of Civil Rights has made this 16 MM film available without charge. It can be secured by writing to Courtney Siceloff, Secretary, South Carolina Advisory Committee, U. S. Commission on Civil Rights, Washington 25, D. C.

7. "Charm By Choice," a 14-minute sound and color filmslide, released by the National Urban League, has direct appeal to a multi-racial audience, for its models are girls of varied racial and ethnic backgrounds. It shows the ways a young girl can achieve good grooming on a limited budget, yet have a sense of assurance when faced with a new situation such as employment. "Charm By Choice" can be secured from the League's visual aid distributor, Association Films, 347 Madison Avenue, New York City.

8. EQUAL RIGHTS FOR ALL (Publication 133), a brief pamphlet listing the AFL-CIO position and activities in support of civil rights -- in unions, industries and communities. Small quantities are available without charge from the AFL-CIO, 815 16th Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

9. ARE WE SEGREGATING OUR CHILDREN?, by Dr. Dan Dodson, Director of the Center for Human Relations and Community Studies, New York University. Reprinted from the September 1963 issue of Parents' Magazine. One-class living can bar youngsters from facing some of the essential facts of life. Available from the Community Relations Service, Institute of Human Relations, 165 East 56th Street, New York, N.Y. 10022 at 5¢ per copy, $3.50 per 100.

10. INTEGRATING THE URBAN SCHOOL, edited by Gordon J. Klopf and Israel A. Laster. Taking the stand that integrated, democratic schools are a primary and necessary force in releasing each child's potential, more than 130 key community and education leaders of New York City met to discuss these and other questions. This book, one of the results of the intensive conference held at Teachers College, Columbia University, defines the schools' role in the total process of integration. It demonstrates the need for clear policy on all aspects of integration from school site selection to curriculum planning; calls for more Negro and minority group personnel at all levels; and emphasizes the need for special training for all who work in inter-cultural situations. The book, which provides a selected up-to-date bibliography of books, pamphlets and articles which give concise and practical information on integration, can be purchased from the Bureau of Publications, Teachers College, Columbia University, 525 West 120th Street, New York, N.Y. 10027 at $1.95 per copy. Quantity prices upon request.

11. NOT LIKE OTHER CHILDREN, by Bernard Asbell. Reprinted from the October 1963 issue of Redbook. A report on inadequacies of using I.Q.s to determine potentials of "culturally deprived" children and exciting methods used in schools in Chicago and St. Louis to motivate such youngsters to achieve in schoolwork and jobs. Copies are available from the Community Relations Service of the Institute of Human Relations, 165 East 56th Street, New York, N.Y. 10022 at 10¢ per copy, $5.00 per 100.

12. WE MOVED TO AN INTEGRATED NEIGHBORHOOD, by Lois Mark Stalvey. Reprinted from the May 19, 1963 issue of The Sunday Bulletin Magazine (Philadelphia). Mrs. Stalvey explains, in persuasively refreshing and rational terms, why a white Christian family preferred to move into a neighborhood which is 24% Negro and submit a child to classmates who are 55% non-white. Copies are available from the Community Relations Service, Institute of Human Relations, 165 East 56th Street, New York 22, N.Y. at 5¢ per copy, $3.50 per hundred.

Dear Mr. Dreyer:

Please forgive me the long delay in answering your letter of May 25th. I would have responded sooner, except that I have been out of the office during most of the time since then.

I was very happy to hear that your trip went so well. I think we all benefitted from it.

We're in complete agreement with the soundness of the six conclusions listed in your letter, and we particularly look forward to substantial cooperation. The Cooperative League has a great deal to offer, and I think that working together we can accomplish a great deal more than either of us could separately.

Al and I hope that we can move as soon as possible in some form on preparing the inventory of the existing cooperatives. We have discussed this with a number of people, and all agree they could make considerable use of it.

With all good wishes,

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Anthony:

Mr. Chuck Ihlenfeldt and I wish to take this belated opportunity on behalf of the League to thank you for permitting Mr. Al Ulmer to make arrangements for and to accompany us on our cooperative survey trip through the South. This was a highly successful trip as far as we were concerned, and we hope that Al felt it was worth his time and effort.

We are much impressed by Al's contacts and knowledge of the field, and the objectivity with which Southern Regional Council approaches the economic problems of the South.

As you may know, The Cooperative League is working quite closely with Father McKnight of Southern Consumers Cooperative in Lafayette, Louisiana, on cooperative development work in Louisiana and Mississippi. We also have had contacts with the North Carolina Fund, and in the State of Kentucky we have contacts with Mr. James Wyker who operates independently as a cooperative consultant with headquarters at Berea. We also are acquainted with some housing plans of the Kentucky Statewide Electric Cooperative Association. Wherever credit union activities are involved, we coordinate with the Credit Union National Association, or the State Credit Union League. We work with the Foundation for Cooperative Housing (Stamford, Connecticut) in programs of cooperative housing.

Aside from these special liaison arrangements and subject to any action on the part of our board of directors in the future, The Cooperative League would very much like to coordinate its contributions to cooperative development in the Southern United States in collaboration with the Southern Regional Council. Whereas we feel that we have the expertise in cooperative education, organization, development and training, or know where it can be found, and whereas we have appropriate contacts in Washington which would aid in resolving some of the problems which we found people facing during our visit to the South, we feel that your organization and Mr. Al Ulmer have the acquaintance and understanding with which to make the best use of our resources, and thus we feel that our efforts would be most effective when coordinated with the work of the Southern Regional Council.

Some of our conclusions reached as a result of our trip are as follows:

1. We feel that there is a need for a coordinated information center on cooperative developments in the Southern states. We would like to look upon the Southern Regional Council as that coordinated information center, and we would cooperate in trying to maintain it as such.

2. We plan to keep Al informed on our correspondence and contacts with people in the Southern states concerning cooperative development among low-income people.

3. We feel that there is a need for an inventory of the existing cooperatives and the maintenance of a record on cooperative experience among low-income people in the South, and we hope that such a program might be worked out through your offices.

4. We would like to respond to requests from Southern Regional Council for such information and materials as you feel are needed, and to assist in the location of technicians to meet the cooperative needs.

5. We would hope that, through our contacts with cooperative leadership in the South among the major farmer cooperatives, we might be able to further bring those resources to bear upon the problems of the low income people.

6. We plan to assist in and help conduct a much needed conference which we hope Southern Regional Council will sponsor on the subject of exploring the needs and possibilities of a co-op educational program for low-income people.

We sensed a great desire for cooperative effort and a real need for technical assistance in the cooperative field, during the course of our visit. To meet this growing need, we hope that Al Ulmer's program might be expanded as he sees the need for its increase within the programs and objectives of the Southern Regional Council.

Again, may we express our appreciation for the time which Al put into this effort, and we hope that this type of relationship will grow and that you are in general accord with the scope of our relationship mentioned above. We would welcome further suggestions and ideas as to how we might further collaborate and coordinate our efforts to obtain the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for the people of the South.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Edley:

Mr. Dreyer and I very much appreciated and enjoyed the opportunity to visit with you in Detroit. We were indeed pleased to note your interest in the cooperative development program for the South and your desire to explore the possibility of aid to the Cooperative League for assistance in its cooperative development activities in poverty areas of the U. S. and a technical training program for potential cooperative personnel.

We were pleased that you and staff members of your organization are willing to meet with the planning committee of the cooperative development and action program for the South. In accordance with our discussion, we will attempt to have this meeting during the earlier part of September. We will be in touch with you to determine a specific convenient date. This meeting will prove helpful to you and your associates in appraising the elements in the program for the South and it will also be helpful to the planning committee members in the South to get first-hand your approach to a possible project of this nature.

We deeply appreciate your interest in this program and we are looking forward to working with you in its further consideration and implementation

We are taking the liberty of sending you a folder on the Cooperative League and its latest year book.

Dear Chris:

In accordance with our discussion, the Cooperative League will act as the applicant to the Ford Foundation to conduct the cooperative development program in the South if this is acceptable to you and to the interested organizations in the South. The reasons that prompted the League to do this are:

1. In accordance with your suggestions at the Atlanta meeting, the program has necessarily become a two year demonstration project in a restricted area.

2. The area of activity for the two years will very likely be in Louisiana, Mississippi and Southwest Tennessee. The League has a very close working relationship with existing low-income cooperatives in this area -- particularly Southern Consumers Cooperative at Lafayette, Louisiana.

3. It is anticipated that a federation of existing low-income cooperatives in this area will be established and will have a key role in the conduct of the program.

4. The emphasis in this two-year program will be to strengthen the existing cooperatives as well as to establish selected new ones. With the Cooperative League's involvement in the program on this basis, we feel we will be able to enroll the needed resources and help of established successful regional cooperatives.

The next meeting of the committee will be held at Lafayette, Louisiana at the offices of Southern Consumers' Cooperative on November 14th and 15th. At this meeting final decisions will be made on the elements and structure of the two year program. Shortly after this meeting, you should have the proposed plans and program.

Dear Paul:

The two-day meeting in Atlanta to organize the Federation of Cooperatives in the South will go down in history as one of the significant milestones in the cooperative development in this country.

The work that Al Ulmer did in planning this meeting and in effectively guiding it by staying in the background was most outstanding. Testimony to his success was the discussion and decisions on fundamental policy questions which the new temporary board of directors made towards the close of the meeting. This was most inspiring to witness and of course, gives one great hopes for the future.

Paul, the Cooperative League has, as you know, taken a vital interest in the cooperative development among low-income people in the South. To make the resources and services of the League more effective and readily available in the South, we have decided to have a League representative located in the area to assist the efforts of low-income people in cooperative self-help endeavors. I briefly discussed this possibility with Al Ulmer at the meeting last week. There were two types of representation which the League could establish in your area. One would be an effective and competent co-op organizer to do detailed community stimulation and organization work. The other could be an experienced advisor and counsellor to be a resourse and information person that had an extensive background in cooperatives and the Cooperative League and could be most helpful in making the resources of the League and other cooperatives available, as well as advising the already established organizations on educational, management and operating programs.

We have decided to have Merlin Miller be the League's representative. He has accepted this position and will be contacting you and other groups in the South very shortly. Merlin has an extensive international as well as national cooperative background. In our judgment, there was no more qualified person that the League could make available to the cooperative development in the South than Merlin Miller. I am sure that you and Al will enjoy working with him. The efforts and influence of the Southern Regional Council is, of course, most important and essential in the future cooperative development in the South.

We deeply appreciate the work that Al did in the meeting last week and the effective work he did which led up to this meeting. Frankly, Merlin and I pretty well failed in keeping ourselves in the background, and I hope we did not do too much damage. From the standpoint of the Southern Regional Council, you can certainly feel that you have successfully launched a significant program that will have a very basic meaningful effect on the lives of individuals and communities in your area. We will look forward to giving such assistance as we can in its further development.

Should you or Al have any comments or suggestions to us at any time, we would be pleased to hear from you.

ATLANTA, Ga. (CNS) -- In an enthusiastic two-day meeting here February 24 - 25, representatives of 26 cooperatives from nine states formed the Southern Federation of Cooperatives.

The participating organizations, all small, represent a variety of activities: women's sewing cooperatives, farmers' supply and vegetable marketing co-ops, self-help housing, and credit unions.

What they have in common, leaders said, is the need for educational, management, marketing, and technical assistance, which can better be obtained through federation.

The National Sharecroppers Fund, Cooperative League, and CUNA International participated in the plans for the meeting, which was called by the Southern Regional Council, Atlanta.

The Southern Federation of Cooperatives will be chartered in the District of Columbia. Temporary officers are Charles Prejean, Southern Consumers Cooperative, Lafayette, La., president; Robert J. Miles, West Batesville Farmers Cooperative, Batesville, Miss., vice-president; and Mrs. Lewis Black, Greenala Citizens Credit Union, Greensboro, Ala., secretary. -- CH

Primary purpose of the material resources office was to stimulate agricultural development in food-deficient countries.

The new office will include a Food-for-Freedom service, a nutrition and child feeding facility, and a population branch, among other services.

Waters, 54 and a native of Santa Rosa, Calif., has been AID's assistant administrator for material resources since March 1962. He has been a newspaper editor, an assistant in the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and top staff aide to then Senator Hubert H. Humphrey. -- JWC

Dear Mr. Anthony:

As you know, many low income people are taking a new look at cooperatives as a means of improving their standards of living and making necessary adjustments. All of us I think, would like to help low income people help themselves. Such efforts however, should be on a sound basis since cooperative failures do no one any good and they reflect on successful cooperatives.

The Cooperative League is working with the Office of Economic Opportunity to assist low income people interested in cooperatives. We recently signed a contract with O.E.O. to provide nationally, advisory services, some training, and development of pilot cooperative projects.

Being concerned with sound cooperative development and the increased responsibility we felt it desirable to have an experienced cooperative organizer located in Atlanta to act as a liaison among ourselves, those seeking information on cooperative development, and the existing cooperative, credit, and extension leadership of the South.

As you will see from the enclosed news release, we have asked Merlin Miller to carry on this work for us. He will be located in Suite 200, 5 Forsyth Street, N.W., Atlanta, Georgia, 30303, Telephone: (404) 523-0245. To help make his work most beneficial to all concerned Mr. Miller will want to consult with you personally and discuss developments taking place in the co-op field among low income people. We hope you will share your concerns, ideas and resources with him.

A number of examples could be given in the South of how the Extension Service, existing cooperatives, the Farmers Home Administration and others, have been of service to low income people. A number of people in such groups have promptly responded to inquiries we have forwarded them.

In answering requests from low income people for assistance, our policy has been to first suggest that the person contact local leadership knowledgeable about cooperatives. Second, we suggest that inquiry be made as to whether the services requested could be provided by any presently existing cooperative. At times it is found that special consultants are needed.

We are interested, as I know you are, in sound, constructive cooperative development. We hope this effort will help. If you have any questions or suggestions regarding this whole area of endeavor, I hope you will feel free to contact Mr. Miller.

COOPERATIVE NEWS! SERVICE

Merlin Miller To Represent Cooperative League in South 3-7-67

CHICAGO (CNS) -- Merlin G. Miller has joined The Cooperative League as a consultant on cooperative programs in the South.

He will assist in the development of new cooperatives and will serve as the League's liaison with existing cooperatives and with extension, educational, religious, labor, governmental, and other organizations. He and Mrs. Miller will live in Atlanta, Ga.

B. F. Ihlenfeldt, director of the League's Economic Opportunity Department, announced the appointment. He said that Miller's work comes within the cooperative development program being carried on by the League under contract with the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity in Washington, D.C.

Miller joined the staff of The Cooperative League in 1957 and had charge of its international affairs until 1962, when International Cooperative Training, Inc. was formed at Madison, Wis. He became ICT's first program coordinator, working closely with the International Cooperative Training Center at the University of Wisconsin. He retired December 31, 1965.

Prior to joining the League staff, Miller served 20 years as educational director for Consumers Cooperative Association (now Farmland Industries, Inc.) in Kansas City, Mo. -- CH

Dear Paul:

Many organizations working in lower-income areas have expressed a deep interest in cooperatives as an effective means of social and economic change. In recent months private foundations and the Federal government have funded important programs in which the Cooperative League has had a particular interest.

In the South, these projects include cooperative education and development, crop conversion, and marketing; in the rural North, young livestock and farm management programs; and in metropolitan areas, bargaining, housing, and supply cooperatives. This is most encouraging to me as I'm sure it is to you.

In light of this heightened cooperative interest, we would like to explore with you and others the possibility of a broad and significant program to reach those never before reached by cooperatives. Together we can work out package proposals that will be large enough and challenging enough to appeal for substantial grants from public and private agencies. The grants will be used to finance planning, training for, and development of a coordinated program of self-help cooperative action among lower income citizens.

In formulating these plans we need your full participation. Key organizations such as Southern Regional Council, Inc. are essential to success. The Cooperative League can help provide the technical "know-how," for such program proposals. Your organization can provide concrete and precise evaluations of programs as they relate to your work.

We are inviting key leaders from the following organizations to meet with us: AFL-CIO, Catholic Conference on Working Life, Catholic Rural Life Conference, Congress of Racial Equality, CUNA International, Foundation for Cooperative Housing, Inter-Religious Foundation for Community Organization, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, National Council of Churches, National Farmers Union, National Federation of Settlements and Neighborhood Centers, National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, National Urban League, Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Southern Regional Council, and the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee.

The meeting will be held in Chicago at a mutually convenient date. We have been thinking of August 10, 11, 14, 21, or 28. The agenda will include inquiry into possible cooperative solutions to problems, an analysis of the resources needed for success in a cooperative venture, and a projection of proposals for funding. I feel strongly that by working together, we can evolve an imaginative and energetic plan for effective use of skills and resources to help create an economic base for many lower-income people.

At your earliest convenience I would appreciate your reaction to a one-day meeting of this kind and, if favorable, when it would be possible for you to attend.

Sincerely,

Dear Paul:

We were pleased with the response received to our suggested Summit meeting of key organizations to explore the possibility of a significant program to reach those never before reached by self-help cooperatives.

The most convenient date for the meeting seems to be August 11. Therefore, we are securing facilities at the O'Hare Inn, 6600 North Mannheim Road, Des Plaines, Illinois (2 miles North of O'Hare Airport). The meeting will be from 10:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

I have attached a form which I would appreciate your completing at your earliest convenience so that we can guarantee your exact reservation requirement.

We plan to mail you another letter outlining in detail the Agenda for this meeting. We look forward to having you with us on August 11.

Sincerely,

Stanley

Dear Paul:

To finalize details regarding your attendance at our meeting August 11, I thought a word or two would be in order to clarify situations perhaps not outlined in detail in previous letters.

In my last letter, as you may recall, I mentioned that this Conference has been organized with the intent purpose of reexamining the benefits of cooperatives with regard to low-income people, and to explore with groups such as the Southern Christian Leadership Conference the possibility of a broad and significant program to reach those never before reached through self-help cooperatives. We will, however, also be considering a proposal as a possible first step in financing the planning, training needs and development of a coordinated effort for low-income citizens. At present, we are assured of representation from some thirteen groups.

Although an Agenda for the meeting will not be available until August 11, I am enclosing two brochures for your perusal. The first is a brochure outlining the Cooperative League, its staff, members and general philosophy. The second is a pamphlet describing the general scope of cooperatives in the U.S. today.

We look forward to having you with us August 11.

Sincerely,

Stanley

Group Seeks Funds To Organize Poverty-Area Co-ops 8-15-67

CHICAGO (CNS) -- Cooperatives can wield a mighty stick to break the back of rural and urban poverty, and they must get more money, manpower and other resources to help them do so. They especially need trained organizers.

That, in effect, was how leaders from eleven national and regional organizations, including the Cooperative League, assessed their present work and future prospects in the poverty field.

They conferred here for the first time Aug. 11 at the League's invitation and, as one participant said, agreed "we should have met five years ago." They voted to meet again Nov. 17 as the Co-op Group on Low-Income Co-ops, to review a fund-raising program and other activities, particularly the training proposal. Funds will be sought from foundation and other sources to make possible the training of people to launch new cooperatives and strengthen present ones.

Participants in addition to Stanley Dreyer, League president, and B.F. Ihlenfeldt, League economic opportunity director, were: Msgr. Edward O'Rourke, National Catholic Rural Life Conference; Robert Osborne, National Urban League; the Rev. Shirley E. Greene, National Council of Churches; the Rev. C.T. Vivian, Urban Training Center; the Rev. A.J. McKnight, Southern Consumers Cooperative; Sydney Finley, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Paul Anthony, Southern Regional Council; Roger Willcox, National Association of Housing Cooperatives; Gerald King, Credit Union International, and Arthur Hillman, National Federation of Settlements and Neighborhood Centers. -- PJD

Dear Paul:

We enclose a brief summary of our discussion at O'Hare Inn August 11. Copies have gone to all participants and to top leaders of the organizations represented, including yourself.

We appreciate deeply your active and enthusiastic participation in this meeting, which we consider to have been of great significance to the aims we hold in common. We were particularly pleased that you wished to continue this discussion November 17 and will look forward to seeing you at that time; we also plan to invite others as we discussed.

In a relatively short time you will be hearing from us further on the draft proposal that we discussed. Again, very deep thanks for your interest and help.

SUMMARY of August 11 meeting called by The Cooperative League of the USA in Chicago to consider a proposal for training of staff workers in the expansion of economic self-help efforts by low-income persons and families.

In general, this meeting produced the broadest kind of interest and active support from the representatives who attended. Not only were positive statements and suggestions made for joint action, but there was unanimous agreement that another meeting of the same representatives, with further representation from other groups, to be held November 17 in Chicago.

A possible proposal was outlined briefly by The Cooperative League. The proposal called for a cooperative training program funded by a national foundation or other source. This program would enable participating organizations to secure persons trained in effective techniques for economic self-help action. The trainee would work in the community or area from which he has been recruited. There he would develop in the local situation the kind of self-help economic action programs needed and determined by the people themselves.

The following were some of the comments by organizational representatives present at the August 11 meeting on the significance of this type of program.

Comments re: August 11 conference on cooperatives for low-income people

Sydney Finley, NAACP: "We found in riot areas that people are concerned about what happens to them as a group. We need to channel this feeling into well-functioning cooperative ventures that are tailored to individual communities. We will help in any effort or in development of techniques:

Robert Osborn, National Urban League: "The Urban League is much involved in self-help cooperation."

Msgr. Edward O'Rourke, National Catholic Rural Life Conference: "(We) perennially have urged the cooperative approach as an excellent way for humans to be human and to grow in economic ways."

The Rev. Shirley Greene, National Council of Churches: "I am delighted to see the Cooperative League taking its share of the load. We may have gotten too sophisticated in cooperatives. The simpler forms still have a place. We in the Council will help any way we can."

Arthur Hillman, National Federation of Settlements and Community Centers: " We have had in mind ourselves calling a conference to explore the ways that self-help, including cooperatives, may help to further our program."

The Rev. A. J. McKnight, Southern Consumers Educational Foundation: "We use urgent needs of people as an instrument for their involvement. We need to change institutions. Black power is an attempt to change the Negro's thinking about himself." (The Rev. McKnight explained how his Foundation is using a sizeable two-year grant from the Ford Foundation to staff a program of cooperative organization and development for low-income persons in four southern states.)

Gerald King, CUNA International: "We (in credit unions) could do ten times as much as we are doing. There are enormous possibilities among communities that already recognize the need for self-help economic activity. There is much more need among communities that don't even know about the possibilities."

The Rev. C. A. Vivian, Urban Training Center, Chicago: "We need to create a new community where we are (in inner cities). Co-ops are basic to everything the Negro people are trying to do. Civil rights efforts are sometimes fragmented, but the groups are united on the need for creating a program in which pride and personal values can come into being. Co-ops do create those values."

Roger Willcox, National Association of Housing Cooperatives: "We can organize a cooperative anywhere now using housing as a framework. People grow to meet the challenge."

Paul Anthony, Southern Regional Council: "All of us are five years too late. The League should spearhead efforts to get our organizations to open a cooperative department." (The Council is organizing a federation of Southern cooperatives of low-income people.)

These were other significant points brought out by participants:

King: "Let's start building models. We already can send people for intensive training in a place reasonably similar to where they want to work."

Finley: "There are many Negroes already in supervisory roles in co-ops and credit unions. They might be trained in a shorter time."

Vivian: "One source of trainees are present organizers who have rapport and can develop natural leadership."

Willcox: "Urban America has a proposal for housing trainees and internship in a one-year training and field seminar work. We may need a whole family of training proposals."

McKnight: "We should talk about total needs. A proposal might be broken into components so one part could be funded independent of others."

O'Rourke: " A committee (like the ad hoc one formed August 11) might act to see the overview, gaps, overlaps. We may need more projects, not less. We may need to work to guide, educate, promote, create more understanding in Washington. And we need more people to come out publicly in favor of this."

King: "We could do ten times more. We ought to be thinking of $4 billion like the REA program"

Stanley Dreyer, the League's president, asked those present to consider these points:

1. Would it be possible for each major organization to assign one person to devote full time to be a link between themselves and cooperatives?

2. Can cooperatives and other self-help activities be included as a subject in seminars and workshops that these groups hold?

3. Will the organizations approve a statement urging VISTA neighborhood youth corps, etc., to put more intensive co-op and self-help elements in their training programs?

Dear Dr. King:

Last March a group of poor people representing 22 grassroot cooperative movements from ten southern states met in Atlanta and formed what is now known as the Federation of Southern Cooperatives. Since the co-operative approach seemed to be a means of attacking some of the problems locally, it seemed to the group that this same approach could be used even more successfully on a more regional level. Thus the Federation of Southern Cooperatives was created as a result of this thinking.

The Federation is having its first annual meeting March 16th in the Jackson, Mississippi area; the exact place has not been selected as yet.

In behalf of the Board of Directors of the Federation and its entire membership, I would like to extend to you an invitation to be our guest speaker. Your acceptance and presence at our meeting would give us an undeserving honor.

Dear Mr. Anthony:

Much has happened in the nation in our program to aid low-income people develop cooperatives, since our last meeting in Chicago November 17. Several additional organizations have expressed active interest in our program and particularly in the proposal for foundation funding and for institutes where training could be given staffs in cooperative principles, methods and programs.

We propose that our February 16 meeting at 10 A.M. at the Cooperative League headquarters, 59 East Van Buren Street, Chicago, Illinois consider first the report of the sub-committee of CUNA and the Cooperative League, on the proposal for foundation support of projects outlined at our November 17 meeting.

We propose that the rest of the time that day be devoted to a sharing of ideas and pinpointing of action on these points:

- Subject matter of the training institutes and their length in time.
- Location (East, midwest and south have been suggested) and dates.
- Who will attend.
- Nature of the training to be given, and who, in general, will give it.
- Methods of financing the institutes.
- Follow-up -- staff participation in future action programs.

The program will include institute "warm-up" presentations by consultants

Please use the enclosed reply form to indicate your participation in the February 16 meeting without delay.

Dear Mr. Anthony:

Enclosed is a program for what we expect and hope will be a most significant event -- and a pioneering one in the United States.

For the first time, a number of important national organizations* have taken the initiative in providing an opportunity for their staffs and others (see attached sheet) to receive some orientation and perspective on the formation and operation of cooperatives in low-income areas, both urban and rural.

This institute will not provide all the answers on how and why to form cooperatives in these areas. But it will provide some very useful background information on what cooperatives are, what they are doing now, and what they will enable residents of these areas to do for themselves and their communities.

This information will have important implications for the staff people from the participating organizations in this program, in their own work and in their relation with the individuals and families involved. Emphasis, but not exclusive emphasis, will be on work in the eastern states. Two national foundations have considered this institute so important that they have made funds available for it. The expectation is that registration fees will help finance other such institutes elsewhere in the nation, later in 1968.

You will note that the enclosed program has a return postcard attached on which the names of registrants can be listed. No money should be sent, but should be paid at the time of registration. Those registrants wishing to participate in a tour group should so indicate on the form.

Additional copies of the program are available on request to this office.

VOLUME — NET MARGINS — TAXES

YEAR ENDING, JUNE 30, 1946

Volume & Net Margins

Number Patron-Members ..... (over)	54,000
Volume of Business during past Fiscal Year by Class:
State Office with Distributors and Affiliated Warehouses	$6,447,291.00
Affiliated Warehouses and Departments with Patrons	7,455,384.31
Local Marketing by Warehouses	1,288,974.08
Net Margins (receipts less expenses before patronage dividends or interest on stock paid)	352,443.54
Total of Patronage Refunds paid	301,833.20
Dividend paid on Stock	45,581.33
Undivided Margins	5,029.01

The taxes listed in the chart to the right are the taxes paid by the Farmers Cooperative Exchange in 1946. They were paid on the same basis as any other business firm in North Carolina.

Had the Farmers Cooperative Exchange been required to operate under the same rule as ordinary commercial corporations, it would have paid, in addition to the taxes listed on right, a franchise tax of $1.75 per $1,000 on its capital stock of $1,964,165.70 or $3,437.28 instead of the $270 paid as license tax in lieu of the franchise tax, or a total of $3,167.28 more than it paid. Also, it would have paid a 6% income tax on savings of $45,581.33 that was distributed as dividends on capital stock and on undivided margins of $5,029.01. The total tax on these would have amounted to $3,036.62.

The total amount of additional taxes the Farmers Cooperative Exchange would have been required to pay in 1946, under the rule applied to regular commercial corporations, would have amounted to only $6,203.90.

We hereby certify that we were employed by the Board of Directors to audit the books and accounts of the Farmers' Cooperative Exchange for the year ending June 30, 1946, and that the above statements regarding volume, margin and taxes are true.

Farmers Cooperative Exchange in 1946. They were paid on the same basis as any other business firm in North Carolina.

Had the Farmers Cooperative Exchange been required to operate under the same rule as ordinary commercial corporations, it would have paid, in addition to the taxes listed on right, a franchise tax of $1.75 per $1,000 on its capital stock of $1,964,165.70 or $3,437.28 instead of the $270 paid as license tax in lieu of the franchise tax, or a total of $3,167.28 more than it paid. Also, it would have paid a 6% income tax on savings of $45,581.33 that was distributed as dividends on capital stock and on undivided margins of $5,029.01. The total tax on these would have amounted to $3,036.62..

The total amount of additional taxes the Farmers Cooperative Exchange would have been required to pay in 1946, under the rule applied to regular commercial corporations, would have amounted to only $6,203.90.

We hereby certify that we were employed by the Board of Directors to audit the books and accounts of the Farmers' Cooperative Exchange for the year ending June 30, 1946, and that the above statements regarding volume, margin and taxes are true.

WHAT IS THE REAL ISSUE?

Statements have been made by representatives of the North Carolina Merchants Association, inferring that farmer cooperatives were great octopuses reaching out to grab everything and giving nothing in return. In fact, they have created an impression that farmer cooperatives do not pay taxes. It has also been contended that the State of North Carolina was losing millions of dollars in revenue and that the farmer was not carrying his end of the tax burden.

The Farmers Cooperative Exchange offers the certified statement of a reputable accounting firm, which stated above that in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, the Farmers Cooperative Exchange, owned by the farmers of North Carolina and operating under the Cooperative Law, paid $62,163.51 in taxes on exactly the same basis as any other business in the State.

Had it been required to pay the State income tax and franchise tax as required of ordinary commercial corporations, it would have paid $6,203.90 in additional taxes.

With only $6,203.90 more tax, it is obvious that it is not the amount of taxes involved that many of the merchants are fighting, but the farmers and their rights to own and operate their own cooperatives in order that they may better their economic condition, enjoy a higher standard of living, and farm in a competitive world.

Farmers of North Carolina have always paid their share of taxes. They had to list every mule, every plow, and everything else they owned because those things were tangible. That has not always been true with other groups.

Many merchants in the state own farms and farm in direct competition with the farmers, who depend 100% on farming for a living, yet they frown upon the idea of the farmer organizing his own business in competition with the merchant.

What is the real issue? Is it taxes or is it the farmer's right to organize his own business?

Why The Farmers Cooperative Exchange Was Organized?

It was not by choice or chance that the farmers of North Carolina organized their own business—they were forced to in order to exist.

For 66 years, they tilled the soil producing food and fiber for their fellowman, waiting and hoping for help and advice that never came.

Finally, after years of waiting and hoping, they were forced to provide help for themselves.

Hardly had the farmer recovered from the depression of the early twenties, his fourth since the Civil War, before the depression of 1932 was at hand. During that year, North Carolina's 1,600,000 farm people were forced to accept conditions that will never be forgotten. Cash farm income sank to an average of 18 cents per day per capita and an average farm family of five had but a total of 90 cents per day to provide clothing, medical care, hospitalization, and to meet religious, educational and social obligations. Practically every farm market was glutted.

Many merchants, who up until that time had been the farmer's chief counsel and adviser, failed to step into the gap and help the farmer.

At this point the farmers of the State began to look around them and take stock. They found out that from 1925 to 1932 the average per capita cash income had been only 38 cents per day and that over 50 per cent of the State's 332,000 farm homes had depreciated to the extent that they had a value of less than $500 each.

It was because of these deplorable conditions that agricultural leaders decided something had to be done. North Carolina's farm economy had broken apart. The farm markets were glutted and the farmer's purchasing power was getting smaller by the year. In most cases, many merchants, who had proven such staunch friends in the better days when the farmer had money to spend, turned their back on the farmer once his money or farm was gone. They had made little or no effort to help the farmer develop a market, but rather expected the farmer to sell on a glutted market during the fall months for whatever price he could get.
